Fourth of July

Bills have been printed and circulated for a Fourth of July celebration at Portales. Arrangements have also been made to have a big get-together and jollification meeting of all the people of Roosevelt county at the completion of the Roosevelt County creamery. It is unfortunate that the two events were not pulled off together. There appears to be a disposition on the parts of a majority of the business men to let the Fourth of July proposition go by default and to give their entire support to the celebration having to do with the creamery. It is contemplated to have this an elaborate affair, one that will require a large outlay of money and a great deal of time and labor.

The arrangement committee has in mind the proposition of getting, practically, every citizen of the county, as well as a great number from adjoining towns and counties, to come here on that day and be guests of the promoters and boosters for the Roosevelt County creamery. This is a big institution and means much to the financial prosperity of this particular section of New Mexico and, in the opinion of the News no obstacle or obstacles should be placed in the way of the complete success of this undertaking. The celebration of the Fourth of July is always a meritorious undertaking and one that strongly appeals to the patriotism of every true American, and the parties having this in mind had no intention of, in any way, interfering with any other arrangements then contemplated, and they were entirely honest in their efforts to provide for a good time on that date. There is no bitterness or hard feeling in this matter, yet it seems scarcely advisable to attempt two public gatherings coming so close together. The News hopes the first committee will appreciate the situation and postpone their affair and come into the larger and more important one with just as much enthusiasm and whole heartedly as they did the first. The News feels that this a largely a question of good business and for the benefit of a larger number of people than could possibly be affected by the usual old time celebrations. It is hoped that the promoters of the first event will take this view of the matter and decide to call off for the time being whatever program they had arranged for that day.

Democratic Committee Meeting

The Democratic County Central committee met in Portales June 24th, in accordance with the call of the chairman and after the old committee had canvassed the returns of the primary held on June 17th, the new committee convened with G. L. Reese, committeemen of precinct number one acting as chairman. The first thing in order after it was ascertained that a quorum was present was the election of a chairman. Judge Reese was unanimously elected chairman and W. H. Braley secretary of the committee and J. B. Priddy and A. B. Smith were duly elected Democratic State committeemen for Roosevelt county. A resolution was passed unanimously that the meetings of the committee in the future should be called for one o'clock in the afternoon.

There being no further business the meeting subject to the call of the chairman.

G. L. REESE, Chairman
W. H. BRALEY, Secretary.

G. W. Stroud

Friends and fellow citizens: I take this means of thanking you for the honor you have conferred upon me and for the confidence imposed in me your nominee for the office of Representative.

I am making the race for the office I have run wholly upon my own merits, and have tried to treat my opponents with due courtesy and respect, and so far as I know I have received like treatment from them.

If elected in November I shall go to Santa Fe absolutely unpugged to any ring, chique or corporate interest, but as a servant of the common people.

It shall be my highest ambition to faithfully and impartially serve my constituents. Should I fail in my efforts to secure such legislation as we need it will not be because those efforts were not earnest and untiring. That I may make enemies, perhaps, be misrepresented, and possibly slandered does not deter me in the least. All I ask, is that you retain your confidence in me till you have proven me unworthy of it.

I shall immediately begin to prepare myself for the duties of the office and any suggestions you may offer will be kindly received and duly considered. Thanking you all for your loyal support I am yours in the interest of good government.

G. W. STROUD.

Benson Clubs

W. T. Conway, State leader of boy's and girl's clubs, was a visitor to the Benson community last week, June 23.

While here Mr. Conway, demonstrated the cold pack method of canning vegetables, both by hot water bath and steam process. The people took great interest in the work. After Mr. Conway left even some of the boys were heard remark that they could can anything now.

The boy's pig club also met with Mr. Conway all the boys except one were present. The Benson boys have the largest and most active pig club in the county. Mr. Conway says the Benson boys will wake some one up. "They are doing something."

The girl's and boy's poultry club also met with Mr. Conway. All the members were present. The children are doing some good work along this line. Mr. Conway assured the Benson boys and girls that they would take some premiums at the fair this fall. Also some of them may get to go to the state fair.

Tucumcari Has New Newspaper

Tucumcari has a new newspaper, the first two copies of which reached this office this week. It is a bright, newsy, well printed sheet and is receiving a liberal patronage. It is called the Tucumcari American, but this is not taken to mean that it is the only American newspaper in that town. S. M. Wharton is editor and Morris Bramlett foreman. The publication is intensely Republican but otherwise all right.

Work On New Creamery

Work on the new creamery is progressing nicely. It is being built of brick and is now almost ready for the roof. The machinery has been ordered and will be installed just as rapidly as possible. In all probability butter making will be in full swing about the 15th of July.

Lieutenant J. C. Compton returned from the border this week to hold the regular term of the probate court which convenes on Monday.

CARRANZA COME ACROSS LIKE A GOOD LITTLE PEON WHEN HE HAD TO

He at First Tried to "Run a Teddy" but When the Show Down Came He Had a Streak of "Yaller." Not Only Turned the Prisoners Back, but all the Horses and Equipment, also Carranza came across like a little man when President Wilson notified him that unless he brought the prisoners taken at Carrizal back to the United States and turned back just as good as they were before, ordinary wear and tear excepted, that he would send a bunch of American soldiers into Mexico and bring them out by force. Of course "Old Whiskers" isn't afraid but he has a sort of a sneaking idea that the "School Teacher" meant what he said and he knew the boys were aching for the opportunity. However, the situation is not much clearer now than it was before the release of the captives. Carranza has not satisfactorily answered the presiden's last little "bijet deux" and the war clouds still hang heavy over the horizon. In the mean time all the national guards of the nation have been ordered out and are on their way to the border. All the time consumed with exchanging compliments with the de facto powers is that much more time for us to get ready to put the fixins' to them good and proper.

MISS MARY MILDRED GREATHOUSE

A wedding ideally consummated in the presence of relatives and friends of the contracting parties, took place at the home of Rev. and Mrs. J. R. Greathouse near Portales Saturday evening, June 24, when their daughter, Miss Mary Mildred Greathouse became the bride of T. M. Caldwell of Amarillo Texas.

In the room where the ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dawn exquisite decorations of ferns, simalax and cut flowers were featured. The bride was beautifully gowned in white silk net, maline and orange blossoms, Mr. Caldwell is one of the leading business men of Amarillo, having the electric magenito service station and is also connected with the new bank of Amarillo. Mrs. L. J. Whiteman, sister of the bride played the beautiful march from Lohengrin after the guests were served with a delicious ice course. Mr. and Mrs. Caldwell left for Amarillo where they will make their future home.

Parties wanting honey should give or mail me their orders at once. Price 81-3 cents per pound in 60 pound cans, smaller lots 10 cents. JOHN R. ROPPER.

Charley Greathouse returned this week from Denver, Colorado where he has just completed a course in taxidermy. Charley says that he has now learned the last thing in this line, and judging from some of his work, he has not exaggerated any.

Wanted—15 to 20 horse power gasoline engine. Must be in good condition.

