Pneumonia Always Dangerous Says State Health Officer

"Pneumonia is a seasonal disease in that its incidence and mortality are much increased during wet, cold weather," acported to the State Health Department. The disease is most cery line. prevalent and serious in urban centers where contact with people is most frequent. Pneumoespecially so to persons in a run for the number of cases following iliness from some other disease:

The germs that cause pneumo nia are spread by careless cough ers, sneezers, spitters and objects they thus infect. The first must be present at the drawing. symptons are usually a severe chill and fever, a very sick feeling loss of appetite, rapid breathing and a heavy sensation in the chest Sometimes coughing brings up blood from the inflamed lungs. Any of these symptoms should be the signal for going to bed at once and sending for your family doctor.

The rules and prevention of other respiratory diseases apply to pneumoma. I hese rules should become personal habits and not put on or oil at times of prevalence or absence of disease, Persons should avoid careless coughers and sneezers even if it means rudeness. Wash your hands thoroughly before each meal, Keep your nands, pencils, money and such objects away from your mouth and nose. Get plenty of tresh air day and night. Exercise and eat in moderation and wear clothing suitable for the weather.

Pneumonia ranks second as a cause of death in Texa . In 1938 5,432 persons died of this disease, it should be remembered that contagious and infectious diswas cannot be decreased or eliminated without cooperation of the people and this means the people who are sick with contagious and infectious diseases should be isolated and visited as little as possible by relatives and frienas.

Lamb Feeding In Coke County

On Monday, Feb. 20, Mr. Frank Percifull was very grateful in allowing the County Agent to conduct a demonstration at nis place, where he had been feeding 1500 lambs since Dec. 24, 1937. In addition to allowing the County Agent to invite feeders and business men to the demostration, he donated a finished mutton from the feed pen so that the agent might prepare the mutton in a tasty manner in order that those attenuing could be more favorably impressed with the merits of feeding lambs. In addition to red beans (western style) and "the gentleman from Odessa," or cowbow stew, was also served by the agent and his assistance.

County Agriculural Agent Smith expressed his appreciation of Mr. Percifull's kindness in permitting him to use his place and lambs and for his donation to the day's success. He also expressed his regret of Mr. Percifull's abscence due to the fact that he was called to the bedside of his aged father, who is seriously ill.

Weekly News Analysis-White House-Congress Hostility May Mean 3rd Party for 1940 By Joseph W. La Bine-

EDITOR'S NOTE.—When opinions are appressed in these columns, they are those the news analyst, and not necessarily

. Few have been able to get along with it. None have been able to get along without it. Those executives who know how to work with it most advantageously will find it the greatest support for the accomplishment of executive processes . . . Presidents will continue to be made and unmade in the actions of the senate."

The speaker was Utah's dignified Sen. Elbert D. Thomas, foe of proposed Wagner act amendments, supporter of Sen. Robert M. LaFollette's civil liberties probe. When such a consistent New Dealer makes remarks like that on the senate floor, colleagues know White House and congress are no longer on speaking terms. Senator Thomas' speech (written at 3 a. m. on a sleepless night) culminated a series of executive-legislative rifts that is frankly alarming proponents of Democratic peace:

Appointments. Last summer President Roosevelt named Floyd Roberts of Virginia as federal district judge. This was "personally offensive and obnoxious" to Virginia's Sen. Carter Glass and his colleague, Harry F. Byrd, because it constituted an effort to remove patronage from the hands of congress. Though the senate supported the Byrd-Glass contention 72 to 9, it appeared President Roosevelt was only beginning an effort to discredit his congressional foes by over-riding their nominations for choice political jobs. As the rebels prepared to throw out Wisconsin's allegedly red-tinted Thomas R. Amlie, White House interstate commerce commission nominee, several other startling appointments were announced. A slap at Ohio's Sen Vic Donahey was the naming of Herschel W. Arant, Ohio State's law school dean, to the circuit court of appeals. Next came Philadelphia's Francis Biddle, also named an appellate judge over objections of Pennsylvania's devout New Dealer, Sen. Joseph F. Guffey. This was also a blow at John Lewis' C. I. O., because the Guffey nominee (Judge Michael A. Musmanno of Pittsburgh) is an ardent pro-Lewis man. In New York the President appointed a Republican federal judge, and in Philadelphia he gave another judgeship to Harry E. Kaldoner, whose legal experience was limited before he joined the cabinet of ex-Gov. George H. Earle in 1934.

UTAH'S ELBERT THOMAS "Few . . . with it; none . . . without it."

