WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

U. S. Policy of 'Delivering the Goods' In Effort to Aid Foes of Hitlerism Is Nation's Objective, Says President; Nazis Pound Russians on Three Fronts

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

POLICY:
Defined by FDR

On the same day as the senate opened its debate on the historic measure aimed at stripping the neutrality act of all restrictions on American shipping, the President delivered his Navy day address in which he declared that the U. S. foreign policy was one of "delivering the goods" to friends of democracy.

He said that despite U. S. efforts to avoid it, "the shooting has started." Bristling with challenges to the Nazis, his speech pledged his administration to a policy of destroying Hitlerism and assisting in establishing a peace which will make a better world.

In writing to the Foreign Policy association an exposition of his own foreign policy, President Roosevelt had said that it was so simple a child could understand it.

The cardinal principle, he asserted, was the destruction of the "Hitler menace" and the protection of the American way of life from a system that would destroy it.

He admitted that there were those in this nation who would lull the people into a sense of false security, but warned that this action had preceded the fall of every country now occupied by Axis forces.

This and his Navy day address served the purpose of clarifying the situation as regarded the road the United States was prepared to travel in following the administration's leadership.

The President expressed himself as confident that his aims were the popular aims of the nation, and that the people would be ready with such sacrifices as would be necessary to carry them out.

SOVIET DEFENSE:

Last Ditch

What was called the "last all-out" attack possible for the Germans to launch had been touched off on all three of the major Soviet fronts, and there were indications that the defenders were reaching their last ditch.

The "military miracle" was happening before the eyes of the world, as the Red troops had apparently halted the full fury of the Nazi advance, had kept their defense lines intact, and were putting up what even Berlin admitted was a magnificent defense.

But whether they could continue to hold or not remained the latter part of the needed miracle. Germany announced the fall of Kharkov, Donets basin industrial center, a city of 850,000 souls, of 12-story industrial buildings, dubbed the Pittsburgh of Russia.

Fantastic stories were told of the losses on each side.

Strange was the report from Moscow, telling of Stalin in personal command, of the removal of Budenny and Voroshilov from command, to take charge of the forming of new armies, and of the placing of Timoshenko in actual command of the defense of the capital.

DEFIANCE:

By Miners

Following a 40-day period in which the National Mediation board had sought vainly for a peaceful settlement, and in which finally President Roosevelt himself had attempted to take a hand, a strike of 35,000 coal miners in seven vital mines had been called by John L. Lewis.

The headlines made the issue plain. Lewis Defies Roosevelt. Once an enthusiastic partisan of the administration, a man who had seen his C.I.O. grow to enormous stature under the broadly liberal labor laws passed under the Roosevelt administration, Lewis openly defied the President's personal request for "no strike."

The mines were the captive mines of the steel companies, and from them the coal and coke vital to steel-making were drawn, the steel firms contracting for the mines' entire output.

The strike was seen to hit at the very heart of the national defense.

Out of it, the friends of the labor movement frankly feared, would come the signing by the President of a long-dreaded "work or fight" order which would draft all defense strikers summarily into the army.

The strike was being watched with keen anxiety in dozens of important quarters.

KNOX:

And Japan

Secretary Knox of the navy, in an address, had stated that some sort of clash of a military and naval nature with Japan was "inevitable" and for once Tokyo seemed willing to agree with one of his utterances.

The Domei news service, and the Times Advertiser, both authoritative, predicted that a special session of the diet would be called for the direct purpose of discussing Japanese-American relations.

They were both gloomy over the outlook for the lasting peace in the Pacific that the United States desired, and Japan was apparently fighting for—provided it would be a peace dominated by Nippon.

The American formula for peace was this: Withdrawal from China and Indo-China of Japanese, Americans and British. Recognition of the United States of the puppet government of Manchukuo. Guarantees of inviolability of territory to the "status quo" of governments.

And all recognized that Japan was far from willing to sign any such treaty.

KEARNY:

A Diary Story

The widow of a London doctor, only passenger on a recent convoy from Britain to the United States, kept a brief daily diary of her trip, and from it readers were able to glean more facts about the Kearny's torpedoing than they had from naval reports.

The torpedoing occurred two days after the convoy left Iceland, two days after the ships had been joined by the Kearny and "another U. S. destroyer."

