PEACE KEYNOTE OF COX SPEECH OF ACCEPTANCE

Enter League, Immediately Ratify Treaty and State interpretation of Covenant.

SAYS "BACK TO THE NORMAL" MEANS REACTION

Failure to Enforce Prohibition is Worse Than Law's Violation-Declares Present Congress Has Not Passed a Single Constructive Law, but Has Spent Time and Millions in Seeking to Make America's Military Triumph an Odlous Chapter in History-Favors Repeal of War Taxes, Criminal Prosecution of Profiteers, More Adequate Supervision of Railroads, a National Budget System, and Woman Suffrage.

Here is a summary of the speed of Governor James M. Cox, Democratic candidate for president, at the notification ceremonies at Day-

The interpretation to clearly show that the league is not an alliance id that its basic purpose is peace and not controversy.

Food Supply.-More adequate supervision of railroads; utilization of waterways.

Financial and Commercial.-Extels federal reserve act and merchant marine. Would extend facilities for exchange and credit and stimulate foreign trade. National Budget.-Favors a national budget system. Would reduce armament expenditures on entering league of nations.

Republican Ungenerosity.-Republicans failed to recognize that America had saved the world or to appreciate the struggles and sacrifices of those who, in arms or industry, helped win the war. Present Congress has not passed a single constructive law, but'spent time and millions in seeking to make military triumph an odious chapter in history.

Mexican Situation. - We have neither lust for their domain nor disposition to disturb their rights. Disabled Soldiers.-Pledges immediate efforts to provide vocational training and favors employment of disabled soldiers of World War by Federal Board to supervise the Dayton, O., Aug. 7.—In his speech of of the freaty. Two things apparently acceptance today Governor James M. have disturbed them: First, they want-Cox, addressing a great crowd, said in ed to make sure that the league was from Chicago, where the Republican national convention was assembled, that a platform plank, dealing with the subject of world peace, had been drawn, leaving out the Lodge reservations, and yet remaining agreeable to all interests, meaning thereby the Lodge reservationists, the mild reservationists and the group of Republican senators that openly opposed the League of Nations in any form.

"As the platform made no definite committal of policy and was, in fact, so artfully phrased as to make almost any deduction possible, it passed through the convention with practical unanimity. Senator Johnson, however, whose position has been consistent and whose opposition to the league in any shape is well known, withheld his support of the convention's choice untilthe candidate had stated the meaning of the platform, and announced definitely the policy that would be his, if

"Senator Harding makes this new pledge of policy in behalf of his party: "I promise you formal and effective peace so quickly as a Republican congress can pass its declaration for a Republican executive to sign.

"This means but one thing-a separate peace with Germany !

"No less an authority than Senator Lodge said, before the heat of recent controversy, that to make peace except in company with the Allies would brand us everlastingly with dishonor and bring ruin to us." "And then after peace is made with Germany, Senator Harding would, he says, 'hopefully approach the nations of Europe and of the earth, proposing that understanding which makes us a willing participant in the consecration of nations to a new relationship."

"In short, America, refusing to enter the League of Nations (now already established by twenty-nine nations) and bearing and deserving the contempt of the world, would submit an entirely new project. This act would either be regarded as arrant madness or attempted international bossism.

"These are fateful times. Organized government has a definite duty all over the world. The house of civilization is to be put in order. The supreme issue of the century is before us and the nation that halts and delays is playing with fire. The finest impulses of humanity, rising above national lines, merely seek to make another horrible war impossible. Under the old order of international anarchy war came overnight, and the world was on fire before we knew it. Imsickens our senses to think of another. Ratification First Duty. "The first duty of the new administration clearly will be the ratification of the treaty. The matter should be approached without thought of the bitterness of the past. The public verdict will have been rendered, and I am confident that the friends of world peace as it will be promoted by the league will have in numbers the constitutional requisite to favorable senstorial action. The captious may say that our platform reference to reservations is vague and indefinite. Its meaning, in brief, is that we shall state. our interpretation of the covenant as a matter of good faith to our assoclates and as a precaution against any misunderstanding in the future. The point is that after the people shall have speken the league will be in the hands of its friends in the senate, and a safe index as to what they will do is supplied by what reservations they have proposed in the past. Some months ago, in a contributed article to the New York Times, I expressed my ewn opinion of the situation as it thes was. I reproduce it here: "There can be no doubt but that some senators have been conscientious in their desire to clarify the provisions not to be an alliance, and that its basic purpose was peace and not controversy. Second, they wanted the other powers signing the instrument to unerstand our constitutional limitations beyond which the treaty-making power cannot go. Dealing with these two questions in order, it has always seemed to me that the interpretation of the stated in these words:

" 'In giving its assent to this treaty, the senate has in mind the fact that the League of Nations which it embodies was devised for the sole purpose of maintaining peace and comity among the nations of the earth and preventing the recurrence of such destructive conflicts as that through which the world has just passed The co-operation of the United States with the League and its continuance as a member thereof, will naturally depend upon the adherence of the League to that fundamental purpose.' "Such a declaration would at least exposs the view of the United States and justify the course which our nation would unquestionably follow if the basic purpose of the League were at any time distorted. It would also appear to be a simpler matter to provide against any misunderstanding in the future and at the same time to meet the objections of those who believe that we might be inviting a controversy over our constitutional rights, by making a senatorial addition in words something like these:

"'It will of course be understood that in carrying out the purpose of the League, the government of the United States must at all time act in strict harmony with the terms and intent of the United States Constitution which cannot in any way be altered by the treaty-making power.'

Helpful Additions Not Barred.

