THE TRACTOR OF THE TRACTOR OF THE TRACTOR STREET, STRE INLAND VALLEY.

ALLCROPS suited to the temperate zone which can sustain an arid atmosphere can be raised in Inland Valley; but being streaked and bounded with live stock farms the staples are alfalfa, kaffir corn, mile maize and sorghum, and some indian corn.

Alfalfa is the best fodder crop in the world. In the arid belt it is cut four imes in a season, and in some instances, where there are small patches, five times. As much as two tons per acre have been made at one cutting, but a good average on the large farms in Eastern New Mexico is three-fourths of a ton per acre to the cutting. Where properly cared for and not too heavily pastured this is a permanent crop. It furnishes considerable pasture throughout the winter. X A prominent local breeder, after weaning bull calves, usunlly pastures them on alfalfa without any grain until December 20th, when they are as fat, sleek and smooth as grain-fed calves under cover. X Alfalfa reaches maturity at three years, and young alfalfa is not expected to yield heavily. The following figures are therefore most remarkable and comparison is chellenged: One hundred and twenty acres belonging to the Schlitz and Babst Brewing ompanies, of Milwaukee, Wis., situated near Otis, N. M., sown in October and November, 1900, were cut for the first time June 24th, 1901. Eighty-three tons. paled and delivered in Carlsbad, were sold at $8.75 per ton, commencing July Ith. Thirty-six acres, the earliest planted, cut 43 tons, actual weight. August th, the second crop is cut, and is sold for three dollars per ton standing in the French Plan Costly Tunnel.

A work to cost some $6,000,000 will probably in the near future be begun on the Seine. It is to be a tunnel under the river, either at Tancarville or Quillebeuf. Between Rouen and the sea there is no crossing of the seine except by boat, a condition that for many years has caused great inconvenience and retarded commercial growth. Moreover, Havre is connectrailroad line. The projected tunnel will connect it with Pont-Audemer and hence with the rest of France, giving two diverging lines from Havre.

In a recent report of the Oklahoma station Director Fields makes the following statements regarding the value of stable manure, which apply to other portions of the country as well as to Oklahoma

On the outskirts of every town in Oklahoma may be seen a collection of manure piles tht have been hauled out and dumped in waste places. The plant food in each ton of this manure is worth at least $2-that is what eastern farmers pay for similar material, and they make money by doing it. And yet, almost every liveryman cause farmers living near these towns are missing a chance to secure something for nothing-because, perhaps, the profit is not directly in sight. But from most soils there is a handsome profit possible from a very small application of stable manure.

On the farm of the Oklahoma Agri cultural Experiment station is an acre that has been in wheat for eight years. It had never been manured. in the fall of 1898 one-half of the acre was manured at the rate of 15 tons per acre and the other was left unmanured. When the crop was harvested, in the summer of 1899, the manured piece yielded at the rate of 30 bushels per acre and the unmanured yielded but 12 bushels per acre. An increase of 18 bushels of wheat was secured the first year from an application of 15 tons of stable manure. If all of the effect of the manure were exhausted the first season there were 18 bushels of wheat to pay for hauling about 10 loads of manure. But the effect is lasting and extends through a period of several years.

Here is a feasible plan to increase the wheat crop: Put every bit of manure obtainable into the soil. Eight een hundred bushels of wheat wil pay for one man and team hauling manure for 450 days and the profit is directly in sight.

Water for Plants.

Cur friend the scientist states that for land to do its best its water content should be steadily maintained to within from 40 to 50 per cent of saturation. Prof. King tells us that where this has been maintained by the application of the needed water their smallest yield was four tons of dry matter per acre, and the largest seventeen tons, and an average of over seven tons when twenty-two cases were tried. We all know that that is very much in excess of what most of us are doing. We also know that all plant food in the soil is soluble in water under certain conditions, and that all plant food (with perhaps one valuable exception, that of carbon) is taken into the plant through the moisture that is in the so. This being the case, no matter how rich our soil may be, if N is perfectly dry the plant has no means of getting hold of the plant food. The vegetable matter is made available through the millions of bacteria that are in the soil. Our flint corn takes 8,750 gallons per acre each day less moisture to bring it to perfection than any other crop we grow, using some 230 tons of water to grow one ton of dry matter; Dent corn 300, and other crops varying amounts, till we reach oats, which use from 500 to 700 tons. An apple tree, during the time it produces its fruit, will use 250 gallons per day, or on an acre, with the trees 35 feet apart. 8,750 gallons per day. Prof. King tells of four stalks of corn that used in three pounds for each stalk per day. This gives us some idea of the im portance which moisture has in the growth of plants.

Reducing Water in Butter.

In order to decrease the water content where it is necessary, the following rules should be observed, says a Swedish buttermaker.

Churn at a low temperature, wash he butter thoroughly and drain well. Add the salt before the working is ommenced. After the salt has been until after it has become hard, preferably the next morning but then thoroughly and not in too large pieces. refrigerator after the first working and not in water. At all times in ent only in the second. High water er cent is no hindrance for high qual y but must not be gained at the xpense of the quality. As one of entage is that the butter is to be worked while it is still soft, the butter after it is packed in tubs must necesarily be kept at a low temperature. If here are no affective means for coolng the butter at hand, a method of orking must be employed, which, at he expense of the water content, gives the least grain to the butter.

Hogs on Sweet Potatoes.

Bulletin 122 of the Alabama Staon says: From November 13 to Deember 18, 1900, a period of 35 days, nurse. wo shoa's were penned on sweet potatees growing on poor sandy soil, and furnished daily per head with two ounds ground corn and one pound round cowpeas, which was regarded s a half ration. The total weight at he beginning of the test was 231 ounds, and during the five weeks the wo shoats made a total gain of 67 ounds, requiring besides sweet poatoes, 3.13 pounds of grain per pound f growth. The potatoes were not aten with much relish, and after beng rooted up they were left on the urface, some of them remaining there rain had been fed. The composition f the sweet potato leads us to expect hat it would be advisable not at any me to confine shoats to sweet postoes alone, but to give them while n the potato field a little nitrogenous eod, such as cowpeas, peanuts, etc.