Clovis Ladies Band Will be Here

On next Saturday afternoon and night, the ladies band, of Clovis, will be in Portales and give an open air concert on the courthouse lawn. Mrs. Holdinghouse and Miss Mulhall, representatives of the band, were here Wednesday making arrangements for this entertainment. The afternoon concert will be free. At night there will be more music and, in addition, Miss Erwin, of McGee Arkansas, a reader and character delineator of wide renown, will entertain the audience with character sketches and an impersonation of Charley Chapman. The News man has heard the ladies band of Clovis on several occasions and can assure you that they will give you a real treat. The evening entertainment will be at the Baptist Church and the admission will be 25 cents for adults and 10 cents for children. Everybody help the ladies.

Wanted

Engine men and train men for service on the Atchinson, Topeka and Santa Fe railway.

The present employee in the engine, train and yard service on the Atchinson, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway company, will be called upon by their brotherhood officer for a strike vote. It is hoped that the vote on our territory will be in the negative, but it is necessary for the company to be ready.

Applications will, therefore, be received from experienced men for positions, as engine men, conductors, firemen, brakemen, and switchmen, and from inexperienced men for positions as fireman and brakeman.

Application should be made to the undersigned and should give experience, former employer, reason for leaving, service and present address. These applications will be considered confidential and the applicant, if his application is approved and his services are required, will be notified where and to whom he should report.

(Signed) F. G. Fox, Gen. Mgr.
A. T. and S. F. Ry. Co.

Baptist Church

On Wednesday night the pastor offered his recognition as pastor of the First Baptist church, the same to take effect the first day of August. I will preach Sunday morning and evening and then will be out of town to the fifth Sunday. On the fifth Sunday I will preach my last sermon in Portales. I appreciate the presence of the people since I became pastor and will be glad to see you on these two Sundays.

W. E. DAWN, Pastor.

Portales vs. Richland

Last Wednesday the Portales base ball team played a game with the Richland boys which resulted in a victory for Richland by a score of 15 to 13. It is reported that there were plenty of errors on both sides, indicating that both teams are badly in need of practice. Quite a crowd was in attendance.

Has a New Roadster

Frank Shaw, local representative for the A. L. Gurley Broom Corn company, has a new Dodge roadster. Frank is, probably, the best broom corn man in eastern New Mexico and it is just as fitting that he should have a car as good as the best.

Hubert Yates and Carl Owens have enlisted and gone to the border. It is understood that both of these are under age and that they did not have the consent of their parents.

Survey of School Lands

The economic survey of the vast land holdings of the university of New Mexico, began more than a year ago, and carried on under the joint direction of Charles T. Kirk, professor of geology, and John D. Clark, professor of chemistry in the university, will be completed during the present summer, probably by September 1st. Last year Professors Kirk and Clark, and a corps of student assistants surveyed the university lands in northern New Mexico. This summer they will cover the lands in the southern counties, the work taking them into Valencin, Socorro, Sierra, Grant and Luna counties.

In addition to all salt bearing lands in the state, the university owns 300,000 acres of approved selections. This vast area has been much more difficult to appraise because it is scattered through almost every county in the state, in tracts of varying size. Different natural conditions have been encountered on almost every track. The whole acreage has been divided into 40-acre sections. When the survey is complete every forty acre parcel will have been carefully surveyed and platted and the field notes will contain complete information as to soil analysis, grazing resource, water, mineral prospects, timber stumpage, market availability, in fact a complete, economic estimate which will enable the university authorities to estimate accurately the present and probable the future commercial value of every acre. The present and probable future commercial value of every acre. The survey has brought to light a number of valuable facts as to the resources of the land.

Take Back that Book!

There's to be a clearance in the part of missing books. The Women's club library issues a general call to all patrons to search the bookcase, the parlor table and the attic for chance volumes belonging to the library. The occasion is the inventory which the library is busy taking. A library book is easily overlooked among other books and the library is anxious to draw in these overlooked books while the is in progress. It will save many books from being reported or lost.

Big Increase in Auto Licenses

Up to date for this year 6,298 automobile licenses have been issued or almost 40 per cent more than last year. In addition 103 applications are pending for licenses to be dated July 1. It is most likely that by the end of the year 8,000 licenses will be issued, representing an investment of $10,000,000 for automobiles in New Mexico and an annual expenditure of at least $2,000,000 a year for maintenance or more than New Mexico expends on all of its educational institutions. — Albuquerque Journal.

Automobile Burns

Sheriff George C. Deen lost his automobile last Saturday evening from fire. Just the exact origin of the fire is not known. He, in company with B. L. Lawrence had gone out to the pasture to look at some stock and were on the road home when the accident occurred. Everything possible to save the machine but, from lack of facilities, these efforts were fruitless. The loss was a total one, insurance six hundred dollars.

Ben Wood is in Roswell where he will undergo an operation for cancer.

On Achill Beg

HARVESTING ON ACHILL ISLAND

AT LAST we came where the road ended and stood opposite the seldom visited Island of Achill Beg. There was only one thing for us to do—that was to shout and shout until someone on the island heard us and launched a boat to ferry us across, writes a traveler to the Emerald Isle, in Ireland. We talked while we waited about the ultra-nationalism of the friend we were going to visit. There had been a project to build a causeway from this peninsula of the mainland to the island of his sojourn. Our friend objected because he did not want the 25 families he lived amongst to be corrupted by an alien culture. We shouted again.

Then we saw a stir on the island and knew that a boat was being launched. Another wayfarer had come up and was waiting to cross over with us. This was a young woman who thought little of nursing her baby while she waited. She had taken the child to some far-away dispensary upon the peninsula and had received a pronouncement upon its sickness. Now she held it and talked to it as if it was a treasure—as if it was wonderful she had got the child back so far. This young woman took our phrases in Gaelic as good conversational coin. Most native speakers talk to learners either scornfully or patronizingly, but she talked trustfully, as if we had the Gaelic "like the flowing sea," as they say. It was evidently that our friend on the island had brought no hint of paucity in Gaelic speech.

He lived with one of the island families in the utmost discomfort. Meat the people seldom saw, and they burnt it when they undertook to cook it. They boiled potatoes well enough. But no amount of repetition could get them to make drinkable tea. Our friend had a room that had no catch on its door and he was waited upon by a barefooted girl. His mental nourishment seemed as zestless as his physical fare. There were books on his shelf, but they were dictionaries, grammars, textbooks, handbooks, exercises in translation, volumes of propagandist journals. There was one thing in the room that promised some delight—our friend's fiddle. We knew how well he could play the music of fishers and shepherds of Gaelic Scotland and Ireland.

A Stronghold of Gaelic. He held this remote island as a lonely post in a battle that seemed long lost—a battle of languages and civilization. Gaelic might be surrendered or sold on the mainland or in the big islands, but here 25 families would be drilled to hold and keep it. Actually he had made this island the one spot in the British Islands where English is a decaying language. He had found it flourishing here and Gaelic weak and ready to give out. He had restored Gaelic. The young men and young women who would spend six months of the year in the fields of England and East Scotland spoke no English here. We saw him fling the door open and dart out like a weasel when he heard an English phrase used by someone in the main room. But the harvester was speaking of "The Midland Great Western Railway" and how could a name like that be put into Gaelic?