Legislation. Though Democratic house majority leaders have accepted a modified form of government reorganization (defeated last year), and though the President's $552,000,-000 extra defense appropriation will probably pass, White House-congress friendship ends there. ready eliminated is a $100,000,000 appropriation for TVA at Gilbertsville, Ky. The President's request for a new start on Florida's ship canal and the Passamaquoddy tidal project is doomed. While a rebellious senate foreign affairs committee threatens to publicize all its future hearings (as a brake on secret administration plans) the Export-Import bank has been restrained from making large credit loans to foreign nations. This will forestall embarrassment over "unofficial alliances.' While social security's reserve fund is under fire (because the U.S. borrows all reserve funds), the New Deal's vast relief program is endangered by a growing congressional economy bloc. The President's demand for restoration of $150,000,- appropriation is now sidetracked in favor of a long range welfare study. charge.

Virginia's Rep. Clifton A. Woodrum has asked a cut in next year's relief budget to $1,120,000,000 (half the President's request) and assignment of relief control to congressional hands. But relief will probably be settled by adoption of the bill designed by South Carolina's Sen. James F. Byrnes, following last year's senate inquiry.

Miscellaneous. Anti-White House sentiment took voice in continuation of the house committee to investigate un-Americanism, under which Texas' Martin Dies received $100,-000 and a carte blanche to explode all the bombshells he wished. Pending are impeachment proceedings against Madame Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, charged with harboring Alien Harry Bridges, allegedly communistic west coast C. I. O. leader.

Significance. Since the President and congress seem to be heading down opposite paths, the best guess holds that Mr. Roosevelt is deliberately inviting a split in Democratic ranks leading to formation of a third party for 1940. But Labor's Nonpartisan league (C. I. O) must be a bulwark of that party, and the anti-C. I. O. slur contained in Judge Musmanno's rejection fails to jibe with these plans. Moreover most debated presidential appointments have been judicial, practically valueless from a political viewpoint. But party-smashing need follow no definite course; damaged feelings could easily be patched up in time for a third party campaign in 1940 -or 1944.

Pan America

Protesting Mexican expropriation of American-owned oil lands, Secretary of State Cordell Hull has demanded compensation. Meanwhile a false belief has arisen in Mexico City that President Roosevelt sympathizes with the revolutionary regime of President Lazaro Cardenas. Far from sympathetic, Mr. Roosevelt recently called Mexican ambassador Dr. Don Francisco Castillo Najera to the White House for a seminar on international good taste. The lesson: That sovereign Mexico can expropriate but must also make compensation. As Senor Najera carried this protest home, U. S. oilmen were heartened into offering President Cardenas a settlement proposal: Oil lands would be returned, title and profits then divided on a 50-50 basis between gov-

But news from Mexico City made it clear this offer would be rejected. In addition to a $17,000,000 agreement signed last December to barter oil for German machinery, President Cardenas has just announced two new barter contracts involving approximately $4,000,000,-000 in Mexican oil and Nazi manufactured protects.

That Senor Cardenas is smugly satisfied with his progress was evidenced by the remark of his chief political aid, Luis Rodriguez, made to visiting Col. Fulgencio Batista, Cuban strong man: "When the President found the foreign companies refusing to obey the government's orders in court, he gave the stern order to expropriate the oil companies. We show it to you as an authentic victory of the revolution, as an example to you."

Whether Strong Man Batista would accept the example remains to be seen, but Mexico already has one Latin-American ally in this pleasant game. Traveling through Bolivia, Correspondent John .T. Whitaker of the Chicago Daily News found that nation's oil dealings make Mexico's expropriations look like child's play. Specific example was Bolivian seizure of $17,from which is the defend on the transfer with the wind for the first property and the standard of the standard early in 1937 on a trumped-up fraud

PETER IN SAMARIA

LESSON TEXT—Acts 8:14-25.
GOLDEN TEXT—Come ye, buy, and eat;
yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price.—Isaiah 55:1.

Commercialism certainly should have no place in the Christian Church. But in an age that will even commercialize a man's love for his mother, it is small wonder that the great holy days of the Church-Christmas and Easterhave become the special object of profit-seeking purveyors of every-thing from hats to whisky. New Year's day, Thanksgiving day, Mother's day, Father's day, any day at all, becomes just another opportunity to take a man's money, waste his time, and possibly to destroy his soul. It is high time that intelligent folk make effective protest against such perversion of sacred things.

The Scripture lesson for today tells of one who went so far as to try to buy the power of God for money, that he might use it to get gain for himself, failing to realize that the power of God is a gift and to be used only for His glory.