Though the diarist's vessel was some distance from the naval ships, she wrote of the shattering impact of the depth bombs discharged by the Kearny when a submarine was reported.

Dirigible as Air Weapon May Play Important Role

Almost Forgotten Air Arm Gets Serious Study; Federal and State Agencies Team In Unique Farm Experiment.

By BAUKHAGE

National Farm and Home Hour Commentator.

WNU Service, 1343 H Street, N-W, Washington, D. C.

While Washington debated the question of arming American merchantmen, the British were trying out a new and hazardous means of protecting their precious life-line of supply from attack from the air. Fighter planes were being placed on the crowded decks of freighters to be catapulted off when enemy bombers approached. When news of this move reached Washington it woke a slumbering plan for an almost forgotten defense of the skies.

The heroic British measure is an expensive undertaking, for there is no way to return a fighter plane to the ship once it is launched. Unless the vessel is within an hour's flight of land the plane must land at sea and sink. Unless the planes can land near the ship in quiet waters, the pilots have very little chance to escape a similar fate.

"Arming" their ships by means of this suicide measure is an example of the risks the members of the Royal Air force are willing to take as their heavy share of battle and is evidence, too, of the extent to which the other arms of the British service have come to depend on these reckless knights of the air.

Englishman Tells Why

William Courtenay, member of the Royal Flying corps, in the last war, flight commander of the R.A.F. in the present war, explained to a little group of American officers and members of congress in Washington recently why this step was taken.

"Just as command of the air won the battle of Britain," said Courtenay, "so command of the air is necessary to win the battle of the Atlantic."

Fire-power, he explained, is the essential in this war as it was in the last. Machine guns drove the armies of the last war underground and produced a stalemate which gave the British time to get their navy (and the United States navy) into action, break the German submarine blockade of the British Isles and blockade Germany.

To avoid such a stalemate again the Germans invented the panzer columns—high fire-power from very mobile units which ran the enemy down.

Thus Hitler won the battle of France, forced the British from the continent.

Then Goering began the battle of Britain. In Poland and in the low countries he had destroyed much of his opponents' air forces on the ground. He did this by surprise attack and because airfields were concentrated and the airplanes on them were close together. With the major part of the enemy fighters destroyed in Poland and in the low countries his bombers did their work without having to fight in the air for control of the air.

Luftwaffe Over Britain

The Luftwaffe lost the battle of Britain because the British dispersed their own forces on the ground—separated the airfields, spread out the planes along the edges. That saved their fighting planes and fighting planes gave Britain superior fire-power in the air. Because the bomber is built to carry a heavy load of bombs and gasoline to give it a longer cruising radius it cannot contend with the more mobile, more heavily armed and armored fighter.

The fighter's weakness, of course, is the fact that its cruising radius is short. It cannot remain long in the air and therefore, "the crying need," as Courtenay put it, "is a long-range fighter." If Germany had had long range fighters the battle of Britain might have turned out differently.

One way of giving the fighter range is to place it on a ship, but few ships are equipped so that planes can land on their decks. The aircraft carrier is an attempt to solve this problem but the aircraft carrier is the most vulnerable of ships.

Rigid Dirigible Considered

And so the attention of a little group in Washington has turned to an air arm which has been almost forgotten, the great rigid dirigible airship. True, 48 small airships have been authorized by congress for shore patrol duty and one has been completed, but the United States has no great dirigibles.

Capt. Charles Rosendahl has always believed in the dirigible. He was navigator of the first American-built airship, the Shenandoah, was the only senior officer who survived when that obsolete ship cracked up in a storm in 1925. Two more American airships, the Akron and the Macon smashed, and then the German Hindenburg burned. This record discouraged almost everyone except Rosendahl. Today he believes that the airship would make an ideal patrol and aircraft carrier to supplement the other craft in modern warfare.

The airship, Captain Rosendahl says, can carry planes as easily as a surface aircraft carrier. They can return and anchor to her bosom. The great ship can spot submarines and mine fields below the surface, she can hover, even fly backwards, can drop depth charges.

Britain's latest step in "arming" merchant ships with planes may bring Rosendahl's dream to realization. Before the war is over we may see these great ships patrolling the sky-lanes once more, with the precious fighters tucked under their breasts, helping to solve the problem of establishing air superiority over the Atlantic.

