WHAT NEW MEXICO HAS.

Coveñas Mills Tells of Some of the Many Advantages to be Found in this Great Commonwealth in the Southwest.

BY WM. J. MILLS.
Santa Fe, Feb. 2.—I take great pleasure in writing for the Tribune a short article on the land movement in New Mexico in the past few years. I also give you my views as to what the future holds out for the settlers and residents in this territory.

New Mexico is situated on a high plateau, the continental divide being located in the western part of this territory. Owing to the great size of New Mexico, it contains 122,580 square miles, and the radical differences in the elevation of various parts of the territory, almost every crop except citrus and tropical fruits can be grown within our borders.

DEVELOPMENT JUST BEGUN.
For many years the territory was held back in its development for lack of transportation facilities, and also on account of the large Spanish and Mexican land grants which cover many parts of its most fertile areas, so that today our agricultural development is only in its infancy. Now that the constitution for the new state has been adopted by the people at the election held on the 21st day of January, which assures us that we will soon be admitted to the sisterhood of states, New Mexico is bound to advance rapidly in material wealth.

DEVELOPMENTS IN AGRICULTURE.
In agriculture, upon which the wealth of a nation is primarily based, great developments are now being made. So-called dry farming is being practiced in many parts of the territory, and where the rainfall is sufficient, as is usually the case in the mountain valleys and in the northern part of the territory, it bids fair to be a success; but after all our great advance in agriculture must come through lands which are irrigated. Large irrigation projects are now under way in almost every county in the territory. The greatest irrigation work now in progress in New Mexico is the Elephant Butte dam, situated in the eastern part of Sierra county, in the Rio Grande valley.

At this point the national government is expending some $3,000,000 or $4,000,000 with a view to damming the Rio Grande and making the largest artificial body of water in the world. It is proposed from this dam to irrigate some 180,000 acres of land 10,000 acres of which are in this territory. The soil of the Rio Grande valley is as rich as can be found anywhere in the world and produces large crops of grapes, peaches and nearly all the fruits raised in the temperate zone.

Great quantities of cantaloupes are grown here, which have as fine a flavor as the celebrated cantaloupe grown at Rocky Ford in Colorado. Five crops of alfalfa are cut yearly, and each acre of land when properly cared for will raise eight tons of alfalfa annually. Alfalfa commands a ready sale at high prices. Raw lands in the Rio Grande valley ten or twelve years ago could be bought at a nominal figure of say $2.50 and $5 an acre. Today this same land is selling from $50 to $100 an acre, and when the Elephant Butte dam is finished it is confidently predicted and expected that the improved lands will sell as high as from $300 to $400 an acre.

Near Deming, in Luna county, and Portales in Roosevelt county shallow water has been found in unending quantities. This water is being pumped at Portales, at least, by a central plant, and many thousands of acres are being brought under cultivation. Ten or twelve years ago the land around Deming and Portales could have been homesteaded from the government, while today the fortunate people who own it are holding it at a price of many dollars an acre.

In the Pecos valley, from just north of Roswell for a distance of sixty-five miles south, is the artesian belt of the territory. A few years ago this was a howling wilderness and all of this land could have been homesteaded from the government. Today there are upwards of 700 flowing artesian wells in this valley and lands are selling at high prices. Just below Roswell the apple orchard of the late J. J. Hagerman which contains upwards of 110,000 trees is now being cut up into small parcels and sold, I am credibly informed, at a price of $500 an acre.

In Gaudalupe, San Miguel, and Colfax counties large irrigation enterprises are now in process of construction, and land under the ditches covered by these enterprises, which a short time ago could have been had almost for the asking, are now selling for $100 an acre and upward. It is expected to raise on these lands large quantities of fruit, alfalfa, oats, and other crops of a similar nature.

FORMER GRANARY OF NEW MEX.
This county was formerly the granary of New Mexico. It is a beautiful valley and one of the best watered valleys in the territory. Before the advent of the large crops of wheat were raised in this county, but owing to the lack of transportation, there being no railroads at the present time traversing the center of the county, much of this land has gone out of cultivation.

San Juan county, in the northwest part of this territory, probably contains more water than any other county in the territory. Companies have been formed to build dams and ditches so that the waters in the rivers may be brought upon the land. This county has only one railroad in it at the present time but more are bound to come in a comparatively short time. Apples raised in this county rival those raised in Grand Junction, Colo.