I. Spiritual Power-the Gift of God (vv. 14-17).

The Holy Spirit who is the third person of the blessed Trinity had called Philip, a layman, and sent him forth to preach in Samaria. Men and women were converted, and when the church at Jerusalem heard of it, they sent Peter and John to give counsel and help to the new converts. Through the laying on of hands these received the gift of the Holy Spirit even as we now receive Him the moment we believe

What a glorious truth it is that the believer is indwelt by the Holy Spirit (I Cor. 6:19). Thus even the humblest believer has in Him the One who redeems man, gives grace for holy living, and empowers for service. The greatest power in all the world is consequently available to every true and yielded believer. Gone then are all excuses for weak and careless living. Gone is every ground for claiming that one cannot serve God. The power and grace are His, and He gives them to His followers as a gift. Christian friend, are you giving the Holy Spirit of God liberty to infill and use you as He will?

II. Spiritual Power-Not for Sale (vv. 18-24).

Men who put their trust in money are prone to think that one can buy anything. They say with Walpole, "Every man has his price." But they are wrong. There are men and women in the world who cannot be bought, and it is even more certain that the best things that life can give a man have no price tag on them-a mother's love, friendship, fellowship with God, the Holy Spirit's power-these among many others are not for sale.

Simon, a professed believer, recognized that these followers of Jesus had a great power which he thought to buy for his own business as a magician. His was a very gross and blatant effort to do what many have done in the Church, and are doing today, by more skillful and sometimes by under-cover methods. There are those who by holding the purse strings seek to control the message of the preacher, or who use their financial influence to obtain control of church organizations and institutions. Their efforts are doomed to ultimate failure, but the present harm they do to the cause of Christ is appalling. Many a church and pastor would be far better off if they could rise up and say with Peter, "Thy money perish with thee.

III. Spiritual Power-for Testimony (v. 25).

Peter and John set the Samaritan believers a good example by permitting the Spirit of God to use them to testify and preach the Word of the Lord in many villages. The Holy Spirit does "not speak of himself," but guides the believer all truth" (John 16:13), and I primary ministry is to glorify Christ (John 16:14). It follows that the outstanding mark of a Spirit-born and Spirit-filled believer is his desire to speak of and to glorify

SYNOPSIS

Mary Loring and her father, Jim, an ineffectual attorney, meet a train which brings his wealthy sister-in-law, unmarried Linnie Cotswell and her friend, Lelia Ormsby, divorcee for a Christmas visit. Waiting at home for them are Mary's mother, her younger sister, Ellen; her father's nagging maiden sister, Aunt Mamie, and Peter, the baby of the family. At the depot Dr. Christopher Cragg helps the guests with their luggage. Mary is secretly in love with Doctor Cragg. In leaving, her Aunt Linnie urges Mary to visit her in New York, but Mary refuses. Mary works in a rental library, where she spends her spare time writing short stories. Mary's father is let out as railroad attorney, the fees of which were almost the sole support of his family. To earn money she decides to begin writing in earnest. Mary feels sure that he newest story, "At Sea," would please the editors of National Weekly. After finishing it she calls Doctor Cragg, who comes to the book store for a current novel. Falling from a ladder while getting his book, she regains consciousness to find his arms around her. He tells her he loves her, and then tells her he loves her, and then tells her he loves her, and then tells her he is to be married the coming month to a girl he has known all his life. Despondent Mary decides to accept her Aunt Linnie's invitation. In New York her aunt laughs a her for her plans to write, and insists that she meet as many eligible men as oossible. The new week brings two letters. One, from the National Weekly, with a $100 check for her story, makes her deliriously nappy. The other, from her sister, tells her that financial conditions at home are getting worse. The next day, at a party given by her aunt. Mary meets distinguished Jerome Taylor, wealthy middle aged man-about-town, and effusive Count- Umberto Balianci. The count's oily manner nauseates her. A note from her father the following day pleads with her not to mention the family's financial plight to her aunt. After reading it she forces herself to begin work on her nex with her not to mention the family's financial plight to her aunt. After reading it she forces herself to begin work on her next short story, which is more difficult to write than the first. She labors on until her aunt informs her that Count Umberto, whom Lelia terms a sponger and fortune hunter, is to take them to dinner that evening. He takes them to a garish restaurant in Greenwich Village. That evening Mary sends her story, "Their Son," to the National Weekly. She goes to see Phillip Buchanan, editor of the National Weekly, to whom she has given her last story. to whom she has given her last story. He invites her to lunch. He congratulates her for the simple treatment given the first story, and says that her last offering will receive immediate attention. At lunch she is introduced to attractive Jim Ormsby, Lelia's former husband.

Mary watched Jim Ormsby as he walked across the room, and finally disappeared through the door into the foyer. She liked his voice, the way he carried his shoulders, the perfect "hang" of his well-cut clothes. He looked just the sort of person whom Lelia might well have loved-whom Lelia might well still love with all her heart. "He's very attractive," she said, more to herself than to Phillip Buchanan.