An Experiment In Co-operation

There is always some starvation in the midst of plenty. With a record farm income ahead and prices on agricultural products going up there are still some folks who cannot make a go of it on the land because of circumstances which they cannot control. How federal and state assistance pulled some of these folks through in two North Carolina counties makes an interesting story.

Up in the Blue Ridge mountains in Allegheny and Ashe counties, farming among the boulders has always been tough going. It is a question for these farmers of getting part-time, outside work or going hungry. The trees used to solve the problem, the cutting of timber and selling it or working for the lumber companies. But the trees have gone.

The farms are not big enough to rate loans from the Farm Security administration, but properly run they could provide garden truck and grain for food and feed for their owners and pigs and chickens.

So the WPA stepped in, offered to give these mountain farmers from three to five months work a year provided the FSA would co-operate. An agreement with the North Carolina welfare department was worked out. Road building, a county office building, a hospital, needed conservation work, gave a small cash income to 500 certified families.

The farmers and their families did their part. They budgeted the money earned on the projects, improved their homes, water supply, sanitation, raised more food for their own consumption, canned an average of 300 quarts of vegetables and fruit for the winter.

The experiment was successful enough to interest the Farm Security administration to plan further, similar projects in the southern Allegheny region, which covers 55,000,000 acres. There is plenty of conservation work that needs to be done in that county and the forest service is expected to co-operate.

The net result of this program is work for men who need it, better food, better farms. This type of federal and state co-operation may grow into a great post-war conservation program.

The Office of the Chief of Chaplains has sent out the following order issued in 1776 by George Washington to the chaplains in the camps to support them in their admonitions against profanity:

"The General is sorry to be informed that the foolish and wicked practice of profane cursing and swearing, a vice heretofore little known in an American Army, is growing into fashion; he hopes the officers will, by example as well as by influence, endeavor to check it, and that both they and the men will reflect that we can have little hopes of the blessing of heaven on our arms if we insult it by our impiety and folly; added to this it is a vice so mean and low, without any temptation, that every man of sense and character, detests and despises it."

REPENTANCE AND FAITH

LESSON TEXT—Luke 15:11-24.
GOLDEN TEXT—Repent ye, and believe the gospel.—Mark 1:15.

Sin with its devastating consequences has its only remedy in the salvation which is in Christ Jesus. He died to set us free from the penalty, the power, and ultimately the very presence of sin. However, His death, which was for all mankind, is effective only for those who in repentance and faith accept His redeeming grace and turn from sin.

1. Worldly Pleasure Brings Sorrow (vv. 11-16).

Selfishness is at the heart of sin, which is essentially self-will over against God's will. The younger son, who represents the sinner, wanted his own way. He suffered from

1. Restlessness Under Restraint (vv. 11, 12). The father loved his son and sought his welfare by proper parental control, but the boy wanted to be free to live as he pleased. God loves all men and seeks by loving and gracious restraint to lead them in ways of righteousness and peace. But they, while they want His blessings, are often eager to get away from His guiding hand.

2. A Request Resulting in Responsibility (vv. 12, 13). When the prodigal asked for his inheritance he took upon himself full responsibility for its use. The man who refuses to have Christ rule over his life assumes a grave and heavy burden which he is not able to bear.

It is an awful thing to rule God out of one's life, to attempt to steer a successful course through the stormy sea of life. Why do it? It will always result in loss and failure.

3. Riotous Living Leading to Reproach (vv. 13-16). In the "far country" he found for a time what we call "fun," but it led to bitter sorrow. To the flesh there are "pleasures of sin" (Heb. 11:25), but they are only "for a season"; that is, "very short lived—and they come high. 'The devil is not such a fool as to go fishing without bait.' The pleasures of sin are the devil's bait, and they always have a hook in them. If you bite at the devil's bait you will soon have the devil's hook in your gills and be in the bottom of the devil's boat" (John W. Bradbury).

The end of Satan's "fun" road was a pigpen in a far country. That may not always be literally true (although it happens often enough), but it is always true spiritually. Men and women are in a state of spiritual collapse and disgrace because they have rejected God's way. But there is a way out.

