JUNIOR RED CROSS WORKING AT HOME

Production of Sound American Citizenship the First Aim, Says Dr. Farrand.

On the badge of every member of the Junior Red Cross are the words "I Serve." That tells the story of the chool children's branch of the Amerian Red Cross and its efforts to bring on March 9, 1916, during which happiness to children throughout the vorld.

Realizing that the time never was so propitious as right now for teaching the highest ideals of citizenship, the entire present program of the Junfor Red Cross has been framed under the very inclusive phrase, "Training for Citizenship Through Service" for others. Since the Junior Red Cross is the agency through which the American Red Cross reaches the schoolboys and the schoolgirls, all its activities are designed to come within the regular school program, and without creating new courses or increasing the number of studies to lend its aid in vitalising the work of the schools.

"The thing that is needed," says Dr. Livingston Farrand, Chairman of the American Red Cross Central Committee, "is not a perpetuation of the Junfor Red Cross, but the training and breeding of sound American citizenship inspired by the true, fundamental ideals of sound democracy. One of the great conceptions in making the Red Cross a contributor to better citizenship in our American democracy is the realization that after all the sole hope of any nation is with the children of the country."

for Red Cross makes the school-public, parochial and private the unit, not the individual pupils. Mutual service, helpful community work such as clean-up campaigns, care of the sick, promotion of health regulations, participation in civic and patriotic movements all these creative agencies designed to translate into life and action the regular school program are parts of the machinery which the Junior Red Cross places at the disposal of the school authorities.

GOVERNOR PARDONS VILLA BANDITS

Gvng as his reasons the fact that the bandits were soldiers in Villa's army, and were bound by military law to obey their chief's commands under possible pain of death, Governor Larrazolo this week issued unconditional pardons to the 16 Villistas, fifteen of whom were to serve terms of from 70 to 80 years in the state penitentiary, in connection with the raid on Columbus, New Mexico, a number of American non-combatants, among others, were killed Governor Larrazolo has been bitterly condemned for this act and the matter has been taken up by ex-service men of Albuquerque and mandamus proceedings have been issued against the penitentiary warden to prevent the carrying out of the pardon decree. Commenting upon this act the Albuquerque Evening Herald has the following to say which, we believe is the sentiment of the majority of the people of the state. The article follows:

Washington .- Inner circles of both political parties here are greatly inerested in the results of a national poll on the question of government of eration among over 5,000 newspaper editors throughout the country. campaign issue. In the opinion of party leaders this sort of a canvass among newspaper editors is the best possible index of public opinion. They recall a similar questionnaire sent out a year ago in connection with the proposition the the government take over the rail reads permanently. Replies at that time from approximately the same number of editors showed 88 per cent against the principle of government operation. They recall also that within ten days, from publication of the result of the former quastionnaire the sentiment for return of the railroads to their owners had definitely crystallized.

Comparison of present results in de tail with those of a year ugo conthat these editors have been accurate in their judgment, but that purty con-siderations played no part in form-ing it. The ideals and the objective of the Junior Red Cross are embodied in the pledge of service which the pupil takes when he signs the membership roll and pins on his coat the Junior's badge. The pledge which binds together service and citizenship reads:

"We will seek in all ways to live up te the ideals of the Junior Red Cross and devote ourselves to its service.

"We will strive never to bring discredit to this, our country, by any unworthy act.

"We will revere and obey our country's laws and do our best to inspire a like reverence and obedience in those about us.

"We will endeavor in all these ways, as good citizens, to transmit America greater, better and more beautiful than she was transmitted to us."

At the foundation of this school program of the Junior Red Cross is a great love for America's children.

RILE ON OSAGE

Washington.-Abrogation of the 6,800 acre ruling in the west half of the Osage nation and modification of the limitation in the eastern half and in the so-called wild tribe reservations was provided in a decision promulgated by John Barton Payne, secretary of Interior.

'Under the ruling assignments of Orage leases may be made in unlimited acreage on the west side. On the past side assignments will be restrictsd to 4,800 acres as heretofore with an additional assignment or acreage not to exceed 20,000 acres only where wells on any quarter section average not more than three barrels a day. In the wild tribe territory the limitations were doubled so that as much as 9,600 scres may be acuired by one company.

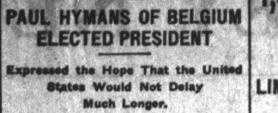

While the decision was gratifying to the oil industry and is expected to result in increased production on the west side, the practical effect is not apparent in regard to assignments on the east side of the Osage, according to Harry H. Smith, secretary of the Mid-Continent Oil reservation.

