Fences Cause War

By JESSIE N. YARBROUGH
Chairman, Coke County
Historical Survey Committee

The advent of barb wire had a tremendous impact on ranching activities in the area that was to become Coke County as well as in all West Texas.

In about 1881, the first barb wire fence in the area was built. Up to this time the range in the Colorado-Concho area had been free, open range.

Also, up to this time cattlemen considered that they owned their ranges by right of discovery or by locating at some watering place. It seems that cattlemen had respected each other's "range rights" until barb wire changed the picture.

Realizing that "range rights" gave them only dubious claims to ownership, cattlemen began to purchase some land. The price of land was extremely cheap. Some ranchers bought huge tracts of land. Some others purchased tracts (some small and some larger) and then fenced in large tracts of free land with the purchased land. This was done to hold on to the land which they had held through "range rights" until they could establish better claims — either by purchase or until a cowboy could "file on it, live it out, and prove up on it and then sell it to him." (Many trades were made in the West whereby the rancher agreed to pay the cowboy wages while he "lived-out" the claim with the understanding that the cowboy would transfer title to the rancher. It is said that many large ranches were built in this manner.)

Cattlemen began to see the advantages to be derived by having their pastures fenced. Fences would prevent cattle from straying too far away and becoming mixed with the cattle of neighboring ranches. They would keep the cattle fenced in and the "rustlers" fenced out.

Barb wire fences would help to discourage the "brand runners"—plain cattle thieves. Barb wire would discourage the over-zealous "maverick" hunters.

Not all ranchers saw eye to eye. Some ranchers were greatly disturbed. They saw barb wire as a threat to the free open range. Some cattlemen who owned little or no land had sizeable herds on the open range. They saw barb wire as a threat to their domain. Moreover, "nesters" (farmers) were beginning to file on land and fence it, and this sometimes cut off a rancher's cattle from a watering place.

Advocates of the "open range" argued that if men were allowed to fence their land, that others would follow suit and soon there would be no free, open range. In this they were right.

Cowboys hated fences. They sometimes had to ride extra miles to get around a "drift fence." Cowboys began carrying wire cutters. One old-time cowboy (now deceased) told this writer that fences never bothered him. He said, "I carried a pair of wire cutters in my hip pocket, and I never rode miles to get around a fence."

"To fence or not to fence" became the burning question of the time. The controversy raged. The crisis came in 1883, when there was a real boom in the cattle thieving business.

Cattlemen who were losing cattle had "blood in their eyes." They had organized cattlemen's associations to meet and discuss ways and means to cope with the situation. The one in this area was known as "The Colorado and Concho Stock Association."

Hot tempers in both the opposing factions flared to the point that they rivaled the heat of the brand-runner's iron. Men became desperate. Pandemonium, in the literal sense of the word, broke out in the area that is now Coke County, a part of the area then known as the Countrys of the Conchos and the Colorado.

Men organized wire-cutting mobs. It has been said that "politics make strange bed-fellows." That could be said of the wire-cutting mobs, which were sometimes composed of cattlemen who were opposed to fencing, cowboys who hated barb wire fences, brand runners, "rustlers," maverick hunters, just plain adventurers, and what-have-you.

Several "old-timers" in interviews with this writer said that it was a common occurrence for a man to build a fence all day and find the wire cut to pieces and the posts pulled out of the ground when he returned to his work the next morning.

Some farmers who attempted to fence their land or a water hole on their land had fences destroyed. L. B. Harris had forty miles of fence cut between every other post. The Odom family, who ranched in the area surrounding old Fort Chadbourne, had fences cut.

In November, 1883, L. B. Harris, who owned land on both sides of the Colorado River, was preparing to fence several sections of land. He had 10,000 cedar posts and two railroad carloads of barb wire on the ground ready to begin work on the fence, when a mob destroyed the posts and wire. They piled the wire on top of the posts and burned the posts. The wire melted and ruined. This burning occurred three miles west of the present site of Robert Lee on land that will be in the basin of CRMWD's Robert

Lee Lake. Mrs. John McCabe and Mrs. C. D. Stewart, the first two white women to come to this area told the writer about this. Mrs. McCabe said, "The pile of posts looked as big as a two story house or a hotel building!" Mrs. Stewart saw the smoke and fire as they were going to their home- stead west of here in early No- vember 1883. She said, "People told us that men who opposed fencing the range had burned 10,000 posts and a lot of wire." This writer found some chunks of the burned wire in 1953, some 70 years after the burning.

Wire and posts were burned a- bout half-way between Hayrick and Sanco and at a few other places. Wire fences in many places were cut.

Cattlemen called for a law to protect fences as well as other property. Governor Ireland sent Rangers into the Runnels-Coke area to quell the wire cutters. They were guarding fence in the area lying between Ballinger and Tennyson, or so I have been told, when a fence-cutting mob sur- prised them, disarmed them and forced the Rangers at gun point to cut wire all night.

The Cattlemen's Association decided to employ a detective. They hired Ben Warren of Hyl- ton, sent him to Austin for train- ing and put him on the job to "catch the wire cutters." Warren and one of the Odom men were in Sweetwater to testify against wire cutters when someone, sup- posedly one of the wire cutters, shot through a window of the hotel and killed Warren. This in- formation came to this writer from the late R. G. Crane of Sweetwater.

Mrs. Jack Miles, now deceased, told this writer that some men went to the Harris Ranch where her husband was foreman for many years. It was a very cold day, and her husband asked the men to have dinner with them. Soon after noon the men left. A- bout two o'clock in the afternoon, Jack decided to ride out into the pasture. "Jack rode right up on those men cutting fence while my good dinner was still warm in their stomachs," she said.

