Strike Situation and Japanese Crisis Prove Washington's Toughest Problems; Winter Closes In on Eastern Front As Russia Reports Taking Offensive

(EDITOR'S NOTE-When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.) Released by Western Newspaper Un

STRIKES:

At Showdown

Congressional passage of the Neutrality act changes was a victory for the administration in that President Roosevelt stood his ground on his labor position, declining to meet a growing demand for legislation outlawing strikes, and laws setting a ceiling on wages.

Yet the narrow margin in the house (20 votes) also was considered a severe rebuke to the President for his attitude, and there were signs in the press and in congress that legislators and editors were getting ready to kick over the traces.

Crucial situations had faced the President both over the strikes in captive coal mines owned by steel companies, largely occupied in defense work, and in the threatened railroad strike.

There had been little evidence that the White House was getting anywhere in either struggle, though the President had made manful efforts to dissuade John L. Lewis and his U.M.W. from going overboard.

It was this situation more than any other which had caused the defection of many administration supporters during the Neutrality act

The "closed shop" issue in the mine strike, never very popular in unions, caused the outburst of antistrike feeling to be particularly severe.

RUSSIANS:

On Warpath

Long on the defensive, and having lost many thousands of square miles of territory, Russia had assumed the offensive all along the vast front. Moscow was reporting considerable success against the Nazis, and reported that the Germans had been suffering from frostbite, that they were exhausted and discouraged, but admitted that back of the front there were evidences that another offensive was being formed.

Those who believed Hitler would order any withdrawal because of the weather were having to revise their opinions. The Russian drive against the Germans was meeting with the same rugged resistance the Reds themselves had offered against Successes were reported in the far north, where Kuibyshev dispatches declared 20 German transports had been sunk in what was to have been a major invasion attempt in the Murmansk sector.

Also 2,500 Italians had been reported "eliminated" in the Crimean sector, and victories also were claimed by Russia in the Donets basin area.

The Finns were being hurled back in front of Leningrad, and the general Russian tone was one of confidence, yet watchfulness, the latter being stressed because Red headquarters figured the Germans still had at least one more huge attack up their sleeves.

VICHY:

To Join Hitler

Hardly unexpected at this time. and with the hostage-shooting matter being what it was, had come the report that Vichy was planning to "go the whole hog" and throw in with Hitler's "new order."

It had been known for a long time where the sympathies of Darlan and Laval had been, but Petain was on the fence.

KURUSU: Last Try?

Most observers of the situation in the Pacific believed that with the arrival of Saburo Kurusu in Washington the last stage of the difficult effort of Japan and the United States to avoid war had been reached. During his plane trip to this country there had been little of encouraging press comment, and the state department had again and again repeated its gloomy outlook.

Officials of the cabinet, particularly Secretary Knox of the Navy,

SABURO KURUSU 'A gloomy outlook

had expressed this same view of depression over any chance of a peace-

Still Kurusu had arrived, had been greeted with smiles by American diplomats, and the conversations were on.

Basic difficulty of solving an equation where Japan was at war with China and both Britain and America had declared this war an act of aggression and had been giving and promising aid to China was openly apparent.

Japan was urging the United States:

"Leave us alone in China!" The United States was demanding

"You let China alone!" These points were poles apart.

ARK ROYAL:

Finally Sunk

Most famous of the British aircraft carriers, Ark Royal, sunk several times according to Berlin dispatches, finally has been sent to the bottom, and it was London, not Berlin, which announced it.

It sank 25 miles off Gibraltar, while in tow of other warships after a U-boat had torn a terrific hole in her side. Pumps were unavailing to repair the damage, and practically all of the 1,600 aboard her had been removed save just enough mer. to handle the towing lines.

Finally, when she was nearing shallow water at last, she suddenly turned over on her side like a "tired child" and went to the bottom. Only one man of her crew was reported

It was regarded as probable that many of her planes had been able to fly ashore and make port. Thus went to the bottom of the Mediter ranean the third aircraft carrier Britain had lost, the largest and newest, launched in 1938, of 22,000

TURKEY:

An Offer

Axis sources were reported to have made Turkey an offer of Thrace as a last inducement to get the Turks to join the triple alliance.

