GRASSHOPPER CONTROL

We are today confronted with the same problem our neighbors on the north have been combating for the past several weeks--to stop and place under control the horde of grasshoppers which threaten to destroy every plant in our county. The above statement may sound over-drawn but our problem is much more serious than many of us realize.

Recent surveys, made by myself and Mr. Dickson, Area Supervisor, for grasshopper control work, has revealed that three of the most destructive types of hoppers are hatching in large amounts along the creeks, hollows, and river bottom in our county. These hoppers have just begun to wing out and will soon spread in large quantities to the fields of growing crops.

In an effort to control the hoppers and prevent as much destruction as possible. The U. S. Department of Agriculture has furnished us free poison and part of the base, wheat bran, and it will be necessary for us to furnish other ingredients to complete the mix.

There will be two mixing stations; one at Bronte and one at Robert Lee. Any producers who wish to obtain poison to control hoppers should call at one of these stations. All the farmers needs to furnish is the sacks for the mix, which he can obtain at 50c per hundredweight cash. The charge is made to cover incidental expenses of operating the plants and for the purchase of ingredients not furnished by the Government.

Examine your pastures and creek banks for hoppers, if they are in evidence call at one of the stations and secure poison, and get the hopper before he gets you. Stations will be open on Mondays and Thursdays until further notice.

Suggestions For Using Poison Mash For Grasshoppers

Use not more than twenty pounds per acre of land to be covered.

Broadcast the mash as you would oats or wheat, making three casts with each hand full.

Best results can be obtained by scattering the mash before 9 o'clock in the morning. Hoppers will not feed in temperatures below 60 or above 90 degrees.

As the first hoppers reach the field fence or edge of the field, the mash should be broadcast over a fifty to one hundred yard strip of the pasture land adjoining the fence rows around the field. It should also be broadcast in pasture draws where the hoppers are hatching in large numbers.

A close watch should be kept on the area thus poisoned, and as soon as other hoppers begin to approach the area, the operation should be repeated as often as is necessary to keep the hoppers

MASONS MEET

Members of the Robert Lee and Bronte masonic lodges held a joint installation in the masonic hall here last Friday night with R. H. Brooks, a past master of the San Angelo lodge, as installing officer. Ice cream and cake were served after the installation ceremony.

Robert Lee officers installed were: Worshipful master, W. J. Martin; senior warden, Dr. J. K. Griffith; junior warden, Will Millican; treasurer, B. B. Steffey; secretary, J. A. Clift; tyler, E. D. Jordan; senior deacon, Chism Brown; junior deacon, G. L. Taylor; senior steward, W. B. Clift; junior steward, W. J. Cumbie.

Not all the Bronte officers were present for the ceremony but those installed were: Master, Earnest Ivey; secretary, Bailey Bell; senior warden, H. O. Whitt; junior warden, George Thomas; tyler, Doll Best.

GIRLS ENTERTAIN

Misses Carlene Clark and Alta Bell Bibbo were hostesses at a party given on the lawn of the Clark home Monday night. J. S. Craddock, Jr., and Miss Mary John Sullivan were high pointers in the table games that furnished diversion throughout the evening.

Guests were Misses Zelma Slaughter, Doris Snead, Katie Sue Good, Marjorie and Gwendolyn Brown of San Angelo and Mary John and Prestine Sullivan of Amarillo and Messers J. S. and Bill Craddock, Louie Morrow, Robert Lowry, of Ballinger and Jack Sturman of Elida N. M.

Your water bill must be paid by 10th of each month or service will be discontinued. City Commission.

out of the field. This will usually be about two weeks apart.

Hoppers travel very slowly in pastureland, requiring about two weeks to travel over the 50 to 100 yard strip where the poison has been scattered.

If the hoppers are ever allowed to get into the fields they scatter very rapidly, and it will be necessary to scatter poison mash over the entire cultivated area, thus making it much more expensive and difficult to control them. The important thing in grasshopper control is to kill the hoppers before they get into the cultivated fields.

The user of the poisoned mash is entirely responsible in case of damage or death to poultry, livestock or humans, as a result of handling or eating the mash, and the County Agricultural Agent and Government Agency furnishing the material is in no way liable for any such damage.

If the mash is properly scattered it is not dangerous to poultry and livestock.

WHO IS THIS MAN?

He's "The Common Citizen's candidate for Governor of Texas" the Hillbilly flour man from Ft. Worth who has the professional politicians wondering which way to turn, W. Lee O'Daniel.

No, he did not pay his poll tax. But he is the man who wants to make poll taxes free to all voters. Other states has free voting then why can't Texas.

COLLAPSES AT MIKE

Tom Hunter has his troubles also, McCraw is his biggest trouble. He also lost a daughter last week, we understand. While delivering his regular weekly radio broadcast in behalf of his candidacy for the Governorship of Texas, he collapsed. A friend finished the broadcast.

LIBRARY OPEN TO PUBLIC

Adults as well as school children of this part of the county are failing to avail themselves of an opportunity that may be taken away if more interest isn't shown. As a part of a WPA project, the entire school library has been put at the disposal of the public for the summer months--news papers and periodicals to be read in the room and fiction and non-fiction books to be checked out just as from a public library. This is a fine chance for high school English students to do some of the required reading before the rush and pupils as well as many who have long passed their school days will find a wide range of interesting reading for the asking.

