Regardless of what the individual citizen may think about the recent Republican convention in San Francisco, the nomination of Senator Barry Goldwater as the GOP standard bearer was the result of one of the most highly organized pre-convention campaigns in the history of American politics. The often referred to mainstream of the Republican party, as represented by Governor Nelson Rockefeller, Henry Cabot Lodge, Governors Romney and Scranton and a score of moderate to liberal republican senators were asleep at the post while Goldwater supporters were busy controlling precinct, county and state conventions in an all-out effort to send dedicated Goldwater delegates to the big pow-wow in San Francisco. There can be no just criticism of the tactics used by the Goldwater supporters in their effort to secure the nomination of the Arizona Senator as the presidential nominee of Republican party. Instead the leaders of the moderate and progressive wing of the GOP is at fault for not providing leadership for their wing of the party in the fight for delegate strength at the convention.

Undoubtedly the John Birch Society played a considerable role in the pre-convention maneuvering of the conservative faction of the Republican party promoting the Goldwater movement. There again, it is the right and privilege of any person, or any group of persons to support whoever they please for public office. But to a disinterested Democratic bystander, such as myself, the whole controversy at the Republican convention seemed to center around the fact that Senator Goldwater seemed to court the support of the John Birch Society and other extreme right wing groups, even to the extent that they might figure to a prominent degree in his administration in event he won election to the presidency. Even the most moderate overtures by the moderates of the party were spurned by the Goldwater faction with the result that the presumption that the right wing extremists were in control of the convention was solidified in the minds of the majority group of the party.

When, and if ever, a president of the United States is elected to office with the welcome support of a radical group such as the John Birch Society, a group that has publicly branded the last four presidents as communists or communists sympathizers as well as calling for the impeachment of the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court and continually condemning every branch of the United States Government, then and only then should we be apprehensive of a dictator taking over our government, for or the left. It is every citizen's right to know whether his vote might be instrumental in causing the election of a president that would be swayed by extremists to the extent that the very foundation of our democratic system would fall to a fascist type oligarchy.

Senator Goldwater had ample opportunity to refute the extremist concept of government, and gain the support of the mainstream of the Republican party, but he consistently refused to denounce the preachments of the extremists and in effect endorsed their philosophy with the statement that "I can see no evil in extremism in the defense of freedom, or any virtue in moderation in the pursuit of justice." Later in trying to rationalize his statement to the satisfaction of other republicans he still refused to divorce his idea of extremism from that practiced and preached by the John Birch Society. Taken literally the two-clause sentence uttered by the Republican nominee for president could mean that any group could determine their own definition of freedom and secure their goal through the methods used by the Ku Klux Klan, the John Birch Society, or any of the other extremist groups that have put on the mantle of a sanctimonious righteousness and confiscated God as their exclusive personal guardian with the idea that anyone who disagreed with their bigoted idea of government and behaviour were atheists and infidels. This idea is rampant in some quarters and is strictly foreign to the American heritage that these heretics claim to espouse. Either Senator Goldwater will repudiate the preachments of the extremists or his election to the presidency or any other public office will be blasphemy.

Mrs. Barbara Wheat and son Steven of Midland were in Dimmitt visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Stevens this week. They plan to attend Bill Stevens' wedding here.

and his laboratory. Parke-Davis has offered a research grant to Dr. Bischoff for detailed research in the field of radioactive isotopes and their relation to the possible cure of certain diseases.

Dr. Bischoff, who received his A. B., M. A., and M. D. degrees from the University of California returned to his Alma Mater last summer for a three month course which covered the clinical uses of the radioactive isotopes.

Dimmitt's doctor was licensed by the Atomic Energy Commission to use powerful radioactive materials. Result has been the complete research and treatment laboratory.

Now that the doctor's laboratory is equipped with the only isotope scanner in the High Plains Area, it means that almost unlimited radiation diagnosis may be done in Dimmitt.

"We will be able to do any and all of the Laboratory and clinical tests which are available in clinical medicine," says Dr. Bischoff.

With the new facilities offered by the recently constructed Plains Memorial Hospital in Dimmitt, Dr. Bischoff emphasizes that patients may now be hospitalized there who require large dosages of radioactive isotopes.

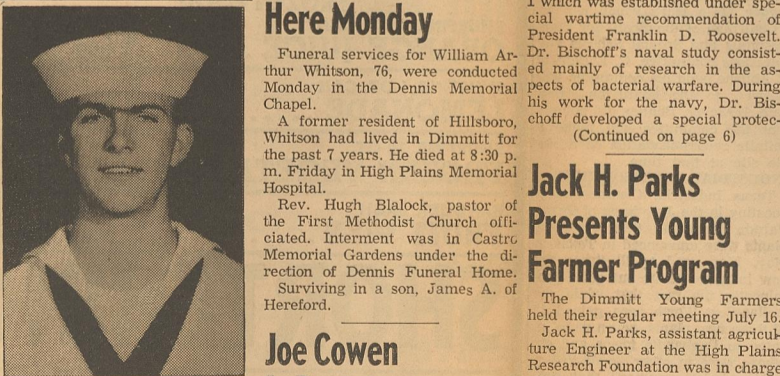

Dr. Bischoff is quick to point out that his laboratory and his radiological equipment have passed Atomic Energy Commission inspections and therefore afford absolute safety from accidental radiation exposure.