Smith has arranged a meeting with Secretary Payne to have this section of the decision clarified. He is fearful, he said, that as constructed now, the new regulation will not give small producers the market they should have nor increase their opportunities for selling production.

The decision was the result of the hearing granted by Secretary Payne to more than fifty Oklahoma oil men who urged the abrogation of the objectionable ruling.

"My! my! You went after him-all alone?"

Amy blushed and hurriedly explained: "He told me he would go raving crazy if they kept him shut up; so what else could I do? We had it all arranged. As soon as the moon went down, he climbed from his window and I brought him home."

"Poor Mr. Will! Of course, if he would have gone crazy, you done just right, dearie '

"I'm so glad you think so, because you must help me keep him hid, else they'll come and take him back there, or maybe to jail."

Tillie cogitated, and replied: "There's that place in the attic where you and him used to play robbers' cave."

"Just the thing. We'll fix it up at once. Maybe, though, they'll only ask if he is here. Go and see if he- No. keep away, so if they come you can tell them you haven't seen anything of him."

After breakfast Amy found courage to creep upstairs to listen at Clinton's door. Hearing nothing, she slipped under the door a note asking him to remain in his room and raise his rear shade if unable to reach Tillie in the kitchen by means of the speaking tube She returned downstairs to help Tillie "do up" the morning's work, but soon cajoled her out into the garden. Hardly were they out of the house when the telephone rang. The call not being answered, the ring was repeated, not once, but fully half a dozen times, at frequent intervals. Blissfully ignorant of the impatient calls, Amy, with hands safeguarded from thorns by leather gauntlet gloves, was training the rose-laden vines over the lattice of her summer house. Tillie supported the stepladder and handed up ties of soft twine.

After a time the telephone renewed its impatient summons. The gardeners worked on, oblivious. Presently the telephone was re-enforced by the sharper ring of the doorbell. The resuit was the same. Three times the bells rang, more or less in unison. Still no response; still Amy remained intent on her thorny blossomy task, with only an occasional glance upward at the rear window of her brother's bedroom. The doorbell ceased ringing. A few moment later two persons, a keen-eyed, suspicious young man and an agitated

The random shot hit Bemm so unexpectedly that he was disconcerted. "Miss Lowrie!" he snapped in angry protest.

"Why, what- Oh I beg your pardon. Charlie !" she replied, her look expressive only of innocent contrition. "Raffles was a gentleman burglar, wasn't he? And I meant a gentleman detective."

"Detective?" exclaimed Ellen.

Under her shocked gaze Bemm flushed a brick red. Tillie had unobtrusively started up the garden toward the kitchen door. Amy renewed her attack.

"Oh, not a common, low, ordinary detective, Ellen," she protested. "No one could dream of Charlie being thatcould they? But a Sherlock Holmes or a Gibberer-that famous French detective, you know-that's altogether different, isn't it? So romantic !"

Unable longer to endure the grilling. Bemm turned to retreat. Tillie's head appeared above the blossoming shrubs; it moved toward the kitchen porch with marked rapidity. He looked about at Amy with a glance of resentment and suspicion and started up the garden on a run. The girl smothered a cry of dismay and darted after him. She was only a few steps in the rear when he overtook Tillie.

"Stop!" he ordered the hurrying woman. "What are you going to do?" She halted and faced him squarely, her arms akimbo. Her tone was tart: "I ain't working for you. Mind your own business."

"I shall," retorted Bemm, and he showed her a silver-plated officer's star Tillie's mouth closed with obstinate firmness. Amy hastened to interpose. "There's the phone ringing! Maybe it's news of Will !"

She went past Bemm. He started to follow her, but paused to grasp Tillie's wrist. "Come along." he ordered. "Why, Charlie !" remonstrated Ellen. who had hastened up the garden after

Amy. "I'll have no tricks," he rejoined. Ellen gave him a disdainful glance. But he had turned to overtake Amy. holding fast to Tillie. The girl went direct to the telephone, without making any attempt to elude him. She had the receiver at her ear when, still dragging the reluctant Tillie, he overtook her.

