Judge J. C. Compton arrived from the border Sunday to hold the regular term of the probate court. The judge is first lieutenant of Company M and reports many interesting things about conditions at the front. He says the boys are all in good health and, apparently, enjoying themselves, in a way. They have had regular drills and are now but little less proficient in military duty than the regulars. It appears that company M had the distinction of capturing the first Mexican spy apprehended within the lines.

SYNOPSIS.

—9— Automobile of Miss Dorothy Upton and friend, Mrs. Fane, breaks down at New Mexico border patrol camp, commanded by Lieutenant Kynaston. The two wom-en are on way to mine of Miss Upton's father, located a few miles across the Mexican border. Kynaston leaves women at his camp while he goes with a detail to investigate report of Villa gun runners. Villa troops drive small force of Car-ransa across border line and they surren-der to Kynaston. Dorothy and Mrs. Fane still at camp when Kynaston returns with prisoners. Blind Mexican priest appears in camp and claims interned Mexicans have in the spoils broth across the line have in the spoils brought across the line a wonderful emerald bell stolen from a shrine by Zapata and taken from him by ahrine by Zapata and taken from him by Carranza troops. Priest is searching for the emerald in order to return it to the shrine. Kynaston finds jewel and reports to department headquarters. Major Up-dyke appears from headquarters to take charge of valuables captured. Priest and emerald bell disappear. Kynaston slips across border with one man to ald Upton family surrounded by Villistas. The water supply runs short. The defen-ders kill some of their besiegers, among them an important officer. Mexicans go mad. They demand sacrifice of man who killed officer. Both Upton and Kynaston had fired at him, so they play poker game to decide which shall surrender and thus save lives of others besieged. Kynaston loses and prepares to offer himself to enemy.

Hely Writ says there is no greater love than the sacrifice of one's life to save another's. But in real life do you believe that a man would deliberately throw his life away in order to save the life of the father of the girl he loves-especially when the old father stood willing and ready to enter the Valley of the Shadow? You will be much interested in Lieutenant Kynaston's problem, described in this installment.

Give my love to-your-daughter." Upton frankly choked as he watched the younger man swing off down the hill Steadily Kynaston tramped down across the dead olive-green of the parched alfalfa patch, skirted the dead brown of the sugar cane, paused to wave his hand to the old miner, and then-disappeared from view among the cottonwoods.

Upton, sighing, turned back to the house. He tramped through the great room amid a great silence. Men turned from their loopholes, scanned his face, and furtively fell to rubbing spotless rifle-bolts with their shirtsleeves. They saw in his face such grief as is abo e mere words, and, after the manner of the southwest, respected it.

Dorothy and Mrs. Fane he found in the back room. They knew, or suspected. Mrs. Fane was sitting in a chair at the head of the table, her face in her hands, frankly weeping, with her arms spread upon the table, her beautiful figure racked with sobs.

Dorothy, a mixture of fire and ice, stood by the window, which was closed and barred, confronting Mr. Wilkes. who fairly cringed before the concentrated fury in her eyes.

"I say it was a shame-a shame! she cried. "What if he did kill him? Did they not try to kill him first, and have they not stolen first from us, and for two days now tried to kill us all? Did he not peril his life to get us water? Did he not cross the line and risk his life and, more than his life, his reputation as a soldier to help us? "What must he think of us? To also knew right well that the old miner woud leave no stone unturned to help him. If he could gain thirtysix hours at most and then manage to scape, he might still win out.

He was by no means hopeless, though well-nigh desperate, as he drew down from the higher ground to the camp, well sheltered in the valley. He saw that more men were coming inpresumably the talked-of re-enforcements

They saw him as he came down the him, lariats circling, horses frantically caracoling about him, their riders striving to see who should be the first to get a rope about the neck of the accursed gringo. Mercifully he forestalled their attempts by backing up against a tall mesquit bush so that the loops of their lariats could not settle about his neck. Seeing his intention they voiced their disapproval in a renewed outburst of yells.

Further designs upon him were prevented by the opportune arrival of an officer, who dispersed the crowd by the simple process of beating them about the heads with a stick.

"Have you come from the house yonder, senor?"

"Yes. And I claim proper treatclaim to treat people in your power decently when your troops are as out of hand as that."

"I will take you to El General Obispo, senor," said the officer courteous-"For your own sake, I warn you. do not anger him. His temper is a trifle uncertain, owing to his having to undergo severe privations for the past week."