MORE EGGS AT 15c

Eggs! Eggs! We got good results from the egg bargain last week and we are extending the offer through this weekend. Several did not have enough to bring all at once but you can bring them as you can. Hens and fryers also can be taken at 2c more than the market offers.

This is the last time we can offer this bargain so everyone should take advantage of this. New or renewals.

PROSPECTS ARE THAT WORK SHOULD BEGIN ON COKE COUNTY PROJECT WITHIN 3-YEARS

The surveying crew that has been working for several weeks under the direction of army engineers on a general survey of the Upper Colorado territory, left Robert Lee last week to work on other parts of the project.

Very little publicity has been given recently to the dam and flood control promotion because, as Gerald Allen explained, the board preferred to work instead of making promises. The work just finished here resulted from a visit made by Gerald and Culbertson Deal to Washington early in the year. Going on a "hunch" they made a plea to the flood control authorities for some attention in this part of the country and, using last year's disastrous flood in San Angelo as a wedge, they got the job done. Army engineers came out here and looked the situation over and were so impressed with possibilities that a flood control project including the entire Colorado system and the three Conchos was suggested. The surveying was pushed through in order to have reports and maps in Galveston by the first of July and these will be sent after a few days to New Orleans where estimates of benefits and costs will be made and these with the reports and maps will be forwarded to Washington before congress convenes in January.

Two sites have been suggested for the dam: one about a mile and the other two miles up the river from the Harris ranch house which was formerly the John Sauls ranch home. The dam, which will be about two miles long and a height of 125 feet, will be of dirt construction with concrete spillway and concrete coress in solid rock at a depth of 30 to 60 feet. The lake proper will stretch about eighteen miles with a width varying from one to five miles and an estimate capacity of 900,000 acre feet of water.

A dam site purposed on the North Concho for flood control is about a mile north of the Joe Eddie Hall ranch in Tom Green county.

Over a period of years, various companies have been interested in a dam on the Colorado and numerous surveys have been made, mainly in the interest of the companies promoting it, but the survey just made is the first sponsored by the federal authorities and Gerald Allen and others who have spent much time and efforts in the interest of irrigation and flood control in Coke and Tom Green counties think a definite grant will be made early next year and that actual work will be started by 1940.

Five 'Spending' Chiefs Tell Their Recovery Hopes . . . Government Agencies Warned to Avoid Politics

Ask Business to Help

FIVE of the officials who will have most to do with carrying out the President's spending-lending drive went on the air in a nation-wide broadcast and urged that business cooperate with the administration in restoring permanent recovery. These speakers were Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, WPA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, acting PWA Administrator Howard A. Gray, United States Housing Administrator Nathan Straus and Brig. Gen. John J. Kingman, acting chief of United States army engineers.

Harry Hopkins

Outlining his plans for use of federal funds allocated his agency, Hopkins said that the purchase of materials alone for WPA projects will give indirect, full-time private jobs to 250,000 workers, in addition to relief jobs for the unemployed.

"And so the WPA money flows, like the blood in the human body, giving life and strength to the economic system all the way from its toes to the top of its head," he said.

Secretary Wallace said that under the new agricultural legislation the farmer is in good shape to do his part in the recovery drive.

"If business would only start producing as it knows how to produce, the market for agricultural products would expand during the next year to a point which would help amazingly in bringing about a solution of the farm problem," he said.

Gray, who has been administering PWA affairs in the absence of Interior Secretary Ickes, said that the spending of money set aside for public works under the recovery program should result in industry's receiving $1,000,000,000 in orders in the next two years.

Straus outlined his agency's program of slum-clearance and low-cost housing and said that it will result in increased employment and the "creation of that finest and most needed of all commodities—better homes for Americans."

The administration's flood control program, General Kingman said, will produce "equally beneficial results not alone in the reduction of human suffering," but in keeping open business channels and providing additional employment.

Terrible Train Wreck

OLYMPIAN, crack passenger train of the Milwaukee road bound from Chicago to Tacoma, Wash., crashed through a flood-weakened trestle over Custer creek, near Saugus, Mont., and at least 40 persons perished, most of them being drowned in a submerged tourist sleeper. About 65 others were injured.

This was the worst railroad wreck in America in recent years, and it sadly marred the safety record of the Milwaukee road which had not lost a paying passenger in accidents in the previous 20 years.

The eleven-car train ran into a cloudburst near Saugus but the crew had no warning of the trestle's condition until the engine plunged through the span, dragging several cars after it.

Wage Law Effects

STRAIN of the new wage and hour law on industry, say labor experts in Washington, will be eased by the existing unsettled economic conditions. They size up the situation thus:

At industry's present pace not more than 200,000 wage earners in manufacturing industries would get more pay.

The big high speed industrial machines, such as automobile plants, hardly will be touched by the law.

It will affect certain garment factories and a very small number of textile mills.

It will affect the fertilizer industry of the South and southern sawmills. At the outset the law's effect will be to improve "the worst conditions" in certain industries engaged in interstate commerce, the economists believe.