"Unquestioned friends of the League have made other proposals. Our platform clearly lays no bar against any additions that will be helpful, but it speaks in a firm resolution to stand against anything that disturbs the vital principle. We hear it said that interpretations are unnnecessary. That may be true, but they will at least be reassuring to many of our citizens, who feel that in signing the treaty, there should be no mental reservations that are not expressed in plain words, as a matter of good faith to our associates. Such interpretations possess the further virtue of supplying a base upon which agreement can be reached, and agreement, without injury to the convenant, is now of pressing importance. It was the desire to get things started, that prompted some members of the senate to vote for the Lodge reservations. Those who conscientiously voted for them in the final roll calls realized, however, that they acted under duress, in that a politically bigoted minority was exercising the arbitrary power of its position to enforce drastic conditions. Happily the voters of the republic, under our system of government, can remedy that situation, and I have the faith that they will, at the election this fall. Then organized government will be enabled to combine impulse and facility in the making of better world conditions. The agencies of exchange will automatically adjust themselves to the opportunities of

It is to be understood that the term 'business' as used does not include income received by wageearners, salaried men, agriculturists and the small business man who should be exempt from this tax. The profiteer and some of the highly capitalized units have used the excess profits tax as a favorite excuse for loading on the consumer by means of highly inflated selling prices many times the amount actually paid the government. ENEMY SUPPOSED TO BE ENCIRCLING POLISH CAPITOL

POLES SEEK RECRUITS HERE

People Fight For Standing Room On All Trains, Out Bound, Even To Standing Room On Top And Hanging To Car Coupling.

Warsaw.-A feeling of intense apprehension has spread through the city as reports circulate that the enemy is gradually drawing nearer and is attempting a huge encircling movement. Crowds are striving to leave the city by all available meanscarts, automobiles and a few remaining trains.

The difficulties are increased by the absence of any statement from the government as to what is to be done. There is absolutely no arrangement to look after individuals seeking to escape from the threatened envelopments. The foreign legations are gone, so that foreigners must shift for themselves.

People fight for standing room on the trains, or for places on the roofs of cars, or for the privilege of hanging onto the car couplings.

Washington,-Moved by reiterated pleas for aid from the Polish government, the war department had under serious consideration the request of Prince Lubomirsky, Polish minister, for permission to purchase war materials from the United States.

After successive conferences between the Polish minister and Secretary Colby, the state department also took up the problem of finding means of invigorating the fast ebbing strength of the Polish state and the probability of fulfilling the assurances of support to the Poles contained in the recent American note to the Italian ambassador.

Polish officials explained that, in addition to the desire for war materials, they were anxious to obtain authorization of the United States to States are granted suffrage they will permit recruiting of Poles in America not only had many offers of enlistment been received by the legation from Polish citizens resident in the United States, but that many offers had come from former American veterans of the world war.

While a statute forbids enlistment of armed expeditions in the United States for employment against a friendly power, some officials explained the president had authority to suspend operation of the law under his war time powers. The raising of recruits by Poland under the leadership of Paderewski before the United States entered the war, it was recalled, was agreed to by the American government and large numbers of Poles enlisted to fight under the allies were removed from the United States and trained in Canada and abroad.

In order that the United States government may keep in more intimate touch with developments in Poland, Hugh Gibson, American minister to Poland, who has been home on leave, will depart for his post in Warsaw. Mr. Gibson will be accompanied by Warren B. Robbins, acting chief of the division of Near Eastern affairs, who has been temporarily assigned a chancellor of the legation.

French Move O. K.

Administration officials consider the French step as logical in view of the formal succession of General Wrangel to the authority of Admiral Kolchak and the Omsk government which was recognized by both France and Great Britain.

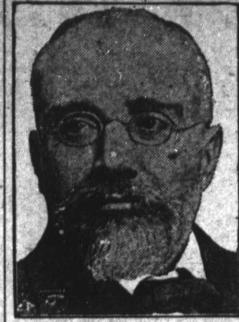

Without foreshadowing a similar step by the United States officials declared that the action of France was in no way inconsistent with the policy towards Russia advocated in the American note to the Italian ambassador.

Premier Venizelos of Greece.

Paris-Elipsthrios Constantine Venizelos, prime minister of Greece, narrowly escaped assassination at the hands of fellow countrymen as he was entering the Lyons railway station here. He was shot in the left shoulder and the right thigh. At the hospital it was said his condition was satisfactory and that he would probably recover.

The assailants were two former Greek officers, Georges Thyriakis and Apostolos Iserppis, both lieutenants. It had been rumored an attempt was to be made on the life of Venizelos, and as a consequence the police were on the watch. They were successful in overpowering the assassins before they were able to empty their revolvers. The miscreants were badly beaten by the crowd in the station after the shooting.

The news of the attack on M.Venizelos aroused profound indignation in Paris, where the Greek premier is held in high esteem. President Deschanel sent an officer to the hospital where he was taken to inquire as to his condition, and M. Palelogue called at the hospital on behalf of Premier Millerand.

This was made clear by Miss Alice Paul, chairman of the National Womact's party.

"A woman president," said Miss Paul, "why not? There is absolutely nothing in the constitution to forbid such a thing."

Uniting under the banner of the National Woman's party all suffragist organizations will hold a national convention in Washington early in October. If by that time the suffrage amendment has not been ratified the convention will assume the aspect of an indignation meeting at which plans will be made to punish the persons or parties deemed guilty.

"If the amendment is ratified plans will be made for putting a considerable representation of women candidates in the field at the next state and national elections."

200 Car Loads In Galveston Yards Awaiting Loading and 4,800

In Transit.

Galveston, Tex.-The failure to arrive of ten vessels scheduled to lift cargoes of wheat at this port during the first ten dals of August was stated by officials of the port car service committee to have resulted in such a heavy congestion of grain that loading permits were being withheld. With 1,200 carloads of wheat on tracks here now and 4,800 reported on the way, all permits to load wheat to this port for ocean transport have been temporarily discontinued, it was explained.

Under the operation of the "elastic permit" system an embargo automatically is proclaimed when the number of cars here total 1,500. Over this all movement of wheat is regulated by permits, Oklahoma City-Danger of great loss to wheat farmers of Oklahoma is seen by John A. Whitehurst, president of the state board of agriculture, in the embargo on shipments of wheat from Galveston, of which he learned. An embargo on wheat shipments from New Orleans also is being considered, according to information received. The export embargo makes much worse the situation already created by the shortage of freight cars for shipping grain. It is estimated that seventy-five percent of the wheat shipped from Oklahoma is sent to gulf ports for export.

The decision as to whether an embargo at New Orleans also shall be declared depends upon facts to be revealed by a survey now being made of the amount of wheat in storage and in transit, according to informa-

Rates Cause Trend to Gulf. Wheat grown nearer the milling centers is used chiefly there, while that raised in Oklahoma is sent south for shipment by water.

DAVID'S PRAYER FOR PARDON.

LESSON TEXT—Ps. 51:1-17.