Local ASCS Voting Nears

Announcement was made this week by the local A.S.C.S. office that slates of nominees for membership on the ASC community committees are now being established at the local office.

Jim Elder, county chairman, said farmers who are eligible to vote in the committee elections also have the right to nominate candidates for committee membership.

Nomination requirements are that petitions be signed by six or more eligible voters and submitted to the county office by August 14.

"We want the best men available to serve on our ASC committees," Elder emphasized.

Elder pointed out that the committee administers programs on the welfare of individual farmers and collectively, the strength of local farm economy is based on effective committee representation.

The chairman indicated that price support payments in Castro County last year totaled more than two million dollars. He said more than eight million dollars was provided for price-support loans.

Included in the local program, are major commodity programs such as Wheat and Grain Sorghum. Because of the importance of the county programs, Elder said that the greatest number of farmers eligible to vote should make effort in casting their ballots.

Election of ASC community committees throughout the county will be conducted between August 21 and September 8. County office manager Charlie Hill announced that ballots will be mailed in all known eligible producers on August 21 and should be returned to the office by September 8.

Highlights and Sidelights FROM YOUR State CAPITOL

A costly plan for "catching up" with other states in the field of higher education has been outlined to Texans by the Governor's Committee on Education Beyond the High School.

It will take considerable money to accomplish just one of the major tests of excellence in education—bringing Texas faculty salaries up to the national average. More is needed for libraries and research facilities.

To help achieve goals in those commended that further college construction be delayed. By using present classroom and laboratories more hours a day and more days a year, this saving can be accomplished, the committee felt.

Gov. John Connally conceded that it will take new taxes to finance the program which he has termed his No. 1 interest. Neither he nor the committee recommended a financing plan. Committee did say the Legislature should double college tuition, so students and their parents would share more of the cost of education.

Plan calls for expansion of the junior college system, and wide use of vocational training to prepare students for skilled and semi-skilled technical jobs in industry.

Coordination, to eliminate duplication between state colleges, would be placed in the hands of an 18-member board appointed by the Governor. Board would take over duties of the present junior college division of the Texas Education Agency and the Commission on Higher Education. This would put junior and senior college and university supervision in a single group.

Goal would be to make junior college training available to all, and to raise its level of excellence so all junior college credits would be accepted.

Committee, headed by H. B. Zachry, San Antonio construction executive, is taking its case to the public in a series of meetings with business leaders in their communities.

CUT AGAIN—
Another 28,602-barrel cut in daily oil allowables was ordered by the Texas Railroad Commission as it held August production to 26.5 per cent of the capability of the wells. Two large purchasers complained they are over-supplied with oil and unable to sell it.

A POPULAR PLACE—
Texas' State Capitol is being invaded daily by both Texans and out of state tourists who come here to pay tribute to the history of the state. Men, women and children—about three times as many children as parents, it seems—literally crowd the Capitol's halls, their numbers reaching as many as 1,200 a day.

One of the most popular stops on the informal tour (there are no guides) of State buildings is the State Archives and Library, just across a walkway from the Capitol.

There, renowned artists Peter Hurd and his son-in-law Peter Rogers are executing a mural of Texas' history, featuring remarkable likenesses of Stephen F. Austin, Sam Houston and Anson Jones, as well as Davy Crockett and William B. Travis. The mural depicts the conquistador as well as the cowboy.

Visitors are invited to pull up a chair and watch the artists at work, and they do. They are also treated to a newly-arranged re-creation of a room from Gov. Elisha Pease's (1853-57, 1867, 69) mansion. Furniture was donated to the archives when former Gov. Allen Shivers bought the venerable mansion.

MAKING WAY FOR 1990
A large number of Texas cities with populations of less than 50,000 now for the year 1990 by developing a blueprint for progress and a Federal-local program being administered by the State Health Department.

Under this program, a city can obtain studies of current facilities and projections of future needs in every area from economic and sociological needs to budgeting for capital improvements. The housing and Home Finance agency makes grants for the master plans and the city pays one-third the cost, while the Federal agency pays two-thirds.

A typical town under study is the West Texas city of Winters, which has a population of 3,200 and will spend $4,485 toward a $13,365 master plan.

So far, 109 cities have enrolled in the planning project to see where they can go and how they can get there over the next 25 years.

PUBLIC PIERS—
Parks and wildlife Department will advertise a second time for bids for concession rights on the new State fishing pier at Port Lavaca. Only one person submitted a bid July 1 after 13 said they were interested.

The 3,200-foot-long pier, which replaced one destroyed by Hurricane Carla, is said to be the world's longest fishing pier. Access to it will be free to the public, but the department is trying to provide a source of bait, soft drinks and fishing gear via a concessionaire contract.

ANIMAL HEALTH HEAD CHANGE DUE—
Texas Animal Health Commission will decide on July 27 on a new commission director to replace Dr. R. G. Garrett of Taylor who plans to resign.

