By STERLING LINDSEY

When Spring rolls around people begin to think about making things grow. The farmer in his fields, the gardner in his garden and the home owner in his yard all want to get things going and growing.

We still need that good rain (rains really), but the perennial plants are putting out anyway The good rains in the fall put some moisture underneath.

Also starting will be the insects. Nature has a way of taking care of itself. One of our major insect problems the past few years has been on peaches. Catfacing and tunneling insects ruin many of our peaches.

Now is the time to start treatment to control part of these insects, the major ones.

The following spray schedule is recommended. Spray the peach tree or trees with either Carbaryl (Sevin), malathion, methoxychlor or diazinon when 75 percent of the blossom petals have fallen. Make the second or shuck split application 10 days after the first application with one of the insecticides listed for first spray. Then 10 to 14 days after the second application make the third spraying with one of the recommend-Chili and crackers, fruit jello ed insecticides and 13 to 21 later

The home gardener can do a satisfactory spraying job with Beef stew with potatoes and a small power sprayer or a hand all fruit, leaf and bark surfaces.

Should infestations of fruit-damaging insects occur following the completion of recommended spray schedule, Carbaryl (Sevin) can be used effectively up to within one day of harvest.

Insecticides are essential tools in the home garden, however, they should be used in accordance with the rate and safety directions printed on the container

Carbaryl may be applied to peaches up to one day before harvest; that malathion should not be used wiithin 7 days of harvest; methoxychlor within 21 days of harvest and diazinon within 20 days of harvest.

A number of people call each year about galls on trees. Fortunately, these small, usually spherical abnormal growths are not often a serious problem. Most healthly plants can tolerate a large number of galls with no apparent injury.

But there are exceptions, says Lyndon K. Almand, assistant Extension entomologist at Texas A&M University.

"Under certain conditions, gall insects can build up in sufficient numbers to damage the plant," he said. "Unhealthy trees are damaged more by galls than trees in a vigorous state of growth."

Many kinds of insects and termites can cause galls. Attack of each species results in a distinctive deformity on leaves, twigs or stems. Some of the more important gall makers are mites, plant lice or aphids, tiny flies called midges and tiny wasps.

If control is necessary, it is important to remember that control by insecticide is next to impossible if galls have already begun to form. Egg laying or hatching by the bug pest stimulates the plant to form the abnormal growth or gall, which becomes a protective cell for the developing young. Insecticide chemicals can't make contact.

"In many instance, the best time to apply insecticides is not known. Some species of gall insects attack early in the spring, while others may attack throughout most of the growing season. Preventive spray treatments early in the growing season may reduce gall infestations."

besprayed in early spring just as new growth begins and continued at weekly intervals until leaves are fully developed.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Baker, Jackie Bob and Terry Mark of Abilene were Easter weekend guest of her mother Mrs. Bert Duncan. Mrs. Duncan returned home recently from Clinic Hospital in San Angelo where she had had eye surgery March 7.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Engle and two girls of Brownwood were visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Hood during the weekend of March 18-19.