GOLDEN TEXT—Wash me thoroughly from mine iniquity, and cleanse me from my sin.—Ps. 51:2. ADDITIONAL MATERIAL-II Sam. IL.

PRIMARY TOPIC-Asking God to For-JUNIOR TORIC-How David Obtained Forgiveness.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC TOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC

There can scarcely be any doubt but what the sin here meant is that which we studied last Sunday, namely, adultery and murder (see II Sam. 11 and 12). About a year had elapsed from the time of David's sin to his repentance. The Thirty-second Psalm graphically pictures David's state of soul during this time. It was a year of great soul-anguish; day and night he was lashed by a guilty conscience. In this psalm we see the path by which a guilty soul may return to God. I. David's Cry for Pardon (vv. 1, 2). It is well to note his conception of God. He saw him as a God of mercy

1. "Have mercy" (v. 1). He knew that justice would forever separate him from God. Because he saw the mercy and loving kindness of God, he did not sink down under his weight of gloom and despair. Because Judas Iscarlot did not see God as a God of mercy he went out and hanged him-

He was even willing for fire to be applied, just so becould be clean.

II. David's Confession (vv. 8-5). 1. "I acknowledge my trunsgressions" (v. 3). He now makes a clean breast of them-he would hold back nothing. There is no way to peace with God but by a full confession of sin. No half-hearted dealing with sin will

2. "Against thee have I done this evil" (v. 4). All sin is vitally and really against God. All our wrong-doing with our fellows is against God, for such deeds violate his laws. Toheighten all this guilt he remembers that it was done in God's sight, thusshowing disrespect and contempt for 3, "Behold, I was shapen in iniquity" (v. 5). He confesses not only tothese acts of sin, but that he is by very nature a sinner.

111. David's Cry for Deliverance

IV. David's Cry for Purity of Heart (vv. 10-12). He realized that if his life was to be different, God must dispose his heart toward the right, so he cried for the Holy Spirit to not be taken away from him.

"Til do it," said Brousseau. "I meant to. And now-"

He rose to embrace her, but she stepped away from him. "Not until we are married, Edouard," she said, Brousseau winced now, "It almost looks as if you didn't love me," he muttered in disgust. And in that sentence the major part of his character might have been epitomized.

Two days after the news reached Hilary he went into the village for his mail. Taking it to his office to read, he found among it a bulky envelope addressed to him from Ontario in an anknown writing. He opened it and found a letter from Morris.

However evasive the ex-manager had been in conversation, he was direct enough in writing. "You didn't treat me well, and I guess you had reason to act as you did," he wrote. That hound Brousseau swindled me as he was swindling you, and I'm going to put you in possession of the facts and documents, which I took from his desk before leaving. You needn't have any scruples about using them, because they refer principally to Hilary thought enough of the matter to send a man to Lafe, asking him to come in immediately; and that afternoon the two men went over the cituation together.

"It's a clear case," said Hilary. "He's been swindling the property gight and left, it seems. I allowed for a few thousands, but as I make it out It amounts to nearly eighty thousand." Lafe whistled and took up the paper that Hilary handed him.

"This is the contract with Lebianc to cut on the St. Boniface limits," he said. "So there's no mistaking who owned that lumber in the river."

He took up another document. "A contract with the Cornwall Paper company to supply twenty thousand cords of spruce wood from the St. Boniface limits," he said. "And re's Marris' receipt for seven thousand dollars' commission on 'gummy fir' as he would call it-in other words, pulpwood sold off the seignlory during 1914, at 10 per cent. What do you make of it, Lafe?"

Hilary, handing it to him. Lafe studied it. "I don't get it," he

"It's Lamartine's acknowledgment of fifty thousand dollars received from Rosny for fifty shares in the North Empire Development company-one of Brousseau's interests. Now look at this one. Lamartine is remitting five thousand dollars less the broker's charges for the sale of North Empire Development stock, as per order. He doesn't say how much stock. Lamartine isn't a fool. But here's Rosny's acknowledgment of the five thousand dollars less broker's charges for the sale of fifty shares, dated March 9, 1913. Now here's a stock market clipping from a newspaper of March

4, showing the stock at $875. "That's where we've got him, Lafe. Lamartine's letter proves nothing, but Morris got hold of Rosny's acknowledment, probably for blackmalling purposes, and it shows Brousseau has swindled Rosny out of $37,000 on that deal. Probably there were others. That's where his money went."

"It's a pity Morris couldn't run straight, being as thorough as he is," said Lafe. Hilary looked at him searchingly until he compelled him to return his "You have been very reticent of late,

Lafe. What's the trouble?" "I guess it ain't much," said Connell. "Well, you see, it's this way," he went on reluctantly. "I knew what lies that blackguard was spreading about you And I didn't know whether to tell you or not, Mr. Askew. I knew Baptiste saw us with that girl in Ste. Marie, and I knew from his face that he wasn't pleased. And again I didn't know what to do. And I decided to lie low. It's my way; maybe I was wrong, but I'm against butting in, by nature." "Never mind," Lafe," said Hilary. "It's too late to make any difference

"No, it ain't too late!" shouted Lafe, leaping to his feet. "Mr. Askew, you haven't told him-Mr. Rosny-about that asbestos mine, have you? You ought to have gone to him and let him know. You could have saved Mamzelle Rosny from sacrificing herself this way. You can save her, and you're going to."

"I suppose I have let things drift," said Hilary somberly. "I lived in a sort of hope that the mess would clear up. And I hadn't the heart to do anything at all." "There's the girl Marie-won't she say anything?" "She's afraid of her father. There's no telling how he would take it. At present I don't think he knows any-

"I wouldn't let that stand to my way," said Lafe emphatically.

"I don't think you'd really use that menns of clearing yourself, if you were | to Quebec, L Lafe. And, besides that, she has my promise to say nothing, and that | before the Chateau, he saw that a | side."

talking nonsense."

"Maybe I am," said Lafe stubbornly. "But I ain't going to see your happiness wrecked because two women haven't the sense and the heart to clear you. And I'm going to do it." "No, you're not, Lafe," said Hitary bluntly. "Why not? Good Lord, why not?" "Because I'm leaving St. Boniface," answered Hilary.