Decision will be made at a meeting to be hosted by Chairman Ed Knolle of Sandia at his Knole Jersey Farm in Jim Wells County. Knolle said there have been several "well-qualified" applicants for the post, but declined to list them. However, it has been rumored that a staff veterinarian with the commission, Dr. S. B. Walker, will be favored.

Animal Health Commission postponed to September a decision on whether to let a Type II brucellosis control program to be set up in one part of Brooks County.

Commission has been informed that many Brooks County producers want to organize a program, but the King Ranch which has 3,991 of the 16,000 head of cattle on county tax rolls does not. Approval of the owners of 75 per cent of the cattle in a county is necessary so the proponents want to organize a program in just the soil conservation district which covers all of the county except King Ranch property.

Commission said it lacked sufficient information for a decision at this time.

Senator YARBOROUGH'S REPORT

(This week's newsletter is a transcript of a radio interview between Senator YARBOROUGH and Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman.)

SENATOR YARBOROUGH—This week for a few minutes we've going to talk about President Lyndon B. Johnson's Anti-Poverty Bill. And I have a special guest, Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman. Secretary Freeman is in the thick of the fight for better opportunities for that part of America that hasn't had its fair share in the economy as a whole. Secretary Freeman, you've had long experience, a great combat record in World War II, educated under the GI Bill, Governor of breakdown on what the Anti-Poverty Bill of this administration provides.

SECRETARY FREEMAN—I'd be very happy to do my best, Senator. This is certainly a timely subject, a very, very vital and important piece of legislation, one in which you are providing very essential and important leadership and which will be acted on very soon. First of all, I would pick out one section of this before we get on to the agriculture part and talk about the work-study program which will make it possible for young people to get jobs to go to college, because that's just like the NYA program and I couldn't have gone to college myself without it. Back in those depression days, the President himself was administrator of the NYA program back in Texas.

SENATOR YARBOROUGH—I think he was administrator when he was 27 years of age.

SECRETARY FREEMAN—That's correct. So this is to provide some of the young people that will be free to the public, but the department is trying to provide a source of bait, soft drinks and fishing gear via a concessionaire contract.

ANIMAL HEALTH HEAD CHANGE DUE—
Texas Animal Health Commission will decide on July 27 on a new commission director to replace Dr. R. G. Garrett of Taylor who plans to resign.

Decision will be made at a meeting to be hosted by Chairman Ed Knolle of Sandia at his Knole Jersey Farm in Jim Wells County. Knolle said there have been several "well-qualified" applicants for the post, but declined to list them. However, it has been rumored that a staff veterinarian with the commission, Dr. S. B. Walker, will be favored.

ED—
Animal Health Commission postponed to September a decision on whether to let a Type II brucellosis control program to be set up in one part of Brooks County.

Commission has been informed that many Brooks County producers want to organize a program, but the King Ranch which has 3,991 of the 16,000 head of cattle on county tax rolls does not. Approval of the owners of 75 per cent of the cattle in a county is necessary so the proponents want to organize a program in just the soil conservation district which covers all of the county except King Ranch property.

Commission said it lacked sufficient information for a decision at this time.

WEST TEXAS SCHOOL
West Texas cities that want to be home to a new West Texas School for the mentally retarded will have to wait until at least September 14 to learn which will be Chairman of the Board for State Hospitals and Special Schools site selections committee, C. E. Bentley of Abilene, said his committee will report to the board on that date. However, Bentley did not say that the committee will make a definite recommendation on a single site at that time.

INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT—
Texas Industrial Commission is boasting in the July issue of Texas Parade Magazine that 27 new plants were announced in Texas in May. Map used to illustrate the new industry points out quite prominently the fact that while the Dallas-Fort Worth area gained 12 of these new plants, seven were located in Panhandle towns and six others were in other small towns.

Commission announced that Patrick J. Ryan of the Lamesa Chamber of Commerce and Sylvan R. Lange of Greater Marshall Industries have been approved for the first year class at the Industrial Development Institute in Norman, Oklahoma.

ATTORNEY GENERAL RULING
Atty. Gen. Waggoner Carr ruled that a county election board must furnish voting booths for all polling places within each city of 10,000 or more inhabitants.

Carr also ruled that a county clerk does not have authority to charge the fee for releasing of a chattel mortgage or lien on personal property at the time such mortgage is filed.

couldn't go to college today with the same chance, for example, that I had to get a job where you could earn by hard work—I washed walls in a hospital enough to go to college—the same kind of program for younger people, living at home and working so that they can go to high school. The Job Corps will take the unemployed and underemployed young people and they can go into work camps. This will build up our work force and take care of our conservation and give training to these young people as well.

SENATOR YARBOROUGH—Mrs. Secretary, is this program similar to the old CCC camps that built the dams and the roads and the bridges in our national parks?

SECRETARY FREEMAN—Exactly. That's what it will do and I think it will do it even better because we have learned much, and we will be able to give these young people a better kind of training and education, in addition to the help in work experience and in addition to the improvements of conservation in the country itself.

SENATOR YARBOROUGH—Mr. Secretary, what will Title III do, the agricultural part, the rural part, with which you've had such a vital part?