'Keep Out of Politics'

SENATOR MORRIS SHEPPARD of Texas and the senate campaign expenditures investigating committee of which he is chairman has directed all government agencies to take no part in primary and election campaigns. And it has issued warning that persons suspected of improper political conduct will be exposed and cited for criminal prosecution.

Senator Sheppard

The committee at its first meeting adopted a resolution pledging that its investigations will be conducted with "vigor and vigilance" without fear or favor and without partisanship. The warning against use of improper tactics was directed first to all candidates for senatorial offices, their friends and aids. It was then extended to all government agencies.

German Spies Indicted

AFTER five months of investigation by government agents, 18 persons were indicted as spies by a federal grand jury in New York. Moreover, no secret was made of the fact that they are charged with being spies for the German government, engaged in obtaining information concerning our national defense.

Four of the defendants are in this country and will be tried here. The others, including three German officers, are abroad.

John Roosevelt Weds

IN A little old stone church at Nahant, Mass., John Roosevelt, youngest son of President and Mrs. Roosevelt, and Anne Lindsay Clark were made man and wife. After the ceremony there was a reception in the old Nahant club, and the young couple then started on a honeymoon trip to Campobello Island, N. B., the location of the President's summer home.

The ocean was not visible from here, but the salt of it was in the air, and James heard the roar of waves breaking against rocks. As the sun disappeared behind a cloud the old man stopped, laid down his bag and buttoned his coat higher about the throat, shivering a little. In summer this road would be alive with tourists, he supposed. It was deserted now—a man-made strip of macadam that seemed curiously out of place between the rocky pastures which bordered it on either side.

Strange, James Lambert mused as he started on again, that 24 hours ago he hadn't dreamed of being here. Strange too, that despite the uneasiness he felt at seeing Nora, he was happier than he'd been for years and years. After a time he found himself hurrying a little. That "short half mile" which the conductor promised, seemed very long. Yet he couldn't have missed the place. This was a lonely stretch of road with no lanes leading seaward. He stopped again, drew Nora's postcard from his pocket and was studying it minutely when a voice startled him.

"Say, Mister, have you seen the R. F. D. man?"

Moving a step or two forward James saw that the voice belonged to a small boy who had, apparently, been swinging on a rustic gate, half hidden from view by a clump of fir trees. There was a mail box too. This must be the place! The old man's heart-beats quickened as he responded: "I haven't seen anybody since I left the trolley. Are you—"

Then, all because a sudden breeze had blown the boy's hair away from his forehead, the question died on James' lips. Where had he seen a forehead and hair like that? He asked himself, some half-forgotten memory stirring to life. Ah! now he recalled it! The door to his own library—a tall young man standing upon the threshold, youth incarnate.

"You're kind of out of breath, aren't you?" the boy was saying. "I guess you've been hurrying. If you're tired why don't you sit down on that rock? It's a good smooth one. Mother sits there when she's waiting for the postman. I hope he'll bring the money this afternoon. She'll be pretty discouraged if he doesn't, b'lieve me."

James asked, as he availed himself of the proffered resting place: "So your mother expects the postman to bring some money?"

The youngster nodded, his blue eyes very serious.

"She's been expecting it for more'n a month, and she's pretty 'sturbed about it. A lady that lives in the biggest house at the Port summertimes, owes it to her for teaching her little girl to play. Mother's a swell piano player; and she's a swell cook, too. Are you going to Norton's, Mister? It's quite a walk."

"I'm not going to Norton's," replied James. "How old are you, sonny?"

"I'll be six and three quarters before very long," was the prompt answer. "What's your name, please?"

James, doing a hasty sum in mental arithmetic, failed to respond. He said: "Then you must be—"

"I'm James Lambert Mason," put in the boy. "I'm named for my grandpa, but I've never seen him. It's sort of funny not to know your own grandfather, isn't it? But I've heard a lot about him and seen his picture. It's on Mother's desk. Do you know, if you weren't so old and didn't have so many wrinkles, you'd look something like him. That's queer, isn't it? Gee! here comes the postman! I hope he's bringing Mother's check!"

Eyes on the eager face, James echoed this hope; but the mail carrier merely tossed out a paper; and the old man saw with consternation that his grandson was fighting tears of disappointment as he picked it up.

"Was it a big check?" The question was a kindly effort to make conversation.

"It was—e-normous," replied the boy, and swallowed. "It would buy two tons of coal, and coal's expensive. Last winter we turned wood and Mother got pretty tired tending the fires. Daddy said he couldn't stand seeing her do it. Besides, now he can't move fast any more he's awfully cold. Days when the wind blows off the ocean he doesn't get warmed up at all. I've got to go now, Mister; but you can sit there as long as you want to. It's our rock."

"Thanks, sonny; but I think I'll make a little call on your mother."

The child's face lighted.

"Goody! We don't have much company. If you'll put your bag on this side I'll help you carry it."

"It's not heavy," James told him. "Why—why can't your father move fast any more?"

"Because he's a hero!" The boy lifted his head proudly, and again James seemed to behold a tall young man standing in his own doorway.

