Governor McDonald Tells Democrats Real Issues of Campaign in His Key Note Speech

Neither Bursum Nor Hubbell Can Side- step the Records of Their Own Official Acts and He Flagellates Them Unmercifully with That Part of the Record Not Yet Destroyed

In his keynote speech as temporary chairman of the Democratic state convention at Santa Fe, Governor William C. McDonald declared that the two men at the head of the Republican state ticket—Frank A. Hubbell and H. O. Bursum—must stand on the records that they have made in public service, and submit to the judgment of the people on their past performances.

It was not necessary to go to the Democratic records, he said, but simply to the records of their removal from responsible positions by Republican executives.

"I am willing," he asserted, "in the interests of a gentlemanly campaign and for the purpose of preventing mud slinging, to cast over these two gentlemen the mantle of charity to protect the good name of the state of New Mexico, and hold them only responsible to the written record so far as it is now available."

"I wish to say," the governor said, "that in a general way I am not in favor of abuse and vilification, but I am in favor of holding a man responsible to the record that he may have made."

Referring to Bursum, and characterizing him as a "supreme boss" in his own county, Governor McDonald declared that if the people will take into consideration the accomplishments of the local administration in that county "they certainly will not entrust the larger responsibilities of state government to his tender mercies."

With direct reference to Bursum's speech of acceptance before the Republican state convention, at the opening of his address, the governor said: "What I shall say to you about state affairs will not be reckless statements from hearsay for political purposes, but will be borne out by the records that are available for inspection, as none of them has been lost or destroyed."

Governor McDonald's speech was an able review of Democratic accomplishments in the nation and in the state. His speech, in full, follows:

THE SPEECH IN FULL

To say that I thank you and that I highly appreciate this mark of distinction is expressing but mildly my feelings at the beginning of the deliberations of this assembly never before equaled in the history of New Mexico in number or importance of a meeting of this kind.

I have not sufficient pride of opinion to justify a belief that I shall be able to rise to the importance of the occasion. It is not natural for me to explain or apologize but I think that I owe it to myself, to you and our party to say that not until after three o'clock yesterday did I have the least intimation that I should attempt to speak to you at this time.

What I shall say to you about state affairs will not be reckless statements from hearsay for political purposes but will be borne out by the records that are available for inspection as none of them have been lost or destroyed.

We are proud of the performance of the national Democratic administration and are proud to be enrolled as the friends of the great man who has steered the ship of state so ably and peacefully for three and a half years. We are not resting our case on vague promises or begging the question on minor errors that are inevitable in the accomplishment of any great undertaking.

Americanism is not the trade mark or property of a political party but is the essence of citizenship of every true American citizen. To say that one man or one party is the exponent of real Americanism more than another is a pretense whose correctness can only be demonstrated by a poll of the individual citizens composing the rank and file of that party.

During the administration of Woodrow Wilson more constructive beneficial legislation has been placed upon the statute books of the nation by far than during the past two generations for a similar time. The critics in New Mexico of the tariff legislation know so little of its merits, or its operation that they are not in a position to speak intelligently or advisedly as to its effect upon the country, either past or future. All statements concerning this are qualified by the "if" or "but" in such a manner as to indicate that everything is contingent upon a possibility. We were told that the Democrats would take the tariff off of wool, hide and live stock and ruin those industries in the state of New Mexico. Now, what has the result been? This is practical and something that we can readily understand. Prices on all of these products today are higher than you ever known them before. Why is it? What has caused it? Whose judgement was at fault? These are practical questions; the answers are before us in the concrete results for those who have been the beneficiaries of the unparalleled prosperity that we have enjoyed in our state under the Democratic administration.

The Republicans do not tell us anything now about the "full dinner pail." They have no songs of disaster. In the midst of such prosperity as was never known before, they can only say "if so and so" or "but so and so" and leave you to guess at the remainder of what might have happened if something else never had happened.

The federal reserve act is admitted today to be one of the greatest pieces of legislation ever enacted in this country. Much talk had been had concerning our banking legislation but no one had had the vigor or determination to take this up in an intelligent manner for the benefit of all the people in the country. As a result of this law we were enabled to avoid a panic under conditions more favorable for disaster than ever before existed in this country.