He was giving a lecture that night, and we followed him as he went, lantern in hand, to the schoolhouse. We passed closed houses before which geese seemed to sleep standing. We walked amongst ducks that gave us the impression that they were truants from school—they slipped into pools of water and pushed out. "They'll say nothing about it; they'll say nothing about it," they told each other in quacking undertones. We crossed the stepping stones and came to the schoolhouse. Inside we lighted lamps and waited.

Have you seen a herd of mountain ponies break down a road? So they rushed in, the island girls who came to our friend's lecture. No one else came. They sung themselves about the room until they were winged. Then they became less disorderly. At last, having trampled them between school desks, our friend began his lecture. When he was three-quarters through they showed some disposition to break away. But the power of the human eye held them for a space longer. Then it became necessary to apply the voice threateningly: "Now Bright," "Now Oona," "Now Slav." At last, by opening wide the door, he signified that the lecture was over. Bright, Oona, Slav, Cauth and the others bolted out.

Comfort of Peat Fires.

The peat fires make it possible to live in houses that are drenched with constant rain. On the outside walls where the thatch drips down you see the green of the damp. But inside, with the pile of burning peat on the hearth, everything is dry and warm. Naturally, the people do not keep their good friends the horse or the cow from the kindly warmth. The family sits about the fire, and at the end of the room the horse stands as quiet and as well-behaved as a guest could be. From infancy the children are intimate with the animals; at three one can drive the cow where it should go, at five one rides on a pony behind hampers of sea weed. The people have a fuller life than those who have no fire with them with horses or cattle. And yet we have heard H. G. Wells speak of such people as parasites living upon animals. We suppose it would be impossible for the great prophet of machinery to understand that people may live with animals, and be better human beings for the experience.

In the house where my friend stays, around the fire in the living room, a few young men are seated. They are not dressed in the flannels of the island, nor in the ready-mades one might buy in a town on the mainland, but in ragged clothes that suggest Lancashire. They are returned harvesters. From April until October the young men and women of the island work for the farmers of England and East Scotland, crossing over with the gangs that go from the west of Ireland. For the rest of the year the young men stay on the island, putting in their time working on fields on which the plow cannot be put or fishing in boats that do not go miles out to sea. The main income of the island is earned abroad. The young men and women come back with from £12 to £20 in their pockets. This goes to pay the rent, the shop debts, or buys tea and the bag of flour or meal. The English that the young men can speak is scanty and is eked out with a good many oaths. Abroad they have the name of being good workers.

Music of Crickets and Sea.

In our friend's room the peat fire is lighted also. He takes up his fiddle and sits down on his bed until the barefooted girl comes into the room with an apron full of peat. The fire is renewed, and it is time to go to bed. A mattress is laid on the floor, and our friend shows us how to make a sailor's bed, folding the blanket into a sleeping bag, into which we insert ourselves. Then we lie down at the fire. The visitors have left the room above and the people of the house have gone to bed.

It is now the hour of the crickets. They riot about the fire in the living room, making a continuous noise. And the noise of the crickets has for a background the noise of the sea—a score of yards from the house it dashes upon the island. But at last comes sleep, and we hear no more until a sea bird cries in the silence of the morning. Then a young harvester comes into the room with another armful of peat, and the fire, which was slumbering down in the ashes, breaks up again. Bread and tea and eggs soon come our way, and our friend talks of taking us to shoot wild goats on the high places of the peninsula.

Eighteen of One Family Killed in War Court Chamberlain Count Carl von Wedel-Piesdorf, the head of one of the most distinguished aristocratic families in Germany, reports that since the beginning of the war five counts and thirteen barons Von Wedel have given their lives for their country. Seventeen other members of the family have been badly wounded and five slightly wounded.

HANDICRAFT FOR BOYS AND GIRLS

By A. NEELY HALL and DOROTHY PERKINS

(Copyright by A. Neely Hall)

A SWINGING SEAT FOR THE PORCH.

Any boy can make the substantial swinging porch seat shown in Fig. 1. Fig. 2 shows the completed framework, and Figs. 3 and 4 details of the end frames. The frames must be absolutely rigid, and their parts very securely nailed together, else the seat will soon rack to pieces. You will see by Figs. 3 and 4 that uprights A and B are notched to receive the horizontal pieces C and D. Make pieces A, B and C of 2-by-4-inch material, and D of a 1-by-4-inch board. The notches in upright B can be cut square across the piece, but those in A must be cut obliquely to allow for the slant of the seat back (Fig. 4).

Fig. 3 shows the necessary measurements for cutting and assembling the parts. First lay uprights A and B upon the floor with their ends at the distances apart specified on the diagram. Then place C and D across them, and mark the positions for the notches. Cut the end notches in A and B with a saw, and the center notch in A with a saw and chisel. Be careful to make the notches no wider or deeper than necessary, so the joints will be snug and flush. Before nailing the crosspieces in place, cut one end of each to fit the slant of upright A; also mark and cut off the ends of upright A and bevel the top edge as shown: Crosspiece E is a 1-by-4-inch board of the length of C, and is nailed to the edges of A and B as a support for the seat boards.

After the pair of end frames have been nailed together, connect them with the one by four inch boards F and H (Fig. 2). The length for these will be determined by whatever length you have decided to make your porch seat. Nail boards F to the framework, first; then nail the top board H to uprights A, and afterward the other three boards H. Crosspiece G is the size of piece E, and is fastened halfway between the ends to support the seat boards at the center.

Fig. 1 shows how the seat boards are fitted around the uprights, and nailed to the framework members. Buy hooks and chains at a hardware store for supporting the porch seat. Get very long hooks like those shown in Fig. 5, with long screws that will screw at least 3 inches into the seat uprights and porch ceiling rafters; and select heavy iron chains. Fig. 1 shows how to join each pair of end chains several feet above the seat arms so but a single end chain will connect with each of the two ceiling hooks.

When you have completed the carpenter work on the porch seat, sandpaper all rough portions, putty nail holes and joints, and give the woodwork two good coats of paint.

HOME UTILITY BOXES.

Any strong cardboard box may be used. The one for the model was 16 inches wide, 12 inches long, and 3 inches deep, but of course the proportions may be that of whatever box you find.

Fig. 2 shows the box partitioned off into 12 compartments, providing receptacles for lightweight and heavy wrapping twine, shipping tags, gummed labels, rubber bands, paper clips and brass fasteners, tacks and pushpins, passepartout paper, tubes of library paste and glue, bottle of ink, and picture wire and hooks.

Fig. 4 shows how to cut the cardboard strips which partition off the compartments. You will notice that the upper edge of the long strips (A) are notched from the top edge down to the center, and that the short strips which cross them (B) are notched from the bottom edge to the center. The positions for these notches must be located carefully so as to come at the exact intersections of the partitions, and they must be cut of the right width for the crossing partitions to slip into. By examining the illustrations you will understand how the partitions interlock. Fasten the strips with pins pushed through the sides of the box into their ends (Fig. 3).

The back edge of the cover rim must be separated from the rest of the rim at the corners (Fig. 5), and be glued to the back of the box, for a hinge. Then a strip of linen must be glued to the outside of this rim strip, and be lapped over the cover, to re-enforce the hinge.

By covering the outside of the box with cretonne you will greatly improve its appearance. Glue the cretonne to the cardboard.