"Mother's told us about it heaps of times. It's one of our best favorite stories. You see, Mother and Daddy were at a movie and the roof sort of caved in and lots of folks were hurt and killed, children, and their fathers and mothers too. That's sad, isn't it? Well Daddy grabbed Mother and got her out all safe; and then he went right back to help the others. Mother says he went where no one else would go. He saved a life."

"I see," said James. "And—where was your mother while he—"

"She was out on the sidewalk near as they'd let her get. There was deep snow everywhere, and pretty soon it began to snow some more and the wind blew dreadfully and she thought he'd never come. And when he did come two real kind firemen were carrying him; but he was hurt so hard he couldn't answer when she called. I was a little boy then so I don't remember very much about it; but I remember one thing!"

"What was that?" James asked as the child looked up in expectation of the question.

"It was next morning. A lady came and told us boys that Mother wanted us. We jumped right up and ran into her and Daddy's room and Mother hadn't got up yet and what do you s'pose was there beside her?"

"I can't imagine."

"A baby! We thought Santa Claus was going to bring her, but she couldn't wait for him. It was my little sister Iris!"

"Iris!"

At something in the old man's voice his grandson glanced up, puzzled.

"I can't imagine."

James stood for a moment regarding the exterior. So this was Nora's "palace," this weather-beaten old stable, a relic of more leisurely days when people drove horses instead of automobiles. And it wasn't, he mused, even an attractive stable! To be sure, the casement windows gave it a pleasing look, and the front door possessed a certain dignity; but there was one of those abominations known as a cupola on top! Indeed, his namesake, seeing that this unexpected caller was pausing for a view of the "swell house," came back to point out the cupola with pride.

"That's our watch tower! We can see the enemy approaching for miles and miles. Did you notice the windows? Daddy and us boys are crazy about the colors. Come on in." And as James followed him: "This is a gorgeous room, isn't it? Mr. Littlefield says it's miles too big; but we don't think so. You see, it's the ball room."

"But she couldn't wait for him."

"Indeed?" responded James. "No, it's not too big, and as you say, sonny, it's—gorgeous."

It was; yet looking about him curiously, James Lambert pondered on what made it so. The place was shabby enough in a way. The builder's paper with which the walls were covered, was stained in places. A big chair needed upholstering. But on the wall opposite was a rug that would have done honor to a Rajah's palace! James went forward, touching the beautiful thing with reverent fingers.

"We picked that up in Persia," said the little boy.

His grandfather smiled at the odd little remark.

"You did?"

"Well, I didn't, 'zactly. I've never been there. It was Daddy found it; and it's a magic carpet. That's why Mother wouldn't sell it to the rug man from Boston. You see, Daddy can lie here and look up at it, and then he remembers things—like the queer place he found it in and, oh, you know—periences he's had in foreign countries. It makes him happier. No one would sell a magic carpet, would they?"

"I suppose not," said James; and thought: "What was it Nora told me about memories?"

"It's very old," went on his namesake. "Older than I am; and so was Mother's di'mund that came way from South Africa. She and Daddy were on their way home with it when I as born. Did you know I was born on the high seas?"

"You were!" Nora had never written about that.

"Yep. Mother was sort of expecting me, but she thought I wouldn't come till they got to England. Daddy says I'm the only fellow he ever knew per—personally, who was born on the high seas."

The small boy stopped to struggle into a scarlet sweater.

"When I get back," he promised, "I'll show you the watch tower if—if you're young enough to climb a ladder. I've got to run now and find Mother. Oh, I forgot! He turned at the door, evidently remembering his manners. "Just make yourself at home."

"Thanks," smiled his grandfather. "I believe I will."

CHAPTER XIV

So Nora's father was left alone in her "shining palace." He stood by the fire, letting his eyes roam slowly around the "ball room." It was an unusual room, a room of extraordinary beauty; yet James had never seen anything just like its curious blending of poverty and riches.

In one corner stood a baby-grand piano. He was glad that Nora had kept up her music, but—a baby-grand, when the stuffing was coming out of that old chair! Incongruous. Evidently this improvident couple believed in spending when there was anything to spend. That rug now—that bit of cloisonne—the Russian candelabra on the mantel. Only real money could procure such things.

The old man moved forward, passing his hand over the lacquered chair, its mother-of-pearl inlay shining dimly. Leonora had written him about that chair at the very first. Something her husband had picked up during his wanderings. Japanese, of course. No one surpassed the Japanese when it came to lacquer. His own Chinese cabinet (of which James was rather proud) couldn't for one minute compete with work like this, he admitted honestly. And here was a nest of tables to match it. Beautiful! Those tables belonged in a museum; yet on the smallest stood a set of tiny dishes, put out, evidently, in anticipation of a doll's tea party! Did Nora's children play with things like this? Extraordinary!

James turned again, his eyes caught by a painting of a clipper ship above the fireplace. That was a ship! One could almost feel the wind filling its sails. A Venable, of course. One would recognize it anywhere. Well, Carl Venable had been a friend of Don's, he understood. The picture may have cost them nothing. Too bad the artist had been cut off in his prime—a man with a gift like that. It was a marvelous painting—worth a great deal of money; yet here it was in a room where the bookshelves were nothing but boxes, packing boxes piled one upon another and stained to match the woodwork.