SECRETARY FREEMAN—Title III is directed towards rural poverty in America, of which there is so much. People don't realize that 50 per cent of the poverty of this country is in the country, on the farms, four and one-half million families. A great many of these families are sometimes called "boxed in." There are the old folks, these are the sick, these are the ones who have no education and they don't have adequate resources or farms to make a decent living. This bill would make it possible for them to get a small grant or perhaps buy a couple of head of cattle, maybe a bit of fence, maybe some fertilizer, a little piece of machinery, and working with the Farmers Home Administration, to get a little loan and to begin to earn just a bit more. They are not going to be what we call efficient family farm producers. Their income may increase by $500, $750 a year to $1000 or $1500. It still won't be adequate by our standards, but these are folks who love their community, want to stay where they are, who can't find a job if they're forced into the city, who just need a little help up the ladder so they can live a little bit better. And I'm very happy Senator YARBOROUGH that you will be managing this bill because you understand rural America. You are a humanitarian who can make it go.

Thank you Secretary Orville Freeman for your explanation of President Lyndon B. Johnson's Anti-Poverty Bill.

Sulphuring Fruit Preserves Quality

Sulphuring fruit is still the best known method for drying fruit to preserve color and quality.

To sulphur fruit: Place 1 teaspoon of sulphur per pound of prepared fruit in a small piece of paper, roll it loosely and twist the ends. Then place it in a pan. Place the pan below the tray or trays of cut fruit so they will not come into direct contact with burning sulphur. Light the paper. Then quickly place a tight box or barrel over the trays and the pan. The covering should be tight enough to prevent loss of the fumes. THIS SHOULD BE DONE OUT OF DOORS.

Apricots - 2 hours
Peaches - 15 to 20 minutes if peeled 3 hours if unpeeled

The best temperature for drying foods are between 110-150 degrees F. Under no condition should it be above 150 degrees F.

There are several tests for determining the right degree of dryness: A handful of the food pressed together springs apart when released;

A cross section freshly cut shows no free moisture; and
When pressed does not exude water.

Dried foods feel soft and velvety and is somewhat leathery.

The storage of the fruit in a dry place is necessary. Dried foods may be stored in any of the containers developed for packaging frozen foods, in paper bags securely tied or in cans with tight fitting lids.

AMMO NOTES

Wm. F. (Bill) Bennett, Agronomist, Western Ammonia Corporation

Watch For Deficiency Symptoms

Crops are moving into a period of growth when nutrient deficiencies may start showing. A lot of maize is already in the period of growth when nitrogen demand and use is high - perhaps up to 2 pounds actual nitrogen per day. If the nitrogen supply is not adequate, lower leaves of maize plants will start to turn yellow and eventually die. Such deficiency symptoms usually indicate that more nitrogen could have been profitably used.

Now is a good time to look at your beet fields. Some have started if the field has a slightly yellow cast, the odds are that the field could have used more nitrogen. A very few beet fields were beginning to show a slight yellow coloring the first week in July. It is usually desirable for beets to start running out of nitrogen along about the middle of August. If your beets started yellowing too soon, it may be desirable to increase the nitrogen rate next year.

On cotton, watch for the proper balance of fruiting and stalk growth. The balance has generally been good so far. Type of season, irrigation, insects and such factors will affect this to a certain extent, but it can be a guideline for next year's fertilizer program.

Services Rendered to Dimmitt Citizens Makes

City Government A Big Business

by Joe Hamilton Cowen
 Rex Cowart squinted as the bright west Texas sun flashed in his eyes. A swirl of dust struck his bronze-tanned face as he said, "Dimmitt's city government is a much bigger operation than the average citizen realizes."
 Cowart is the city manager's right-hand man. Although E. B. Noble, Dimmitt's city manager, says Cowart is the Public Works Director, Cowart prefers to be known as just "an outside work supervisor."
 Shiek Mohammed O'Toole once said, "If you can't go first class, stay home." And Dimmitt's city government certainly doesn't stay home where public works are concerned; it goes first class.
 Most of the city employees stay busier than a one-armed bartender serving whisky to Irish railroad hands on Saturday night.
 Dimmitt's public servants number nineteen. Four men including Cowart are in charge of the water department and the sewage department.
 When the basic operations of the local government are eyed most closely, about as much curiosity should be aroused as would be directed to a cage full of tigers singing "We're Poor Little Lambs".
 For instance, nearly a quarter of a million dollars is invested to deal with the city sewage. Dimmitt's sewage disposal begins with three lift station buried deep in the ground. These lift stations, as they are called, are really powerful electric motors pulling pumps which lift the sewage drainage to a level that the force of gravity will carry the waste to the purifying plant in northeast Dimmitt.

 Purification of the waste begins with a screening process which separates solids from liquids. Further clearing is done by oxidation. When the liquid is filtered through large vats of filtering material, the fluid is pumped into lakes for sedimentation. Solid waste material is actually digested and broken down by its own gasses. Final step in the sewage treatment is done in drying beds purified by sunlight and oxidation.
 Anyone slightly sharper than a wet Kleenex should realize that a city of some 3,200 people would use a lot of water, but Dimmitt's usage at times has topped two million gallons a day in the summer. Average Dimmitt water usage tops one million gallons daily.
 Dimmitt water comes from four wells. It is stored in two water towers and two underground tanks. Total storage capacity in this city is close to a million gallons. In other words, all water in both towers and in both reservoirs might last one day in the dead of Panhandle winter.