Agriculture in New Mexico is today in its infancy, and I venture to predict that ten years from now the value of agricultural products of this territory will have quintupled and that we will be exporting much grain. Today we export trainloads of apples, cantaloupes, and alfalfa. So long as a serious panic does not overtake the county, values in the territory where lands are selected with judgment are bound to increase.

GOOD PLACE FOR SMALL FARMER.

This is not a country where I would advise people without capital to come, but any one who has money to buy say from 20 to 40 acres of land under a good ir-

Plainview To Have Irrigation Show

The Herald is in receipt of an invitation to attend a big water carnival and irrigation conference to be held at Plainview, Texas, Feb. 20-25, the courtesy coming through our old friend and booster Don H. Biggers, who is now secretary of the Plainview Commercial Club. The manner in which the invitation is couched is characteristic of Mr. Biggers, who, by-the-way is also a newspaper man of considerable note in the Lone Star State, for example he says: "If you can possibly attend, do so, and be sure to advise me what day you will be here, in order that proper arrangements may be made for your entertainment, particularly in the matter of securing rooms and board, which will cost you nothing." This kind of an invitation strikes the tender chord in the heart of the average editor, and we declare now that if we were not so infernal busy "doing nothing" we would certainly be there and witness the demonstration of this newly discovered irrigation field. That Plainview bunch will not be long in receiving the praises of their oasis in the bud, for they are a lively lot and are already on the track for the sugar beet industry.

Reduced rates have been granted by the Santa Fe for this occasion, and Portales people generally may consider themselves invited.

Irrigation system can certainly raise crops enough to live well, educate and bring up his family in a proper manner, lay up a nest egg for his old days, and be independent of the vicissitudes of fortune which attend those who engage in speculative business. Of course to care for even an acre of land requires work, but I know of nothing in which any one can engage and be successful to which he does not have to give his entire time and energy.

Property and life are as safe in New Mexico as in any part of the United States.—Chicago Tribune.

Pay Your Tree Debt.

Tree planting during the last two years of drouth has been rather disheartening, but with the recent rains it should be different this year. Arbor day is Feb. 22, and it should be observed by every man who desires to serve his country in a practical and useful way.

Still, there is no occasion to wait for Arbor day to plant trees though at least one should be planted on that day as a matter of sentiment.

The nurserymen in these parts are well supplied with choice trees of all varieties adapted to this climate, and there is no reason why any home owner should not secure just what he needs. And it is well to take the nurseryman's advice if you are not thoroughly informed. Not every tree described in the ornate catalogues from the North and East will succeed in the West, and you may waste much time and no little money by trying to materialize the pretty pictures and glowing descriptions that adroit merchants prepare for your eye.

If you do not know how to plant, then study, inquire, observe. If you know how, get busy. The spring is already well advanced in the vegetable kingdom, and for tree planting purposes it is now well along in March. Another month will be too late for good results.

If you have never tasted the fruit from a tree of your own planting, you do not know what fruit is. If you have never enjoyed the shade of a tree of your own planting, you do not know what comfort is. If you have never had flowers of your own growing, you are a stranger to beauty.

In your lifetime you have consumed many trees—in the house you live in, the wood you burn, the vehicle you use—and the timber supply is depleted to that extent. What have you done to repair the waste your life has caused? You are debtor to mother earth, and you ought to pay some part of your debt. You will hardly be able to pay it all, but you can do something.

Now, don't go out and hire a man to plant your trees. Of course you must do that if you are going into the business on a large scale, but for the ordinary home planting do it yourself and learn what it is to have been the instrument of a simple process of creation.—Fr. Worth Record.

Irrigated Lands For Rent.

1000 acres irrigated land, with water in abundance, in the Portales Valley, for renters in 40 to 60 acre tracts, sod land, practically no grubbing or leveling required. Renter to pay not over fifty cents per acre for water and he can plant to anything he chooses and give me one-fourth of crop. He must have good teams and satisfy me that he is reliable, energetic and practical.

Rain At Last.