A string box to keep near the supply of wrapping paper is a handy article to have in the house. Fig. 6 and 7 show a box made for three balls, one of heavy wrapping twine, one of lightweight cotton twine, and one of red, blue or other color twine.

You can use a large candy box. Fasten the cardboard partitions between the sides with pins. The rim of the box cover may be left on it, or may be removed in Fig. 6. Punch holes through the cover for the ends of the twine to run through. The outside of the box should be covered with cretonne to give it a trim appearance.

The HOME BEAUTIFUL

Flowers and Shrubby
Their Care and Cultivation

The Daisy Should Have a Place in Every Garden.

DAISIES

By L. M. BENNINGTON.

No flower in all the garden series is more beloved than the star-eyed daisy, or marguerite. And perhaps no flower has undergone a more decided improvement than this same flower, which fills the meadow spaces with its nodding white and in better soil looks stately from the garden path.

The daisy should have a place in the garden. They make delightful borders to beds of taller-growing annuals, and can be used very effectively in beds of spring-blooming bulbs.

Daisies may be sown at intervals for succession, in shallow boxes of light, rich soil. Cover the seed to about three times their own thickness, and press the soil firmly over them. Keep the box in a warm window, greenhouse or hotbed.

Transplant to new boxes and set out in the open ground when danger from frost is past. Daisies can be sown in beds outside in August or September. They must be protected with straw or litter through the winter and transplanted to their permanent position in the spring.

The orange daisy, South African orange daisy, has become a great favorite. It was introduced a few years ago and has been much of at the flower shows and is used largely on big estates. It is excellent for borders and as a pot-plant.

THE BEAUTY OF HYDRANGEAS

By LIMA R. ROSE.

One of the best late flowering, hardy shrubs is the hydrangea.

While there are other shrubs that I like better, this one seems to be a favorite with the masses. It has the merit of extreme hardiness, easy culture, great floriferousness, late blooming and persistency.

Its flowers lose their early whiteness as the season advances, but in their pinky brown stage they are not without attractiveness, and even after snow comes they afford pleasing effects when seen against a background of pure white.

In planting the hydrangeas, I would never advise using them singly. They are vastly more effective when grouped. By this means we secure for it a strength and dignity which single specimens never have. Planted thickly this plant produces a grand effect.

Those who are in search of a plant that will grow in any soil and under almost any condition, and has hardness enough to withstand the trying ordeal of the severest northern winter, will find the hydrangea the very thing they are looking for.

THE WHITE CARNATION

By BETTY PAKE.

The search for the pure white carnation, one that will keep its pure color for a long period, has never been quite successful.

It is a fact that the average variety remains under cultivation but a few years, and they are constantly renewed out. They must, therefore, constantly be replaced by newer and more vigorous varieties grown from the seed. Often a carnation that produces beautiful white flowers for two or three years falls entirely after that time.

The common garden soil will not do for the carnation. It should be composed of about three-fourths rich, dark loam and one-fourth well-rotted manure. This should be thoroughly mixed several times and by September the first cuttings should be placed in boxes about five inches deep. Set the plants about ten inches apart.

Syringe thoroughly with water until they have a good start. The plants should be staked in order to keep the flowers above the foliage.

The soil should be frequently treated with liquid manure—cow, sheep or hen droppings are excellent—but it should not be too strong, say about the color of weak tea.

If you want large flowers you must disbud the plants judiciously. Give them plenty of water and ventilation, and syringe with tobacco extract to discourage the red spider.

If potted, they should be in pots of from four to seven inches according to the size of the plants. The best way is to propagate them in cold frames, leaving them uncovered as long as possible. The early frosts will not injure them. As the cold weather comes on, cover the sashes, but on bright, sunny days uncover and give them plenty of air.

Of course in very severe weather they must be thoroughly protected against freezing. If they are properly cultivated they will bloom in a month or six weeks.

While carnation growing is not particularly difficult, the plants must be attended to with great regularity. They are rich feeders and therefore must have very rich soil, plenty of water and all the air and sun they can get at the last in order to bring them forward quickly.

Roses and Hydrangeas

A FOUL VILLA'S MEN by Capt. George B. Rodney

SYNOPSIS.

Automobile of Miss Dorothy Upton and friend, Mrs. Fane, breaks down at New Mexico border patrol camp...

If you were a young man beginning to fall in love with a pretty woman, and felt that she reciprocated your sentiments...

CHAPTER VI.

The Death Game.

The faces of the advancing revolutionists were grave. Two men had come out of the mesquite and had laid the body of the dead man upon a saddle blanket...

"A little while ago, Senor Upton," said one of the emissaries, a gray-bearded old man, "we offered you immunity if you would surrender and thus save bloodshed. You refused."

"We now come to tell you that we now demand more. The man who was just murdered was Colonel Pesquera, and I demand, in the name of General Villa, our commander in chief, that the man who shot him be surrendered to us. He will be accorded treatment as a prisoner of war and will receive a fair trial by court-martial."

Wilkes frankly laughed.

"You call his death a murder! What name do you give the attempt to kill us, senor?"

"You have brought it on yourselves, senores; you have no business here on the sacred soil of Mexico. But when you deliberately kill a Mexican citizen, you shall have justice meted out to you."

"If the man who killed Colonel Pesquera is given up to us, the rest can go unharmed. If he is not given up—senores, we have sent for reinforcements. We know that your supply of water is low. You cannot hold out longer. It is but a question of time. I warn you that if we have to take the place we will show no quarter to anyone."

"Knowing the Mexican manner of making war, I am not surprised at that," commented Mr. Upton. "Go on."

"It is solely a question of one life against all of yours. The one who surrenders will receive a fair and impartial trial."

"With a conviction already settled on. Nothing doing in that line, thank you. Come on, Wilkes, if that's all they have to say."

Upton strode angrily off up the hill, with Wilkes following. The two exchanged not a word until they once more entered the shelter of the house. Then Upton broke the silence.

"We are in a bad fix and there's no denying it, Wilkes. What the dickens can we do? Kynaston, come into the back room, where we can talk over a private matter without interference."

When they entered the council chamber Upton lit a pipe and strode up and down, his brow wrinkled in thought.

"Look here, Upton," Kynaston spoke sharply, "I can't bring those men of mine over here even if I could get them. It would mean war. There's no question about that. To bring armed forces across the line will mean war to a certainty. That man was shot by one of us, Upton—I mean by you or me; and I can't say which to save my life."

"Not that it matters. There can be only one outcome from the quandary. You can't surrender, Upton, even if you killed him, because you have your daughter to look after. I will go down there and tell them that my troop has orders to come across after me if I am not back by daylight, and maybe if they are confronted with a bluff like that it may work. What do you say?"

"Say?" growled Upton. "I say that when you are once in their hands you won't have any more chance in a snowball in Tophet. No, my boy, you stay here."

"I think I can escape from them even if I do surrender. No, Upton, it must be done as I say; I will accept their terms and go down there."

"You'll do no such fool thing," growled Upton again. "You don't suppose that I'm going to profit that way, do you? No, sir! I'll tell you what we'll do, Kynaston. We'll play for it—a game of whisky poker for three chips. Whoever gets three chips first gives himself up in the morning. What do you say?"