He's-tops," the man replie most belligerently, "and, to my way of thinking, he's been given a dirty deal. His wife divorced him a couple of years ago on what was merely circumstantial evidence. Never gave him a chance to explain; and he was too damned proud to do so later. Seemed to figure that if she didn't have more faith in him than she appeared to have, he might as well let her go."

Mary leaned across the table. "Is his wife, by any chance, named-Lelia?" she asked excitedly.

"Yes," Buchanan replied, sur-prised, "it is! Do you know her?" "Well, rather! In fact, she's a sort of cousin of mine, and she's visiting Aunt Linnie right now!" "Oh, Lord! I hope I haven't said a hing I shouldn't have!"

"No, Mr. Buchanan, not at all.-By the way, isn't it time we were leaving?"

Buchanan looked at his watch. "Yes, it is. How are you going uptown?'

Mary smiled at him. "Literally. in the bus," she replied. "Metaphorically, on wings. You see, I'm terribly excited over this assignment you've given me, and I'll do my best to make good."

Buchanan motioned to Alphonse, glanced over the check, and, leaving some bills on the table, indicated to Mary that he was ready to leave. "You'll hear from us as soon as we've made a decision on 'Their Son,' Miss Loring," he said when they reached the foyer. "Thanks for lunching with me." Mary extended a gloved band. "Thanks for asking me," she re-plied, her eyes dancing. "I loved it, although I confess you had me stymied for a while."

"Stymied?" the man replied.

"Stymied! What do you mean?"

But she was out of the door now, and either did not hear him, or else would not turn around. Her heart was lighter than it had been in dow. "He's attractive, Lelia." weeks, and her feet barely touched the pavement as she fled down the steps and turned up Fifth Avenue.

"Yes, Lelia. Where are you?"

"Right here in the living room, having a perfect whirl for myself, studying all the travel literature I can find about the tropics. There's a boat sailing for the West Indies March fifteenth, and I believe that'd be just about right for our trip."

Mary came into view, her eyes wide and starry, her face flushed. "Good heavens!" cried Lelia. "What in the world have you been doing? You look as if you'd caught the world by the tail! I've never seen anybody quite so-aglow! Did you see Mr. Buchanan?"

Mary fell into the cushions of the lounge and prepared to relax in comfort "That's just it, Lelia." she replied, her voice husky with excitement. "I not only saw Mr. Buchanan, but he took me to lunch at the Lafayette. And, Leha, he wants me to write a series of 'shorts' for his magazine."

"Darling! That's wonderful! Did he mention the delicate subject of

"Yes, Lel, he did! He's going to increase the size of the checks as time goes on, providing, of course. my stuff clicks with the public. I'm so happy. You can't imagine what it means to me.

"It means," Lelia said, her blue eyes serious, "that 'At Sea' must be a darned good tale, and that Phillip Buchanan feels he's made another of his well-known finds! Congratulations, my dear. By the way, how did you like Phil Buchanan?"

"I liked him-well enough," Mary replied, "but he acted as if he were bored to death with every word I uttered, and he looked at his watch

"Oh, well," chuckled Lelia, "he is busy man."

'Lelia," Mary began. "Yes?" replied Lelia, not looking

"Lelia,-I-I-met Jim Ormsby today."

The older girl did not move, but Mary could see a deep red slowly rising to the nape of her neck. "He's a friend of Phil Buchanan's," Lelia returned evenly, her attention apparently riveted on a colorful picture of the race course at Havana.

"Yes," Mary returned. "He asked Mr. Buchanan to spend the week-end at his house in Connecti-hill, and a fireplace in every room. We lived there most of the time, Jim and I."

There was a revealing nostalgia in Lelia's tones as she spoke of the home she and Jim had shared together, and Mary, sensing the ache that lay beneath those words, longed to rush to her and place sympathetic arms about her shoulders. Instead, she continued to stand by the win-

> A second of silence followed, broken finally by Mary. "Was there any mail for me, Lelia, in the eleven o'clock delivery?"

> Lelia's shoulders jerked, as if she had been abruptly jarred out of a reverie. "Yes, I believe there's a letter from Hawkinsville. And, by the way, there's a box of something or other for you, delivered about an hour ago by a Western Union boy. Looks like candy, and I hope it is. I'm perishing for the want of a chocolate-covered mint."

"The letter from home can wait an instant," Mary thought. "At least, until I see what's in this pack-

She untied the ribbon, and tore away the glossy orange tissue that covered the box. An envelope-enclosed card, tipped from its position by her eager fingers, fell to the floor. Stooping, she picked it up and read, 'Fruits from Italy to a lovely lady, with the felicitations and adoration of Umberto."