The Portales Valley has been treated to one of those old-fashioned downpours of rain, sleet and snow since the last issue of the Herald, and it is needless to remark that the visitation of our mother-in-law would not have been hailed with greater delight. After the painful absence of scarcely any kind of moisture all this winter and after reading the many theories advanced by the weather man for this abnormal condition and his prophecies to the effect that there was no immediate prospect of improvement, the Herald prognosticator was on the verge of believing the worst that might happen. As it turns out however, Portales Valley can go into the spring with enough of the coveted moisture to facilitate this season's work. Verily, we are coming into our own. Come to Portales Valley.

Rent Irrigated Lands.

As pointed out in an extended article in last week's issue of the Herald, one of the crying needs of the Portales Valley at this time is more farmers to develop the hundreds of acres of idle lands under the irrigation system which are now offered for rent on attractive terms. There are literally hundreds of acres of this land which may be had at a very reasonable rental waiting for the magic touch of the developer's wand with the promise of yielding a golden stream of prosperity in return for moderate efforts. Soil, water and sunshine is one of the rarest combinations in all the world, but the Portales Valley has these three elements and is now only lacking in the brain and brawn to use them profitably. Haste the day when these natural advantages will become better and more fully appreciated; when the wealth of our soil, our water and the perpetual sunlight of heaven will shake proudly in its waving fields of alfalfa and the fruit of the tree. Come to Portales Valley.

The Mexican Revolution

The Mexican rebellion has been dragging on so long with apparently no results that it is regarded almost as a farce. From the beginning messages of progress of either side were very conflicting. Every press report that came under the watchful eyes of the government official was strictly censured and contained little information of value. On the other hand, rebel camps were veritable incubators for rumors of insurgent successes. Reports from the two sides were often conflicting and subsequent events showed that neither were strictly true. The fact remains that both sides stand just about where they did several weeks ago. The Diaz government, while it has sent 7,000 troops to Chihuahua, the principal seat of trouble, seems unable to cope with the situation. The revolutionists, of whom Minister of Foreign Affairs Creel estimates there are about 1200, have done little more. Careening about the country, and indulging now and then in a little guerilla warfare seems to be about all they are capable of. In view of this condition of affairs it would seem to warrant the conclusion that a dozen mounted Texas rangers would be able inside of a week to corral the whole motley bunch in the big frog pond to the south which bears the name of the pest-ridden empire.

Enterprise Easily Boosted

There has been one phase of the present campaign for the sugar beet industry which has ever been present to the Herald in its desire to boost the enterprise, and that has been the knowledge of the difficulty to make an argument where there is no issue. Almost the entire community at large has assisted us in setting forth any number of pretty solid reasons why the farmers should avail themselves of the opportunity to establish the industry in the Valley, and inasmuch as we have not been able to find any very tangible reasons advanced why we should turn the enterprise down, it certainly would seem that any further argument in its favor would be about as unsatisfactory as boxing with a shadow. While it is quite true that some who have had the most to gain from the development which this enterprise will bring to this community have signally failed to grasp the importance and magnitude of its scope, and for which reason the development of the idea has been somewhat retarded, yet we dare say there has never been a project offered to this community which has received a more cordial right-of-way. It is equally true that the enterprise would have advanced much more rapidly had all the people of the town taken an active instead of a passive interest in the matter, but this would be a unity of purpose very rarely, if ever, attained in this commercial age when every man is working for himself and the devil for the hindmost. But nevertheless, we are learning something these days about the gentle art of empire building, albeit this knowledge is gained by hard-earned experience. We will find out eventually, perhaps, that a more harmonious and spirited action will reach the grapes that grow higher up on the vine and this day is not far off either. The Herald hopes to lead in this work more energetically than ever, for our enthusiasm never was higher, and we hope for a spirit of cordial co-operation on the part of many who have so far only extended their help in a half-hearted manner. Keep an eye on Portales!

Fleeing the New State.

Along with the special provision in the constitution of New Mexico which allows the legislature to make appropriations for certain Catholic schools and hospitals, which is directly contrary to the provisions of the enabling act, the next step of the Catholic church and that set of iniquitous politicians which are thus seeking to tax the people of other faiths and no faiths to support this sectarian church and institution is clearly set forth in the following vigorous protest from one of our contemporaries:

"The Catholic church of the United States is working its old game—the game at which it has shown itself a pastmaster. During all the history of our country this alien institution has by devious ways and dark devices, sought, and in many ways and instances secured, government support. By a diplomacy, known and practiced only by the Roman hierarchy, has the Catholic church wormed favors and funds from the United States government. This is notably true with reference to its schools. There is now pending in the national congress a bill proposing to donate 300,000 acres of unappropriated land in the Territory of New Mexico to the Catholic church for school purposes.