"Mr. Askew!" "I'm going," repeated Hilary, with a swift gesture of hopelessness. "You'll call me a quitter. I suppose," "I certainly should," answered Lafe coolly. "The same as you did me." "Mnybe. But I came up here to play a certain game. I came to put the seignlory lumber business on its legs. And I've done it. I stayed to fight Brousseau after he nearly got me down, and I've beaten him. I've won that game on every point. I'm going to make Brousseau refund his stealings, and I'm going to leave you here in charge for the present, to wind up. I shall go to Quebec to start proceedings and try to find a purchaser. Your contract will hold as long as you want it to. And I'm not coming back. I've done what I came for, haven't I?" he ended defiantly. "That's the way all quitters talk," said Lafe. Hilary's nerves were gone, of course, Lafe knew that the last lap of the race was the grueling one. Hilary needed help, that was all, Lafe grew crafty with his idea.

"Well, you're boss, of course," he said reluctantly. "If you've made up your mind, it ain't for me to interfere. When are you leaving, str?"

"I shall go out with Dupont when he takes his last load," answered Hilary. "That'll be Friday. We can't have the logs through the mill before then. Dupont doesn't know yet?"

Lafe reflected. The weather had changed suddenly during the preceding Lawrence were thick with grinding floes. The middle passage was clear, but in a few days navigation would be impossible; a dog team would have to be procured and trained to run together. Already it was a difficult journey with a horse-sleigh between the camp and the mill. If the weather held. Hilary could be held until he, Lafe, had accomplished his purpose.

Hilary put on his hat and overcost, picked up his snowshoes and went toward the stables. In a few minutes the horse had been harnessed to the sleigh and stood breathing great clouds of smoke into the frosty air. It started, and from the office doorway Lafe watched the man whom he loved best in the world of men driving away.

He waited till the sleigh had disappeared among the trees behind the bridge. He allowed ten minutes more, to make sure that Hilary would not change his intentions and return. Then he coolly opened Hilary's desk with a duplicate key that had been made after the burglary and took out the envelope that contained the papers from Morris. He removed these and thrust them into his pocket. In the empty envelope he placed some discarded letters from the waste-basket. Then he put back the envelope, closed the desk, strapped on his snowshees and left the office.

Five minutes after he left Hilary was back. His decision had suddenly come to him. He had resolved to leave St. Boniface, and there was nothing to be gained by procrastination,

He wanted to leave St. Boniface forever, and to put the memory of the past months out of his mind, so far as it could be possible. He hated the little village; even Lafe's presence had become intolerable to him.

He went to Dupont on board his schooner and arranged for him to sail for Quebec the following evening with the little load-one schooner fullwhich he had. He instructed him to say nothing to anybody about the arrangement. He saw nothing strange in Dupont's manner or aspect and, had he done so, he would not have thought anything about it. Having issued his instructions, he drove back toward the camp. But, seeing that the office was dark and unoccupied, he stopped there on his way, opened his desk and took out the envelope which he supposed to contain the letter and paper from Morris. In Quebec he meant to go through them again, mailing to Rosny those papers that had reference to his affairs and placing the others in a lawyer's hands for a civil suit.

He packed a few of his personal effects in a bag and left the office, as he supposed for the last time.

CHAPTER XV.

Lafe Takes a Hand.

Lafe was surprised to feel the bitter tang of the air when he left the mill office. It was going to be winter now, he reflected, and, if Hilary could be held only three days, there could be no question of an immediate journey settles the matter. No, Lafe, you're | sleigh had been there that day; possibly it "was in the stables now. He rang the bell, nodded to Robitaille, who opened the door, disregarded his incomprehensible address, which seemed to negative Lafe's wish to enter, and went by instinct into the living room at the end of the hall for the first time in his life.

He tapped at the door, but there came no answer. He knocked more loudly, and went in without waiting for any. He discovered the Seigneur in a big leather chair before the huge, glowing fire, Madeleine standing beside him and Edouard Brousseau a short distance away. There was an atmosphere of immediate constraint, as if Lafe's appearance had interrupted a tense interview. Lafe sensed it, but he did not care. He could hardly believe his luck. He had wanted Brousseau there badly, but he had not hoped to meet him.

Brousseau was the first to speak. He may have guessed the nature of Lafe's errand from Lafe's attitude, though not its fullness. He scowled.

"It's the man from the mill," he said in a sneering tone to Monsieur Rosny. Madeleine raised her eyes and Lafe read in them the same intuition that was in Brousseau's, and also her challenge. She was arming to oppose him in his fight for Hilary, she was preparing to fight against all that she held dearest, for the sake of the swindler across the room. Lafe admired her courage, but this he had expected.

he said: "Don't let that trouble you. I speak for Monsieur Rosny," answered Brous-seau. "You'll hear for him, too, then," retorted Lafe. "Mr. Rosny, that man is s liar, a thief and a swindling rogue. That's what I've come to prove." Brouseau started forward, his face pale with rage. As he placed himself in a fighting attitude Lafe calmly assumed that of defense, the left fist ready, the right arm across his chest.

The Seigneur's face grew dark with anger. "No man can say such things of a guest of mine," he cried, and gripped the arms of his chair as if trying to rise. Madeleine bent over him and restrained him. Her face was flushed with resentment. "I told you my business was with you, Mr. Rosny," said Lafe, unperturbed. "I ain't speaking to him. God knows I don't want to speak to him. He says he's speaking for you, so let him speak to this. He's swindled the St. Boniface lumber company out of eighty thousand dollars, so far as we've learned yet, and maybe more. But I guess he's heard enough. I got the proofs, but maybe it's painful lis-

Madeleine came forward quietly. "You can go, Mr. Connell," she said in a voice vibrant with restrained anger. "We do not permit Monsieur Brousseau to be insulted, here or anywhere. Your conduct is intolerable. Leave instantly, and if you have anything to say to him in accusation say it when he has not a woman and a sick man is it?"

"I say it here!" cried Lafe-in a furious voice that surprised himself. "He's cheated us out of eighty thousand dollars, and he's cheated you, Mr. Rosny, out of about as much, and probably more, and you can put it in any words you like. And I've got the papers to prove it-all of 'em.' Brousseau winced and staggered back dumfounded; there was no mistaking now that the man was afraid. Though Madeleine would not deign to acknowledge that she had listened to Lafe's words, Lafe caught the flicker of her eyelids as she glanced quickly toward Brousseau, and he knew that at the same instant she had seen the look on Brousseau's face. The Seigneur, mouthing impotently, had kept trying to rise; but now he sat openmouthed in his chair, and thereafter they listened.