The sudden interest in Turkey on the part of Germany, as borne out in reports from both Berlin and Bern was rather a puzzle to some, while others saw in it the possibility that Germany might, now that she was somewhat bogged down in Russia, be seeking a Turkish route to Russian oil wells.

Three possibilities were seenthat Turkey had already decided to throw in with the Axis-that increased pressure would be brought to bear on Turkey (in line with Bern's view of the situation) and third, that Germany might be satisfied to have Turkey neutral and aloof but fearing that American and British pressure from the south might supposed to have been more or less turn her from her neutral course to a pro-British stand.

BRITISH: Restive

JOSEF STALIN Tribute from Mr. Churchill.

The British were exceedingly restive under the continued inaction except for heavy bombing raids over the channel. Many members of the house, especially the Laborite critics of Churchill, were loudly clamoring for the establishment of another front.

England, they said, was aware that a munitions race was going on in North Africa, with the Germans doing all they could to bolster their strength, and the British receiving vast supplies from the United States, and using their navy to attempt to break German communication lines.

But the house was demanding action on that front, being highly dissatisfied with the "stalemate" situation. Many believed it was not yet too late to start something on that front and drive the Nazis and Italians back on their heels into Libya

But the government was giving its critics little satisfaction, and was showing no inclination whatever to change the status quo. Churchill paid a tribute to that "great warrior Stalin," and said that all possible equipment and munitions would be sent to aid him.

He also said that Britain would firmly back up the United States in its attitude toward Japan. Beyond this he would not move a step, nor would he make cabinet changes.

AXIS: Blues

All was not rosy in Axis countries, dispatches had informed the world.

A New York Times correspondent, returning with his bride from Berlin, told of no rest, of constant harassments, of poor food, of no entertainment. The few passenger trains were so crowded that trips were extremely inconvenient, he reported, and said that he had lost 20 pounds due to poor food.

Eatable food only could be obtained in the most expensive restaurants, he added, and in the poorer ones the dinners "just wouldn't go down."

People are not told what kind of meat they are getting, he said, but it makes no difference as they all tasted the same.

London said Germany was desperate for oil, or she would have abandoned the Russian offensive for the winter, and be willing just to hang on.

A reliable source was quoted as saying that if the Russian oil fields were not conquered, Germany would be out of oil reserves by the winter

The official German reports were beginning to tell the public of fierce Russian attacks, and the color of Berlin dispatches confirmed the fact that the Germans were on the defensive all along the front.

At the same time, Italy coupled an announcement admitting severe and continued raids on Italian cities by British planes with the ousting of the chief of the Italian air force General Pricolo, and his replace ment by General Fougiere.

MISCELLANY:

London: Arthur Greenwood declared that the United States' revision of the Neutrality act definitely assured a British-American victory in the battle of the Atlantic.

Cologne, Germany: The Reich's commissioner for The Netherlands said that following the war Dutchmen would be given full equality with Germans but that no nation in Europe would know full independence of the Reich again.

New York: A radio broadcast heard here revealed that Germany is planning an auto road from Ostend on the channel coast to the Dardanelles, and a canal connecting The Netherlands with the Black sea, using the Rhine, the Main and the Danube rivers.

Price Control Problems Enliven Inflation Threat

Three Distinct Groups Hold Up Definite Action; U. S. Farm 'Bloc' Is Often Confused With Farmer's Organizations.

By BAUKHAGE National Farm and Home Hour Commentator.

Washington, D. C.

There are three distinct groups in Washington all pulling in different directions at price control legislation. There is a group which believes with Bernard Baruch that a ceiling must be put on all prices and wages. There is a group, represented by Leon Henderson, price control administrator, which believes that only those prices which show signs of getting out of hand should be controlled. There is a third group in congress which simply refuses to take any action. These latter are the ones who are responsible for delaying consideration of the present bill which is widely criticized by many in all three groups.

The result of these conflicting groups is a growing fear that inflation which cannot be checked will be upon us before we know it.

For a while it was thought that the administration might follow Canada's plan of price control which is soon to be put into effect. First, Canada tried a piece-meal method, similar in some respects to Mr. Henderson's ideas. Then, inasmuch as this did not work satisfactorily, "ceilings" on both prices and wages were written into a new plan which more nearly resembles that supported by Mr. Baruch's fol-

Details of Britain's price control policy were recently reported by officials here and they reveal some interesting theories of particular interest now. This policy may explain why it is being said that some people in Washington believe "a little inflation is a good thing," in spite of the dire warnings as to what will happen if price rises are not checked immediately.

