Superintendent Parker Proposes to Make Entire System of Hartford. Conn., Self Supporting.

George A. Parker, superintendent of parks of Hartford, Conn., proposes to make an entire city park system self supporting without in any way curtailing the freedom of its use by all citizens, but on the other hand increasing its usefulness. His experience started when he conducted a rethat by increasing the quality and quantity of the supplies, adding to the wages of waitress and employing a manager there would be no profit. He was surprised to find a profit of more than $1,200 the first year. Lighting and sandwiches at from one to seven cents, he produced returns paying for all the service rendered and in part for keeping the ice free from snow

A suggestion on a visit to a Kansas City park led Mr. Parker to plan a building nearly 400 feet in length for dances, moving pictures, bowling alley, refectory and auditorium, at a the politicians-knaves he calls them average time spent in recreation by a citizen is five hours, and determined The town meeting was held the that Hartford's 100,000 population spends $8,000 to $10,000 a day for its recreation, including theaters, games. saloons, lectures and churches; that the cost per recreation hour was two cents in Hartford, though in some cities it was as low as one cent If Hartford people should spend only one fifth of their recreation time in municipal recreation centers or 100. 000 hours at two cents an hour, the income could be $2,000 a day Refectory supplies cost 55 per cent. of the income, the service 25 per cent, and the profit is 20 per cent, or $400 a day, which is more than the estimated cost of maintenance of the entire park system, outside of these money mak ing features.

LIKE U. S. CAPITAL

Australia's Seat of Government Planned in Fields and Woods.

Plans Drawn by American Architect Are Accepted and Site Chosen is in Canberra, N. S. W.-Will Be City Beautiful.

Canberra, N. S. W .- Americans will take a keen interest in the construction of the federal capital city of the commowealth of Australia, because, like the federal capital city of the United States, it was completely planned before the foundation stone of the first permanent building was laid, and also because the architect whose designs have been accepted. Walter Burley Griffin, is an American, says the Boston Transcript. The choice of the Canberra district of New South Wales, as the site of the city, was made by the commonwealth government in 1910, and the invitation to architects embodying the conditions of completion was issued April 30, 1911. To give an idea of the magnitude of the task, it may be stated that the requirements for the consideration of the designers included the allocation of appropriate areas embracing sites not only for the house of parliament, residence of the governor general and the usual ministerial and administrative offices but places of public worship, mint, national art gallery and library, state house, printing office, government factories, university, technical college, city hall, general postoffice, museum, central railway station, railway marshaling yards, military barracks, criminal and police courts, jail, hospital, national theater, central power station, gas works, markets, stadium, parks and gardens, etc. It was a great work to design this model city, and Mr. Griffin may well be congratulated on his success in winning the opportunity to give Washington, D. C., a worthy sister in Canberra, N. S. W.

Why the Australian government should have decided to build the capital of the country in the southeast corner is not guite clear, but the site is certainly one that seems to invite a "city beautiful." The lay of the land, combining easy gradients with prominent hills of moderate height, will lend itself easily to the production of fine architectural and landscape effects. Canberra is just east of the Wagga Wagga district, and about 40 miles from the town of Yass. on the main line of the railroad between Sydney and Melbourne, and it is about 150 miles from Jervis bay, with which it is to be connected by a new railroad. The temporary Austrian Military school is the only up from the sub-soil into the seed bed building yet on the site, excepting a by capillarity, and therefore I argue few farmhouses, but now that the that the top soil acts as and should governor general has laid the founda be regarded as mulch for the sub-soil. tion stone the architectural develop ment of the commonwealth's permanent seat of government may be expected to progress rapidly. To a certain extent Australia imitates Canada in selecting a capital. Canada did not have to build Ottawa, from the ground up, but it converted the old "Bytown," a lumber station and shipping point into a seat of government. Queen Victoria made choice of Ottawa in the capacity of grand arbitrator, after Montreal, Quebec, Toronto and Kingsston had quarreled for the distinction of being the capital until any three of them were ready to unite against the fourth. Ottawa is now a beautiful city of 100,000 inhabitants, despite the fact that it remains simply thepolitical capital. So does Washington, for that matter, a still more beautiful city, with a population approximating 350,000. It seems to be the rule for Larmony in nations essentially federations that compromise between sections shall dictate the choice of a new site for their capitals.