"I'll tell you why he wants the seigniory," continued Lafe. "I guess it's part plain greed, but there's another reason, and that explains why he wants to get Mr. Askew off. There's an asbestos mine on the island-Look at him! Look at him!"

Brousseau was glaring at him, the picture of impotent rage. Lafe, having indicated him with his hand, resumed:

"He kept it off the map in our office, pretending the island isn't on our lime. its, and he spread that story, but you know better, Mr. Rosny. The island has the best asbestos mine this side of Thetford, and I've seen the mines at Thetford. And it's worth a good quarter million dollars, I reckon. Maybe more. Maybe a million-I ain't no judge. And he's kept it secret from

"He's drunk or dreaming," enuttered Brousseau, trembling. "A few strands of rock flax, commercially worthless-"

"But that ain't roguery. That's just business trick," said Connell. "How did he get you into his power, Mr. Rosny, asking your pardon? I'll tell you. He's cheated you as he's cheated us, night. "And I got the papers to prove that -here!" said Lafe triumphantly.

Brousseau rose, rubbing his shins and muttering curses, and glared savagely about him. Madeleine was breathing quickly, her eyes fixed intently on Lafe's face.

"It's a d---d lie!" cried Brousseau. "They've forged those papers. Where are they? Eh? Show me!"

"He said he was speaking for you, Mr. Rosny," said Lafe, "so here they are. I guess you know your signa-

He drew the envelope from his pocket and placed the three documents on the Seigneur's knee, standing between him and Brousseau, who looked ready to leap again. But he did not leap; he muttered to Madeleine, who still watched Lafe breathlessly.

"I guess these letters don't tell you much, Mr. Rosny," continued Lafe. "If you'll put them together you'll see that those fifty thousand-dollar shares were sold for you in Quebec at a hundred dollars aplece."

"Yes. Monsieur Brousseau had Ill fortune with that company. He explained it to me," said the Seigneur, trembling. "What of it?"

"Why, here's the market price of its shares five days before at $875, that's all," said Lafe. "It didn't tumble that fast. All the country would have been ringing with it if it had done that. I guess Brousseau has that money of

"I'll pay him." "It is true, then? It is true?"

"Yep, it's true," interposed Lafe. "It can't be anything else. Everybody

And if you'll excuse me for referring to your mortgage, which everybody knows, if he doesn't turn that in to you by tomorrow Mr. Askew will sue him criminally as well as civilly for what he's done to us, because we've got the confession of the man that sawed the boom for him."

Brousseau swung on his heel suddenly and strode toward the door. He turned and shook his fist at Lafe. "I'll pay you for this, you and that other blackmailer!" he swore. "I'll smash your rotten concern. I'll-"

He broke off with a derisive snort and made toward the entrance. But Lafe strode past him and blocked his "Just a moment," he said. "Mr.

jall. Good-day, monsieur." "That's all, I guess," said Lafe, and opened the door. Brousseau dashed through and along the corridor. Lafe followed him at an interval; but Brousseau did not wait for him. He pulled the front door open and slammed it behind him. When Lafe reached it Brousseau was already dragging his horse, already harnessed to his sleigh, out of the sta-

Lafe watched him drive away and turned back into the hall. He hesitatstopped uncertainly in the corridor behind the entrance Madeleine came to-

"My father thanks you, Mr. Connell," she said, and though the tears rained down her face she smiled. "It is like the lifting of a nightmare," she

"Yes, mademoiselle," said Lafe. "But it was you I wanted chiefly to see." "You saw me. What else is there to say? Mr. Connell, if you have come here on any other mission it is hopeless. Why did you let him send you for-for that?" she continued, reading

"Because he's my friend," said Lafe. But he didn't send me here. He's talking of going away. That's why I

"I'm forty years old," said Lafe, and conscious of the ineptness of the beginning, hesitated. "I'm forty years old," he continued. "Not old enough to be your father, mademoiselle, but old enough to be a sort of uncle. though I ain't got your education. That don't matter. It's experience that counts, and knowledge of the world.

than you, mademoiselle. "I seen enough to learn one thing, and that is that misunderstandings are the world. When Mr. Askew come here I wasn't altogether too much pleased. I'd been meshed into the crooked work that Morris and Monsieur Brousseau was doing with the seignlory lumber. Then when I got to know Hilary Askew I saw that he was clean straight through."

He let his hand fall lightly on the girl's shoulder. The gesture, which might have been an offense in some, was instinctive, and, like most inknows what a rotten swindling thief | stinctive actions, fitting, Lafe, un- | Clay.

couth, unlettered, standing before Madeleine Rosny, seemed like a benevolent guardian.

"When he came to like you I was glad," continued Lafe. "But when you came to like him I was just about as happy as when I was leading Clarice my wife, I mean-out of the First Methodist church at Shoeburyport, Mass., on August 17, 1902, with her white veil hiding her, and them orange flowers she was carrying scenting up the place . . not quite so glad. maybe, but not far shy of it. And you think he wasn't true to you? What man in his senses wouldn't be?" "I won't hear you!" cried the girl, summoning her defiance to her aid. "He should have spoken for himself. What right have you to speak for him, sent or unsent?"

"Why, I thought I'd explain that, mamzelle. Just because I'm his friend," said Lafe. "It ain't true. Not a word of that story's true. I'm going to tell you the truth. But first I'm going to say what I got to say, because it's true. You haven't acted rightly toward him-no, you haven't, mamzelle!**

The passionate gesture, the sincerity of his tone dominated her. She tried to find her voice and could not; she tried to find indignation and could not. "We went to Ste, Marie together to see conditions there, to see what sort of place Simeon Duval was running. The girl was there. It was the night of the raid, and we helped her away. She got home, and her father never knew. Little Baptiste knew, and others who'd seen her with us. They told Brousseau, and he started those lies about Mr. Askew, who never knew about it-never knew anything.