Books, books, and still more books. A pretty penny they must have spent on books, those two; and yet, Nora's father admitted almost with reluctance, the books furnished this big room as nothing else could—gave it atmosphere. Their varied bindings made him think of a camel's hair shawl his mother used to wear. How softly they blended with the fine old rug that hung above them!

Well, he must sit down for a while. That walk from the car had tired him unaccountably. Despite its worn upholstery the big chair by the table looked inviting; but he must get nearer the fire—stretch out on the davenport a moment.

James paused, staring down at what he had taken for a divan. Why, it was nothing in the world but a pew out of some old church! Whoever heard of putting such a thing into a living room? And yet—by George!—it seemed to fit the place—belong here! What beautiful carving on those old posts. One seldom saw such work in these days. Well, this was certainly the strangest yet. A pew out of some old New England meeting house! But it looked surprisingly attractive with its thick crimson cushion and pillows of the same warm hue. And it looked comfortable. "A great deal more comfortable," James told the empty ball room, "than those modern, overstuffed affairs one can't get up from without a helping hand."

For a tired moment the old man sat down and closed his eyes, wondering wearily if this strange home of Nora's possessed a guest room. His sense of humor, grown rusty since she went away, lifted its head as he soliloquized:

"Perhaps they'll allow me to curl up in the watch tower!" James chuckled. "The enemy in the watch tower would be something new!" Then remembering that the boy had said his picture was on Nora's desk, he forgot his weariness and arose briskly.

Horace Greeley Soon Discovered the Jackass

One morning Horace Greeley discovered a serious error had crept into his paper, the New York Tribune. In great rage he hurried up to the composing room to "fry" the proofreader concerned. "Where's the blankety blank jackass in this office that ought to be kicked from here to Sing Sing?" he raved.

After a hurried search, a proofreader produced Greeley's original copy, which had been followed. When Greeley saw that he was to blame, he turned his face to the wall and exclaimed:

"Here! Kick me, all of you! Kick me!"—W. A. Croffut in "An American Procession."

LEST WE FORGET

YOUR COUNTRY AND MINE

ONE hundred and fifty-two years ago our learning forefathers saw the need of establishing this nation under the banner of democracy and for the love of liberty and justice, not for one but the privilege of all men blessed by the rights of American citizens. Sometimes we fail to consider the significance of the day in our more natural desire to consider how and where to spend it. As isolated as some folks may be in regard to habitation they cannot be aware of the strife and distress in the majority of nations due to fights for liberty and civil rights. Many of our own people at one time called these nations their home.

We live in the shadow of a tri colored flag beset with stars and realize the meaning of democracy. We have the privilege of developing our intelligence and our business. We pray to keep our homes, our churches and schools, public welfare institutions, and our God given right-- the ballot-box, all of these going to make up our measure of freedom. The fourth of July, the birthday of the greatest nation in the world. History shows us that there is a constant struggle on the part of millions of men and women merely for a right to earn a decent living. Of course we have national problems and there are discrepancies in government we may criticize, but that always holds true in matters of state. There are certain rights we maintain through the Declaration of Independence that are unquestionable and will be supported by all of us who call this nation home. People around Coke county pledge again their support of "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness". This government of free people has grown in wealth and power since the signing of our independence and will continue to do so. It was John Adams who said, "We shall make this a glorious, an immortal day. When we are in our graves, our children will honor it. They will celebrate it with thanksgiving, with festivity, with bonfires and illuminations. On its annual return they will shed tears, copious gushing tears; not of subjection and slavery, not of agony and distress, but of exultation, of gratitude and of joy".

BUSINESS EXPERT SAYS
HAPPILY MARRIED MEN ARE MOST SUCCESSFUL

BIG business has gone into the home. Believing that a happily married man will occupy a better position in the business world than will the man who is unhappy at home, modern business executives are considering more and more the home background of the men they employ.

In the July issue of Good Housekeeping Magazine, Stanley S. Dickinson, prominent business consultant, analyzes business and marriage.

"Business picks for the big jobs men who are happy at home," he says. "While business negotiates with the husband, it has long since learned that both husband and wife are entitled to consideration whenever one is being employed or promoted. The more important the job, the more important it becomes to find out whether the husband and wife have tried to keep pace with each other, or whether there is discord at home. Business can afford to place responsibility upon the mentally capable, energetic, and tactful man, only if his marriage relations are harmonious. It cannot afford to gamble with the man who is in trouble at home, not necessarily vicious, but trouble arising from carelessness, maladjustment, and misunderstanding."

Mr. Dickinson tells his Good Housekeeping Magazine readers that this concern on the part of business is not limited to the lower brackets, but extends to positions of trust where the salaries run as high as $20,000 a year. "The capable, intelligent, and progressive worker is almost invariably married to a capable, intelligent, and progressive woman," he writes. "Each acts and reacts upon the other. Men are not so versatile that they can fill 5,000 jobs during the day and then go home to become husbands of $1,500.00 women in the evening. Neither are women so versatile that they will remain in contented harmony with husbands who are not their mental equals."

4th of July Celebration to be held in San Angelo

Over $800.00 worth of firework will be used in a gigantic pyrotechnic display at the Santa Fe Park in San Angelo July 4th.