British 'Bidding' System

The British, it seems, have come to the conclusion that freezing prices and wages and profits just do not go hand-in-hand with a maximum war effort in a democracy. They say frankly, "You have to bid for a maximum war effort." In other words, you have to permit the workman to get bigger wages, you have | cultural education. to give the farmer higher prices, This movement was the beginning you have to offer industry a bigger profit, if you expect a maximum effort in the machine shop, in the field and orchard, behind the desk. Therefore, you have to follow a certain amount of elasticity in prices and wages and that means a certain amount of inflation.

Equally frankly the British have evolved this maxim: Building morale is just as important as checking inflation. You can give the workman certain social advantages to improve his morale, you can remove some of the business man's restrictions-but you must also bid for their services with something more material-money.

When full war production is fully achieved, when every human unit and every piece of material which is not actually needed for the minimum non-defense production is at last being utilized in the war effort, then prices can be frozen, the British believe, and not before.

It is perhaps this philosophy which some of the administration leaders have borrowed and which eventually will be adopted by congress-if it is not too late by the time congress makes up its mind to act.

'Farm Bloc' And Inflation

In the next few weeks you are going to hear some unpleasant things about the farmer. He is going to be blamed, whether justly or not, for encouraging inflation by refusing to allow farm prices to be curbed sufficiently to hold off inflation. In this connection you are go-ing to hear the term "farm bloc" applied to al lthe interests working rightly or wrongly for the farmer.

This inclusive use of the phrase is incorrect. A bloc, according to the dictionary, is:

"Bloc, (French, bloc or lump) 1. Politics (a) in European countries, especially in France and Italy (this was before Mussolini and Petain, of course) a combination of two or more groups or parties willing to make common cause for some definite object. (b) In the United States, a combination of members of different parties for a similar purpose, especially in congress; as the agricultural or farm bloc, a bloc in the United States congress a total of over 16 years in the navy.

WNU Service, 1343 H Street, N-W, formed in 1921 by members from agricultural states, to secure agricultural legislation, irrespective of party lines."

By the definition, a bloc is composed of members of congress, but many people when they use the word include the farm organizations which maintain their offices in Washington. The Grange, the Farm Bureau Federation and the Farmers Union. Like the United States Chamber of Commerce, the Congress of Industrial Organization and the American Federation of Labor, the agricultural organizations are pressure groups-lobbies, if you will.

'Bloc' and Politics

There is a reason why the bloc can, and sometimes is, more likely to be an evil force than the organization. The bloc composed of politicians who must have votes at the next election try to out-promise their political opponents. Therefore, they will promise to vote for special legislation and even vote for it as it is brought up. But sometimes their real purpose is not to get a certain law passed but rather to promise it and work for it until they themselves are elected.

The need for the farm organizations did not appear at the beginning of the nation. When representation in congress was established on a geographical basis this was an agricultural nation. Each farm was a unit which to a large extent represented a cross-section of the nation's economic activity and inter-

Then conditions changed, cities and industrial centers grew up whose problems were entirely different from the economic interests of the farmer. At first the result was rebellion-small revolts but significant ones; the Whiskey rebellion, Shays' rebellion, attempts by force to obtain recognition of the rights of special groups. Finally, the farm organizations came into being. At first their chief objective was to obtain public school and agri-of the department of agriculture, the land grant colleges, the state agricultural institutions. Gradually, these organizations began to give more and more time to promoting the farmer's interests by obtaining state and federal legislation for his

Of course, some of the methods of these groups can be anti-democratic. We frequently hear more about them than about the honest effort, and sometimes not until much harm has been done. That is why Secretary Wickard says that "each group must operate tolerantly, and above all openly and frankly, not through stealth and concealment."

Honeymoon

By JOSEPH Mc CORD

CHAPTER I

Virgie Blake, second in command of the cigar counter in the Hotel Raynear's imposing lobby, was studying the profile of a guest who stood near one of the large windows.