"That fellow Pierre, Brousseau's man, had his eye on the girl. You know the sort of work he's done along this coast. Maybe you don't, but it's devil's work, mamzelle, and he and Leblane lured Marie into a boat by means of their decoy, Nanette Bonnat, and took her to the island. We found them there, and saved her, and brought the girls back. That's all. Now you know. Now you understand how you've done Hilary a wrong. If you don't believe me," Lafe continued doggedly, "just tell me how much you don't believe, and I'll prove it. I'll prove every word; you don't have to take me on trust." "Do you think I am capable of seeking evidence that a man is true to me?" cried Madeleine. "Do you think I am going into St. Beniface to pry into your friend's actions?" "You love him, mamzelle," said Lafe, with patience that would not be thwarted. "I can read that in your face. You love him, and you've done him a wrong. Weil, mamzelle, you can't lie down under that. You can't bear it. You've got to right it."

She burst into helpless tears. "I hoped that he would come to me," she whispered. "Hilary Askew ain't that kind of a man," said Lafe. "He refused to defend himself." "He'd promised Marie to say noth-"Let me pass. I have heard you."

"I shall never go to him!" And Lafe had reached the end. His outraged justice had led him to the goal; but it was the wrong goal. He was helpless, he was beaten. He stepped aside, and she ran past him, hurrying up the stairs, whose faded carpet was held by tarnished rods that gleamed between her moving feet.

and he felt the unreasoning, stubborn Rosny spirit that looked out of the eyes of each, as it had looked out of Madeleine's and spoken by her. And it had met such another spirit in Hil-"I guess you're wrong, all of you," Lafe muttered. "I guess you manuon is making a hard fight ast calomel in the South. Every gist has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason, Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomet is dangerous and people know it, while Dodson's Liver Tone is perfectly safe and gives better results," said a prominent local druggist. Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist. A large bottle costs but a few cents, and if it falls to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, you have only to ask for your money back. Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasanttasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine; no billousness, sick head-ache, acid stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak, sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work! Take Dodson's Liver Tone instead and feel fine, full of vigor and ambition.-Adv.

Nervous Spells-Near Heart Failure Eatonic Stopped It

Mr. C. B. Loats, writing from his home at Lay, Md., says, "I had been taking medicine from four specialists, but believe me, friends, one box of eatonic has done me more good than all the remedies I have ever tried. I was in awfully bad shape. About half an hour before meals, I got nervous, trembling and heart pressure so bad I could hardly walk or talk. One box of eatonic stopped it."

Estonic quickly produces these truly marvelous results, because it takes up the poisons and gases and carries them right out of the body. Of course, when the cause is removed, the sufferer gets well.

Everyone that wants better health is told to have just a little faith—enough to try one box of eatonic from your own druggist. The cost is a trifle, which he will hand back to you if you are not pleased. Why should you suffer another day, when quick, sure relief, is waiting for you? Adv.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It

Applicants for Insurance Often Rejected.

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the comminent Life Insurance Companies, in interview on the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why o many applicants for insurance are reected is because kidney trouble is so ommon to the American people, and the arge majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease. It is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, fium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a ample bottle. When writing be sure and

OPEN-AIR MARKETS FOR CLUB

Two Junior Star Saleswomen at the Lincoln (Neb.) Boys and Girls' Gar-

At Lincoln, Neb., there is a boys and girls' garden club that has created a new departure in the marketing of garden products. The members of the club-4,000 strong-produced more garden fruits and vegetables than they could use. How could they dispose of the surplus crop? An openair market was suggested. The board of trade and chamber of commerce favored the plan, and a Saturday morning open-air market was created.

At first the business men of Lincoin complained that it would interproduce trade; later they learned that, on the contrary, the boys and girls' Saturday market created a larger demand for produce during the week, and they are now enthusiastic over the arrangement. That open-air market has become a regular factor in the economic scheme of things at Lincoln and, curiously enough, 85 per cent of the members of the club are girls

It may be popularly believed that the marketing end of farm production should be conducted by the men. That may be true with regard to some commodities, but marketing experts of the department of agriculture maintain that sometimes women are better qualified to handle the marketing work in connection with poultry, eggs, and canned products. The production of poultry and eggs is largely a matter attended to by farm women. Canning is left entirely to the women.

This Youngster Finds the Marketing of Garden Produce a Profitable Busi-

If farm products can be marketed to best advantage by those who have the greatest intimacy with them, does it not follow that the department's contention is correct?

Several hundred thousand gallons of apples are used in Spokane, Wash., each year in the manufacture of bakers' pies. Two years ago 130,000 gallons of apples annually were shipped to Spokane from the state of New York. Today, although the demand is greater, the quantity of imported apples has been reduced considerably, for the demand is supplied at home. That accomplishment was made possible by 70 young girls girls between the ages of ten and eighteen-who knew that thousands of gallons of cull apples were going to waste on farms in the vicinity of Spokane. Through the assistance of the United States department of agriculture and Washington state agencies, a girls' canning club was formed, with the result that these small canners are furnishing Spokane bakers with a large part of their canned-apple supplies. Not only do these young girls attend to the work of canning, but they handle the entire transaction from start to finish.

Learning Better Methods.

It is conservatively estimated that 55 per cent of the membership of boys and girls' club work throughout the nation consists of girls. Within a few years the majority of those girls will take their places as American farm women. They are now, in their teens, studying and working out problems that will confront them later on. And while they are doing that they are learning the fundamental principles in scientific production and marketing methods that must supplant those being used at present in order to meet increasing food requirements of

The grown-ups would do well to emulate their example. On every hand are instances where, by the use of improved methods, boys and girls are securing larger crop results with a minimum of effort, and by proper grading, packing, and marketing methods receiving a maximum of reward for their labors.

Some of the finest eggs in the country are produced in Kansas and Colorado through the activities of boys and girls. Boys and girls in every state are prize winners for dairy, beef, and pork production. In New Jersey, through proper grading and packing methods, the boys and girls generally top the egg markets by at least 5 cents a dozen. When eggs were 80 cents a dozen in Massachusetts last year the eggs marketed by boys and girls' clubs brought $1 a dozen because of their superior quality. Boys and girls' poultry generally sells at a higher price than the prevailing market level. A Young Business Woman.

There are many individual instances of notable achievements by boys and girls. One is that of a fifteen-year-old girl in Massachusetts who marketed about 3,000 cans of high-grade fruits and vegetables last year. The products were so well put up that the Colony club of Springfield, Mass., desired to contract for the entire output. At the present time this young woman has difficulty in meeting her orders, which call for 5,000 cans of produce this year. There is a potential business woman who is destined to be one of America's highest types of useful

CARPET GRASS LIKES WELL-PREPARED BED

Seed May Be Sown Any Time SWAN SONG OF SUMMER HATS Till After Midsummer.