Pat Neff, President of Baylor University, will deliver the patriotic address at 8:15 p. m. The band concert will start at 8:00 p. m. The fireworks display will take place at 8:45 p. m.

The program will be in the evening only so as to not conflict with local patriotic observances.

Members of the Kwanie Club, aided by business men of San Angelo, have arranged the celebration. They will be assisted by city officials, the American Legion, V. F. W. and other patriotic organizations, the Bobcat band, and the Boy Scouts.

Garden Club News

Mrs. Lamont Scott was hostess to the garden club last week when the group made a study of the culture of dahlias.

Members attending were Mrs. B. A. Austin, Mrs. H. E. Smith, Mrs. Fred Roe, Mrs. F. C. Clark, Mrs. Chism Brown, Mrs. W. J. Cumbie, Mrs. Cortez Russell, Mrs. J. S. Craddock, Mrs. Lamont Scott and Mrs. W. B. Clift.

Mrs. W. H. Bell and her daughter, Mrs. Floyd Sturman of Elida, N. M., Mrs. R. L. Keyes and Kate Vaughn of Lubbock were guests.

The hostess passed a salad plate.

Inez H. Irwin Asks — SHOULD WOMEN
TAKE OVER THE WORLD?

OBSERVING that men have made a "noble stagger" at running the universe but "have succeeded only in making a hopeless muddle," and that "every century, men plunge mankind into a deeper, blacker, more hopeless chaos," well-known authoress Inez Haynes Irwin in July Good Housekeeping magazine, asks women to take over the world.

According to Mrs. Irwin, "Men do not know how to spend money. They know nothing about management and organization. They do not know how to keep the world clean and to maintain law and order. They appear to like war. They are romantics. Women know how to spend money. They are born managers and organizers. They insist upon cleanliness, law and order. They hate war. They are realists."

Mrs. Irwin, apparently utilizing woman's genius for organization, has quickly organized the entire race of men into three general groups. 1. The Drone Men. "The Drone Man is Rarest of the species, but a nuisance nevertheless. Habitat—a comfortable chair. Function—none." 2. The Bric-a-Brac man—"A widespread class, identifiable by radiation, of irascible charm. Habitat—anywhere picturesque. Function—to make life pleasant." 3. The Genius Man. "Distinguishable by an absent look in the eye. Habitat—the workshop. Function—to create."

To dispose of these three classes of men, who apparently would be under foot if women took over the world, Mrs. Irwin suggests that we "turn the Drone Men out to pasture; put the Bric-a-Brac Men in the bric-a-brac cabinet; lock up the Genius Men in the laboratory, the study, and the studio."

To defend her stand, Mrs. Irwin cites several instances in which women took over men's jobs and produced successful results where the men preceding women had failed miserably.

B.T.U. Entertainment

About forty members of the B.T.U. met at the church Tuesday night for a program planning and social. Ice cream was made on the church lawn and packed, then the several unions met in their respective rooms and planned programs for the quarter and discussed ways to arouse interest.
A social hour followed with rousing games and plenty of ice cream.

NEW YORK. — When Charles Maurras came out of the Sante prison last year, he was met by a committee of distinguished Frenchmen, who nominated him for the Nobel peace prize and said they would make him a member of the Academy. They have just fulfilled the latter promise, and M. Maurras becomes an immortal by a majority of one vote.

Leaves Jail To Get Bid To Academy

He had spent 250 days in jail on a charge of having urged the assassination of 140 members of the chamber of deputies who had voted for sanctions against Italy; also on a charge of inciting the French people to "sharpen up their kitchen knives" for use against certain proscribed politicians.

In the 250 days he had written five books, swelling his vast collection of books on biography, politics, economics, literary criticism, history and what not to probably well over 100. I talked to him once in the Cafe des Lilas, a fragile, deaf, bearded old man with a contentious, blazing mind which makes one think of a sizzling battery running an automobile without any engine.

In 1923, he was in jail for four months in a somewhat anti-climatic adventure for one who was to be garlanded as an immortal. Three members of the chamber of deputies were kidnaped and fed castor oil—Mussolini is said to have got his broad prospectus of Fascism from Maurras—and the bald head of one of them was painted with violet ink and glue.

In 1925, M. Maurras was sentenced to two years in prison, the charge being that he had threatened to kill the minister of the interior. Among the causes of his incarceration in October, 1936, was conspiracy evidence in the assault on Premier Leon Blum, in which he was severely beaten.

His books and virulent editorials against democracy in the Royalist, paper, translated into many languages, are the fount of Fascist doctrine all over the world. His hatred of democracy is savage and vitriolic. He is witty, learned, brilliant and he has the most excoriating and corrosive vocabulary in France.

A FOOTNOTE to the main text of the world discussion on Japan bombing babies is the interchange between Avery Brundage, chairman of the American Olympic committee, and William J. Bingham (Bill the Plugger), Harvard athletic director.

Jap Bombs Cause Rift In Olympics

Mr. Brundage says it has nothing to do with sports, and Mr. Bingham says it has—with sportsmanship, at any rate—and he withdraws from the committee and the 1940 games.