"Just so much-eyewash!" she told herself. "The man scarcely knows me. I'll give the stuff to Addie. Maybe she'll like it."

Then with a commingling of eagerness and apprehension, she opened the letter from Ellen.

Mary dear:

There's really not a thing to tell you, but I know that you worry when you don't hear from home every now and then, so am writing anyhow.

Dad still hasn't been able to make any connections. Mother is getting thinner every day from worry, and Aunt Mamie goes sadly about with the usual chip on her shoulder. She has taken to referring wistfully to one Harry Archer who visited at Grandfather's house twenty-five years ago, intimating that he was who visited at Grandiather's house twen-ty-five years ago, intimating that he was desperately in love with her, and that it was just too bad she didn't marry him. I asked Dad on the Q. T. if the guy really had been in love with her, and he replied that if he was, he managed to exert wonderful self-control. All Dad can remember about Harry Archer's visit was that there had been two picnics :t Hick's Bluff, and, in both cases, Harry had to be hit over the head with a club in order to get him even to go through the motions of being Aunt Maries' except.

Browns Business College have put me first on their list for any possible job that may present itself, but I'm afraid the chances aren't so hot.

I hope you're having a wonderful time, ave you seen Radio City yet? Give my love to Aunt Linnie and Lelia. Devotedly, Ellen,

P. S. Chris Cragg was married to that Ilsa Graceland in Chicago last Saturday, and is bringing her to Hawkinsville the end of the week. Everybody's dying to see what she's like.

For an instant, the room went quite black before Mary's eyes, and it was only with supreme effort that she kept from slumping to the floor. So, Chris had married, after all! Of course, he had told her that he was going to. Of course, he had been honor-bound to carry through; yet all along, there had smoldered in the back of her mind the thought, 'If he really loves me, he won't marry Ilsa. He can't! He'll surely tell her that he loves someone else -that his marriage to her can't go through!" But the marriage had gone through-last Saturday! Chris had now been married for five days.

With fingers that seemed numb, she picked Ellen's letter up, tore it into tiny pieces, and dropped it into the waste basket. How surprised Ellen would have been had she dreamed of the portent of that postscript! "Thank God," Mary thought gratefully, "nobody-not even Ellen -knows how desperately I care for Chris! Nobody knows that I care at all!"

At last, she turned from the dressing-table, and moved toward the bed. Blindly, she dropped to the bed, heedless of the satin spread that covered it, and lay there in a disconsolate heap, like a child that has been sent to his nursery for punishment. At last, the tears began to come, and still unmindful of the coverlet, she buried her face against the protecting privacy of the pillow, and gratefully let them fall.

She did not know how long she lay there, but the winter darkness had fallen outside when Lelia finally entered the room and snapped on the light. "Mary, I didn't know you were here!" she said, glimpsing the huddle of Mary's body on the bed. 'Have you been asleep?"

Mary sat up, trying to avert her haggard face from Lelia's gaze. "I was asleep. 'Yes," she lied. What time is it, Lelia?"

ing the car for you, Mary?" "Yes?"

"I wish you'd wear my ermine wrap tonight. It would look simply ravishing on you, and I know Aunt Linnie wants you to appear particularly beautiful. Jerome's quite a person, you know-even though he is, in my humble opinion, the worst sort of renegade."

"But, Lelia," Mary demurred. "I might get it soiled or tear it."

"Don't be ridiculous, darling. I want you to wear it. It'll look divine with that silver-threaded evening frock of yours."

"All right," Mary replied listless-"Thank you." But she was thinking, "What difference does it make how I look? What difference does anything make. Chris is married."

Three-quarters of an hour later, Mary, a transformed person, stood before the mirror of the dressingtable. The hot bath and icy shower had brought life and color back to her weary body; miraculously wiped from her face the ravages of sorrow. Lelia had dusted just enough rouge over the soft curve of her cheeks to disguise their pallor. Her lace frock clung lovingly to her body, and fell to the floor in an eddy of silver and white. Three orchids of deep purple perched lightly on her left shoulder, and now and then smoothed their soft petals against her cheek. Addie had just brought them in with the announcement that Mr. Taylor's chauffeur had delivered them, and that Mr. Taylor's car was waiting at the door.

"Well, if you ain't a dream!" Addie cried. "Why, honey, you look just like a princess."

Mary, suddenry aware that, had it not been for Lelia, she would never have been able to dress that evening-that Lelia had practically pulled her together-turned impulsively and kissed the other girl on the cheek. "Thank you, Lelia. You've been sweet to me tonight. You're always sweet to me."