Method of Seeding Often Used Is to Cut Grass With Mature Seed and Scatter Hay Over Land Where a Pasture is Desired.

On cultivated land, carpet grass succeeds best on a well-firmed seed bed. The seed may be sown any time from early spring till after midsummer, when the moisture conditions are favorable. To secure a full stand of the grass promptly, seed should be sown at the rate of ten pounds per acre. A method of seeding that has often been used is to cut grass with mature seed and scatter the hay over the land where it was desired to establish carpet-grass pasture.

To establish carpet-grass pasture in open forests or on cut-over land, without going to the expense of clearing, the standing trees should be deadened by girdling. The land to be seeded should be burned over in winter in order to remove all the tall straw or broom sedge, wire grass, and other bunch grasses. Plowing or disk-Ing is not necessary. Carpet grass at the rate of five pounds per acre may then be sown at any time after the weather becomes warm, but preferably when there is ample moisture.

THE AWAKENING OF HELENA RICHIE

By MES MARGARET DE LAND Condensation by Mits Sara Were Based

In 1886 appeared "The Old Garden e collection of verse. It is a characteriatic title; for many years Mrs. De-land has each winter grown in her ewn house in Boston great numbers of Dutch bulbs, which she sells at an annual function to her friends and the public, for the benefit of her favorite charities. As she does all the labor herself, it is a singularly personal form of good works. Only two years later came "John Ward, Prencher," a book which won the author wide recognition. There have been many others and "The Awakeuing of Helena Richie" in 1906, including "Old Chester Tales" in 1808, in which she made whildhood home. "The famous her childhood home. At the opening of the story Mrs. an isolated existence, and shunning rocked with self-reproach. any intimacy with the townsfolk; nevertheless she is universally respected. quake. There is, to be sure, an atmosphere of mystery enshrouding this beautiful stranger who is possessed of a culture above the simply bred inhabitants of the sleepy little settlement, but since she goes to church, is quiet and decerous, and gives herself no airs, she furnishes no cause for criticism.

As the story proceeds, however, we are made aware that Prior is not her brother, but is a Philadelphia widower with one daughter whom he idolizes; and that he and Mrs. Richie have for thirteen years been living together awaiting the death of Frederic, Helena's husband, whose demise will leave them free to marry. Frederic has been a dissipated man who, when not himself, has been responsible for the death of the Richle baby; and he is now living a dissolute life in Paris. The tragedy of the baby's death has been the culminating factor in turning his wife's hatred and contempt for him into revulsion, and determining her to desert him and go to Prior. To her lover she gives all the affection which the loss of her child and the destruction of her hopes have turned back into her nature.

Prior, on the other hand, has loved her in the past, but now, after thirteen years of deferred happiness, his passion is burned out. He is tired of her. Alice, his daughter, is growing up, and he realizes the indiscretion of business demands his time; it is less and less convenient to come to Old Chester; and he is no longer young. He is a selfish, sensual being, with the typical masculine distaste for everything that renders him uncomfortable either in mind or body. While he is willing, in an indolent sort of way, to continue his relation with Mrs. Richie: is even honorable enough to marry her if he must, it is obvious that he would gladly be rid of the whole affair.

But to Helena Richie this incident is not an "affair." It is her life. She loves Prior with a devotion engendered by her lonely, heart-starved existence, and she looks forward to the moment when Frederic's death shall release her from her present precarious position, and allow her to confront the world with a clear name. That an ultimate marriage between them will wipe out the blot on their past she does not question. In the meantime she can only possess her soul of patience, and make the best of her en forced seclusion. No one knows her secret. No one can know it. There fore she feels quite secure—that is, as secure as is possible in the face of the ever-present danger of exposure. -Into this fevered life of hers three important characters project themselves: Doctor Lavendar, the minister of Old Chester; Dr. William King, the village physician; and David, an orphan child whom the rector has be friended, and for whom he is desirous of finding a home. Of all Mrs. Deland's creations none, perhaps, is more beloved than is Doctor Lavendar, Wise, benign, humorous; yet just at all times a man who is never to be turned aside from a principle by idle sentimentality. Doctor King is not unlike him in this unflinching fealty to duty and to honor.

These two persons put their heads together to decide that since Mrs. Richle leads such a solitary life and is abundantly able, she is the one to take the bomeless David. The conspirators proceed with extreme caution. The child is brought to Doctor Layendar's house, and Mrs. Richie is given the opportunity to see him.

He is a quaint, winsome, appealing little fellow-a decided personality, and one of the most delightful and 23, 1857. When consistent child portraits in modern only 16 she went fiction. His greatest attraction lies in the New York to the fact that one can never be sure what he will see next Once when consistent child portraits in modern what he will say next. Once, when Doctor Lavendar is telling him a story he keeps his eyes fixed so intently on the man's face that the old gentleman is much flattered.

> "Well, well, you are a great boy for stories, aren't you?" remarks the delighted minister. "You've talked seven minutes," said

David thoughtfully, "and you haven't moved your upper jaw once."

As can be imagined the child makes instant conquest of Mrs. Richie, who insists on fitting him out with tiny garments, and brings him in triumph to the "Stuffed Animal House."

Day by day the tie that binds her to David strengthens until we see this affection the dominant motif of her life. It even overshadows her love for Prior, although it is some time before she is conscious that it does so,

In the meanwhile, quite by chance, the security of her miniature world is shaken to its foundations. There lives in Old Chester a youth much Mrs. Richie's junior, Sam Wright, who has drifted into the habit of calling on her, maturer skill in "The Awakening of and who falls in love with her. Then all the wild mother instinct of the woman leaps into being. She is a lioness fighting for her young. She will give up Prior; in fact she does give him up. But she will not part with David. She begs, bribes, prays; but Willy King's conscience will not permit him to listen to her entreaties. She must send the child back to Doctor Lavendar, or he must acquaint the good minister with the entire story.

In an effort to forestall this action Mrs. Richle herself goes to the rectory and before she leaves it she looks into the face of her own soul and pro nounces her doom.