A sentry slept in the doorway. From the interior came the smell of a meal that had evidently just been served.

Following his guide, Kynaston entered. El General Obispo, a squat little man, whose high cheek bones and full lips betokened his Indian ancestry, looked up from the supper which he was eating by the simple process of stuffing as much carne seco in his mouth as that organ would hold, and then cutting off the balance with a none too clean knife.

El general growled out a question. The officer explained who Kynaston was. In answer the general rose hastily from the table, spat the meat from his mouth, and began such a furious John A. Sheatz, ex-state treasurer of silent.

Demand for Canadian Cattle After the War.

The opportunities that Western Can ada offers to the farmer have time and again been placed before the blie through these columns. The cheap price at which the very best lands can be purchased, and the advantage that is to be had in securing one of the free homesteads of 160 acres has appealed to a great many, and they have embraced them. Many, in fact most of those who have done so are today giving testimony to the good fortune and the timely forethought that led them to go to Western Canada, and embark in an era of farming that has placed them away beyond the pinch of want and given them reason to look into the future with a hopefulness that they had not had the courage in the past to torecast.

Not only have they been able to secure good lands at low prices and on easy terms but if they desire they have been able to add to this 160 acres of land free, on conditions that are easy. A resident in the Lloydminster district in Saskatchewan who had been farming in the States for some time, took up a homestead in 1910, and commenced breaking with 4 oxen. Two years ago he bought an adjoining quarter section and now has over 100 acres under cultivation. He says, "As my circumstances improved, I sold the oxen and now have six head of horses, twelve head of cattle, and have always a bunch of hogs on hand.

I have made a success of mixed farming and would have no hesitation in advising all who contemplate making a new home to come to this district. I sell cream to the Government Creamery here, and find at all times a good market for live stock and other produce."

This is but a modest statement of what a modest man can do in Western Canada, and could be repeated of hundreds of thers.

Scores of cases could be recited "Take him away! Place him in he Liberty Bell, at the time when oath of allegiance to his adopted where much more has been accomplished, and it is believed that with moderate investment at the present time, the cattle industry of Western Canada will pay large interest. The Minister of Agriculture of Saskatchewan, in a recent address, ventured the prediction that the Saskatchewan farmer who developed his land along the lines of general stock breeding would make much more money and find a far bigger return for his efforts in ten years' time than the man who devoted his energies purely and primarily to grain raising. This was the coming golden age of opportunity for the stockman and it was up to the Saskatchewan man to get in on the ground floor and prepare himself for the coming demand. The close of the war would undoubtedly see a great demand for live stock in Europe and it was only reasonable to suppose that this demand would have to be filled almost wholly by American stockmen, both in Canada and the United States. Europe was slowly draining its rural districts not only of its beef and dairy animals but was also using the finer breeding animais and the end of the war would see a condition of affairs which would render necessary almost the repopulation of the domestic animal kingdom in that continent. The opportunity of Western Canadian stockmen, therefore, lay in being prepared for this demand when it arose. In view of these facts which must be patent to every student of economic conditions as related to the stock industry, he hoped to see within the next three years the stock raising industry in Saskatchewan given an immense impetus forward, which would put it in the forefront of the producing provinces of the Dominion.-Advertisement.

would not take would be over in twenty-four hours, unless-a horrible thought came to him--those men below, whose prisoner he would be in two hours, were savages in the rough; savages with the blood-lust fairly roused and inflamed by defeat.

He had heard tales of torture among the prisoners that he had seen at Nogales horrible tales!

The thought of having to go without even saying farewell to Dorothy unnerved him for a moment, but he realized his own limitations, and he knew that in that last moment he would betray himself. So down he sat at the table and wrote two short notes; one to his colonel, in which he explained the whole affair, and the other to the sister that lived in a quiet little Maryland town among the placid back eddies of the eastern shore.

Kynaston, his notes written, filled the clip of the automatic and slipped it into his boot-leg, where its flat frame would be most likely to lie undetected.

A moment later Upton came into the room. His face was gray with suppressed feeling and his gaunt frame showed unmistakable suffering. In the few minutes that had passed since Kynaston had left him the whole tragedy of the next twenty-four hours had been brought home to him.

"I can't let you go, boy," he said hoarsely. "We had better take our chance. Bring your men on over across the border."

The appeal was almost overwhelming in its intensity. "Don't you know that it means your life?"

"I know. But it means war if I do; and, Upton, as God is my judge, I cannot start a war that will involve the country to save my own skin. You see that, don't you?"