The man lounged with his arms across the back of a chair, gazing out moodily into the street where sheets of driving rain marched under a leaden sky. An unlighted pipe was clamped between his teeth.

Virgie had approved of this stranger the first time he chanced to pass the stand. It must have been nearly a week ago. She liked his broad shoulders, the restless eyes under their straight brows, the lean face bronzed by long out-of-doors exposure. His lower jaw was heavy, a trifle pugnacious. An attractive carelessness marked his general appearance; it was evidenced by the unruly thatch of crisp dark hair, and in the suit of rough gray tweeds. Yet there was an air of strength in all the man's leisurely movements.

Virgie Blake decided pleasantly and promptly that there was "something about him." And let it go at

Not quite, for she had taken occasion to glide over to the desk and make a private investigation the first time she saw this guest asking for his key and letters.

"Oh, Eddie, darling . . ." Virgie smiled persuasively at the room clerk on duty. "Who's the party who just took his key?"

"Fourteen sixty-one . . ." Saw-yer's forefinger traveled down the vertical card file near his elbow. "The name is Cutter-L. H .- from Montreal."

Miss Blake's crimson lips curved in a smile of anticipation today when she observed "1461" turn wearily from the rain-streaked window and stroll directly towards the ci-

"Smoking tobacco," he suggested affably, resting his arms on the display case. There was a leisurely quality in his voice, too.

"What brand please . . . Mr. Cut-

A faint flicker of amusement showed in the dark eyes at the saleswoman's use of the name. He pointed with the stem of his pipe.

The buyer lingered to open the can. He crowded tobacco into his pipe bowl with practiced care.

"Do you think it's ever going to stop raining?" Virgie ventured. "You know, this sort of day fairly gives me the jitters." Her voice displayed a confidential note. She swayed nearer, in a graceful pose. "Does it make you feel that way, too?"

"It's not . . . conducive to . frenzied . . . enthusiasm." The words were accented by swift puffs. He nodded in the direction of a small glass enclosed office not far away. "I should go over and annoy your stenographer a bit."

Something in the tone of his voice caused Virgie to look in the same direction. She attempted a mysterious smile, as she asked the unexpected question, "Are you a sailor?" "No . . . why?" Cutter did not turn his head as he asked it. "Then you won't get very far . . with her."

"I was only thinking of letters.

Doesn't she take dictation?" "Sure! She's a wiz. Sweet kid . . but funny. I was just trying to give you a tip, that's all." Virgie made the explanation a trifle uncomfortably. "I'm afraid I don't get it," he admitted, taking his pipe from his mouth. "You're a long ways from salt water here. Should I dash over and tell her the fleet's in?"

"Don't be like that! I mean she almost never gives a customer a tumble. You know."

Cutter continued to stare at the stenographer as if it were the first time he had chanced to observe her. Very little more than her head and shoulders were visible through the glass panel. The glow from a shaded desk lamp shone warmly on her cinnamon-brown hair, a swirling bob of shining waves that covered the small bowed head. Apparently, she was reading.

"Pretty hair," Cutter observed reflectively around the stem of his

"Gorgeous," Virgie agreed, with commendable enthusiasm. "She's an awfully cute little somebody. That's why it's a pity she's an oil can, sort of."

W. N.U. Service

"Don't you mean bookworm? I've noticed that she's quite a reader."

"That's a part of it." Virgie was relaxing into a more familiar role "It's like I was telling you, Mr. Cutter. I'm not knocking her. She's too sweet. I mean it. It's just that she never has much to say to anybody . . . no line, you know. But let somebody start giving her the low-down on Europe, Irup or Skirup . . . And will she come to!

'No, I don't think she goes for detectives in a big way. She's always got ner nose in adventure magazines mostly . . . If a sheik was to ankle in here on a horse right now, Jack would climb right up behind him and go places. "Jack?" The word betrayed fresh

"Her name's Jacqueline. We call her Jack. That's why I made that crack about sailors. But I can't figure getting all hot and bothered over a time-table unless you got a ticket." "What's her last name?" he demanded. "Miss Anthony." Virgie became suddenly formal.

"Thanks. You said 'Miss.' " The confirmation came back over one of the broad shoulders as Cutter moved away without so much as a glance at the pouting red mouth he left behind him.