The sports writers are becoming almost metaphysical in weighing and appraising the moral values of the argument. Bill the Plugger says, in effect, that he won't play with baby-killers.

He became Bill the Plugger by losing 19 races at Harvard and winning the twentieth. Thereafter, he was Harvard's crack miler.

He started out plugging at the age of fourteen, leaving school to work in a mill and help support his five younger brothers and sisters. He saved $30, went to Exeter and worked his way through Exeter and Harvard.

IF GERARD B. LAMBERT builds a house, they're likely to find a center-board and a skys' yard on it. It's hard to see how he can get his mind off his yachting, but, at any rate, he becomes special adviser to Stuart McDonald, federal housing administrator.

Mr. Lambert Keeps Mind On Yachts

The gargles and shaves of the multitudes built his chemical fortune at St. Louis. He was one of the original backers of Lindbergh, author of a spirited "Defense of Babbitts" in the American Mercury, commander of the Eastern Yacht club of Marblehead, Mass., he maintains a valhalla for gallant old yachts.

Star Dust

- ★ Hurricane Elopement
- ★ Story of Earhart
- ★ Norma Steps Out

By Virginia Vale

MOVIEDOM is still gasping a little over the elopement of Frances Langford, the radio singer and movie actress, and Jon Hall, who skyrocketed to fame in "Hurricane" and hasn't been seen on the screen since.

Just after it was announced that they wouldn't marry until he had become more firmly established in pictures, they slipped off to Prescott, Ariz., with her mother and his sister and got married. But Hollywood didn't know about it until four days later, possibly because he used his real name, Louis Locher.

Even after Hall made such a hit in "Hurricane" he drew only $150 a week for some time—mere chicken feed in Hollywood—but this salary was finally raised to $200.

Kay Francis' last picture under her present contract will probably be based on a story that she herself wrote and sold to the studio. It's all about a famous aviatrix who goes into a round-the-world flight contest, and gets lost on a desert isle. Can it be possible that Miss Francis heard about Amelia Earhart?

Speaking of those Valentino pictures, Verree Teasdale and Adolph Menjou were in New York, before sailing for Europe, when they were being shown, and he was none too anxious for her to see "The Sheik" and see how funny he looked on the screen in those days.

The New York revival of those two Valentino pictures, "The Sheik" and "The Son of the Sheik," was so successful that Agnes Ayres, the heroine, has been booked for a 20-week personal appearance tour. And two more Valentino pictures will be brought forth.

Norma Shearer would like to do a smart modern comedy, after her long siege of costume pictures, so you may see her in "The Women," which had a long run as a successful play before being handed over to motion pictures. Norma has a way of getting what she wants—as Marion Davies found out when they both wanted "Marie Antoinette."

Remember Eric von Stroheim, who used to make pictures ("Greed" and "Foolish Wives" among them,) that cost millions? He's acting in French pictures now—which usually cost not more than $75,000.

Incidentally, Jean Hersholt was reminiscing about "Greed" the other day—how it was way over the right length, and von Stroheim felt so badly about having it cut that he wouldn't even look at the film that was finally released.

ODDS AND ENDS—A radio actor and director who learned nineteen languages is on the air—as a dialect stooze and imitator of animals. . . . Many of the professional radio announcers are bad, but after hearing a dozen amateurs try out the other day the worst of them sounded marvelous. . . . "Belle" Davis refused to be included in a list of moviedom's ten most beautiful girls; said "The idea is silly, because I'm not even a near beauty". . . . It's said that Metro spent $250,000 developing "I Married an Angel" as a picture, and finally abandoned it.

The Blue Room

The Blue room, decorated in the style of the first French empire, has always been considered the most beautiful room in the White House. The walls are finished with white enameled wainscoting and covered with heavy corded blue silk brocatelle. Window draperies are of the same material, with gold fret motifs embroidered at top and bottom.

The room is lighted with a crystal chandelier, supplemented by wall sconces. A white marble mantel dates from 1792. The mantel clock, decorated with a figure of Minerva, is said to have been given by Lafayette to George Washington. The furniture has white and gold woodwork and blue and gold upholstery.

Reporter Got Hint— Not a Thing Fit to Print

The reporter limped in. "Well," growled the news editor, "did you get the interview?"

The newsman pointed to a pair of black eyes. "We can't print a pair of black eyes. Where's the story?"

The reporter lifted his hat and displayed a huge bump on his head.

"Look," he repeated. The editor went wild.

"What good is that?" he howled. "We can't print things like that. Didn't you get the chap to say a few words?"

"Sure," was the reply, "but you can't print those either!"

"Dangerous Crossing"

By FLOYD GIBBONS
Famous Headline Hunter

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Here's a yarn from Claire Gibson of Chicago about an adventure that took place in Springfield, Ill. Claire was just a little girl when she had that adventure. It was the first one of her life, and for thrills and plain out-and-out terror nothing that has happened to her since could ever even approach it.

It was a hot day in the early summer of 1910. Claire had an invitation to a party that was being given at a house some distance away from her home and she was all dressed and ready to go.

It must have been somewhere between seven and eight in the evening, because Claire remembers that the party started at eight. She left her home, walked two blocks to the trolley line, and waited for a car to come along. When it arrived, she got on and took a seat up near the end of the car.