"The whirlwind of anger had died out; the shock of responsibility had subsided; the hiss of those flames of shame had ceased. She was in the centre of all the tumults, where lies the quiet mind of God."

When Dr. Lavendar asks her if she thinks herself worthy to keep the child she humbly whispers: "No." And after the fire, the still Small

MUST STRIVE FOR IDEALS

Highest Type of Citizen Is He Who Is Always Able to See Better Things Ahead.

No citizen will ever come fully into his own untile he strives to reach a high ideal. The boy who is satisfied to pamper himself in the hope of reaching the top by magic is doomed to failure. The exceptional happens sometimes. Usually the man who rises is the fellow who dares work and wait and strive against odds. He must not be satisfied with attainment, however complimentary it may be. There are always better things ahead if he is willing to strive for them. He will rise as he adds intelligence to vision, sympathy to character and selfmastery to both. Then he will crown the ideals with faith in God and its resultant faith in his fellow men. He will believe in himself enough dare the limit and try a dozen times to redeem former failures. The public official who falls to enforce the law, is an enemy both to the Constitution and to the American principle of majority rule. It would seem quite unnecessary for any candidate for the Presidency to say that he does not intend to violate his oath of office. Anyone who is false to that oath is more unworthy than the law violator himself.

The law is now so nebulous that it almost turns upon the economic predilections of the judge or jury. This does not make for confidence in the courts nor respect for the laws, nor for a healthy activity in production and distribution. There surely will be found ways by which co-operation may be encouraged without the destruction of enterprise. The rules of business should be made more certain so that on a stable basis men may move with con-

Adequate Farm Profite. Farming will not inspire individual fort unless profits, all things con-dered, are equal to those in other ac-mities. As additional check to depleted ranks in the fields would be the establishment of modern state rural school codes. The federal government should maintain active sponsorship of this. Rural parents would be lacking in the element which makes civilisation enduring if they did not desire for their children educational opportunities comparable to those in the cities. The price the consumer pays for foodstuffs is no indication of what the producer receives. There are too many turnovers between the two. The farmer raises his crop and the price which he receives is determined by supply and demand. His products in beef and pork and produce, pass into cold storage and ordinarily when they reach the consumer the law of supply and demand does not obtain. The preservation of foodstuffs by cold storage is a boon to humanity, and it should be encouraged. However, the time has come for its vigilant regulation and inasmuch as it becomes a part of interstate commerce, the responsibility is with the federal government. Supplies are gathered in from the farm in times of plenty. They can easily be fed out to the consumer such manner as to keep the demand in excess of that part of the supply which is released from storage. This is an unfair practice and should be stopped. Besides, there should be a time limit beyond which perishable foodstuffs should not be stored.

"Our objective should be a decreased tenantry. With the period of occupancy uncertain, the renter strips land of its fertile elements, and each year diminishes our national assets. Under the operation of the federal reserve and the farm loan acts, encouragement has come to thousands who find that industry, character and intelligence are a golden security to the people's banker, the government of the United States. Multiply our home owners, and you will make the way of the seditions agitator more difficult.

Railroads and Waterways.

"Any discussion of the question of food supply leads very quickly to the closely related matter of transportation. There is no one thing which brings us so intermittently to critical conditions than the insufficiency of our transportation facilities. Both the railroads and the public are to blame. There has been no material addition to the total mileage in the last ten years, and the increase in terminals has been much less than required. At the beginning of the war the rolling stock was sadly reduced and inadequate. The public had not given in pay for service sufficient revenues on which credit could be allowed by the banks. Moral assistance was withheld because of railroad policies that did not bring approval. Many of these corporations had made themselves a part of political activities, local, state or less speradic instances of stock watering operations, and the exploitation of utility properties for personal gain.

"Abuses were not general, but they were sufficient to bring the entire railroad systems of the country in dis-repute. The good suffered with the evil. When the transportation lines were taken over by the government, ne into a co-ordinated plan of op ration, enabled the governm transport troops and supplies, at the same time affording, under great stress, a satisfactory outlet for our industries. It should be remembered in this connection that except for the motor truck which suppl transportation by rail, and except for the great pipe lines which conveyed oil for commercial purposes, we should not, in all probability have been able to throw our deciding strength into the balance and win the war. Any attempt to discredit the federal operation of railroads during the years of grave emergency is unfair. In the case of those who know the facts it is insincere. Tee much cannot be said in praise of those who cted this work, nor of the men who physically operated the lines un-der the discounding conditions of ater over the wheel. The problem the railroads is still with no. The overnment and the public should ender every co-operation in the utmost good faith, to give thorough test to private ownership. The railroads have had their lesson. Government regulation is accepted now as not only safeguard to the public, but as conserving process to the utility. Financial credit is necessary to physical rehabilitation and it should be sufficient for the periods of maximum mand. We should not lose sight. however, of the vast possibilities of supplementary service by water. The Great Lakes and St. Lawrence navigation project, particularly, should claim the interest of the government. Federal Reserve System

"It is almost unnecessary to speak of the Federal Reserve system in connection with the winning of the war, as, next to the consecration of our manhood and womanhood itself, the greatest factor was the marshalling into one unit through the Federal Reserve banks of the stupendous wealth of America. To those of vision who look out beyond our shores into that commercial domain where we are so Justly entitled to enter in a time of peace, latent power of the Federal Reserve system can be seen promoting in every quarter of the globe an everwidening flow of American commerce. We will soon have a merchant marfhe fleet of 11,000,000 tons aggregate, every ship flying the American flag and carrying in American bottoms the products of mill and mine and factory and farm. This would seem to be a guarantee of continued prosperity. Our facilities for exchange and credit, however, in foreign parts, should be ensystem, banks should be established in mportant trading centers.

Reduction of Armament "I am convinced after considerable study of the subject that the expense of the government can, without loss of efficiency, be reduced to a maximum of four billion dollars, including sinking fund and interest on the national debt. When we enter the League of Nations, we should at the same time diminish our cost for armament. To continue expenditures in either the war or the navy departments on a vast scale, once our memberschip in the League is assured, would seem to be a very definite refutation of the advantages of the world plan which we believe it possesses. An appealing fundamental in the League method, is the reduction of armaments. We cannot afford to do it, until other nations do likewise. If we do not enter the League, hundreds of millions of dollars must be spent for armaments. If we go in, and I believe the people will insist on it, then we can count