DEFINITION OF DRY FARMING

Accumulation and Conservation o Moisture in Soil is Aim and Purpose of Arid Farmer.

(By E. R. PARSONS.) "Dry farming has often been defined as the conservation of moisture. A much like definition and a more accurate one would be the accumulation and conservation of moisture. We must acquire our moisture before we can conserve it, and unless we give due weight to each of these processes we cannot live up to the highest standard of dry farming.

"It is self-evident that in order to make use of the best form of mulch, local conditions must be given serious consideration. Some of the problems are as follows: (1) In a country where the precipitation is more or less evenly divided throughout the year, will the moisture be able to penetrate the mulch sufficiently to get down into the sub-soil? My answer based on experience is that the moisture at the end of the season is largely found in the soil under a mulch from two and a half to three inches in depth. (2) Will the mulch crust easily after a rainfall or the reverse? A furrowed surface will never crust or bake like a smooth one after a storm, the bottom of the furrow being much better than the top. (3) When high winds prevail will the mulch blow? The smoothest land blows the worst everywhere. If we could take the edge off the wind it amounts to the same thing as taking the edge off a razor-it cannot cut. (4) Will a crust form under the mulch in very dry weather, and if so. how can it be prevented? Every dry year a waii goes up from the shallow plowers and surface farmers as to combating this problem. There is only one remedy, deep-plowing. but not a preventive as nothing on earth can prevent this crust forming, provided the drouth last long enough. (5) In a country like California, which has a rainy and a wet season, what is the best type of mulch for conservation purposes after the rain has all fallen and a farmer faces the regular five months' drouth? The deeper and finer the mulch the better it conserves moisture when precipitation is no longer a factor. In such a country we find the best farmers using a fine mulch, even a dust mulch from six to eight inches deep. The evaporation from the sub-soil with a mulch of this kind is almost nil. (6) Is the top-soil or seed bed of a cultivated field a mulch to the sub-soil or does the sub-soil moisture move up freely with it? This is more a question of dry farm physics. In actual practice, agricultural books to the contrary notwithstanding. I have never been able in my thirty-five years of dry farm work to discover any capillary or film moisture moving

As a general rule on the dry farm all fields will yield more when plowed and fallowed ahead of planting time if only for a few weeks or a month. A farmer who does this systematically will find that he can altogether dispense with a packer for the soil after being settled by a good rain or two is in much better physical condition for the crop than when artificially taxed."

BENEFITS OF DEEP PLOWING

Where Work Is Done in Shallow Method Mulch Becomes Dry, and Then Inevitable Crust Forms.

Supposing that a man plow six or seven inches, his mulch, which should be about three inches, becomes dry, then the inevitable crust forms, one or two inches thick; how much will he have left for his crop? About one ir.ch. Is it any wonder the crop dries out? On the other hand, if he plows ten to twelve inches deep, he will have six inches of soil left for his crop before coming to the hardpan. After six or eight weeks' drought this crop will have as much dirt to grow on as the shallow plower gives his crops at the

Packing or rolling increases the conductivity, but reduces the moisture holding capacity of land for water, and promotes the formation of a crust in clay soils. Every inch the drought longer it takes to dry out the succeed. ground, ing inch; the top inch may dry out in a few days, but it takes months to even one-inch plowing, we have a very good chance to weather any drought Traction Engine Sweepstake Premium Won by Henry Holmes of Alta. -Gave Seed Away.

At the Seventh International Dry-Farming congress in October, the competition for the $2,500 traction engine sweepstake premium for the best bushel of hard wheat was most interesting, with 183 competing. The winner was Henry Holmes of Raymond. Alta., a hard working farmer who farms his own farm. He sold 400 bushels of his Marquis seed wheat for $4 a bushel and was offered $1,000 for the winning bushel, but declined to accept it, and distributed it gratis in small lots among the agriculturists, grain growers and government representatives

During the past few years Western Canada grains—wheat, oats, barley and flax-have been in competition with grains from all other countries, and in every case their superiority has been pelvic catarrh, inflammation or ulcera- shown. It is not only in oats, but it is in wheat, in barley and in flax, that Canada more than holds its own, when placed side by side with grains from other parts.