II. Godly Sorrow Brings Joy (vv. 17-24).

Paul tells us that "godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation" and thus differs from "the sorrow of the world" which "worketh death" (II Cor. 7:10). The prodigal found his way back to the father's house. First, there came to him

1. Remembrance and Realization (vv. 17-19). He began to think. If men and women could only be made to think we would have more repentance, but Satan tries to keep them too busy to think. He remembered what he had as a son in his father's household. What memories will your boy have in his hour of need? You are writing that record now.

2. Repentance and Return (vv. 20, 21). To repent means to change your mind, to turn your life in an "about face" from sin to God. Repentance calls for more than thinking or talking or praying. One must act. The young man "arose and came to his father." That was his part, and then came the father's—

3. Restoration and Rejoicing (vv. 22-24). The son expected to return as a hired servant, but his father restored him to full family fellowship. God is gracious, and the repentant sinner finds himself clad in the spotless robe of Christ's righteousness, wearing the ring of sonship, with shoes on his feet, so that he may go on the errands of his Father.

God's plan of salvation brings no half-way redemption. There are no stepsons or distant relatives in His family. It is a full salvation which brings glorious fellowship in life and service.

You who are still eating the husks of this world, who are in the far country tending swine, we invite you too to come to God and share in the rejoicing in the Father's house.

Children's Taste Keener

There are tiny areas on the tongue, known as "taste-buds," which are linked with the brain by special nerves. These nerves are stimulated when we eat and drink, and they convey to the brain sensations which give rise to the sense of taste.

A young child has over 300 of these taste-buds on his tongue, but as his age increases a proportion of the taste-buds cease to be sensitive. After the age of 20 no more than a hundred are "active."

Because a child has three times as many taste-buds as an adult his sense of taste is three times as keen. That is why sweets, fruit, and so on, appeal to him.

THE STORY SO FAR: Ellen Carey seems interested in two men, Jeff Brand, rustler, and Calhoun Terry, ranch manager. Four rustlers had been mysteriously killed. The big ranchers, much over Terry's protest, hired an army

CHAPTER XXXIV

Roan Alford helped Brand put on his coat. Jeff sat on the bed gripping the covers to steady himself.

"Gimme my gun belt," he said. "You don't need no gun tonight, Jeff," Roan told him. "You couldn't use one good if you needed it—and you won't."

"I'll take the belt, Roan. I wouldn't feel dressed without it." Alford buckled the belt around him. Lane Carey walked into the room.

They supported him to the wagon and helped him to get into the hay-filled bed. Ellen arranged a pillow which she had brought from the hotel.

She said in a low voice to her father, "I want to go with you."

"No," Brand said. "We won't have a girl in this. It's a man's game."

"Jeff is right," Carey agreed. "You stay here, honey, and don't worry. We'll work this out somehow."

Ellen moved to one side, her heart filled with a leaden despair, and watched the wagon roll down the street. But she could not go back into the Round Top Hotel and sit there quietly while the man she loved was being lynched. At least she could return to the Holden House, which was much nearer the jail.

Ellen had come to a street corner from which she could see a segment of the milling crowd. Every step she took now toward her hotel would carry her farther from the jail. She found she could not do it. She could not walk away and leave Calhoun Terry to his fate.

Lane Carey drove the team through the square and down the road leading to the jail.

"Help get us through," Carey urged. "I've got Jeff Brand here. He's wounded and can't get to the front afoot, but he has something to say. It's important."

The pack around the jail door was more dense. Somebody had been sent for an axe, and those nearest were already throwing their weight against the door.

The sheriff shouted down a warning. "A lot of you are going to get killed, boys. Terry and Richards are armed. We mean to fight."

He was standing on a little railed balcony which faced the street. Terry and Richards joined him.

Terry flung out the palm of his hand as a signal that he wanted to speak. The thunder of the mob redoubled, started to die down, swelled out again in crescendo. Terry waited, his lean, strong face showing no sign of fear.

The voices stilled at last. Terry's scornful gaze swept the crowd.

"No use to tell you I'm against this invasion of the Texans," he began. "No use to tell you that I'm responsible for the breaking up the first of the big ranches in this district, and that on my advice the owners of the Diamond Reverse B are dividing it to sell to small settlers. You haven't brains enough to take in a simple little thing like that."

He was interrupted by yells, but his strong, clear voice made itself heard above them. "I'll tell you something you can understand. The stairway is barricaded. Before you storm it we can shoot down eight or ten of you. Think that over, and then listen to my proposition."