 That strange taste of Granny's coffee may or may not be from her methods of coffee brewing. Most likely, however, the taste is from the chlorination treatment of the water which is a state health requirement.
 Dimmitt's chlorine is added to the water by automatic chlorine feeders at a specified and regulated rate of fifteen pounds of chlorine every 24-hours.
 If you growl when the water bill is received, you ought to hear the roar from city hall when they repair or replace some of their water supply equipment which is valued at half a million dollars.
 Cold west Texas well water hits local homes through 6 and 10-inch water mains. Pipes of such size are necessary because of insurance regulations requiring fire hydrants to be connected to mains 6 inches or larger.
 If you have ever nearly driven over the curb and almost hit one of Reddy Kilowatt's poles while watching thousands of gallons of water spurting from a lone fire plug, you have probably wondered what in the name of O'Toole was going on. Here's the story.

Water sometimes gathers along the bottom of mains and becomes "dead water" and ceases to flow with the top mainstream current. And draining the pipes through fire plugs is really just a simple method of flushing out any water that may have become immobile.
 The men who keep your fresh water flowing out of the pipes and again down the drain into the sewer, are Rex Cowart, Lonnie Cork, Howard Grand, and Richard Wood.
 Their jobs range from digging manholes and laying pipe to pump repair, tank building, and painting.
 Water supply and sewage are certainly not the city's only services. In addition, your city goes to your fires, enforces law and order, collects your garbage, buries your junk, issues your building permits, and once in a while collects some taxes.
 "All the boys pitch in and help with the street repair work", Noble pointed out. However, full-time road repair is undertaken by Amado R. Garcia, who drives the heavy equipment.
 Heavy road repair equipment for Dimmitt is worth fifty thousand dollars. Much of it was purchased at bargain and used prices and occasionally requires repair by the official city mechanic, Sam Maynard, whose shop is located in the city barn at the fair grounds.
 Dimmitt's 27-man volunteer fire department is kept posted by the full-time paid fireman, Guy Waldrop, who lives in the fire-station section of the city hall.
 In focus for Dimmitt is a new firetruck which will be purchased this fall for twenty thousand dollars, according to the city manager. Fire insurance regulations require fire trucks with an engine displacement of at least 500 cubic inches. This means the two old chevys and the GMC just won't make the grade. One of the old trucks, now used mostly in parades, is of 1927 vintage, which may be called top quality for wines but most surely not for fire fighting.
 Dimmitt's police department is headed by W. W. Jones, Chief of Police and he is assisted by a full-time night watchman, Fred Moulton. Occasionally, additional help is employed for relief work in the department.
 Noble emphasized that one of the hardest workers in the organization is Mrs. Virginia Dowdy who handles water billing and collection, issues building permits and licenses, and assists the city manager with taxing.
 Noble feels that when the new firetruck arrives, Dimmitt will have some of the finest equipment available.
 "All-in-all", the city manager declared, "Dimmitt has adequate equipment and adequate personnel for the present needs".
 As surely Throckmorton O'Toole would agree, Dimmitt's city government doesn't just stay home, it goes first class.

Cancer Research . . . .

 tive mask which is still in use today.
 Following his release from the navy in 1945, Dr. Bischoff spent two years in Children's Hospital in Washington, D. C. His first year there was taken in pathology and the second in pediatrics. While at the Children's Hospital, Dr. Bischoff was a Research Fellow of the National Institute of Health and also of the Children's Hospital Research Foundation.
 In Texas Dr. Bischoff has had three individual post-graduate courses in pediatrics, one at Galveston and two at Houston. In New Mexico, the Dimmitt physician completed a course in Aviation Medicine at the Lovelace Clinic in Albuquerque.
 Additional training Dr. Bischoff has received is in radiological monitoring which led to his instructor's rating in the field.
 Dr. Bischoff has also attended an advanced course in audiology (hearing) at West Texas State University in Canyon.
 Also a recipient of a fellowship in orthopedic surgery from the National Research Council, Dr. Bischoff is a Fellow of the American College of Geriatrics; The American College of Angiology; and an Associate Fellow of the American College of Chest Physicians.

 Asked specifically what types of diseases could be treated and what kind of tests could be run in Dimmitt, Dr. Bischoff responded with the following: Chronic Lymphatic leukemia in adults; Ploicythemia vera, a disease characterized by the formation of too many red blood cells; the treatment of cancer spread to the interior of the abdomen or chest; thyroid cancer; hyperthyroidism; certain types of heart disease; and in certain instances the spread of cancer to bones can be treated with radioactive phosphorus.
 He said, "The number and variety of tests that may be done using the radioactive isotopes are so great that I cannot possibly list them all".
 The doctor added that it might be advisable to throw light on some of the more dramatic uses of radiation in modern medicine. "One of the most useful", Dr. Bischoff implied, "is prior to brain surgery or location of a tumor".
 He pointed out that prior to brain surgery, a patient may be given an injection of radioactive phosphorus and during surgery the surgeon may use a special probe which will enable him locating the tumor without physical injury or contact with healthy brain tissue.