It was far from being the first time that Larrimore H. Cutter had studied Jacqueline Anthony. His interest in her had been roused accidentally, but strongly, while idling with pipe and newspaper in a retired corner of the lobby, a vantage point that gave him an unimpeded view through the stenographer's door which chanced to be open.

After that, Larrimore Cutter gravitated instinctively to that same corner chair during the many hours he found it convenient to sit in the lobby, feeling distinctly annoyed if anyone else appropriated his private observation post. After several sessions of this furtive watching, he discovered that his fanciful reveries over this shining-haired girl left him unsatisfied. He was filled with a growing desire to make her acquaintance. He wanted to sit in the chair of dictation. He wanted to hear her voice. And to make sure about the color of those eyes. That bothered him most of all.

He was quick to notice that she never encouraged idle conversation with callers. When she was not otherwise engaged, she read. Obviously, the solution to it all was to walk into that little office and ask the girl to take a letter. Cutter smiled grimly to himself at the notion. He never had dictated letters under similar circumstances would flounder and make a complete ass of himself, most likely. So matters stood when he made that lucky purchase at the cigar counter.

The next morning, his paper read, he nerved himself to the great adventure. It still rained. With high resolve, Mr. Cutter strolled resolutely into the stenographer's cubicle.

"Good morning," he said gruffly. Miss Anthony looked up with a start. A quick gesture and the offending spectacles were removed. She laid them beside the typewriter, on top of the magazine she had been reading. Cutter was rewarded with a friendly smile.

Of all things in the world! Those eyes were blue! So deep a blue they were almost black.

"Is there something I can do for

"No . . ." the dictator blurted. "Why, yes! Of course. I had a letter . . . if you're not busy." Nimble white fingers already were inserting paper in the machine. "Please sit down. Will one carbon be sufficient?" the little stenographer inquired briskly. "Plenty. Too much . . personal letter."

Cutter slumped gratefully into the chair at the end of the desk. However, he did retain sufficient presence of mind to lay his folded newspaper in his lap.

"This is to . . Royal Allan. I'll have to check on the address later. Just say . . . Dear Roy." A pause. "It certainly was good of you to take the time to write so soon after you got back. I understand that you turned up a big find out there in Cutter glanced at Miss Anthony to see if she were watching him. She was. With disconcerting interest.

"I never can think of the name of that place," he muttered lamely. "Near Afghanistan, I think."

"The Bamian Valley," his stenographer supplied promptly. "Of course! Stupid of me to forget. How did you know that?" "I have been following Mr. Allan's work in the papers. He uncovered an old city there. They think it belongs to a lost race!'

Here was a different Jacqueline Anthony. She leaned forward, the rays from the lamp falling on her eager little face. The blue eyes were wide Shining with excited interest. Like a child's.

"And you know Royal Allan, the archeologist?" She said it almost reverently.

"Oh, rather. Old schoolmates." Cutter watched the light play on the waves of that cinnamon-brown hair. "It must be fascinating to visit such places." Jacqueline's two hands were folded over the typewriter. The letter was forgotten.

"Then you've never been abroad?" came the crafty suggestion.

"No. Have you?" "Occasionally. I was fourteen the first time. My dad was going over on business and took me. crossed on the old City of New York. I remember we hit a storm that scared me out of a week's growth." "I would have loved that storm. I've never seen a big ship," Jacqueline admitted regretfully.

"I'm surprised you haven't tried the big pond, if you're so keen on

The cinnamon head shook a quick denial. "That takes money," owner countered lightly. "I do my traveling in books."

"It doesn't take very much the days," Cutter insisted. "You really should do it." He spoke with great earnestness.

'I'd love to. More than anything in the world."

For the once, Jacqueline Anthony seemed to forget that she was conversing with a stranger. Here was a man who had been places. In spite of his careless way of talking, she knew that the world's out of the way places held a lure for him. The two of them belonged to the same restless fraternity. Before she quite realized it, she was telling him something of her own desires.

"It's some sort of obsession," was her explanation. A faraway look had crept into the blue eyes. "I've always been that way. I do read everything I can find about travel strange lands. I even keep an old atlas hidden away here and look up all the places."

'I understand that." "Do you? Everybody around here teases me." She smiled. "I don't wonder. I guess I'm . . . funny.' Jacqueline, unconsciously, had adopted Virgie Blake's verdict.