December 5, 1910, delegate Andrews from Albuquerque, New Mexico, offered the following bill:

A BILL
Donating three hundred thousand acres of land to J. B. Pitalval, archbishop of Santa Fe, New Mexico, and his successors, to be held in trust by him for the establishment of a manual training school for the youth of New Mexico.
Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That 300,000 acres of unappropriated non-mineral land in the Territory of

New Mexico, to be selected under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, be, and the same is hereby donated to J. B. Pitalval, archbishop of Santa Fe, New Mexico, and his successors, to be held by him in trust for the establishment of a manual training school in the Territory of New Mexico, for the youth of New Mexico, and that the income from said land or the proceeds of the sale thereof, be devoted to the maintenance and support of the said institution.

"This is an outrage that should be met with nation-wide and nation-strong protest. At the modest valuation of $2.50 an acre, the gift would amount to three quarters of a million dollars. But the offense is not in the size of the gift, but in the gift itself. It is contrary to the genius of our government to give substantial support to any sectarian institution or enterprise. Any kind of collusion between church and state is violative of the fundamental principles of our government. Our national congress has no right, constitutional or moral, human or divine, to donate one acre of public lands or one cent out of the national treasury to Catholics, Baptists or any other religious body. Too long already the Catholic hierarchy has fed and fattened from our national crib. Men all over the land who believe in civil and religious freedom, in the separation of church and state, in the square deal, should bombard their representatives at Washington with protests against this iniquitous bill.

"We indulge the hope that the rank and file of the American patriots will yet get their eyes open to the favoritism shown to the Catholic church by the powers at Washington, and seeing will call a halt and demand a reform."

Bits of Wisdom from Great Minds.

Charles A. Green.—European critics say that we Americans work too hard, live too fast and live to eat. It is true that whenever it is necessary to get a body of men together a feast is always provided. But it seems to me that the feast is of itself secondary, the main object of having a place where to eat and a festival is to permit of sociability. We are sociable when we have something to do and eating furnishes us with an excuse for being present at the banquet and excites conversation. But it is my opinion that the people of all nations eat too much.

W. C. Palmer.—The newspaper comes to me with its wealth of information—the world's happenings, the doings at home, the latest on agriculture, the newest recipe for the cook, the latest in styles, the kinks of the politicians, the needs of the community. The advertisements spread before me what the world's markets offer, tell me where I can secure them, keep me in touch with the live business men. What has so comprehensive a field as the editor? What man has so much power? What man is more ready to help his constituents by bringing them information that will be to their advantage, whether of building houses, raising children running a ranch or exposing politicians?

James D. Husted.—There is a decidedly more hopeful note in all business and financial circles in reference to western securities, bond and development enterprises. Money has been tight, but in my judgment, the worst is over and from this time on I believe there will be a noticeable and material appreciation and demand for bonds in all enterprises in which the West is interested. I think this condition will steadily improve, especially so far as Colorado is concerned, and that the year 1911 will see more remarkable things accomplished in the development of this state than any time in its history. The future is full of hope, and eastern men, who have become well posted on Colorado affairs and enterprises are more willing than ever before to invest their money, and are more assured, apparently, of a sure and safe return on investments than they have been heretofore.

Will J. Robinson.—No editor

was ever adequately compensated for his services. It is impossible. He renders a service to society the value of which can not be compensated in dollars and cents. Forever he is boosting the other fellow's game and getting just as little out of it as human computation will allow. He does it because he believes it both a privilege and a duty and expects no reward, in which he is wise. If a reasonable number in this community show that they appreciate him at his real worth he is satisfied. If none do, he goes along just the same.

Tom McNeal.—There are a lot of mysteries that we are entirely unable to fathom and one is why things should have been made so unequal. Why should there be any blamed fools in the world? Why should there be some born courageous, ready to fight, ready to do and dare, and others so timid that they are afraid of their own shadows, afraid to have an opinion on any subject, afraid to attempt any enterprise? Why should some be born with the genius of command, while others are helpless unless someone of stronger mind and will tells them what to do and how to do it?