"To hell with yore proposition," someone shouted. "We're gonna string you up to a telegraph pole."

From the wagon seat Carey shouted another opinion. "Sure we'll listen. Go ahead, Cal."

"I'm the man you lunkheads want," Terry went on, taking his time. "Larry hasn't a thing to do with this. He's only a hired hand, and today he saved Jeff Brand's life from these Texans. You haven't a thing against him. All he did was take a job at couchpunching when he needed one. And Sheriff Hart is a good man. He means to do his duty and defend us. Very likely he will be killed. That would be a pity. Here's my proposition. I'll surrender if you'll let Larry go."

Larry's voice rang out instantly. "No, I won't have it that way. If you muttonheads don't know any better than to kill Cal Terry you will have to kill me too."

"All right. Have it yore own way. Let's go, boys. Here's the axe."

INSTALLMENT SEVENTEEN

of Texas ex-peace officers to invade the countryside and kill without trial all suspected rustlers. By mistake, Terry and his foreman, Larry, are attacked by the invaders, and they run to cover in a little cabin. Jeff, thinking them rustlers, comes to help them, is wounded. After their rescue, Terry and Larry are arrested by the sheriff for safekeeping, a mob threatening to lynch them because of "the big rancher" activities. Ellen seeks Jeff's aid.

The sheriff called down an answer to that. He knew the voice. "Come out into the open, Lee. If you're so anxious to have good men killed don't stand away back there but step out and lead the attack."

Somebody laughed at that and momentarily eased the tension.

Assisted by Roan Alford, the wounded man in the wagon got to his feet. It took him a moment to clear his head from the unsteadiness that went over him like a wave.

"Good old Jeff!" a black-headed youth shouted. "They didn't get you this time, if they did cripple you."

The light-headedness had passed and Jeff had found his voice. "Why didn't they?" he asked. "Ellison's gunmen were plugging at me plenty, and I hadn't a chance to get away. This fellow you're going to hang—this bird Terry—ran out from the cabin where the Texans were shooting at him and Larry, and he carried me back to cover while these hired warriors shot at him. If you-all had the sense of a rabbit you would know neither one of these two men up there are friends of Ellison's crowd. The Texans shot a horse under Larry today while he was trying to escape—and now you feeble-minded jackasses want to hang him."

What Jeff had said came to most of those present as a complete surprise.

"A lot of you are going to get killed, boys."

prise. The men who had brought Jeff to town had departed almost at once to join those in the field, and they had not had time to tell the story to many.

"How do we know these Texans shot a horse under Larry Richards?" somebody shouted.

"Lee Hart saw Terry and Richards ride in on one horse, with these birds chasing them like a bunch of Cheyennes. Isn't that right, Lee?"

"I saw someone come riding in thataway—two guys on one horse—but I don't know who they were, Jeff."

"You wouldn't be loadin' us, Jeff," Red said, making of the statement a question.

"Why would I?" Brand flung at him. "I don't like a hair of this bird Terry's head. Twice I came near bumping him off. But I'm not like you dumb geezers. I don't need a mule to kick me before I can take a hint. Terry and Ellison are at outs, probably because the Diamond Reverse B is going to be offered for sale to small cowmen. The Texans jumped these two men up there and drove them into Lee Hart's place. They were emptying a ton of lead at them when I drifted into the doings. These boys not only yanked me into the cabin. They told Ellison later, when he came with his flag of truce offering to let them go and hang me, that there was nothing doing since we three were all in the jam together."

A shrill voice in the background made a contribution. "He wired the President for him to send troops from Fort Garfield to help these hired killers wipe out us boys." Lane Carey said his piece. "I signed that wire, Brad. And you have it wrong. We asked the President to stop the fighting. I didn't want a lot of your children made orphans. Jeff is right about the Diamond Reverse B going on sale. You've made a mistake. Better admit it and call this off."

"Or come a-smokin'," Jeff told them recklessly. "Count me in with these men upstairs." He poured out a dozen blistering epithets at the mob, and finished up by telling them they didn't know enough to pound sand in a rat hole.

Some of the men in the crowd began to laugh. They knew the lynching was off, and deep down they were glad of it.

"All right, Jeff," one of them called. "You have sure given us a good cussin' out."