"It's not funny at all," Cutter objected stoutly. "It's . . . it's tragic."
"What do you mean?"

"Just that. The tragedy of youth. Not believing most dreams are possibilities, until it's too late . . . oftentimes."

"It's nice of you to put it that way. I'm not . . . so young."

'Rot! Look here, Miss Anthony " In his zeal, Cutter spoke that name without noticing the sudden surprise in the blue eyes watching him. "If only you would say to yourself, over and over and over! 'I'm going to . . . the Bamian Val-ley . . .' Some day, you'd find yourself, there. Don't you see?"
"If I only could."

"But you can!" Cutter jerked himself upright. He bent forward until his face was full in the light. There was a determined glint in his dark eyes. His lower jaw was thrust forward aggressively.

'Why do you say that?" was the girl's startled reply. "How could I?"
"Simple enough. You can marry me. By the way . . . My name's Larry Cutter."

CHRISTIAN LOVE

LESSON TEXT-John 13:34, 35; I Corin-GOLDEN TEXT-We love him, because he first loved us .- I John 4:19.

Many important things enlist the interest of the Christian, but we need to beware lest we neglect what Jesus declared to be the first and great commandment-that we love God; and its necessary sequelthat we love our neighbor. If love is forgotten (and who can deny that it often is in our day?), the very foundations are shaken. We need a revival of Christian love.

I. Love-A Mark of Discipleship

(John 13:34, 35). Do you want to know whether a man is a Christian? Find out whether he loves his brethren. Such is the test Jesus gives in these

1. Commanded. It is the will and purpose of God that the followers of Christ should have a real love for one another. It is not to be a matter of impulse or chance, but the love God has for us should constrain us to love one another. Thus is love

2. Exemplified. God has loved us. He does love us. How infinitely much is wrapped up in these simple words! He even gave His Son to die for us because He loved us (John 3:16). How then can we withhold our love from Him and from one another?

II. Love-A Christian Grace (I Cor. 13).

In a world where hatred prevails, and is in fact glorified, this chapter needs to be read and reread. We find that love is

1. Essential (vv. 1-3). Life has many excellent gifts and men quite properly seek after them. How do they compare with love, and what do they amount to apart from love? Glowing, angelic eloquence; the farseeing eye of the prophet; the at-tainments of knowledge and culture; mountain-moving faith; liberal-hearted charity; martyr-like self-sacrifice-without love they are all as nothing. Apart from Christ and His love operating in our hearts and lives the worthiest attainments of men are vain and empty. Love is the very essence of a satisfying and useful life. Effective (vv. 4-7). Does love really work, or is this just a finesounding but obsolete theory? It

Think of the things in life which irritate and depress us; then put opposite them the qualities of Christian love as given in verses 4 to 7, and you will agree that what this world needs most of all is love.

Remember that talking about love or reading about it or studying it in the Sunday school will not make it effective. We must put it into practice. Why not start now? You will be surprised at the results. 3. Eternal (vv. 8, 12). Many gifts are only temporary in their usefulness; in fact, almost everything that man makes or does (apart from his service for God) is transient. Even so vital a matter as prophecy shall one day find its end in fulfillment. Hope shall eventually find its longing expectation satisfied. Faith will be justified in seeing what it has believed. Childish things will be put away by the full-grown man, knowledge will increase and darkness disappear.

But love-love is eternal. It never fails, and will never fail. God is love and God is eternal. From all eternity and unto all eternity love continues. Therefore, we agree with Paul who in the verse preceding this chapter (I Cor. 12:31) says that while you may covet the best gifts, here is the more excellent way -love.

Let us be clear about this. Love is not a substitute for regeneration, and certainly regeneration is no excuse for lack of love. Read John 13: 34, 35 again and remember that if we are Christ's disciples we will count it a high privilege to keep this first and great commandment of love.

Dependence on God

Poverty in any shape helps to stir in man a sense of need, a disposition to consider himself as dependent . . . The real puzzle of life consists not in the fact of widespread poverty but in that of widespread affluence: in the fact that so many are sufficiently endowed with "goods" as to believe they can live by them, and so cease to look for their true life to God their Father .- E. Lyttleton.