The trade commission bill admittedly enacted in the interest of the people for the purpose of curtailing and regulating the activities of the conscienceless corporations for the exploitation of the people. The income tax system has been written into our statutes. The most just and reasonable provision for revenue, except the inheritance tax, that has ever been provided; notwithstanding the fact that it was opposed by Charles Evans Hughes, the only governor of any state in the United States who did this, and who is now the candidate of the Republican party for president of the United States. But it is needless to dwell upon the specific acts of this administration, as they are well known and have been adopted and approved, nearly all of them, not only by the Democrats but by the Progressives and the Republicans in the Congress of the United States.

As an illustration of this I will mention the rural credits bill recently passed, opposed by the Republican national convention but approved by all but five Republicans in the senate and ten Republicans in the house of representatives of the national Congress.

To day the whole nation is being organized, not only in the interest of the laborer but in the interest of the employer, and thousands of offices are in existence for the purpose of bringing the employer and laborer in touch to the end that industry may thrive successfully and that the laborer may obtain the employment waiting for him no matter in what part of the country it may be found. This is a real act of humanity which has been undertaken successfully under the Democratic administration after having been neglected for years under Republican administrations; the law was enacted years before.

A remarkable omission from the platform of the Republican party of New Mexico and from the keynote speech of the arch friend of Mexico and the United States was in failing to touch at all upon the only issue as he has admitted, which is now before the people of the United States for consideration and settlement in the present campaign. Why was this? What was the reason? Is it because we are too near the border of Mexico, where people are familiar with conditions and where war looms larger with all its attendant horrors than it does to those far distant who are not so likely to be called upon to fight for their country which they boast of loving so well?

Preparedness in the right way in every direction is being undertaken in such manner as is justified at the present time and will obtain the support of the American people. The United States is not in favor of a large standing army, but does believe in a navy equal to any emergency, and recent legislation is paving the way for such a navy. Despite all the criticism of those who would deceive or do not know about what they are talking, Admiral Dewey has recently said that the navy is in far better condition, than ever before known; and I state on the same authority that we fell from second place between the years 1906 and 1909, due to a great extent to the failure of the great patriot and demagogue of today who seems to be the inspiration of Mr. Hughes in his campaign.

What has been done fore-shadows what is yet to be accomplished under the guidance of Woodrow Wilson and emphasizes the importance of electing a senate and house of representatives in harmony with the purpose of the administration. I undertake to say that the banking interests of New Mexico are safer and sounder at the present time than ever before in the history of the state or territory. Three times I had to ask for legislation to enable proper supervision of banks before it was obtained in the legislature of 1915. And this is evidenced in my message to the 1915 legislature as follows: "In my message to the second session of the first legislature I said: 'At your first session I stated the situation as it seemed to me to exist relative to state banks and their management under laws as then existing. During that session there was introduced what I believe to be a complete, safe and satisfactory bill, practically covering the ground as treated in my former message. I would restate what I recommended at that time and urge the necessity of the enactment of the bill that you then had before you or something similar that would meet the demand and provide safety and security for both investors and depositors in all banks organized under the authority and by virtue of the laws of this state.' I now repeat and emphasize this statement and earnestly urge you to take prompt action for safeguarding the interests of our people as they are related to the banking business of the state." Much has been said about the failure of the First State bank of Las Cruces. Reckless statements have been made regardless of the truth, charging that this was a political bank, and that I was negligent after having known that the bank was insolvent. That this bank was ever used for the benefit of the Democratic party, I challenge anyone to prove, and I deny as absolutely false the statement that I ever knew at any time prior to the closing of the bank that it was in an insolvent condition. The records and reports are available for the proof of the truthfulness of this statement.

The public funds in that bank were secured by a good and sufficient bond drawn and approved by the office of the attorney general, and in a suit against the surety company he has been able to obtain a judgment which he tells me, and I have every reason to believe, will be collected in due time.

As a matter of fact what is called the Democratic state administration has been only in part Democratic. Half of the officers and two-thirds of the law making body have been under the control of the same Republican party with the same Republican leaders and bosses that are now so free to criticize what could not be accomplished by reason of the determination of those same political bosses to cripple the state administration and make it impossible, so far as they were able, to accomplish anything for the benefit of the people concerning whose interests they are so anxious at the present time.