"Fair enough," said Kynaston. "Slightly higher stakes than I'm used to playing for, though," he observed grimly as his host took a pack of cards from the table drawer. "When you consider the amount of a lieutenant's pay, you'll realize the size of the stakes. Go on; deal, and 'may God defend the right!'"

Kynaston picked up his five cards, carefully sorted the ace-high aggregation to the left of his hand, considered the "widow." He threw down the hand and picked up the five cards from the center of the table. Upton stood pat. The show-down showed three aces in Kynaston's hand as against kings and sevens.

Upton took a chip. The cards passed to Kynaston. Both men became intent upon the game.

In the second hand, with Kynaston dealing, Upton passed, and Kynaston turned up the widow. He noticed that ly at him as I ever aimed at anything in my life. Did you?"

"I did. An' without lyin' more than ordinarily I do, I can say that if I did miss it's the first time for a long time. Did you see the body?"

"No. They covered it up with the blanket too quick for me to see. Why?"

"I wonder if it's possible that we both plugged him."

"That's got nothing to do with it," said Kynaston roughly. "They only claim one of us. Play your hand, Upton! What ails you?"

"Nothin', only I'd like to bet that if you killed him he's got two bullet-holes in him. I must say I don't like the idea of havin' a clean miss set down against me—takin' up the widow, are you?"

For Kynaston, the play passing to him, quietly laid down his hand and picked the five cards from the center of the table.

"Wouldn't have me stand on two small pairs with the stakes we're playin' for, would you?"

There was little mirth in the jest. Just so do men jest who, standing on the Peaks of Peril, look down into the Valley of the Shadow. Just so have Anglo-Saxon men jested from time immemorial, playing with death as boys do with marbles, holding it indeed to be a little thing where honor is to be gained.

The older man speculated. Then he threw down a card. This gave him the right on the next play to throw down one card and pick up two.

"Shall we turn up the cards?"

The sweat had started again on Kynaston's face, but he summoned a laugh—it was the poorest imitation that was ever heard—and flung down his hand face up. It was one ace, one king, one seven and—two fours!

"If you've got anything at all in your hand as it is, you have me beaten. I can't better my hand from what I threw down. In the name of Heaven, Upton, show down!"

Upton, with a quick look at his young opponent, laid his hand quietly upon the table. Three jacks peered out from behind a seven spot.

"I was aiming to speculate again on the next round if you hadn't dropped out an' then try for the four jacks. Want a drink?"

Kynaston nodded, smiling wanly at his host.

"It's all right, old man," he said presently. "It's as it should be. You see you've got Dorothy to look after—and I'd have liked that job myself if the cards had fallen the other way."

Upton whistled.

"Good Heavens, boy! Does she know?"

Kynaston shook his head softly.

"No. It came too late for me to tell her. She must never know. Upton. Not a word of this. I'll go down at dusk. You must get the ladies in the back room on some pretext. They would raise the deuce and all if they knew—and then I'll walk on down."

"I shall not take a rifle with me, but I will take that little thirty-eight automatic of yours. It may come in handy in the time of need, and I can hide that where a heavy gun would be detected. And now, if you don't mind, old fellow, I'll trouble you for a sheet or two of paper."

"If I am reported as killed over here the American papers would jump to the conclusion that I had deserted. Then I'll have a couple of notes that I'd like you to deliver when—when I've gone down there."

"Kynaston! I don't like to ask you this—but, man and boy, I've known the army for fifty years, and I know that an officer doesn't get a chance to put by any money. Were your people army people?"

"Yes, why?"

"Is your sister dependent upon you in any way?"

"None of your business, Mr. Upton," said the youngster. "No one need be concerned in this matter but you and me. We played the game. I lost, and I mean to pay."

There was no mistaking the tears in the old man's eyes as he looked steadily at his opponent.

"I know," he said slowly, fiddling with the pack, though his hands shook. "I know. I won't insult you by offering to trade places with you. You have answered my question, boy. If it is any small comfort to you, you can rest assured that your sister shall be provided for. Where're you going?"

"To my room a moment. I'll see you when I come back."

To Kynaston as he passed out of the great main room the world seemed awfully. The game was fair enough, but he had not counted on his nervous system falling him.

It is one thing to contemplate death as a possibility; it is one thing even to contemplate it as a certainty at the end of a specified time, but to gamble life away as if it were a dollar was something that the cavalryman was not prepared for.

He would pay—of course he would pay, just as he knew in his heart of hearts that old Upton would have paid had he lost. But to save his soul Kynaston could not help reflecting that, had the end been different, he might have had his chance at winning Dorothy.

Do you think the Mexicans will be likely to give Kynaston a fair trial and humane death—or is it probable they will torture him like the bloodthirsty savages they are?

Teddy Lost His Nerve

The farce has been completed, the progressive wing of the Republican party has been treated to the same system of political treachery as was the parent body four years ago. Some time prior to and during the sessions of the two conventions at Chicago, Mr. Roosevelt made himself very conspicuous as well as ludicrous in his spectacular bluff to force his nomination for the presidency upon the party he had betrayed in the previous campaign. He, at that time, characterized the utterances of Mr. Hughes as those of a pussy foot politician, one who was incapable of measuring up to the true ideals of American statesmanship and one who could, under no conditions, receive his support or the endorsement of the Progressive party. He was vehement in his declarations that he was the only true American in this broad land, and the last hope of the nation in the troublous times portending. The regular, or stand pat, Republicans very coldly and very emphatically gave his case the once over and passed him up, very much in the same manner as a passenger train would a tramp. The progressives, feeling confident that the bellicose colonel would run true to his off vaunted declarations, just as promptly handed him their unanimous endorsement and nomination. This was a splendid tribute and not one of the delegates but would have staked his honor upon the loyalty and honesty of his idol, but once more he revealed his true nature and turned coldly from the only friends he had remaining in the political organizations of the country. He recanted all his former utterances and declared for the man previously characterized as a pussy foot politician and demanded that the progressive party cast their principles to the four winds of the heavens and flock to the support of Mr. Hughes. This was, probably, the most open and flagrant insult ever cast in the teeth of a political party and is in perfect keeping with the inordinate selfishness and monumental egotism of the individual. Mr. Roosevelt has never stood for a principal, his activities have been confined exclusively to personal aggrandizement and the forwarding of his own political ambitions. He has never turned down any means that presented themselves that would, in any manner, tend to make him more secure in reaching his goal. It will be remembered that in his suit against Barnes he admitted on the witness stand that he had committed perjury in order to be government of New York, and excused his crime by saying that New York needed his services. This was characteristic of the man and was but another evidence of the high esteem in which he held the man, Roosevelt. All means were good that had for their object the gratification of the ambitions of himself. While president of the United States his appointments were made largely from those who had no qualifications for the duties they were to assume, and some of them, notably, Bat Masterson, king of the redlight district in Dodge City; Pat Garrett, France, of Oklahoma; and many others of equally bad repute, were put in important governmental positions. He appears to have taken a great interest in gamblers, prize fighters and bawdy house managers, while some of the old time gun men gave him great delight. Roosevelt has always been a spectacular but never a dignified figure and if he has ever been the father of any real statesmanship or has promulgated any constructive legislation it has not been recorded to his credit. His career has been noted for its bluster and pomposity and is hardly compatible with his latest actions in flocking to the support of the man who put him out of national politics. Is it possible that he has also become a quitter? Indications point that way.