Larry sat on the rail of the balcony and grinned down at Brand. "Heap fine oration, Jeff. I'm for sending you to congress. I'll bet you'd twist the lion's tail proper."

Ellen came out of her terror to awareness of herself. She turned and hurried back to the Holden House.

CHAPTER XXXV

Several men were standing round the doorway of the Round Top when Ellen drew near. A buggy pulled up at the door and somebody got out. It was Doctor Harris.

"God-damn it!" he ripped out. "What's the sense in patching up you dunderheads when you start rampaging over the country soon as my back is turned?"

A moment later Ellen was face to face with Calhoun Terry. None of the tumult that filled her found expression. She said in a small murmur. "Is my father here?"

Terry looked at her, surprised. She ought not to be out alone on a night like this. "Yes. He's with Jeff. I'll tell him you are here. Better wait in the parlor."

He led the way, closing the door behind them. "Jeff saved our lives, with your father's help," he said.

"Yes, I was there. He saved yours, as you did his this afternoon."

He thought he knew why she had been unable to stay away, and he said gently: "I think Jeff will be all right in a few days, though his fever is high now. He was fine."

"Yes—and so were you," she said.

He said nothing for a moment, but his look gave a significance to his silence that kindled in her bosom a hot excitement. Yet when he spoke his words ignored this.

"Would you like to see Jeff from the door? I don't suppose the doctor will let you go nearer now, because he doesn't want him excited."

"Not tonight," she said. "I'll wait here for father."

"I'll tell him you are here." He returned in a minute. "Your father has to take the wagon back to the corral. I have offered to see you to your hotel."

His restrained manner chilled her. As she walked beside him, Ellen caught herself thinking how strange was a woman's fancy. Out of a thousand men it flew to one. When his voice was kind, it played on chords in her heart. If he walked beside her in friendliness, she trod the hilltops in a world reborn. But when his eyes had no gifts for her, she was drenched with woe.

Terry spoke of Jeff. "He is very loyal to his friends and will go to any lengths for them. I suppose you know he sent the money found in Turley's cabin to Jim Tettow's wife to support the little children." Calhoun did not know exactly why he was marshaling talking-points in favor of Brand, unless it was because he had been a little less than fair to him and felt he ought to acknowledge it to the girl who loved the reckless scamp.

"Yes," Ellen agreed listlessly, and turned the conversation to the first subject that came into her head. "What do you think is going to happen when the settlers meet these invaders? Will there be a battle and a great many men killed?"

He shook his head. "I don't know. Your father and I are riding up the Buck River valley. We are leaving as soon as we hear from Washington. I don't think we shall get any favorable response from the government. Ellison arranged for it to keep hands off. Our idea is to try to be mediators between the two parties and fix up a settlement of some sort."

They had reached the Holden House.

They said good night, neither of them happy in their parting. (TO BE CONTINUED)

When making chocolate candy or frosting always melt the chocolate over hot water, as it burns very easily because of the fat content.

Molasses will not stick to the measuring cup if that container is first greased with butter or lard.

Lard has the greatest shortening power of any of the plastic edible fats.

America's Oldest Fire Engine

HERE is America's oldest fire engine, built in England forty-five years before the Revolutionary War. This old hand-operated "pumper" was first used in New York City and later in Schoharie, New York, where it is now a treasured possession of the Historical Society. The engine is pictured in front of a building built in 1713, which served successively as an Indian fort, church, state arsenal, and museum.

Standing beside the engine and pouring water into its tank, is Mead J. Vroman who has been a member of the Schoharie Volunteer Fireman's Association for nearly half a century. Mr. Vroman remembers the time when he used to run to fires on foot, beside a pumper quite similar to the one shown above.

Looking back over fifty years of fire fighting, Fireman Vroman commented on the splendid work being done by various agencies in preventing fires, and highly endorsed observance of Fire Prevention

Week, which this year is the week of October 5-11. He praised particularly, the work of Electrical Inspectors in combatting the increasing number of electrical fires. "I can remember," said Mr. Vroman, "when electricity first came into use. In those days we didn't realize that by 1941, electric power would be running our factories and doing most of our work."