Linnie Cotswell, looking handsome in a trailing gown of maroon-colored lace, appeared in the doorway, "Ready, Mary? Why, my dear, you're a dream! I didn't know my family tree could produce such royal fruit!"

Mary never quite knew how she managed to get through the hours that followed. It was like a hectic nightmare-a nightmare made up of spacious, flower-filled rooms in Jerome Taylor's penthouse; of Jerome Taylor himself, faultless in black and white, a gardenia in his lapel; always at her side, always looking at her with admiring eyes. Dancing with Jerome Taylor to the tune of "September in the Rain," and thoughts of Chris! A constant pain in her heart, a lump in her throat that could not be swallowed. and thoughts, unforgettable thoughts,

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 52), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells.

Get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a good general system tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life. ADVENTURERS' CLUB

HEADLINES FROM THE LIVES OF PEOPLE LIKE YOURSELF!

"Danger on the Rails"

HELLO, EVERYBODY! I'm still learning what a terrific beating the human mind and body can take and still survive. The latest one to impress this lesson on me is today's Adventurer-Patrick J. Laffey of Trenton, New Jersey. Pat Laffey, as a boy in Ireland, crawled under a locomotive and was hanging to the undercarriage when the engineer started his train. His description of the heavy steel rods as they started to move, picking up speed, shoving him, battering him-well, read the story!

Pat was just, as he puts it, "a broth of a boy" in 1915, living in Galway, Ireland. On this particular autumn afternoon, he and two companions set out blackberrying. So lovely was the scenery, that they traveled farther from home than they had ever before ventured-some ten miles.

"We dared go no further," Pat says, "lest we get lost in our homeward journey. We were all tired now, so we started home, bringing our collection of berries along."

The boys crossed a few fields, when suddenly they came to a double railroad track. Rather than cross any more fences, or fall into any more ditches, they started home along the track. They had walked about half a mile when their attention was attracted by a huge engine which lay on the sidetracks nearby. "To me." Pat says, "who had never seen one before, this huge mass of steel presented one of life's mysteries." The boys watched the aged engineer as he pushed and pulled levers. "How that thing did whistle and shriek," Pat recalls. "I think I hear it now."

Mystified, Pat Climbs Under the Locomotive.

A little later, the engineer left his position and walked down amongst other cars on the track. The engine was still steaming and hissing. "This," Pat says, "was our chance for a final analysis of our mysterywas this huge thing really alive?"

The more they looked at it, the more confused the boys became. They walked around it, saw its dirty, greasy iron bars, its large, shiny wheels. "And now," Pat says, "my race with death occurred. I feel a cold shiver right down my spine now.

"I myself set the trap for the grim jaws of eternity. It was a foolish act on my part, as I learned later. Now, boys, don't get a fainting spell when you read this, but consider yourself in my position. What would you have done?'

Well, here is the incredible thing Pat did. Being greatly interested in the engine, he examined it as best he could; so did his chums. Rather than miss anything, he crept underneath the huge structure. He was just in there, when the engineer returned.

He rebuked Pat's two chums for their presence on the property of The boys took to their heels as fast as they could, but battered body was on the ground under the engine.

Pat, rather than face the engineer's scolding, tucked himself under the engine, never aware of his life being in the other's hands, listening for every breath, hoping the engineer would soon go away.

He did decide finally to go away, but, as Pat puts it, "not without the engine.

Smoke blew around, irons clattered, brakes shrieked and groanedand there was Pat, gasping for dear life itself. He clung on with his hands and feet until a huge iron compelled him to lose his foothold.

He now tried to save his head and arms from being ground to pieces. The engine pulled along. Pat expected any minute to be mashed to pieces. A thousand thoughts flashed through his mind -how far was he going-would the engineer ever stop-how long could he hold on?

Soaked With Blood, He Sinks Into Unconsciousness.

To Pat death was inevitable; he could see no possible way to avert it, no means of attracting the attention of the engineer. He remembered he began to shout for help, but his cries were only drowned out by that ever-increasing rattle of the engine. He remembers, too, getting a severe blow on his left side-the cuts of which he bears to this day.

He felt himself getting weak . . . wet with blood . . . he sank into unconsciousness

Days passed, days for which he can give no account, days with life in the balance. Then finally, on the fifth day, Pat again gained consciousness

There, beside his bed, stood Pat's parents, friends and neighbors, and, in the middle of the group, the unfortunate engineer himself. Needless to say, all were overjoyed to see this response to medical attention in a boy they had literally given up for dead.

Pat afterward learned how it came about that his life had been spared. And again, it was just one of those almost incredible flashes of good fortune-or Providence. The engineer had occasion to throw a switch, and while he was on the ground he chanced to look down at the engine's running gear.