Let's Be THANKFUL

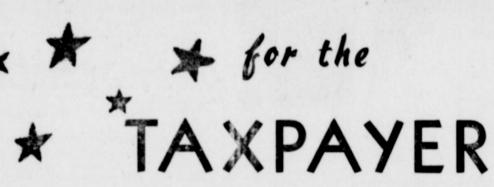

The Pilgrims gave thanks for the American Way of Life that they created, protected, and nourished into greatness.

Today we give thanks that this same American Way of Life has survived and shown progress as each year passes.

WE in West Texas have much to be thankful for . . . bountiful crops, great herds of cattle, sheep and goats, the world's greatest reserve of gas and oil, a plentiful supply of cheap electric light and power, good schools and good highways. Our homes are modern and we enjoy an exceptionally high standard of living.

Yes, no part of the nation has benefited more from the American way of living, or enjoyed more fully the FREEDOM and DEMOCRACY that we now are waging a war to retain.

But West Texas' future prosperity, growth and development depend on what we do today.

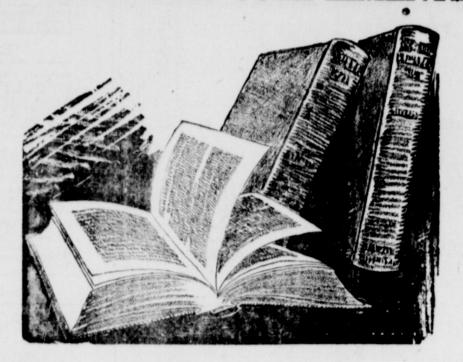

Let us look ahead, then, and encourage tax-producing industries with which to pay the tremendous burden of debt now accumulating in astronomical figures and as a means of providing jobs for the many thousands of men and women left jobless when defense projects are at an end. Let's not forget that somebody must "pay the piper" for the years of boondoggling when this country should have been preparing for a war that long ago appeared inevitable.

On this Thanksgiving Day let's be thankful for the taxpayer too!

Meet the Pot Roast - Juicy and Tender (See Recipes Below.)

Savory Meals

Pep up the personality of your meals by serving meats more often as the weather frostbecomes nipped and colder. Meats are synonymous with good, wholesome, hearty meals because they're satisfying and filling. Meat sets good tone to the meal and rounds it out to give you a sense of completeness when you've finished eating.

Meat is honest and straightforward both in flavor and purpose. Its abundance of vitamins and minerals really come through and give you sustaining energy. All in all meat contains nine out of the thirteen food essentials of a normal diet:

First is protein and meat's proteins are complete. They help to build or repair body tissues which you wear down every day and keep you on good maintenance level. It has iron the oxygen carrier, copper, iron's partner and the builder of hemoglobin.

Meat has phosphorus that helps calcium in building good teeth and bones and helps give you energy. Meat has fat, too, producer of more energy and heat.

As for vitamins, meat is an portant source of four: vitamin A, the resistance and growth vitamin; thiamin (vitamin B1) which helps the body translate sugars and starches into energy; riboflavin, of which meat is the top source, that helps prevent nervous disorders, and finally nicotinic acid, which prevents a nervous digestive disorder known as pellagra.

Fortunately for economy's sake, the lower-priced cuts of meat are just as good for these minerals and vitamins as the higher-priced ones.

Today's column gives you tricks and tips on how you can use them for savory meals and have them juicy, tender, and full of flavor.

First call is for pot roast which you

LYNN SAYS:

You're going to sell nutrition to your family not just because of its virtues but by attractively garnished, well-cooked food. Here's Whenever possible serve the vegetables with the meat, as browned potatoes, whole carrots, browned onions. These can be placed around the meat for effective coloring.

Radish roses with parsley brighten almost any kind of meat platter.

Spinach, chopped, seasoned and mixed with white sauce can be made into nests or mounds and served around meat.

Baby beets may be scooped and filled with green peas served around the meat or on a platter by themselves.

Ham can be scored in circles for a change by using a small cookie cutter and a maraschino cherry placed in each circle. Circles look best if they overlap.

Bananas or pineapple slices broiled make a tantalizing accompaniment to baked ham, roast beef or lamb chops.

Slices of orange topped with a smaller slice of jelly is excellent for meat platters.