Dr. Bischoff says there is a very involved iron kinetic study which reveals the way in which iron is stored and utilized in the body and "with these tests and treatment available", he concluded, "it is like a dream-come-true and like medicine born anew".

TOPDRESS PASTURES WITH "MR. GREEN" 30-10-0 AND GROW YOUR OWN FEED!

Would you like to double the forage yield of your pastures? The chances are good that you can do it with just one application of fertilizer!

This time of year it is important to see that your grasses have plenty of nitrogen, and a little phosphorus to boot. That's why we recommend an application of Spencer "Mr. Green" 30-10-0. Contains 30% nitrogen and 10% phosphorus. Top-dress your pastures with 300 pounds per acre, and see the results.

Tests at state experiment stations show that cattle grazed on well-fertilized forage alone have gained weight at a cost of less than 10c a pound. Drylot feeding often costs 2½ times that much!

That's why we say, "Grow your own feed with Spencer 'Mr. Green'!" See us for further details about pasture topdressing.

Hot Weather Hints About Swine Hauling

Did you ever wonder how a hog feels on a hot day? If not, think about it the next time you are hauling a load. Before loading them, stop and think about how hot hot it is and how long the hogs will be crowded together.

When the farmer gets hot, he can roll up his shirt sleeves, get into a breeze or shade, get a drink of water or even take a shower. However, a load of hogs in transit has little if any chance to take advantage of these simple measures unless man provides them.

By following a few simple rules, excessive shrink and transit death losses can be reduced, says Donald Osburn, assistant animal humanitarian, Texas A&M University.

Avoid excitement and overheating while loading and sorting ahead of time helps quiet them down says specialist.

He offers these further suggestions for making the trip to market more comfortable for the hogs. Load one or two fewer hogs to let more air circulate through the load.

Cover trailer or bed of truck with a tarp if animals are to be hauled more than a few miles. Remove straw bedding and substitute sand, sawdust or shavings, and wet the bedding if the temperature is above 75 degrees.

Sprinkling animals after they are loaded will help prevent overheating while in transit. Check load often to see that the hogs aren't getting too hot.

Keep the vehicle moving, stopping only when necessary and then park in a shade where a breeze is blowing, advises Osburn.

Salt Box Bait Box A one-pound salt box makes a perfect container for carrying crickets and grasshoppers. Punch out the spout and slip in the insects. When you are ready to fish, open up the spout and drop 'em out, one at a time.

FMLOATING Fish Stringer Ever had a stringer of fish slip from your grasp and sink from sight? Sickingen sensation isn't it? A good preventative is to add a float to the stringer. Then should it break loose or slip from your hand, there's no problem in recovering it.

Overgrazing Curtails Range Improvement

With the improved moisture situation over much of the state, it is time to take a look at the grazing situation, says Bobby Ragsdale, Extension range specialist.

First, Texas cattle and deer numbers are at an all time high. Ranges in their present condition will not be able to support these animals and maintain their productivity over a long period of time.

Overstocking prevents buildup of litter which aids in water and soil stabilization. Revegetation from natural seeding and regaining vigor by forage plants already present is also retarded by overstocking. The specialist points out that overgrazing rangelands will allow little or no chance for range improvement.

To remedy this situation, Ragsdale offers several suggestions: Breeding herds should be kept to a minimum and dry animals should not be maintained. Also, temporary and permanent pastures should be utilized to reduce grazing pressure on native grasslands. Ragsdale suggests that improved Bermuda pastures be used in a deferred grazing program to maintain the present herd rather than buy more cattle to graze the additional grass.

In looking ahead, Ragsdale says that proper deer harvest should be worked into the ranch operation to insure maximum returns from this resource as well as to prevent excessive grazing on rangeland.

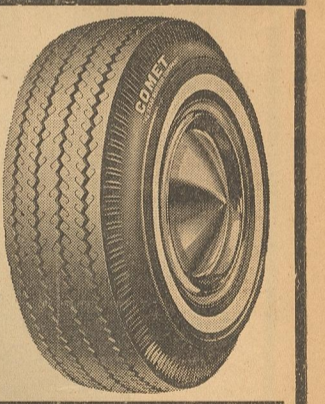

Wire Brush Scalor To aid in scaling fish, use a painter's steel wire brush instead of a knife. Even when fish are dried, the scales come right off.

SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY

Science and technology have completely transformed life in the United States in the past 100 years. They have helped us achieve the highest living standard in the world. As we all recognize, the pace of development in science and technology continues to be breath-takingly swift.

In the past 100 years, the farm population required to feed the Nation has decreased from 8 out of 10 to less than one out of 10, due largely to mechanization and improved production techniques. In that period, the average life span of Americans has increased from 40 years to 70 years because of medical advances in the prevention and cure of disease and gains in nutrition and sanitation.

Of all the food products available to the housewife today, 66 percent did not exist 10 years ago. Of all the drugs now on the market, 45 percent were unknown 5 years ago.

More than 5,000 companies today are engaged in missile-aerospace research or production—a program that has led to the development of more than 3,000 new products or techniques in private enterprise.