C. A. Green.—We limit the food of our horses, cows and poultry knowing that they would not thrive so well if they were allowed to help themselves to whatever they desire to eat, but we act on the supposition that men, women and children know enough to stop eating when they have enough, but this is not true. Great reforms are attempted in drinking, but whoever heard of a reform against over-eating? But it is easier for the system to rid itself of surplus drink than it is of surplus food. Where there is one case of excessive drinking of intoxicants there are a thousand cases of excessive eating and through this a shortening of life.

Cure every kidney ill. Many people in this locality recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. Here is one case:

Albino Ortega, College Street, Santa Fe, N. Mex., says: "I am very grateful for the benefit I have received from Doan's Kidney Pills. For several years I had trouble from my back and kidneys. It was hard for me to work on account of pains across my loins and any quick movement aggravated my trouble. My rest was disturbed by a too frequent desire to void the kidney secretions and the passages were scanty and painful. Public statements given by local people who had used Doan's Kidney Pills with benefit, induced me to try them. I found relief right away and by the time I had used one box, my back was free from pain. My kidneys are now normal and I feel better in every respect. I have great faith in the curative powers of Doan's Kidney Pills."

Winter Months on the Farm

How to Improve Them

Poultry Management

Case of Fowls for Profitable Returns With Hints on Buildings and Appliances
By PROF. J. G. HALPIN
Wisconsin College of Agriculture

Copyright, 1910, by Western Newspaper Union

Poultry can be made to pay a much larger return on most farms with good winter management, since the fowls consume much feed that would otherwise be wasted. During the summer farm poultry keeping is comparatively easy, and the fowls earn a good living and give profitable returns in growth and eggs, but during the winter periods the farm flock is often poorly cared for and returns are far less than they should be under slightly improved methods. A small flock, rightly managed, will lay more eggs than several hundred hens allowed to roam free, hunting for their living with the exception of an occasional feed of whole corn or table scraps. When laying hens crowd into draughty stables, or under the corn crib for shelter, the egg crop is bound to be short.

Colony House System.

The best poultry house for the average farmer is a small movable colony house, which will accommodate 25 to 30 hens as a laying flock. The advantages of the movable house are that it is more sanitary, particularly in summer, when it can be dragged about fields and cleaned is made unnecessary. Fowls are given an increased range over new territory each time the house is moved. Less poultry feed is needed to keep the fowls in active condition and the benefits of the birds as insect destroyers may be secured by bringing the movable house into the orchard. During winter the movable house is less advantageous, but by locating it on a warm south slope and providing ample space, it serves this purpose fully as well as a fixed house.

A good colony house, shows in the illustration, is used at the Wisconsin College of Agriculture poultry department for summer chick raising, and with slight modifications may be made to serve for winter use. This house is 8x12 feet on the floor, which is of matched hard pine laid upon two 4x2 inch runners. It is sided on studs with plain mill lumber and where used only for summer colonies no lining is required. Where such a house is used in the winter, it should be well lined, so that it is perfectly air tight on all sides, except the front, where the 2 open windows are placed. The house is 7½ feet high on front and slopes day will give the hens some fresh feed to pick over since they will eat a large number of the green clover leaves. A good method is to place some straw in the poultry house and add a little clover hay regularly. Clover chaff and second grade hay may be used to good advantage.

It is unnecessary to chop straw or other litter for hens, if it is in moderate lengths, since they will soon break it up if the building is kept dry. Bedding down hens with clover or alfalfa hay avoids the necessity of soaking chaff for feeding, and fits into the system of the average farm much better. It is important to provide sufficient litter at least 8 to 12 inches deep, in order to make the hens work to get their grains. A small amount of litter will soon be scratched over and the hens will need more exercise.

Pure Water Essential.

Plenty of clean water above the freezing temperature in winter is quite important. A large part of the composition of the egg is water and the hens need a regular and ample supply to do their best work. If water is placed in the poultry house while slightly warm, the necessity of making arrangements to prevent freezing will be avoided. The prime essential is to keep drinking vessels clean. Scald them frequently and rinse out every day. The drinking vessels should be placed on a platform 12 to 18 inches above the general level of the floor, so that litter will not be scratched into the vessel. An ordinary No. 12 galvanized iron pail is most practical for the ordinary poultry house. It is easy to handle and clean and can be carried without difficulty better than a shallow pan or one of the patented drinking fountains.