Mixed farming is taking a strong hold not only in those parts of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, which up to the present have been devoted solely to grain growing, but also price. #### CANADA WINS AGAIN

THE COLORADO SILVER TROPHY FOR OATS WON A SECOND TIME BY CANADA.

The most recent achievement of Canada's West is winning for the second time the magnificent $1,500 silver trophy awarded by the State of Colorado for the best peck of oats. At Columbus, Ohio, in 1911, J. C. Hill & Sons of Lloydminster, Saskatchewan, placed a peck of oats grown on their farm in competition, with oats from every part of the world. The judges had no difficulty in deciding, and the award was given to the Saskatchewan grown oats. In 1912, the Corn Exposition had no exhibition, and our Canadian friends, although ready for a second contest had no opportunity. In 1913, the exhibition of the Society was held at Columbus, S. C., and it is said of it that it was one of the best yet held. At this exhibition, which comprised corn and all the smaller grains, Hill & Sons of Lloydminster had on exhibition for the contest another peck of oats grown on their Saskatchewan farm, in 1912. There was no trouble for the judges, no time necessarily lost in reaching a decision, Hill & Sons won, and for the second time their name will appear on the crest of the cup. The third space will doubtless be occupied by their name. and then this splendid trophy will be

This Year Book is more than a mere catalogue of Stark nursery products, it is a practical, easy to understand text book for the guidance of the man who plants trees. Our own experience of nearly 100 years, the reports of experiment stations and the opinions of planters from all sections are condensed and teproduced for the benefit of busy people. An encyclopedia of orchard information, containing full size color illustrations of gloriously tinted fruits and many photographic reproductions in black and white; also information on many subjects in which the orchardist is interested.

Hundreds of varieties of apples, pears, peach, plum, cherry, apricot, qu'ace, grape and all small fruits are described; weaknesses of each variety are point d out and good points are explained. We feel that planters should know both. Those interested in growing fruits or flowers or shrubs or shade trees will find this book of inestimable value; totally different from the average nurseryman's publications. It is a book you will keep for reference, and one on which you can depend as being absolutely accurate. Write today for your copy.

hogs. The following article was assessed with a penalty of 25 clipped from the State Line per cent as provided by law. Tribune at Farwell and tells of cattle raisers. We have here at our hand several clippings from other papers in regard to fine hogs, better horses and high priced cattle. All of these articles were published in the country adjacent to our dry land farms. We keep publishing one or two of these each week from other papers and are getting more than tired of doing so. Next week we want to puplish a like article from Portales or at least from Roosevelt county. If you know of some good deals that have been made along the line of cattle, some extra fine stock or something of the kind send it in. Portales and Roosevelt county have them but are hiding their lights under a bushel. No place, any where, can beat us for anything that we even pretend to raise and we want to give them some specific facts along the line.

More fat cattle have come out of the panhandle this winter than ever before, and of course they have sold at record prices. Chas. Heck, of Tulia, had a ship ment in Kansas City, March 18th. which included 18 yearlings, 671 pounds each, $8.40, and 9 cows, 1013 pounds average, at $7.00 per hundred pounds. On March 27th. M. L. Steel, of Gloom, sold 100 head of 1225 pound steers in Kansas City, at at $8.25 per hundred pounds. Increase in cattle feeding in the Panhandle has been rapid since the introduction of the silo, which permits of storing crops inches apart. One will get five of benefit from them, nearly half of which feeding value was formerly dissipated to the winds. Mr. Steel, whose shipment is referred to here, erected a 300 ton capacity silo last year, which he filled with kaffir corn. He fed the steers mentioned for 100 days, giving them 40 pounds of silage and 4 pounds of cotton seed meal, and a little ground milo maze per day. The steers gained 225 pounds each in the 100 days of feeding. Speaking of the possibilities of the silo, Mr. Steel said, when in Kansas City, "So well did this experiment turn out that I will build more silos this season, and next fall will have 1200 tons of the feed on my ranch. This little experiment plainly shows how we can fatten and finish our cat tle right at home, and do it at less expense than it can be done up here in the corn belt.". State Line Tribune.