We are proud of what has been accomplished in road work for this state during the last four and one-half years. Now practically every part of the state is connected up in a manner that enables automobiles to travel without any great inconvenience. We believe in a fourfold system of public highways, federal, state, county and local or district. We have taken the position, as stated in my last message to the state legislature: "The members of this commission have assumed that such expenditures ought generally to be made only upon real state highways, that is, upon roads for the general benefit of the state, being the main arteries of travel throughout the state for the benefit of all people so far as practicable." We stand by this position so far as the expenditure of state funds is concerned, but we believe in local bond issues and tax levies for roads that are of interest generally to the counties and to the local districts wherein they are needed. The idea that state funds should be divided up for the benefit of every township in the state would result in very little being accomplished either for the general or local benefit and is contrary in my opinion to the desire of the people in making state levies for state highways. We challenge comparison of educational conditions in New Mexico when it became a state and now in the year 1916, knowing that even the most casual investigation will demonstrate to any intelligent unprejudiced mind that the advancement in our public schools and state institutions has been most remarkable. In the development of the public schools tremendous strides have been looking to the education of all the people; and our state institutions have made such progress as to make their usefulness far beyond what many years work has accomplished under former administrations. I will refer only to the University of New Mexico and ask that anyone with a real desire for a knowledge of conditions now existing may make such investigation as may be necessary to prove to any one that this institution is progressive upon a proper basis and serving the interest of the people to the best advantage; and this will serve to illustrate what the conditions are in all of the educational institutions.

What has been said in regard to educational institutions will apply with equal force to the state institutions. In this connection I will refer to but one of these, the state penitentiary, and for comparison I would like to go back something like a little over ten years and compare with a former administration, for the purpose of demonstrating to the people of this state the change under the present from that administration, notwithstanding the great increase in the population and the increase in the price of everything that is purchased for the institution. The appropriation for its maintenance is the same as it was then and we have no deficiencies at the present time to contend with. I would like it if every citizen of the state could visit that institution, and particularly those who were familiar with its management in the past, for the purpose of making a comparison and satisfying themselves as to the benefits derived from an honest, economical and energetic administration of the institution under the supervision of a competent, honest and upright superintendent.

I believe that someone has mentioned the charge that the executive of the state was responsible for the failure of co-operation between that branch of the government and the legislative. Was there any real desire for co-operation upon the part of the gentlemen who are now so free with their criticisms, when they deliberately, with malice aforethought, threw out four regularly elected members of the house of representatives in order to obtain a two-thirds majority for the purpose of attempting to ride roughshod over any check that the executive might see fit to impose upon their reckless conduct. I do not care to go into detail as to the legislation which was vetoed, only to say that nearly all these vetoes were imposed for the purpose of preventing useless and unreasonable expenditures of public funds. The record of that legislature and the veto messages which were the result of attempts to pass unjustified legislation will be before the people for their consideration and judgment during the pending campaign.

In my message to the last state legislature I said: "I now recommend a state tax commission to assume all the duties formerly performed by the board of equalization, provided with the authority and means which were lacking for that board. This commission should have general supervision over the assessment and collection of all taxes in the state for all purposes whatsoever." When that message was read, so far as I now remember, every prominent Republican

This conflict between the railroads and their employes has served at least one good purpose. It has convinced the ultimate goats (the public at large) that laws must be enacted to prevent a recurrence of conflicts in the future which have the possibility of a paralysis of the commercial interests of the country. Those laws should be so drastic in their nature as to force a course of moderation on both sides to the controversy. The people have rights as well as the railroads and their employes.

Governor McDonald's Speech

member of that state legislature came and shook my hand and said he was with me in the recommendations I made in regard to taxation; and what did we get? An emasculated tax law with neither the means nor the authority to accomplish what the people were so sorely in need of for fixing the burden of taxation upon all the property in the state of New Mexico. There was not one word in regard to the collection of taxes, though the Republicans platform recently adopted by the party, declares that "inequality in the collection of taxes is a great evil as inequality in the assessment of taxes." Notwithstanding the failure of that party with two-thirds majority of the legislature to enact such legislation as should be beneficial to the people of this state, they now have the hardihood to say that "we pledge ourselves to remedy these evils," which they had the opportunity to remedy and failed.

The Democratic party, with the limited power under its administration, has not had the power to give the people things that they needed, though it has made a consistent and determined effort so far as lay in its power to accomplish desirable purposes and has succeeded in doing this.

In the Republican platform is a declaration for the submission to the people of the question of prohibition in the state of New Mexico. We have a right to believe that this promise has been made not with the intention of carrying it out, but for the purpose of hoodwinking and deceiving the people whom they have deceived in the same manner in the past. They had the opportunity to pass the proper resolution for the submission of this question and had led the people to believe that this would be done, but when the opportunity came, they reversed themselves and stubbornly refused to report out of the committee the resolution which would have accomplished this purpose.