Upton licked his dry lips.

"When-when-do you mean to leave?" he asked.

"Right now." Kynaston's face was pale.

"Are the ladies in the back room ?" "Yes. I'll go with you to the Wilson and the Democratic party are before the people with a record that has never been equaled since the civil war, and with a declaration of principles that ought and will appeal to every patriotic and peace loving citizen of the United States. Hughes has for his campaign slogan. "Down with the Democrats." His platform is one of vituperation and personal abuse, he challenges every act of the president since his inauguation and accuses him of bad faith and lack of judgement in his every official act. He says that he is in perfect harmony with Mr. Roosevelt and that Mr. Roosevelt is in perfect harmony with him. This is dangerous, if true. # Federal Inquiry or Railroad Strike?

Faced by demands from the conductors, engineers, firemen and brakemen that would impose on the country an additional burden in transportation costs of $100,000,000 a year, the railroads propose that this wage problem be settled by reference to an impartial Federal tribunal.

With these employes, whose efficient service is acknowledged, the railroads mave no differences that could not be considered fairly and decided justly by such a public body.

Railroads Urge Public Inquiry and Arbitration

The formal proposal of the railroads to the employes for the settlement of the controversy is as follows:

"Our conferences have demonstrated that we cannot harmonize our differences of opinion and that eventually the matters in controversy must be passed upon by other and disinterested agencies. Therefore, we propose that your proposals and the proposition of the railways be disposed of by one or the other of the following methods: 1. Preferably by submission to the Interstate Commerce Commission, the only tribunal which, by reason of its accumulated information bearing on railway conditions and its control of the revenue of the railways, is in a position to consider and protect the rights and equities of all the interests affected, and to provide additional revenue necessary to meet the added cost of operation in case your proposals are found by the Commission to be just and reasonable; or, in the event the Interstate Commerce Commission cannot, under existing laws, act in the premises, that we jointly request Congress to take such action as may be necessary to enable the Commission to consider and promptly dispose of the questions involved; or

2. By arbitration in accordance with the provisions of the Federal law" (The Newlands Act).

Leaders Refuse Offer and Take Strike Vote

Leaders of the train service brotherhoods, at the joint conference held in New York, June 1-15, refused the offer of the railroads to submit the issue to arbitration or Federal review, and the employes are now voting on the question whether authority shall be given these leaders to declare a nation-wide strike.

The Interstate Commerce Commission is proposed by the railroads as the public body to which this issue ought to be referred for these reasons:

No other body with such an intimate knowledge of railroad conditions has such an unquestioned position in the public confidence.

The rates the railroads may charge the public for transportation are now largely fixed by this Government board.

Out of every dollar received by the railroads from the public nearly one-half is paid directly to the employes as wages; and the money to pay increased wages can come from no other source than the rates paid by the public

The Interstate Commerce Commission, with its control over rates, is in a position to make a complete investigation and render such decision as would protect the interests of the railroad employes, the owners of the railroads, and the public.

A Question For the Public to Decide

The railroads feel that they have no right to grant a wage preferment of $100,000,000 a year to these employes, now highly paid and constituting only one-fifth of all the employes, without a clear mandate from a public tribunal that shall determine the merits of the case after a review of all the facts.

The single issue before the country is whether this controversy is to be settled by an impartial Government inquiry or by industrial warfare.

Santa Fe Announcement Northwest Texas and New Mexico will be materially benefitted by the recent consolidation of the colonization and industrial departments of the Santa Fe railway. C. L. Seagraves, for many years in charge of the colonization work, is exceptionally well informed on conditions in this section and is therefore in position as head of the new industrial department to promote development stillmore effectively.

Fully as important is the announcement that C. C. Dana, for years industrial commissioner, has peen appointed general freight and passenger agent at Amarillo to succeed J. Brinker, transferred to Chicago. Mr. Dana has been in the service of the Santa Fe railway many years and is well qualified to continue the development work in this section, so well begun by Mr. Brinker. If you could see the comparisons we have made with various makes of clothing, and the results, you would open your eyes in astonishment.

You would wonder how any man could buy clothing elsewhere, after seeing the values we offer, and the demonstrated superiority of the Schloss-Baltimore Clothes we sell.

If every man knew what he could save by buying here, very few men would buy elsewhere. And the way we know is to make comparisons. We welcome them, invite you to make them. Naturally, we woulkn't ask you to compare our goods with others unless we knew how they stood