Major McDonald, commanding an army post near Fort Dodge, seeks a man to intercept his daughter, Molly, who is headed for the post. An Indian outbreak is threatened. "Brick" Hamlin, a sergeant who had just arrived with measages to McDonald, volunteers for the mission and starts alone. Molly arrives at Fort Ripley two days ahead of schedule. She decides to push on to Fort Dodge by stage in company with "Sulfer Bill" Moylan. Gonzales, a gambler, is also a passenger. Hamlin meets the stage with stories of depredations committed by the Indians. It is decided to return to Ripley. The driver deserts the stage when Indians appear. The Indians are twice repulsed in attack on the stage by Hamlin, Moylan and Gonzales. The latter is killed. Moylan is killed in next attack. Indians retire, and Hamlin and Molly wait for the next move. They plan to attempt escape in the darkness by way of a guily. Molly is wounded.

He could feel her breathing, and realized the danger of her return to consciousness. If she should be frightened and cry out, their fate would be sealed. Yet he must accept the chance, now that he knew the way to be clear. He held her tightly in both arms, his revolver thrust back into its holster. Bending as low as he could with his burden, feeling carefully through the darkness before advancing a foot, he moved steadily forward. Not until then did he dare to breathe naturally or to stand unright; but no the gully, bending to the right, led away from danger, every step gained adding to their safety. He was confident now, full of his old audacity, yet awake to every trick of plainscraft. The girl's head rested against his shoulder, and he bent his cheek to hers, feeling its warmth. The touch of his unshaven beard pricked her into semi-consciousness, and she spoke so loud that it gave him a thrill of apprehension. He dared not run in the darkness for fear of stumbling, yet moved with greater swiftness, until the depression ended at the river Here, under the protection of the bank. What now? Which way should they turn? He had accomplished all he had planned for himself back there in the coach, but now he became aware of other problems awaiting solution. In less than an hour it would be daylight; he almost imagined it was lighter already over yonder in the east. With the first dawn those watchful Indians, creeping cautiously closer, would discover the stage deserted, and would be on their trail. And they had left a trail-easily followed. Perhaps he hard, dry ground might confuse hose savage trackers, but they would cour the open country between bluff and river, and find the dead warrior in he gully. That would tell the story. o go west, along the edge of the lver, wading in the water, would be iseless precaution; such a trick would be suspected at once, and there was possibility of rescue from that diection. They might as well walk pen-eyed into a trap. There was but ne hope, one opportunity—to cross he stream before dawn came and in quicksand, or the plunging into ide among those shifting sand-dunes some unseen hole, where the sudden the opposite shore. "Then there may be holes out there in the bottom. I don't mind those so much, although these cavalry boots are no help in swimming." "I can swim."

"Hardly in your clothes; but I am glad to know it, nevertheless. You could keep afloat at least, and the holes are never very large. Are you ready now?" She gave him her hands and stood up. The Sergeant drew in a long breath and transferred the haversack to her shoulder. "We'll try and keep that from getting soaked, if we can," he explained. There is no hotel over in those sandhills. Now hold on tight." He swung her easily to his broad shoulder, clasping her slender figure closely with one arm. "That's it! Now get a firm grip. I'll carry you all right."

To the girl, that passage was never more than a dim memory. Still partially dazed from the severe blow on her head, she closed her eyes as Hamlin stepped cautiously down into the stream and clung to him desperately, expecting each moment to be flung forward into the water. But the Sergeant's mind was upon his work, and every detail of the struggle left its impress on his memory. He saw the dark sweep of the water, barely visible in the gleam of those few stars unobscured by cloud, and felt the sluggish flow against his legs as he moved. The bottom was soft, yet his feet did not sink deeply, although it was rather difficult wading. However, the clay gave him more confidence than sand underfoot, and there was less depth of water even than he had anticipated. He was wet only to the thighs when he toiled up on to the low spit of sand. and put the girl down a moment to catch a fresh breath and examine the broader stretch of water ahead. They his night's experience, to learn more could see both shores now that which they had just left, a black, lumping, dim outline. Except for the lapping of the water at their feet, all was deathly still. Even the Indian fire had died out, and it was hard to conceive she implored swiftly. His groping feet touched the edge of a hole, and he turned, facing the current, tracing his way carefully until he found a passage on solid bottom. There was a sand-dune just beyond and he seated himself and leaned against it.