Imagine his horror to see Pat's tattered body lying on the ground under the engine. He signaled the fireman in the cab, the fireman's hand shot to the levers and the immense monster of snorting steel screeched to a stop. The engineer lifted out the unconscious form from beneath the undercarriage.

If any of you adventurers ever want a ride on an engine, take Pat's advice, and be sure you get IN one, and not on the rods, because the odds, Pat says, "are against you."

SAFETY-LOCK CORD BODY and GEAR-GRIP TREAD

CAR OWNERS everywhere are acclaiming the extra blowout protection and non-skid safety of the new Firestone Champion Tire. And automobile manufacturers, knowing its outstanding performance, have adopted it for their new 1939 models. On every hand you hear, "It's the most effective tire we have ever had on wet pavement and in mud and snow!" It's the hit of 1939!

The Firestone Champion Tire is a completely new achievement in safety engineering and the result of a new and revolutionary means of locking greater safety into the cord body of a tire. This is accomplished first by the use of a new type of tire cord called "Safety-Lock," in which the cotton fibers are more compactly interwoven to give greater strength. And then the fibers in each individual cord, the cords in each ply and the plies themselves are all securely locked together by a new and advanced Firestone process of Gum-Dipping, which provides amazingly greater strength-and greater strength means greater safety.

The new Safety-Lock cord construction gives the added strength that makes possible the use of the new thicker, tougher, deeper Firestone Gear-Grip Tread, which provides remarkably longer non-skid mileage. This sensational new

WHAT to EAT and W

C. Houston Goudiss Helps to Answer the Question: What to Eat During Lent?

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

A CLERGYMAN friend of mine once remarked that in his opinion, Lent lasts far too long. He had reference, I believe, to the fact that in a swift-moving age, people might be more apt to keep Lent faithfully, if it terminated in a shorter period than 40 days.

Many homemakers, I feel sure, would echo his sentiments, but for a rather different reason! Numbers of them, I know, find the six weeks of Lent the most troublesome of the entire year. Their difficulty lies in planning meatless meals that satisfy hearty appetites. And since the weather is often bitterly cold in late February and early March, families usually seem hungrier, and harder to satisfy, than at almost any other season.

A Chance for Variety

Lent does challenge the homemaker to exercise imagination and if you happen to be one of those people who follow a set formula most of the year. It may, likewise, offer a chance to make some significant savings in your food budget.

Most of us feel that meat makes the meal. And it cannot be denied that its savory extractives give it a most appetizing and intriguing flavor. But there are a number of other foods which contain proteins of equal biological value. Furthermore, nutritionists hold that it is desirable to obtain protein from a number of different sources. That is because different protein foods contain varying amounts of different amino acids; and by eating a variety of protein foods, we can best obtain a wide assortment of these "building stones" of the body.

For Meatless Meals

Fish comes to mind, first of all, as a main dish for the meal that does not include meat. For those who are far from the source of supply of fresh-caught fish, there are the quick-frozen varieties, the dried and salted fish, such as finnan haddie, shredded codfish and block cod, and 27 types of canned fish and shell fish.

Canned salmon is one of the least expensive of all protein foods. And so many things can be said in its favor that one nationally known food authority referred to it as the most nutritious animal food that could be had for children over six. It is a notable source of minerals, especially calcium, phosphorus and iodine, and contains vitamins A, D, and G.

Cheese in Many Forms Cheese is another splendid source of protein that should be used more freely, not only during Lent but throughout the entire year. It is high in energy values. And in addition, it contains the milk minerals, calcium and phosphorus, and is a good source of vitamin A. Cheese is so flavorsome that it adds zest to any meal at which it is served. And it certainly should interest the homemaker with an eye to thrift. For a little goes a long way. It is, therefore, an ideal food around which to build nourishing, appetizing and economical meals.

Macaroni, Spaghetti and Noodles Cheese is especially good when combined with such foods as macaroni, spaghetti or egg noodles. It affords a pleasing flavor contrast. And it helps to balance the menu -in two ways. First, the proteins of cheese supplement those found in wheat from which macaroni products are made. Secondly. cheese contains a substantial amount of fat, which teams well with high carbohydrate foods, such as any of those made from the cereal grains. Cheese may also be combined with vegetables, to make another balanced food team. The cheese contributes proteins, energy values, and minerals, while the vegetables are an outstanding source of cellulose or bulk, as well as vitamins and min-

Don't Overlook Nuts and Legumes Legumes are one group of vegetables which are high in energy values. They also contain protein which is suitable for repairing worn-out body tissue. Dried beans, peas and lentils may therefore be used as a main dish at Lenten meals, replacing both meat and potatoes. There are many varieties of ready-cooked beans on the market, packed in both glass and tin. And dried lima beans are particularly wellsuited to being made into croquettes, patties, loaves, chowders and ragouts.