"While mis-use of electricity causes a considerable fire loss, I think many of these fires could be prevented if more householders were familiar with the common causes of electrical trouble. I think the work of the Underwriters' Laboratories has done a great deal to eliminate hazards in electrical equipment by setting up standards by which they determine which equipments are properly safe. For example, applying a small label to every length of approved electric cord, has been a real contribution to home safety. This label enables anyone to distinguish easily between approved and unapproved cords, and to avoid trouble and annoyance when buying cords for use with household appliances. Here in Schoharie our Fire Department is working with the local Board of Trade to stress the significance of this bracelet-like label by which every citizen can help to reduce the hazard of electrical fires."

The insert shows Mr. Vroman inspecting the label on a length of lamp cord.

OT MUCH CHANCE for you to go clocking different brands of motor oil to prove which one flows fastest in Eskimo season. Yet the quicker the lubrication at every cold start, the less "dry rub" on delicate surfaces in your engine. Then why not change now to Conoco Nth oil for Winter and get an OIL-PLATED engine? OIL-PLATING is high up in the cylinders to fight fierce grind, much sooner than any plain oil-flow alone could even start wiggling.

Conoco Nth oil, you see—all in addition to speedy flow—fastens OIL-PLATING to inner engine surfaces, as if by "magnetic attraction." This close-bonded OIL-PLATING is up to its topmost point before you even touch the starter—and that's "faster than fast," to aid you toward anti-friction starting.

Even up in Iceland, of course, any engine's normal firing is hotter than the Land of the Hottentots. Yet you don't want to "burn up the oil." And Conoco Nth proved it could last for more than twice the mileage averaged by the five other big-name oils in the impartial Death Valley Death-Test. When all five others were used up—engines ruined as each strict 5-quart fill gave out—the Conoco Nth oil that competed under identical conditions was still up at 2.7 quarts! Certified!

A known economy record... plus a known aid to safe prompt starting... when you change to Conoco Nth for Winter OIL-PLATING, at Your Mileage Merchant's Conoco station. Today. Continental Oil Company

GAVE TWICE THE ENGINE LIFE!

Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after many years of world-wide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of satisfactory use. And favorable public opinion supports that of the able physicians who test the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions.

These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for disorder of the kidney function and for relief of the pain and worry it causes.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warn of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging backache, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.

Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!

HERE'S TO BUTTERY FINGERS AND A TAFFY PULL
(See Recipes Below)

CHILDREN'S DELIGHT

If you want your children and their friends to give you a rating of "super," then give just one party for children alone, and make that party a good, old-fashioned taffy pull. Think back a moment and remember how you looked forward to a taffy pull just as much as going to a circus.

This party is exciting fun because the children have a chance to help in the making of refreshments. Yes, pulling taffy with their fingers all buttered, and watching the dark candy mixture get lighter and lighter each time it's pulled. They'll like this too, because a taffy pull isn't a fussy party. When you send out the invitations, let the mothers know it's a taffy party so the children will be dressed accordingly.

Unlike many foods which are iron sources, molasses when cooked does not lose its iron content.

If possible use a candy thermometer to test the candy so it will be cooked just right, neither too stiff nor too messy to handle. When the candy is cool enough, cut it just the right size for small hands. The piece should be large enough to work on, but not too large. When the piece is light tan and very stiff, pull into a long strip and cut.

Molasses Taffy.

2 cups pure New Orleans molasses
1 cup granulated sugar
2 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon vinegar
¼ teaspoon vanilla, if desired
½ cup water

Cook the molasses, sugar and water in a heavy kettle slowly until the mixture reaches 260 degrees or until a little of the mixture dropped in cold water becomes brittle. Stir a little during the latter part of the boiling to prevent burning; pour into a buttered pan. When cool enough to handle, cut in pieces and pull until light and stiff. Butter the hands before pulling.

Refreshments can be simple for a taffy party, for children will be so excited about the taffy, they won't give their best attention to elaborate dishes. Assorted sandwiches will fill the bill perfectly and a hot chocolate milk drink will take care of their keen, lusty appetites. As dessert you might have simple cup-

LYNN SAYS:

Stop food wastes. Not only is this a matter of thrift but also a vital step in conserving this country's resources. It is estimated that tiny food wastes total up to a tremendous amount.

Wise shopping will prevent buying unwanted and not usable food. The wise shopper should also recognize between good and poor grades, by reading labels and markings, and by watching the scales.