"I am beginning to breathe easier already," he explained. "Sit down here, Miss McDonald. We are safe enough now in this darkness." "You are all wet, soaking wet."

"That is nothing; the sand is warm yet from yesterday's sun, and my clothes will dry fast enough. It is beginning to grow light in the east."

The faces of both turned in that direction where appeared the first twilight approach of dawn, Aiready were visible the dark lines of the opposite shore, across the gleam of water, and beyond appeared the dim outline of the higher bluffs. "I know.

"It wasn't myself," he went on doggedly, "but it was the knowledge of having to take care of you. That was what made me worry; that, and knowing a single misstep, the slightest noise, would bring those devils on us, where I couldn't fight, where there was just one thing I could do."

There was silence, her hands pressed to her face, her eyes fixed on him. Then she questioned him soberly.

"You mean, kill me?" "Sure," he answered simply, without looking around; "I would have had to do it—just as though you were a sister of mine."

Her hands reached out and clasped his, and he glanced aside at her face, seeing it clearly. "I-I thought you would," she said, her voice trembling. "I-I was going to ask you once before I was hurt, but-but I couldn't, and somehow I trusted you from the first, when you got in." She hesitated, and then asked: "How did you know I was Molly McDonald? You never asked."

The Sergeant's eyes smiled, turning away from her face to stare out across the river.

"Because I had seen your picture." "My picture? But you told w you law

KUKUHUHUS LITTLE KNOWN

Mysterious Race Who Live in New Guinea, Refuse to Meet Europeans in Their Camps.

London.-Dr. Bruno Beheim gives the following description of the mysterious and little known race of the Kukuhuhus of New Guinea: The Kukuhuhus live in a part of English territory through which runs the River Qukheamu and which is situated near the German boundary. This territory is looked upon by the said race as their inalienable birthright, and every usurper is regarded with hostile eyes. No European has been able to meet the Kukuhuhus in their dwelling places. Prospectors and English officials have made repeated attempts to approach them, but their camps were invariably found empty, often with the camp fires still burning.

Many a time have Europeans left savage watchers without. She lifted presents highly prized by other natives, such as corals, red cloth, looking glasses, axes, etc., in the deserted camps, in the hope of establishing friendly relations with these people. But on returning to the same places a few day or a few weeks later, almuch longer. Hard as I have worked, though the camp showed recent traces of occupation, such as live cinders and fresh footprints, the goods intended for presents remained untouched where they had been placed. Other races of New Guinea fear the Kukuhuhus as poison. They have learned to their cost what it means to cross the boundary. Some disappear for all time, while others are found dead, thrust through with spear wounds. The Kukuhuhus, however, do a bartering trade with other natives in the following way: The latter bring salt, earthenware, dried fish, etc., and deposit them in a certain indicated place. They then retire for a few hours, being notified to do so by a curious cry from the distance. The timid mountain dwellers then descend to view the goods offered for sale. If they want them they put down other goods, such as skins, feathers and other jungle produce next to those articles wanted by them. Then they retire in turn, and when the way seems clear the coast dwellers approach again. If the latter are satisfied with what is offered in exchange they take the goods put down by the mountain people and go away; if not satisfied they retire again as before with empty hands. These

CARDUI WORKED LIKE A CHARM

After Operation Failed to Help, Cardui Worked Like a Charm.

Jonesville, S. C .- "I suffered with womanly trouble," writes Mrs. J. S. Kendrick, in a letter from this place, "and at times, I could not bear to stand on my feet. The doctor said I would never be any better, and that I would G. H. Atkerson & Co., supplies have to have an operation, or I would have a cancer.

I went to the hospital, and they operated on me, but I got no better. They said medicines would do me no good, and I thought I would have to die. At last I tried Cardui, and began to improve, so I continued using it. Now, I am well, and can do my own work. I don't feel any pains Cardui worked like a charm."

There must be merit in this purely vegetable, tonic remedy, for women-Cardui-for it has been in successful use for more than 50 years, for the treatment of womanly weakness and
