One of the curious things run across in this arrangement can get supply from Europe is the scheme of a Frenchman named Michael Breal, broached as long ago as 1886, and which is being again taken up.

It consists of a wholesale exchange, to another, says a recent report.

Here is a Parisian father in modest estate, with a son. This men has an ambition that his child shall have a thorough knowledge of German. The proper thing would be to place the child in some German family for awhile. But the difficulty for the father is to discover just the right sort of family-one who would "I had been troubled with lame back receive the child, one that he could trust with the child, and, above all, one who had a child to swap. The Paristan father would be spending no extra money in housing the German child and traching it French, while his own was eating at a German table. Meanwhile two nations were understanding each other better. It was a splendid scheme, if only it could be carried out

He devoted a whole year to booming the enterprise. And it was heart-breaking work. He would win the approval of a lot of English or German' or Scandinavian families, only to find in his own land no readiness of trade. And yet, in spite of everything, he has succeeded in a measure. The scheme is working and Mr. Mathieu has decided to found a society and push the idea for all it is worth.

FRUITFUL FURNACES

INTENSE HEAT PRODUCES PRECIOUS STONES.

Scientists Have Succeeded in Plucking Real Diamonds and Rubies from the Crucible of the Furnace.

Recent advices from France state that Prof. Moissan, the eminent scientist and inventor, has actually suceeded in making genuine diamonds and rubies. He employs for this purpose the electric furnace, which has been so improved that a degree of heat can be produced, approaching the extreme temperatures, which were undoubtedly a factor in the formation of minerals and gems in the interior of The rubies obtained are of large size, weighing 10 or 15 carats, and in quality and color equal and even surpass those found in the earth. The natural forces attending the formation of diamonds seem to have been more complicated, and so far the diamonds esulting from the efforts of the scientists have been very small, but still they are positively identified as the carbon crystal-the diamond. They are remarkably clear and bright, and on a small scale as fine specimens as nature's own product. The electric furnace has enriched chemistry with a whole series of new compounds. Probably the one of most value to mankind at large is Calcium Carbide. The simple application of water to Calcium Carbide generates the gas Acetylene, which is now being commonly used for light-The peculiar merits of Acetylene light are its brilliance and high candle power, ease of installation, economy and its adaptability for lighting buildings of every description, regardless of their location.

The whole process from the forest to the reader thus only occupied the space of two hours and twenty-five minutes.

FINE COLLECTION OF PLATE. Dining Room of Maine Woman is

On the wall is the English chase, a very pretty pattern of the few dishes illustrating English sport, and nearby hangs a large platter of chrysanthemums. There is one of the R. H. Hall

A large old platter is very beautiful because of its rare pattern. The scene upon it is marine. Boats have just arrived with a load of fish and lobsters. A dog sits on his haunches looking at the lobsters. In the foreground is the fisherman's cabin, with his children playing around the door. In the distance can be seen the spire of the village church. In this way he has artificially produced arctic and tropical forms of those insects; and, yet more surprising, he has evolved in the same fashion, ancient forms, which may have lived tens of thousands of years ago, and butterflies of the future, so to say, which may exist thousands of years hence. Though it sounds like a fairy tale, it is all quite true. Of course, says a writer in the Saturday Evening Post, it is in the chrysalis stage that the insects are subjected to this treatment. They are put into an ice-box or into a hot-box, and then, being taken out, are permitted to undergo their final transformation, whereupon," of course, they appear as full-fledged butterflies. What the article cost the Egyptian mummy and the Assyrian notable is not known, but before the guillotine fell in France the wig which adorned the heads of its victims cost 30 to 40 guineas.