Best Form of Feed Troughs.

For feeding a wet mash a flat trough 4 feet 5 inches wide, with sides 4 inches high 8 feet long, is ample for a flock of 40 hens. This flat trough is better than the V-shaped, so commonly used, as it is much easier to clean and is not upset so readily. For feeding a dry mash, the main hopper is about the best arrangement ever devised. It consists of a square flat box 4 inches wide slatted on the side with perpendicular slats 2 inches apart and has a sloping top, down to 4½ feet on the back. A roosting closet, in front of which is hung a muslin curtain, must be provided in one end for winter use. This curtain should be hung upon a rod supported by cleats so that it may be removed in summer when the curtain is not needed.

A good type of colony house set in a young orchard. This may be built of plain milled lumber at moderate cost. The fowls enter through small openings in the rear.

A fixed or permanent laying house for farm flocks may be constructed about as follows: The building should be 14 feet wide and as long as is necessary to provide 12 feet compartments which will hold 40 to 50 hens each. The partitions between these compartments may be made of netting. This building should have a long and short slope roof about 7 feet high on the front and 4½ feet on the rear. In the front a window, covered with one-inch netting, open the year around, will furnish ample ventilation and light. Perches should be put in at the rear over a dropping board, in front of which is hung the muslin curtain to be dropped in severely cold weather to confine the heat from the bodies of the fowls into a small space. Sufficient ventilation will be secured in the roosting compartment through the muslin.

Mixed gravel furnishes the best material for the floor of a house for laying hens, and if changed each year is quite sanitary. This gravel should be at least six inches deep upon a firm foundation. If rats are troublesome the foundation under the walls of the house should be made of concrete and a tight bottom of concrete over which four inches of gravel may be spread. This gravel is covered with six inches of litter, which must be changed as rapidly as it becomes damp or dirty.

Clover Good Litter.

While straw is quite universally used as a scratching litter in poultry houses, clover hay will prove more efficient and but little more expensive on most farms. A forkful added each which will not permit the fowls to roost upon it. When used in a house this hopper has openings only on one side, and is hung against the wall. The narrow openings permit the hens to eat the dry mash, but not to scratch it out into the litter.

Dark Nests Preferable.

The darkened nest has several advantages in that hens are less liable to break and eat their eggs or to disturb each other. The nest should be at least 12x14 inches in size and enough nests should be provided so that there is at least one nest for each six hens. Make the top and sides separate from the bottom, so that it may be removed and easily cleaned. Such nests should be taken out at least once a month and thoroughly cleaned. The sloping top is necessary to prevent the hens roosting upon the nest.

In providing perches many farmers make the common mistake of not placing them on the same level. Hens naturally like the highest roost, and will crowd each other off often, with serious injury. Six inches of roosting space for a hen is ample. Under the perches a tight, removable dropping board should be provided, which may be regularly cleaned in winter and may be removed entirely in summer, while the fowls are not using the house so constantly. The prime essential in handling poultry for success is to keep them clean.

Most farm poultry houses are not tight enough to keep the fowls sufficiently warm; are stuffy and poorly ventilated, and soon become filled with fumes from the droppings until they are decidedly unhealthy. Two extremes are commonly observed, either a large number of fowls are crowded into a small, poorly constructed hen-house or they are left to seek their roosting places as best they can on either a piece of farm machinery or a stable partition.

THE LIMELIGHT

EXPOSED OHIO VOTE BUYING

Judge Alblon Z. Blair of the common pleas court of Adams county, Ohio, who recently unseated the amazing vote traffic in his county, is authority for the statement that there is grafting everywhere, and that it is not only the right, but the duty of every official to see that this is stamped out. Judge Blair declared that he intended going over the ground so thoroughly that none would escape, and he estimated that the grand jury would indict 2,000 or more before it had finished its sitting.

Fully 90 per cent. of the indicted men made the trip to West Union, the county seat, appeared before Judge Blair and entered pleas of guilty to the indictments found against them. To all these the court handed out a nominal fine of $5, $10 or $15—usually about the price received by them for their last vote—a suspended sentence of three or four months in the workhouse and disfranchisement for a period of five years. About a dozen men who ignored the summons of the court after indictments had been returned against them were sent for, given a fine of $200, and eight months' sentence in the Cincinnati workhouse and five years disfranchisement.