The car moved on, and, after a few blocks, an old lady boarded it and took a seat near the middle. More people got on after that. It was pretty well filled by the time it reached Fifth and Rafter streets and started to cross the railroad tracks.

Claire was up in front of the car, and she saw everything that happened. That crossing they were coming to was a dangerous one, and it seemed to her that all necessary care was being taken to see that the car got over it safely. The conductor got out and ran ahead to make sure there were no trains coming.

Freight Engine Smashed the Trolley.

Apparently satisfied, he motioned to the motorman to come ahead, and swung back aboard the moving trolley. And, then something went wrong. The trolley was moving across the tracks—was right in the middle of them—when suddenly a freight train appeared out of nowhere, looming up in the night not three yards away from the car!

There was no time to avoid it—no time to do anything. Some one in the car screamed. Then there was a thud—a terrific jar—a crashing of glass and a terrible grinding sound. The big engine was tearing and ripping the trolley car to pieces!

The air was full of shouts and screams now. Bodies were flying everywhere. At the first impact, Claire had been tossed into the air and thrown bodily through a window, shattering the glass as she went. She landed in a sitting position on the ground, 30 or 40 feet from the car tracks. The car, carried along by the train, was right beside her.

Claire got to her feet. Kid-like, she never gave a thought to the possibility that she might be hurt. And as a matter of fact she was so stunned and dazed by the accident that she didn't notice such things.

"I was only about half-conscious of what was going on," she says, "I didn't even realize that I had been in a train wreck."

Climbed Over Bodies of the Dead.

As soon as she got to her feet, she thought of the old woman who had boarded the car just after she had. Back through the window of the wrecked car she climbed, in search of that old lady.

"I climbed over bodies," she says, "until I found her. She was unconscious but I dragged her out of the window and laid her on a nearby lawn. I screamed for help, but no one paid any attention to me."

"Then I ran to the wrecked engine and climbed to the cab to get the engineer."

But the engineer wasn't in the cab. Claire found him lying outside on the tracks—dead.

By this time she was beginning to realize that she was hurt. She was covered with blood and her clothing was nearly all torn from her body. There was a deep cut on her wrist that was bleeding badly. But still she carried on. She climbed back into the wrecked trolley.

"I found another woman," she says, "lying on her back and begging for help. I managed to lift her a little and, as I did, I recognized her as one of our neighbors. I dragged her out through the window and laid her on the lawn beside the old lady, but she died a short time afterward."

Claire Herself Was Badly Hurt.

But by that time help had arrived. The ambulances, the fire department, and the police had all been summoned, and now they were reaching the scene of the accident. Hundreds of people were gathering, trying to lend a hand.

By this time, too, Claire's head was beginning to clear and she was sick at heart at the horrible sights she had seen. With the blood still streaming from her, she began to run home, too excited to realize that she was badly injured.

She reached home all but exhausted—ready to collapse. Her wrist was cut to the bone, and there were splinters of glass in her face, and her back was strained from lifting people out through the window of that wrecked car. She was so weak from loss of blood that she staggered as she entered her house.

Her folks called a doctor and put her to bed. And it was the next day before she read in the newspapers the cause of the accident.

The conductor had looked for the train all right. He just hadn't been able to see it. It was dark, and in addition to that a thick fog had fallen over the city, obscuring the view. The freight's headlamp had gone out, and the watchman at the crossing had gone home just a short while before.

All that was a long time ago. Claire has never forgotten the horrible sights she saw that night, but she doesn't regret that adventure either.

"I'm glad," she says, "that I was able to be there and do a little to help those who were more badly hurt than I was."

HOW to SEW

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

Make a Pattern for a Slip Cover

THE most economical way to cut a slip cover is to make a pattern first. Do this before you buy the material, then fold several bed sheets the width of the fabric you wish to buy, and lay the pattern pieces on them to estimate the amount of goods needed.

Some of the pattern pieces may be made of paper, though unbleached muslin is better for parts that must be fitted. Allow 1 inch at all seam lines to insure an easy fit, and 3 inches for a tuck-in all around the spring seat as shown here at A. Cut the sections with straight edges, then pin them in place and shape them to follow the lines of the chair as at B. Also mark each pattern piece with an arrow, as shown, to indicate which way the grain of the goods should run. The lower sketch shows the pattern pieces pinned on the slip cover material. Brush fringe accents the main lines of this slip cover. The top of the fringe is stitched in place at the same time the seams are sewn.

NOTE: Every homemaker should have a copy of Mrs. Spears' book SEWING, for the Home Decorator. It contains forty-eight pages of step-by-step directions for making slip covers and curtains; also dressing tables; lampshades and other useful articles for the home. Price 25 cents postpaid (coin preferred). Address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St. Chicago, Ill.

Odd Label of Utah Mount

On the road between Bryce canyon and Zion National park in the state of Utah, there is a mountain called "Timponimo," which is the shortening of a Piute phrase meaning "two spirits to heaven and one to hell." The name derives from a fable about the love of a Piute and a Navajo for the same girl, and the subsequent death of the three in a fall from the peak.