Dobbin Coming Back

By Walt Mason

It looked as though the horse was doomed, the way the motor business boomed, and Dobbin, steed of sterling worth, prepared to tumble off the earth. Town dwellers tried to give away the snrrey and the one-hoss shay and every other wheeled machine that wasn't run by gasoline. And any man who drove a hoss was looked on as a total loss; we wouldn't bow to such a dub to have him at the country club. His wife no longer we'd invite when we had tea or euchre fight. But we begin to realize that he who drives a horse is wise, for no horse owner e'er is seen to fill his steed with gasoline. A horse eats hay, and hay is cheap; one bale in luxury will keep a charger for three days or five, no odds how hard a man may drive. But if you fill your car with hay and try to run the thing that way it will not wag its tail and ears or go a foot in forty years. The owner of a car, alas, but blows his substances in for gas, and as the sparkling juice he pours, the fierce old price still higher soars.

University of New Mexico

Not only do a great many students at New Mexico state university pay their own way in whole or in part, while the university is in session, but a surprising number of them find profitable employment in New Mexico during the summer months. A. S. Hunt, secretary to President David R. Boyd has on his list seventy-nine university students who have found regular employment for the summer months, paying $60 to $100 a month and in a number of instances over that amount. These latter will earn more than enough to pay college expenses for the coming university year, while all will be able to put aside enough to go a long way toward paying necessary expenses for another year at the university.

Of the seventy nine listed with the President's secretary, three are with the border guard at Columbus; seven are in the forestry services, five as forest guards and one as a forestry office man. Four have positions in mines, two having important positions in engineering work, one with the China Copper company and another with Phelps-Dodge & Company, at Purley. Six are employed in stores, four in hotels, six have office positions, two are in post offices, three in banks, three are teaching in summer schools, or tutoring, twelve are on farms and cattle ranches, several have positions on university work, in campus improvement, on the university land survey, etc. Two are with newspapers. One is employed by the state taxpayers' association. The whole list, in fact, have found profitable employment.

STATEWIDE CONTEST FOR QUEEN OF STATE FAIR AND $100 IN GOLD

High Honors for Winning Young Ladies; Railroad and Hotel Expenses Paid for Queen and Maids of Honor, and $100 in Gold for Young Lady Who Is Chosen Queen. Contest Begins July 2nd.—Ends September 15th. Rules and Conditions of the Contest in Which Every County Will Participate.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., June 29.—W. P. Southard, president of the state fair commission, today announced in behalf of the commission, a statewide contest, open to the young women of New Mexico, and in which are offered, to the winner the honor of being queen of the 1916 New Mexico State Fair, railroad and hotel expenses in attending the fair, and $100 in gold, to be presented on the day the queen of the fair is publicly crowned. To other contestants than the winner are offered honors as first maid of honor, and a chance of winning distinction as county maid of honor, one such maid of honor to be chosen from each of New Mexico's twenty-six counties, with the exception of Bernalillo county, which will not participate in the competition. In connection with the competition, which involves sale of admission tickets to the fair, each contestant has the opportunity of earning considerable sums of money in commissions on ticket sales, which will be paid to all who sell the tickets, except the winner of the capital prize.

The contest begins Sunday, July 2, and concludes Friday, September 15, and all who expect to enter the contest are urged to file their applications at once, in accordance with the following rules and regulations, under which the contest will be conducted, and as given out officially by the state fair commission today:

RULES OF THE CONTEST

The New Mexico State Fair Commission proposes a popular election to determine the young lady who shall be Queen of the New Mexico State Fair, September 25-30, 1916, in contest under rules and regulations of a statewide contest, as given below:

The lady winning the honor shall receive $100 in gold coin, her railroad fare to and from the State Fair, and her hotel expenses while attending the Fair.

The lady winning second place shall be declared First Maid of Honor to the Queen, and her railroad expenses and hotel expenses shall be paid by the State Fair Commission.

The lady receiving the highest number of votes in each county of New Mexico, in addition to and following the selection of the Queen and First Maid of Honor, as above stated, shall be declared Maid of Honor from the county in which she resides, and shall receive payment of her railroad and hotel expenses by the State Fair Commission, the same as the First Maid of Honor, whose election is by statewide vote.

OBJECT OF THE CONTEST

The object of this voting contest, hereby inaugurated by the State Fair Commission for the selection of Queen of the Fair, First Maid of Honor and County Maids of Honor, is to arouse still greater interest in the greatest State Fair the Southwest has known, and which opens at Albuquerque September 25th, to end the evening of September 30th. Following are the conditions and rules:

1. Votes for Queen and Maids of Honor are based upon sales of admission tickets to the State Fair grounds. Each ticket shall be sold at a uniform price of 50 cents, is transferable, and entitles the bearer to one admission to the State Fair grounds on any day during the Fair, without restriction. Each 50-cent ticket purchased in this contest entitles the purchaser to cast fifty (50) votes for the lady of his choice for Queen of the Fair.

2. To avoid entrance of an improper person into this contest each contestant shall be vouched for by the County Superintendent of Schools, the nearest postmaster or banker, of the county in which she lives, upon blanks which will be furnished by the State Fair Commission for the purpose, or by postal card or letter from such official, postmaster or banker.

3. Aside from this recommendation, which shall be a certificate of good character, this contest is open to every woman in New Mexico, with the agreement that the lady receiving the highest total number of votes in the whole state, on or before midnight, September 15th, shall be declared Queen of the Fair, shall receive her expenses in attending the Fair and $100 in gold when crowned Queen of the Fair. The lady receiving the second highest number of votes in the state as a whole, shall be declared First Maid of Honor to the Queen and shall receive her expenses in attending the Fair. Twenty-three ladies receiving the highest number of votes, each in the county in which she lives (and excepting the queen and the First Maid of Honor) shall be declared County Maids of Honor from her county of residence, and shall receive her expenses in attending the Fair.

4. Ladies living in Albuquerque and Bernalillo County are excluded from this contest, but a second contest will be inaugurated at a later date for "The Maid of Albuquerque," who will lead the parade on Albuquerque Day, and for her Maids of Honor.

5. Books of tickets, for sale by contestants, with voting coupons attached, will be furnished to each candidate, upon application to STATE FAIR COMMISSION, Queen of the Fair Contest Manager, Albuquerque, New Mexico, accompanied by certificate of character as stated above. Complete instructions will be forwarded to each candidate.

6. The State Fair Commission hereby disclaims any responsibility for any money paid for remittances, unless such money is remitted to the Commission and person who wishes may remit money direct to the State Fair Commission, Albuquerque, indicate for whom votes shall be cast and to whom admission tickets shall be sent, but such remittances must in all cases be accompanied by the full price of the tickets purchased, at 50 cents each. No contestant is agent for the State Fair Commission, and ticket orders and voting coupons will be recognized only when accompanied by the full amount of tickets sold.