The net caught in its meshes people of all ages, of all classes, even of both sexes. The aged men who voted for Abraham Lincoln for president of the United States came to West Union side by side with the beardless youths who cast their first votes in the recent election. Rich farmers arrived with the inmates of poor farms; father, son and grandson made the trip together; preachers and day laborers were in the same batch appearing for sentence; in one instance even mother and son appeared together, the mother tearfully admitting to Judge Blair that she had sold her boy's vote for $5.

HEADS RAILROAD ENGINEERS

Grand Chief Engineer Warren S. Stone of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, on behalf of the members of the brotherhood, accepted the agreement offered by the railroad managers by which nearly 35,000 of his fellows are to benefit. Four million dollars a year is what it will cost 61 western railroads to make good the provisions of the settlement.

In spite of their repeated assertions that they had reached the limit, the managers made concessions in the face of a threatened strike. Concessions were made by the men also, but they established two of the chief points for which they contended—jurisdiction over motor trucks and an increased schedule for the Mallet type of locomotive. Chief Stone in his letter to the commissioner of labor said: "After thoroughly considering the proposal and the question in its entirety, we are of the opinion the offer will not yield the engineers compensation commensurate with the service performed, and it is with extreme reluctance we inform you it will be accepted. In this connection we are prompted to accept the proposition through the influence of yourself and a desire on our part to avert a calamity that would bring suffering and loss on a large number of people who are not parties to the controversy. With those facts in mind you are authorized to affect a settlement in accordance with the proposed terms."

A MISSOURI SUPREME JUDGE

Governor Hadley of Missouri recently announced the appointment of Judge Franklin Ferris of St. Louis for supreme judge to succeed the late Gavon D. Burgess.

Franklin Ferris is sixty-one years of age and has been a practicing attorney in St. Louis since 1874. He was a native of New York and was graduated from Cornell university in the class of 1873, coming to Missouri the next year. Though active in Republican politics, he did not hold office until 1893, when he was elected a member of the city council, the upper house of the municipal assembly of St. Louis. He was made president pro tempore. At that time Charles Nagel, now secretary of commerce and labor, was the president officer of that body. Soon after the four-year term ended in 1898 he was nominated judge of the circuit court and elected.

When the United States began the case against the Standard Oil company Judge Ferris was selected as commissioner to hear the case for the United States circuit court. That case is now in the Supreme court of the United States on an appeal from the United States circuit court of appeals, which decided against the company. Governor Hadley offered Judge Ferris the position of president of the police board of St. Louis, but he declined to serve.

NEW AID TO J. P. MORGAN

With the retirement of George W. Perkins from the great financial firm of J. Pierpont Morgan & Co. there steps to the front as the right-hand man of the great financier Henry P. Davison, once a school teacher of Troy, Pa., who now becomes the most important member of the great banking house, next to Morgan himself.

Davison's rise in the house of Morgan has been one of the most remarkable in the history of Wall street. He has been a firm member for only two years, but in that time his star has steadily waxed. It is known that J. P. Morgan since the panic of 1907 has been convinced that in Davison were the qualities needed for financial leadership of the highest type. To the financial genius of Mr. Davison is due the successful outcome for American bankers of the negotiations held in Paris last summer for American participation in the great Chinese loan—the $30,000,000 Hankow-Szechuan railroad loan, which foreign bankers had originally intended to absorb with no slice awarded to American bankers. But the Chinese loan is only one of the varied tasks of big proportions that Mr. Perkins' successor is called upon to solve in the intricate maze of Morgansque financial operations.

Johnson-Spears Nuptials.

On last Thursday at 1:30 p. m. the wedding of Otis Johnson and Miss Gertrude Spears, both of this city, was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents in East Clovis, Rev. C. A. Clark, pastor of the Methodist church, officiating.

The wedding was a quiet one and witnessed by only members of the family and a few friends. After the ceremony an elegant luncheon was served. The bride, who has been one of the most popular girls in the city for two years, was the recipient of many beautiful gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson will return Thursday from a short trip to El Paso and make their home here, where he has a lucrative position with the Santa Fe.