Scientific progress today not only is an essential factor in determining the character of tomorrow's civilization, it is vital in insuring the safety and security of the United States and Free World. For that reason United States Government is deeply involved in research and development programs. In 1940, American taxpayers spent $74 million for scientific activities directed by the Federal government. In the current fiscal year, research and development expenditures will exceed $15 billion. Most of this money is being spent by three agencies heavily engaged in matters directly related to national security. In Fiscal Year 1963, the research and development obligations of these three agencies were as follows: Department of Defense $7.7 billion, National Aeronautics and Space Administration $3.7 billion, Atomic Energy Commission $1.5 billion. Of all Federal funds spent in research and development, 75 percent is spent in industry, 8 percent in colleges and universities, 15 percent within the Government itself.

According to the National Science Foundation, about 2.7 million Americans are working in science and technology—3.6 percent of the civilian labor force.

A fundamental constitutional responsibility of the Congress is appropriating funds wisely. If Congress is to appropriate wisely in scientific fields, it must have a sound understanding of what is to be accomplished and what the Nation's research priorities should be. Because of the Constitutional obligation, only Congress can make these decisions. It is a job that cannot be delegated to experts not directly responsible to the electorate, although Congress must depend on the sage counsel of scientists, men in industry and in the Government's executive branch, and other citizens who are well qualified to offer advice. Because Federal budget projections indicate that our defense responsibilities will require increasing, not decreasing, expenditures in science and technology, I have been pleased that several important steps have been taken in the 88th Congress to enable members of the House and Senate to serve more effectively in this regard. Congress must be prepared to make sound decisions, mindful of the need to effect all possible economies.

I very much enjoy my associations with men and women of the scientific community. They are indeed dedicated citizens. I was greatly privileged to be invited to address on July 18, the Amarillo Chapter of the American Association for the Advancement of Science meeting in Amarillo.

We must never overlook the past accomplishments of lone scientists in their laboratories pursuing objectives in basic research—seeking entirely new processes and data without known applications. Michael Faraday in the last century developed the magnetic induction coil during this kind of inquiry, and I'm sure you can recall a number of other similar milestones in science. The magnetic induction coil led to the foundation of our whole electrical industry. Someone asked Faraday what possible use the little device was. "Well, what use is a newborn baby?" asked Faraday.

LUBBOCK VISITORS
Mr. and Mrs. Earl Brock visited relatives in Lubbock Sunday.

A weekly public service feature from the Texas State Department of Health

If you and your family are going camping, along with thousands of others, before the summer is over, remember this: A camp can be a health resort if you keep rules of good health and sanitation foremost in your mind.

You will want to take along a standard first aid kit or at least a disinfectant, tape and gauze. Head off infection by washing and cleaning even minor scratches and cuts.

Choose a camp site near a source of water but away from marshes or likely places for insects to breed. You will need the water for washing even though you won't want to drink just any water.

Check with the Texas State Department of Health or health department of the state you plan to visit before you leave home, if possible. Otherwise, check with local authorities to see if the water source is approved, or safe, before you drink.

If, in case of an emergency, you must drink water from an un-sure source, strain it through a clean cloth and boil it vigorously for at least one minute. Or you may also add 10 drops—about a teaspoon—of bleach per gallon of water. Mix the solution and wait 30 minutes before drinking.

You may choose camp sites which feature tables, fireplaces and toilet facilities. Or you may prefer strictly to rough it, setting up your own facilities. If so, choose a level, dry spot for the tent or sleeping facilities and put the food up away from curious and hungry animals.

You may construct a camp latrine by simply digging a trench some distance from camp or instruct each person how to dig a simple individual latrine in the woods.

Most campers prefer to carry a limited supply of dishes on a camping trip and wash them after each meal. Sand or mud and twigs are acceptable aids in cleaning pots and pans, although a scouring pad from home will do a quicker job. They can be dried and sterilized in the sun or over the fire. Slipshod dishwashing can produce both an upset stomach and an unhappy camper.

Where or whenever you camp, remember—make your camp a health resort.

DIMMITT VISITORS

Summertime is a period of considerable discomfort for many dogs whose owners are not well informed concerning its hazards, or are just plain careless. It is the time when dogs are more susceptible, through more constant exposure, to the ravages of internal and external parasites and flying insects that bite or sting.

Medicinal laboratories and manufacturers of insecticides and sanitary preparations have developed products that prove a boon to the dog's comfort if the owner will only apply them faithfully, according to directions. But the fight against parasites, both internal and external is never-ending, and one must be diligent and alert if his efforts are to succeed. It is not a difficult matter to keep one's dogs free, or comparatively free of these pests if the owner will only exercise constant observation and a little effort to control them," says Henry P. Davis, Sporting Dogs Editor of Sports Afield Magazine.

First is the matter of sanitation. The dog's kennel and his exercise area must be kept clean at all times. This entails removal of the droppings—daily or, if need be, more than once a day. Droppings attract flies and other insects that carry discomfort to the dog and to the entire household. The ground and sleeping area should be sprayed regularly with a good insecticide and disinfectant, and the ground should occasionally be limed. Fresh water should be supplied at all and sufficient shade provided. I the dog is kept on a concrete slab, this area should be washed down regularly with a good insecticide.