7. This announcement is made simultaneously in each city and town in New Mexico having a daily or weekly newspaper, and the State Fair Commission will mail coupon books, receipts and blanks to those desiring to become candidates, in the order of their receipt, on and after July 2nd. No tickets will be counted which are received earlier than Monday, July 3rd, and no vote will be counted that is mailed to or delivered to the State Fair Commission later than midnight of September 15th. In order that remote districts may be fairly dealt with tickets mailed before midnight September 15th, and so certified by the local postmaster, will be counted on receipt.

COMMISSIONS FOR ALL CONTESTANTS

1. No Maid of Honor will be allotted to any county in which less than two hundred (200) tickets are sold, and for which $100 is received by the State Fair Commission. Each contestant other than the Queen, the First Maid of Honor and the County Maids of Honor, will receive a cash reward of ten per cent (10%) on all money remitted to the State Fair Commission, to be counted as votes for herself. Should a contestant other than those named above remit $50 to the Commission, the lady for whom such tickets are voted will receive from the Commission a check for $50.

The same proportion will be maintained for larger or smaller amounts. DO NOT REMIT TO COMMISSIONS. THE STATE FAIR COMMISSION MUST RECEIVE THE FULL FACE VALUE (50 CENTS) FOR EACH TICKET SOLD BEFORE A TICKET OF ADMISSION WILL BE ISSUED OR VOTES CAST FOR THE CANDIDATE. COMMISSIONS ON TICKET SALES WILL BE REMITTED TO EACH CANDIDATE AT THE CLOSE OF THE CONTEST. A careful accounting system has been installed whereby each candidate will receive accurate credits for each remittance and full credit for all votes allotted to her by sale of tickets.

9. There is no limit to the number of tickets which may be purchased by any one person. There are six (6) days of the State Fair, and a person purchasing six tickets for $3 may cast 300 votes for the contestant of his choice, and 50 votes for each ticket purchased.

10. Address all communications regarding this contest to QUEEN OF THE FAIR CONTEST MANAGER, STATE FAIR COMMISSION, ALBUQUERQUE, NEW MEXICO.

(Signed) W. P. SOUTHARD,
President, New Mexico State Fair Commission.

DAIRYING IN WESTERN CANADA

Accompanying Industries Also Prove Highly Profitable.

The cheese industry throughout western Canada today is in a highly flourishing condition and is bound in a very short time to become much more important. The war has created a great demand for that article, and its use abroad has given it a lot of useful advertising. The article known as Canadian cheese is now sought not only by the soldier in the trenches, but by the ordinary civilian consumer, who, having used it, is quick to appreciate its value. This means that after the war there will be a demand created for it that would not otherwise have been. Up to the present the war needs have limited the local supply, but with the increased effort that is now being put forth it is hoped that this will be met. As a matter of course the prices are high, and the farmers who contribute to the cheese factories are making money.

The cheese season is now fully open and there is every prospect of an excellent year because the high price which obtained last year will undoubtedly be maintained this season. Western Canada has all the natural resources for the making of cheese, the feed and the cool nights, two things essential, and in time it is bound to become one of the finest cheese countries of the continent.

The lower foothills of Alberta, used only at the present time as ranges or for no purpose, will in time produce cheese in great quantities, and doubtless will soon equal the famous uplands of Denmark.

The cool nights mean the better keeping of milk and cream and cheese, and that is a great thing for the industry, especially when combined with possibilities of cattle feed such as exist on the long slopes from the Rockies eastward.

The hog market, which may be classed as an adjunct of farming, is an exceedingly good one, and the low cost at which the feed can be produced, coupled with the high prices realized, make this industry very profitable.

One of the first thoughts that occur to the mind of the average prospective settler is the likelihood of suitable markets. In this connection the following table will be illuminating. It is supplied by the P. Burns company, packers and exporters, of Calgary, and shows the average monthly price paid for hogs for the six years 1910 to 1915 inclusive. When one considers the low initial cost of the land and the small overhead cost of maintenance and feed, these prices challenge comparison.

A farmer of Monarch, Alberta, claims the distinction of being the first in the province to sell a carload of hogs at the high price of eleven cents a pound, live weight. The sale was made a short time ago at Calgary, and at that time was a record, although prices have since gone as high as $11.12 1/2 per hundredweight. With such prices available for hogs the farmer has a market for everything his farm produces, as there is practically no farm product which cannot be converted into good hog flesh. The uncertainty of results which attends grain farming even under most favorable conditions is removed when the settler goes in for raising hogs, beef and dairy products. With Western Canada's cheap lands, heavy crops, and climate free from diseases of stock, the stock farmer is as sure of success as anyone can be.—Advertisement.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

LITTLE ECONOMIES.

The mind is master of the man, and so they can who think they can.
A diligent man can always find leisure, a lazy one, never.

Cut stale bread into lengths the size of the finger, dip into milk and put into a greased tin to bake in the oven until crisp. Spread with marmalade or jam after putting on a thin coating of butter and serve hot.

To keep the baby off the floor and yet give him exercise, place two table leaves on his bed, cover with a carpet and he will be able to sit or stand with no fear of a fall or a cold.

When putting a casserole into the oven see that there is no moisture on the outside, as carelessness in this matter often causes chipping and cracking.

A good brown cake recipe may be made by using cracklings for shortening. To two cupsfuls of chopped cracklings add a cupful of brown sugar, one-half cupful of seeded raisins, a teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of allspice. Into a cup drop an egg, three-fourths full of milk, and add one and a fourth cupfuls of flour, sifted with two tablespoonfuls of baking powder and a fourth of a teaspoonful of salt. Drop in gem pans and bake.

Pineapple Pudding.—Dry three slices of stale bread until crisp, then roll or put through the meat grinder. To the bread crumbs add one cupful of flour, one tablespoonful of butter and one-half cupful of sugar, one cupful of milk, one-half cupful of pineapple juice, and two slices of the fruit with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, combine in the order given, pour into a buttered dish and bake 20 minutes. Serve with a sauce made by cooking together two tablespoonfuls of butter and flour, add a cupful of pineapple juice and a tablespoonful of lemon juice, a cupful of sugar and a grating of nutmeg.

Spice Pudding.—To two cupfuls of graham bread crumbs add one well-beaten egg, one pint of sour milk, one teaspoonful of soda, one cupful of sugar, a cupful each of chopped dates and nuts, one tablespoonful of butter and spices to taste. Bake in a moderate oven and serve with whipped cream.

OUT OF THE COOKY JAR.
Character is built out of circumstances. From exactly the same materials one man builds palaces, while another builds hovels.—G. H. Lewis.

Oatmeal in various forms is good for children, and when made into simple cakes without spice is wholesome and nutritious. A point to be remembered when using oatmeal: If it is to be well digested it must be well cooked, and the time it takes to bake small cakes containing oatmeal is not sufficient to cook the meal so that it will be digested. Treat the oatmeal to a good, strong heat in the oven, stirring it as one did coffee in the old days, when it was browned at home. After this good baking it will be slightly brown. Then put it through the fine cutter of the meat grinder, and it is ready to use in cakes, and it will not be too much cooked if used in oatmeal bread.