Beet Industry a Good Thing.

W. T. Roberts, an old-timer in the Portales Valley has been one of the foremost boosters for the sugar beet project and has become so confident that the industry will find a home here that he has already taken up the matter of beet seed with a well known seed company of Rockford, Ill., with whom Mr. Roberts has dealt for many years. This great seed house in a recent letter to Mr. Roberts answering the inquiry relative to beet seed prices, etc., has also the following to say about beet culture in general:

"Mr. W. T. Roberts, Portales, N. M., Dear Sir:—Responding to your favor of the 10th inst. at hand, may say, have several large beet sugar factories close to Rockford, and from personal encounters with farmers find they realize as high as $150 per acre on some of their beet crops; it would certainly pay you, I am sure providing you receive a reasonable price for your product; this you can ascertain by fore going into the deal; have everything stipulated in the contract."

4th Birthday Celebrated.

On the 18th day of this month little Miss Nannie Marie Luikart was four years old and this event was properly celebrated at the home of the little lady, Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Luikart's, on that day and in spite of the fact that the weather was stormy, there were a number present and a never-to-be-forgotten good time had. Games dear to childish hearts were played then refreshments of grape-juice, lemonade and perfectos were served.

The little hostess received many nice presents, several who could not be present sending gifts.

Those present were:—Herbert Ryther, Peat Hart, Buster Horton, Maggie Blankenship, May Ferguson, H. F. Crow, Morgan Reynolds, Audrey Moody, Carol Price Moody, Leefe May Worth, "Baby" Joe Howard, Irma Bruce, Inea Bruce, Ralph Jackson, Miriam Brandon, Louvene Brandon, Eva May Morris.

The Traveler's Inn.

Such is to be the name of the new hotel which Mrs. Edward Keightley is opening up at the modern brick building which was formerly used as a sanitarium. It is needless to say that this building will not long be remembered as ever having been used as a sanitarium, for Mrs. Keightley has taken the precautions to obliterate every vestige of its past usage by having it thoroughly renovated and fumigated and by the time she has furnished it as a modern hotel should be, there will be little left suggestive of its former self. Mrs. Keightley hopes to have her furnishings here and in order by the first of March, when the place will be open to the public.

Lacy Happenings.

(Received Feb. 21.) Bud Sanders is tearing up his land this week.

We have had a nice rain and some snow since you last heard from Lacy and the farmers are getting busy.

Mr. Neel has been developing a well for W. O. Oldham on the Ballow farm the past week.

There has been some talk of our store and postoffice changing hands. If it does, let it come to the S. E. corner of school section 36, township N. R-32 E.

When you are passing through Lacy, don't fail to see Neel's and Sanders' wells at work. They have the finest in town.

Lacy community has land that has a bottom season from irrigation and more than the owners can work.

Last Sunday night quite a crowd of young people gathered at Mr. Wallis' and with Miss Mae Neel as organist, sang quite a while.

We have so many people over the country who have the "Don'ts." They don't want to do anything, and some of them will knock on anything of a progressive nature and anything that is started for the benefit of the country. They are stumbling stones and we have had them out here with us for several years.

New Projects on the Pecos.

The board of water commissioners will adjourn today, and it is said that a large number of appeals have been decided by the board and that the decisions will be announced next week, resulting in the great development of irrigation in New Mexico.

The Urton Lake Company's application in which much interest has been manifested, has been consolidated with the project of D. J. McCann of Fort Sumner, and the applications for the consolidated project are to be approved.

Thus it would seem that the difficulties which have held up the Urton Lake project are removed and that the company now will be able to go ahead and develop this very favorably situated project.

The Carey Act Land Board of New Mexico has withdrawn its application and notice with reference to this Urton Lake project, and it is understood that the Urton Lake company and the McCann company have some agreement with the Carey Act Land Board. This means that they will carry out the project under the terms of the Carey Act.

It is also understood that the differences that heretofore existed between the Las Vegas Land Grant board and A. A. Jones and others have been settled, and that the application of Mr. Jones for certain waters of the Pecos and its tributaries is to be approved.

The application of the Fort Sumner and Pecos Land Company and the application of H. B. Jones of Santa Rosa will be approved by the board.—Santa Fe New Mexican.