Poor cooking causes much waste. Meat, for instance, shrinks when cooked at too high a temperature. Vitamins and minerals are lost when cooked too long or when air is stirred into them while cooking. Use short methods for cooking whenever possible.

cakes iced with pink and chocolate icing, fruit, and of course, the taffy.

Although the taffy pull will be the main event of the party be sure to have games planned to fill out the evening. Quiz games are popular and lists for these can be made up beforehand using questions on slogans, famous personalities, historical events, interesting facts, and riddles as questions.

Children will want some lively fun too, and for this you can have a sack race. The leaders of two lines of players are given two large paper sacks. They place the sacks on their feet and at a signal run to the opposite goal and back, take off the sack and give it to the person next to them. The object is to see which line finishes first.

Speaking of children, are you having a time with their school lunches?

Variety is the big problem for packing a complete meal in one small box is hard to vary and doesn't have as many possibilities as the table at home. Having at least one hot food helps loads, and put this in the thermos bottle. You can have cream soups, vegetable soups, then again hot milk drinks for variety.

Sandwiches are a standby, but don't get into a rut with these. Don't have soggy fillings. Wrap each one separately in wax paper. Favorite fillings include:

- Peanut butter and jelly
- Chopped meat mixed with mayonnaise and relish
- Chopped hard-cooked eggs with bacon
- Cheese and luncheon meats
- Vegetable salad sandwiches
- Flaked fish with celery, lettuce
- Chopped figs or dates, nuts, moistened with orange juice

Color peps up the lunch box, so occasionally pack a salad in a paper container. Use fresh fruits often, or canned ones also packed in small glass or paper containers.

Economy is highlighted these days, but it needn't be dull if you use attractively garnished platters.

*Chop Suey or Chow Mein.

- (Serves 6)
- ½ cup butter or shortening
- 2¾ cups cooked meat, cut in strips
- 1¾ cup onions, cut fine
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ¼ teaspoon pepper
- 1 can bean sprouts, drained
- 2¼ cups celery, cut fine
- 1 cup hot water
- For thickening and flavoring:
- ½ cup cold water
- 2 tablespoons cornstarch
- 1 tablespoon soy sauce
- 1 teaspoon sugar

Melt butter, add onions, fry for 3 minutes. Add celery, salt, pepper, hot water, cover and cook for 5 minutes. Add bean sprouts and meat, mix and bring to a boil. Combine thickening and flavoring ingredients, add to first mixture. Cook 5 minutes. Serve hot with Chinese noodles for Chow Mein, or with steaming rice for Chop suey. Garnish platter with thin strips of fried egg and green onions if desired.

Lincoln's Beard Result Of Little Girl's Suggestion

A little girl from Westfield, N. Y. once wrote Abraham Lincoln a letter as follows:

"I am a little girl, eleven years old . . . have you any little girls about as large as I am . . . If you will let your whiskers grow, you would look a great deal better for your face is so thin . . . I must not write any more answer this right off. Good bye. Grace Bedell."

A few months later, Lincoln let his beard grow. On one of his trips he passed through Westfield and immediately sent for Grace. He thrilled her by pointing to his beard and saying: "You see—I let those whiskers grow for you, Grace."

Commercial Steam

A New York steam corporation not only sells steam for heat and power to 2,500 large buildings, but also for miscellaneous purposes to laundries, Turkish baths, hat-makers and contractors who wash stone structures.

An advertiser uses it to depict the vapor arising from a cup of coffee on a Broadway sign and Metropolitan operators see it belch from the mouth of the dragon in Siegfried.

A gift within a gift is the new Christmas gift humidifier package of Prince Albert Smoking Tobacco now being featured at local dealers. The handsome wrapping of this package conceals a real glass humidifier filled with Prince Albert. The humidifier is a welcome gift for any pipe-smoker—not to mention the choice tobacco inside it. Prince Albert also is available in the one pound tin, specially wrapped as a gift. Take care of the pipe-smokers on your Christmas list with Prince Albert—The National Joy Smoke.—Adv.

That's Sure
"I want to know what I'm best fitted for. Should I go to a palmist or a mind reader?"
"Better choose a palmist—you know you've got a palm."

Wouldn't Think So
"Will you join me in a cup of tea?"
"Will there be room for both of us?"

"Nobody," says a writer, "has any use for the man with cold feet." How about the people who make hot-water bottles?