Scotch Cookies.—Take 2 1/4 cupfuls of oatmeal, prepared as for the drop cookies, two cupfuls of flour, adding another half cupful to use for rolling out the cookies, one cupful of sugar, two eggs well beaten, three tablespoonfuls of milk, three-quarters of a teaspoonful of soda, one-half cupful of butter, one-third of a cupful of beef drippings, one teaspoonful of salt, one tablespoonful of spices, cinnamon, nutmeg, and clove mixed. Mix as usual, and set aside on ice, or, even better, let stand over night before rolling out. A sharp cutter is needed for cutting.

Oatmeal Drops.—Take a cupful of butter and other shortening, mixed and softened; add a cupful of sugar, two eggs, two cupfuls each of flour and rolled oats, five tablespoonfuls of milk, a teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-half teaspoonful each of salt and soda, mixed with the flour; one cupful each of raisins and walnuts, finely chopped. These may, by mixing, be put through the chopper easily. Drop the dough by half teaspoonfuls, two inches apart, on baking sheets, and bake in a moderate oven.

WAYS WITH VEGETABLES.

But happy they, thrice happy, who possess
The art to mix these sweets with due address.

Better is often bread today than cakes tomorrow.

Most American cooking of vegetables is poorly done, and for that reason we do not secure sufficient nutrition from them to satisfy hunger and keep the body in perfect physical condition. Those who study the proper methods of vegetable cookery do not crave meat, because their vegetables are delicately flavored and deliciously seasoned. The average cook cooks the life all out of the vegetable in the water and then throws that away, retaining the mere waste for food.

Mustard Greens.—Wash the mustard leaves and put them on to cook with no water, adding as little as possible, to keep from scorching. If the greens are cut in shreds before being put on to cook they will cook quicker. Sprinkle with salt, pepper and corneal, using a tablespoonful of the latter; let cook until tender and the meal is thoroughly done.

Eggplant With Tomatoes.—Peel and cut eggplant into inch cubes. Melt a tablespoonful of butter in a saucepan and put in the eggplant, one cupful of tomatoes and one small onion, chopped very fine. Season with salt and pepper, cayenne and ground cloves, nutmeg, ginger, mustard and cinnamon. Cook until the eggplant is thoroughly soft.

Vegetable Salad.—Mix equal parts of shredded cabbage and celery, a good sized apple and a tablespoonful of onion, all cut fine, with a good salad dressing. Serve well chilled on lettuce leaves.

Cabbage and Onions.—Shred a cabbage and put into a kettle with a tablespoonful of oil or butter, add a chopped onion, cayenne pepper and salt and cover closely to cook in its own steam. The onion may be fried in butter before adding, which makes a difference in the flavor of the dish.

Sautéed Radishes.—Use the large, white ones, cut in small pieces and add butter or oil and cook them in their own steam, adding more water if needed, but leaving none when they are ready to serve. Season with salt, mustard and turmeric.

Make my mortal dreams come true
With the work I vain would do.
Clothe with life the weak intent;
Let me be the thing I meant.

Place a heel of a loaf of French bread, rubbed with a slice of onion or a clove of garlic in the salad bowl and heap the salad over it.
A Spanish onion scooped out makes a pretty salad dish; also a cabbage head hollowed and filled with a salad garnished with nasturtiums placed on the chop plate with the cabbage.
Beautiful and wonderfully attractive are the salads for a wedding served in the cups of a white rose, garnished with rosebuds and twigs and leaves. The white meat of chicken would seem to be the only appropriate salad for such an elysian feast.

Fish salads are usually marinated, while it is not necessary to do so with meat salads.

Warm gingerbread, cottage cheese and apple sauce are delicious together.

Cut celery in 2 1/4-inch pieces and split in narrow strips, cut nearly to the center, from both ends. Throw into cold water and let them curl. Use these as a garnish for a whole tomato salad.

A tablespoonful of butter makes better pats of good size.
Garnish butter pats with sorrel, clover or buttercups.
Fresh fruit served with a pyramid of powdered sugar in the center of the dish is a most attractive arrangement. The powdered sugar may be molded in a small glass, by pressing it, then carefully unmold.

Popovers may be used as shells for entrees of various kinds.
Sweetbreads should be parboiled in water with a bit of lemon juice or vinegar.

Needlework in Many Attractive Designs Has Achieved Much Popularity for Afternoon and Evening Gowns, as Shown in the Illustration—Footwear Never So Artistic, or So High in Price.

Needlework in which long stitches in heavy floss or yarn are used to produce many new effects made its appearance first on millinery. It reappeared with the entrance of the styles for spring, in suits and blouses and has reached its best development in afternoon and evening gowns. It is in reality a sort of embroidery which may be rapidly done, and the long stitch effect is made by tacking heavy floss to the fabric it decorates with fine silk thread. It is a showy decoration admitting of cleverness of colors, and there is no limit to variety of design in using it.

For blouses lighter flosses are used, often in conjunction with metal

No matter how rich the costume may be this season, its correctness will be questioned if the shoes are not up to the high mark of daintiness and elegance set by the fashions of today. Footwear is quiet as to color and exquisite as to workmanship and it is light and finished to the last degree of excellence. Women have never been more beautifully shod.

The very short skirt has many faithful adherents and the high boot to wear with it is imperative. It comes high in more senses than one, for shoes have advanced greatly in price, with the prospect pointing to a further advance. But there is no denying the youthful look of the short skirt or the threads, and actual stitching works out the design. These decorative features of the new season may be the inspiration of bead work, which appears along with them, but is not so popular. It is more tedious to do and is not superior to the floss in appearance, and it is not so light in weight. But the same designs may be wrought in either beads or floss.

An afternoon gown of black tulle over satin pictures a model in which black and white beads embroider the tulle overdress in bands. The underskirt of satin is plaited and joined to a low sleeveless bodice of satin. The overdress is very full, with a three-charm of neatly clad feet and ankles, therefore the high boot flourishes in the face of a shortage of leather.

Two styles in high boots and one in low shoes are shown in the illustration given above. The high shoes are made in several shades of gray and in pale tan, or the same models may be had in black or white or combinations of black with all of the lighter colors. There is a choice of styles in heels. They are only moderately high, whether following the French or Cuban lines.

The low shoe pictured is a favorite in black or white. The seams are outlined with a cut-out pattern that is inch hem about the bottom. A wide band of beadwork heads the hem and a similar band divides the skirt half way of its length. A narrower design is worked about the skirt at the hip line and midway between the two wide bands. The same designs appear in short bands on the bodice.

Long sleeves of tulle are finished with cuffs of satin, and a decoration of several parallel rows of beads reaches from shoulder to cuff. The deep cuffs are adorned with a single row of the same embroidery. The round neck makes opportunity for a wide standing band of tulle. There is a soft girdle of satin ribbon. Narrower satin ribbon hangs in loops and ends at three places at each side of the skirt. Black silk stockings and patent leather slippers complete the toilet.

Bria—Stitching Trims Linen Dresses.
A dainty little cotton dress was seen the other day in a schoolgirl's outfit. It was of oyster linen and the hem was turned up on the right side. The skirt was cut circular and the discrepancy of width was arranged in little flaring "pockets," a scalloping green bria-stitch encircled the hem, catching the linen every three or four inches. Little sprays of briarstitching were carried down from the belt and here and there tiny rosebuds were embroidered in. The same stitching was repeated on the collar and the little dress was a real "creation."