The Warren killing just about put a stop to fence cutting in the area. Only sporadic instances of wire cutting occurred in the area after Ben Warren was killed. It is said, but this writer cannot vouch for the truth of it, that Ben Warren had posed as a wire cutter in order to "get the goods" on the mob that had been destroying fences in the Fort Chadbourne area.

An epoch-making result of fencing with barb wire: Barb wire brought the era of the Trail Driver and the Cattle Trails to a close. It was no longer possible to trail cattle to Northern cattle markets after the land was fenced; however this resulted in in- creased interest in railroads.

Mutual of Omaha Adds Cancer Plan

A new plan of health insur- ance designed to help protect in- dividuals and families against the high cost of medical care for can- cer is being introduced to this area in this week's Observer by Mutual of Omaha. Announce- ment of the new plan was made today by R. B. Walker, district manager of San Angelo, who is local representative for Mutual of Omaha and its affiliated life insurance company, United of Omaha. A full page ad in this newspaper gives the information about the new health insurance.

Walker reported that over 589,- 000 cases are currently diagnosed in the United States each year. "The total cost just for hospital care of these cases now averages more than $300,000,000 a year," he said.

Mutual of Omaha's new cancer policy, available immediately through their local agents, will pay policyholders $2,500 for di- agnosed cases of Leukemia and $1,000 for internal cancer. The policy also provides maximum benefits of up to $500 for lip cancer and up to $650 for skin cancer.

The new cancer policy is being offered exclusively through the Mutual of Omaha Southwest Di- vision to residents of Texas, Lou- isiana and Oklahoma. Mutual of Omaha, the largest individual health insurance company in the world, has paid a total of more than $170,150,000 in benefits to their policyholders in these three states.

Mr. and Mrs. Phil Lowder and baby of Maryneal and Mr. and Mrs. P. L. Lowder of Crane were weekend guests in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Orval White. They all attended the Friday night football game between the Steers and Roscoe.

STEERS TRAMPLE ROSCOE —

on 3rd and 10, Mike Post spotted the ball on the 25 yard line and booted it through the uprights for 3 points and the score now stood at 44-0.

Shortly after the kickoff the 3rd quarter ended.

Fourth Quarter

With an exchange of the football in the final quarter, Roscoe moved for their deepest penetration of the game, but attempting to pass, Randy Hall intercepted at the Steer 25 yard line.

They drove for a 1st at their 42, but they fumbled and Roscoe recovered on the 43 yard line. Roscoe drove again to a first at the Steer 32 and another at the Steer 11, but the Steers held here. With ground consuming yardage the Steers ran out the clock at the Steer 41 yard line. The final score stood 44-0.

As usual the line plays of the front men made the difference in the ball game. They swarmed all over the place like bees. A local area team has a defense called the Red Ant Defense. So I name the Steer defense as the Bumble Bee defense.

SOCIAL SECURITY FILM — said he had seen the film and "it gives the best explanation of Social Security I've ever seen." The color film shows the 1966 Miss America Pageant and is centered around a girl who was entered in the contest. It tells how Social Security helped the teen-ager to achievements beyond her fondest dreams.

Persons who need information about Social Security have a special invitation to attend.

"Oct. 17 at 7:45 p.m. is the time to find out what Social Security can do for you," a Lion spokesman said.

COLOR WORKSHOP SET

First meeting of the color workshop to be taught by Mrs. Fay C. Roe, Coke County Home Demonstration Agent, will be held Thursday, Oct. 19. The meeting will be held in the court house conference room at 1:30 p.m.

Registration for the class can be made by calling or writing to Mrs. Roe. A limited number will be accepted in the order of registration.

Lion Club Has Ladies Night

Twenty members of Robert Lee-Silver Lions Club and their wives met Tuesday night of last week in the recreation hall for a Ladies Night Celebration.

Lions Club Sweetheart Elaine Fikes entertained with a number of piano selections prior to the meal. President Furst Moore welcomed the following guests: Lions Charles Taylor, Horace Taylor and Leslie Rolls from Bronte Evening Lions Club; Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Burns, Mr. and Mrs. Allen Rowaldt and Upton Mathers.

Lion Charles Taylor furnished entertainment for the meeting. His pantomimes of well known numbers brought the house down with laughter. The local Lions expressed their thanks to Lion Taylor for giving the program.

It was announced that Lion Buster Farris was in the club's membership training program. A spokesman for the club said, "He will have to be present at a meeting, however, to receive his prize."

Dixon Is New WTU Auditor

Curtis M. Dixon, assistant district auditor in the district office of the West Texas Utilities Co. in Ballinger, has been named district auditor to replace the late O. L. (Doc) Huddleston. Dixon's promotion was announced today by District Manager R. E. Ruble of Ballinger.

Employed by WTU for the past 15 years, Dixon is a native of Ballinger and has spent the greater portion of his life in the Ballinger area. He is a 1945 graduate of Ballinger High School, attended both Hardin-Simmons University and Angelo State College.

He joined WTU in 1952 as an assistant district storekeeper in Ballinger and four months later was promoted to district storekeeper. He has been serving as assistant district auditor under the late Mr. Huddleston for the past 13 years.

The Dixons reside in Eden where Mrs. Dixon has served as cashier and bookkeeper for WTU for the past 16 years. They have one son, Curtis Waymond, who is a junior student in Ballinger High School. They plan to move to Ballinger the last of December.