Don't Sleep When Gas Crowds Heart

If you toes in bed and can't sleep from con-tipation and awful GAS BLOATING rememat you toos in bee and can telep from constipation and awful GAS BLOATING remember this: To get quick relief you must get DOUBLE ACTION. You must relieve the GAS. You must clear the bowels. Adlerika is just what you need because it acts on the stomach and BOTH bowels. Adlerika is BOTH carminative and cathartic. Carminatives that warm and soothe the stomach and expel GAS. Catharties that quickly and gently clear the bowels of waste matter that may have caused GAS BLOATING, sour stomach, eleepless nights and indigestion for months. Adlerika relieves stomach gas almost at once. Adlerika usually acts on the bowels in less than two hours. No waiting for overnight relief. Adlerika does not gripe, is not habit forming. Get genuine Adlerika today.

Sold at all drug stores

Nuts are another possibility for Lenten meals that should be considered by every homemaker. They, too, can be used for croquettes and nut loaves, as well as souffles and casserole combinations. Nuts can be combined with vegetables for a main-course dish . . . with fruit for dessert. In the form of nut butters, they make a nourishing spread for luncheon sandwiches.

Moreover, each type of nut has a distinctive taste, and walnuts, peanuts, brazil nuts and pecans, for example, each make a thoroughly delightful dish, with a fla-vor quite different from the

Most homemakers will also want to use eggs more frequently during Lent, because they are so readily available and easily prepared. This is commendable, because besides being a fine source

A Three Days' Cough Is Your Danger Signal

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your common cough, chest cold, or bronchial irritation, you may get relief now with Creomulsion. Serious trouble may be brewing and you cannot afford to take a chance with any remedy less potent than Creomulsion, which goes right to the seat of the trouble and aids nature to soothe and heal the inflamed mucous membranes and to loosen and expel germ-laden phlegm.

Even if other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged, try Creomul-sion. Your druggist is authorized to refund your money if you are not thoroughly satisfied with the benefits obtained. Creomulsion is one word, ask for it plainly, see that the name on the bottle is Creomulsion, and you'll get the genuine product and the relief you want. (Adv.) of protein, eggs rank next to milk as a protective food.

Only a few of the many possibilities for Lent have been suggested in this brief review. But surely they give a hint of the many good and nutritious foods a homemaker can choose on those days when she plans meatless meals. @-WNU-C. Houston Goudiss-1939-51.

The Vulture's Nest

The bomb is badly aimed and the bomber circles the airport to drop another when the Falcon sweeps from the clouds. His well placed bullets drives the bomber to earth, where its occupants escape. G-Man Chief Carlton, furious over this latest outrage, traces a clue in the disabled bomber to one James George. Andrews. Davis and Cummings investigate. As Davis inquires at the front door, the others are attacked by gunmen. Davis helps to rout the men.

He captures one, Osborn, who claims George may be found at a certain river pier. Hurrying there, the G men learn George has just left for a steel plant across the river, which manufactures anti-aircraft guns, and that he is probably carrying explosives. The G-men hurriedly follow.

They separate at the huge plant to search for their suspect, which it easy for George and his henchmen to overpower them. Davis, the last to be slugged, is thrown unconscious into an empty steel vat. George then sets off his dynamite. A terriffic explosion rocks the plant, and white stee gushes toward the prone flying G-man.

This is the 3rd episode of the "Hying G-men" the new serial that is now showing at the Alamo.

WAR BY PEOPLE ONLY, PROPOSED NEW LAW

EXCEPT in the case of actual invasion, let the people of the United States themselves vote on the issue of war! That is the substance of "The Peace A endment" which will come before the new Congress when it convenes in

The resolution which will be introduced in both Houses will provide that "the authority of Congress to declare war or to conscript citizens for military duty abroad shall not become effective until confirmed by a majority of votes cast thereon in national referendums except in the event of attack, invasion, or military expedition from abroad against the United States or its Territorial possessions" or against any other nation in the Western Hemisphere. "If the issue of war were to face our people today," writes Genevieve Parkhurst in discussing the proposed amendment in the January Good Housekeeping, "we would not be asked our opinions. And if we gave them, they would be ignored. I have been told that, preceding our entrance into the World War, only one Congress-man took the trouble to find out what his constituents to aght about it. Their response was overwhelmingly against sending our troops overseas, but by a great majority both Houses voted as the President asked them to vote, and we were plunged into war up to the hilt."

There is nothing irregular about this procedure, since the Constitution specifically gives Congress the power to declare war. And anless the Constitution is amended. Congress can plunge the people into a war which is not of their choosing whonever it desires.