Fleas are the ancient, and too commonly accepted, parasite of the dog. Yet there are others, such as lice, ticks, harvest mites and manna mites, that are equally discomforting and sometimes dangerous. Modern medical science has made it possible, however, to control them, though perseverance is essential. One of the most effective drugs in the control of fleas, lice and ticks is benzene hexachloride. As a dust, as a rinse or even as an ingredient of shampoo, it kills all kinds of insects, with no poisonous effects on dogs yet determined.

Future Market Is New Idea In Cattle Selling

A cattle futures market. Ridiculous, you say? Maybe not, according to Ed Uvacek, Extension livestock marketing specialist at Texas A & M University.

The Chicago Mercantile Exchange has hired a private consulting firm to study the possibility of such a market. Although most segments of the livestock industry feel there is a need for a futures market on livestock, they do not fully understand how it can best be used, says Uvacek.

There are many problems in establishing a livestock futures market because of the nature of the product. In live cattle trading, there is difficulty in establishing specifications, carcass beef contracting isn't very appealing to either producers or buyers and boneless beef normally doesn't have the price variation needed for attractive speculation.

Early investigations show that live cattle contracts, combining carcass specifications might be the best solution.

Another problem with establishing a futures market is the large amount of educational work that must be done to insure a full understanding of the program by cattlemen.

However, eventually the difficulties will be worked out and the thing that couldn't work, a futures trading market on live cattle and beef, will be a reality, says Uvacek.

Little Nozzle Does Big Job On Spray Rig

A self-propelled spray rig equipped with a 500-gallon fiberglass tank, high pressure pump, and over sized tires can be useless if the nozzles on the boom are not designed for the job.

That's why sprayer nozzle selection is important for effective and safe use of agricultural chemicals, says Beverly G. Reeves, Extension agricultural engineer, Texas A & M University.

Reeves says nozzles have four big jobs. They control the amount of chemical applied, uniformity of application, thoroughness of surface cover, and safety of application.

They do these jobs, Reeves points out, by controlling particle size and application rate in a pressure range by thoroughly covering the target area, and by permitting minimum spray escape.

Classified by spray patterns, the four basic types of nozzles are the flat spray, even spray, solid and hollow cone, and flooding spray, the engineer said.

Flat spray nozzles are suited for weed and brush control in pastures and some field insect controls when penetration of the foliage is not necessary, says Reeves. They produce semi-coarse spray in fan pattern that permits uniform overlay along the boom. A special advantage of flat spray nozzles is their peration close to the ground to minimize drift.

Even spray nozzles are used in hand spraying where there can be no overlap from other nozzles to get a uniform, even pattern, Reeves said. They give a uniform volume of spray across the entire fan width.

Solid and hollow cone nozzles are used for insect and disease control when penetration of the sprayed surface is essential for effective control and drift is not necessarily a hazard. These nozzles produce a circular fan pattern.

Flooding spray nozzles are best for spraying a wide area while remaining close to the sprayed surface, the engineer points out. They produce a coarse fan pattern at very low pressure which practically eliminates danger from drift. Thus they are ideal for applying post-emergence chemicals on maturing row crops.

Even with the proper selection of nozzles, wear will change the size and shape of nozzle tip openings. This alters the discharge rate and spray pattern, explains the engineer.

To keep wear at a minimum, it is important to match the nozzle material to the spray solution. Some materials are better suited to withstand either chemical or mechanical wear with a specific spray. Reeves says the highest initial cost spray nozzle may be the least expensive to use.

Nozzles should be operated within the pressure limits established by the manufacturer, explains Reeves. Higher pressures will reduce the droplet size and distort the spray drift and non-uniform coverage. Lower pressures will not force material into a full spray pattern and his, combined with oversize drops, also adds up to non-uniform coverage.

If rates are needed that are greater or smaller than those listed or a particular nozzle tip, then tips must be changed to the volume necessary, for a successful spray job.

Poorly Adjusted Cotton Pickers May Be Picking Your Pocket

Poorly adjusted cotton pickers may lose three to four dollars worth of cotton from each acre picked, reports Beverly Reeves, cotton ginning and mechanization specialist, Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Losing just one percent efficiency from your cotton picker can mean the loss of a dollar per acre or more on bale-per-acre cotton, explains the specialist. Poorly adjusted pickers commonly lose three to four percent efficiency.

The condition of your picker affects cotton grade as well as picking efficiency. Therefore, hundreds of dollars can be saved by putting your machine in top condition before picking season, says Reeves.

Since all working parts should be in good condition, a complete overhaul by a qualified dealer is your best insurance against picker break down and inefficiency, advises the specialist. Pickers need a certain amount of regular adjustment, repair, and part replacement which can best be performed by trained personnel with the proper equipment while the machine is being overhauled.

Due to improved designs and assembly line overhauling, annual overhaul costs are lower than a few years ago, says Reeves. Also, through improved design of picker costs have been reduced by nearly 50 percent since 1950.

By putting your picker in good condition before harvest season, you can harvest extra dollars from your cotton crop.