These are instances of the general conduct of this party under control of the leaders who have directed its activities in the past and are still in the saddle. Talk of constructive legislation! What have we had in the past? What have we to expect in the future from these same men who have failed to make good their promises and have been satisfied with good pretensions.

When New Mexico was called upon for national defense and the protection of our border, this state was the first to respond, and today we have upon the border a regiment of infantry second to none and a battery of artillery better than any except one in the National Guard of the United States.

Recommendations have been made three times for the improvement of our election laws and the protection of the franchise without obtaining any remedial legislation whatever from the party that was in power in the legislative bodies. It is generally admitted that our laws are archaic and should be modified and improved in order that the secrecy and purity of the ballot may be maintained. But the only party that had the power to give us this relief has failed, not only to give this, but to make any attempt whatsoever to do so.

Let us organize for the campaign, organize companies, regiments and dividends and make one great army battling for the right. Let us forget personal and individual interests and seek only for the general welfare and the best interests of the whole state by the nomination of such men as by their character and conduct insure safety and security for the interests entrusted to their care. It requires character, and no reputation not based upon the elements of rectitude, sincerity and honesty can efficiently serve those who would entrust to them the functions of the government.

Let us look at the nominations about to be made in the same manner as we would if recommending men for actual service for friends who were depending upon our judgment to give them men competent and worthy to perform the tasks required of them and who could not be removed or discharged for a period of two years. We must understand that while the people by their suffrage will do honor to the men whom they select at the same time they are granting a privilege to these men and have a right to demand the service that is promised to them by the platforms of the political parties. All the promises that can be made amount to naught unless they are given in good faith and the exponents of those promises in the persons of men nominated here are an assurance that the confidence of the people will not be betrayed and that we can trust to the good faith of those who are selected to execute their will in such a manner as will redound to the honor of the officers and the upbuilding of the state and the advancement of her people.

In the person of one of the candidates at least you have a fit exponent of the pretensions the Republican party and a real prototype of the nominal leader who is today going about the country making reckless statements not verified by the records and criticising thoughtlessly as it appears acts of those in authority of which he has little appreciation.

In a recent speech in the city of Santa Fe we heard something of gentlemanly campaign, and the first speech of that campaign, so far as I know, was a remarkable illustration of the idea of the gentleman who made it as to what a gentlemanly campaign ought to be. I wish to say now that in a general way I am not in favor of abuse and vilification but I am in favor of holding a man responsible to the record that he may have made.

At the head of the Republican ticket you have a man who has made a record in the state of New Mexico and that record is now available for the scrutiny of the people whose suffrage he is soliciting. We do not have to go to the Democratic records, but we will go to the record of the removal of a Republican from a county office by a Republican governor and upon that record he must stand even unto the present day. And next to him we have another man who has made a record and upon that record he must stand and be judged by the people of the State of New Mexico. He also is a Republican official who was removed from a responsible office by a Republican governor and that record is available and upon that record he will be judged by the people whose suffrage he is soliciting. Outside of these records I am not inclined to say very much. One of these men has been a boss in one county and the other a supreme boss in his own county, and the results of the administration of government in that county are open for inspection. If the people, taking into consideration the accomplishments of the local administration in that county and city where he lives, will judge intelligently they certainly will not entrust the larger responsibilities of state government to his tender mercies.

I am willing, in the interest of a gentlemanly campaign and for the purpose of preventing mudslinging, to cast over these two gentlemen the mantle of charity to protect the good name of the State of New Mexico and hold them only responsible to the written record so far as it is now available.

This convention places upon the delegates who compose it a responsibility that cannot be shifted evaded or avoided. Upon the wisdom displayed here in the selection of men placed before the people for the various offices for their approval the history of the immediate future of this state will depend, and the results may be more far-reaching than we at the present time can understand. We shall be judged by the strength of the position that we take and the men whom we advance as the exponents of the party in which we believe, and not by the weakness or deficiency of those who are opposing. Personal ambitions ought to be subordinated to the good of the party and the welfare of the whole state. If we are to prove ourselves worthy of the history and tradition of the organization which we claim to serve and honor, we ought to be very careful in the selection of the men whom we present as the representatives of that party. If we believe as we ought in the transcendent ability and integrity of the man who is today not only at the head of the Democratic party, but of the affairs of the nation, we should act in such a manner as not to detract one iota from the strength of his position and the confidence of the people in the purpose and performance of the administration of national affairs for which he is responsible.

In your hands rests the welfare of the party, and of the state, and to some extent that of the United States.