"S-ssh!" she whispered. "It's that nice police official at the hall. They've Again he started toward the rear window, and again changed his purpose. In the far corner, before the rosecovered summer-house, was a group of people. One of them was looking up at him. It was Amy, and she was gesturing to him. She did not wish him to be seen. The man was turnand suffered so badly that I was out of my head at times. For several moments he stood at the window, his forehead gathered in a troubled frown. Behind him sounded a shuffling footstep. He started nervously and spun about. Old Tillie stood in the middle of the room, her finger on her lips.

"What! It's you!" he exclaimed. "How the devil-"

"Tssst !" she warned, "Miss Ellen's still downstairs. She'd run and tell her pa first thing. You just missed being nabbed by Mr. Bemm-only they phoned him to go out and get you at City Park."

"To go out for me? Who phoned?" "The pleece. They seen you out at City Park and-"

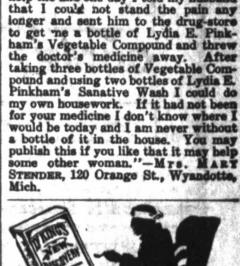

"Saw me?" "Yes; that's what they phoned Miss Amy. If it hadn't been for their making Mr. Bemm light out that way, he'd sure have got you. He's a 'tective."

"Detective?--that sissy? No." "Fact. Y'ought've heard Miss Amy toast him over the coals. My, but wasn't he mad! He'll come back madder from that wild goose chase. That's why I've come up to make your bed. and clean up and tell you to get up into your old robbers' cave if he comes back. I'll let you know when. 'Stead of making the bed, guess I'll take the bedding down to air." As he turned beside the door of the bathroom passage he caught a side glimpse of some one moving on the far side of the room. He faced angrily toward the new intruder-and saw his own image in the big cheval glass on the opposite wall.

"Jove !", he muttered. "This won't do. Must pull myself together." He went across to the mirror and stared fixedly at his frowning image. "Buck up, you idiot !" he advised himself. "Let yourself be hypnotized by that rot about double personality, did you? . . . That's it, grin! It's

At the left side of the image of his face was the image of another face, smaller and less distinct -another image, yet his own face! His eyes dilated with terror. He stood glaring at the second image, petrified with horror, powerless to move. It was his own face. . . . There were differences-no mustache, the color almost white, the outline more thin; yet it was his face as it might be after an illness. It could not be a double reflection in the glass, for it lacked the mustache-also the expression was absolutely different. Unlike the immobile terror of his first image, the ghostly second face was twitching with active fear. The mouth gaped open.

CHAPTER XIII.

Bemm Declares Himself.

At dawn Tillie, half waking, felt something warm against her bony shoulder. She gave it a shove and met with a soft resistance that caused her to screw her head about in affright. On the pillow beside her lay the tearstained face of her beloved, little mistress.

"Land sakes!" she exclaimed. Whatever in the world-1"

The big brown eyes opened wide in a startled gaze. Still dazed from slumber, the girl clutched her companion's arm. "Tillie! don't leave me-don't leave me alone !" "I won't, dearle; course not. There, there, it's all right-only a bad dream. Lie still and go to sleep again," crooned the old woman as she had soothed the girl when a young child. She muttered aside: "Such goings on! I never did!" Amy rose on her elbow and stared at the window. "Why, it's daylight already. You'll be getting up." "It's time. But just you lie still, dearie." "I don't want to. I'll get up and help you I'm—I'm lonely." "Lonely ?" "And-frightened."

"Frightened? Land sakes! What makes you frightened?" "Because he- It's a secret. Promise you'll never, never tell until I say you may."

"All right." "Lean closer, so I can whisper it in four ear. He's home !"

"Hinh ?" "Don't be a dummy! Will is home." young lady, came hurrying out of the pergola into the garden. "There she is !" exclaimed the young lady. She waved her hand and called:

"O-ho! Amy!" Amy twisted about so suddenly that she almost fell off the ladder.

"Goodness!" she whispered. "It's Ellen and Charlie !" "Pooh! Don't fret. We'll fool them easy," reassured Tillie,

The girl promptly recovered her balance and her aplomb, and called banteringly: "Oh, is it really you? You must be going for a foothill motor drive to be out at this unearthly hour. It almost tumbled me over to see you." "Then you haven't heard, dear !" exclaimed Ellen.

"Your brother has escaped from the sanitarium," Bemm bluntly stated the news.

Amy threw up her hands in realistic stage consternation. "Escaped? Will escaped? Oh! oh! Has he gone daft again? How? Where did he go? When was it? Oh, dear! Wandering about, in his condition !"

"Hasn't he come home?" "Home!" scoffed Tillie. "Don't you know anything about crazy folks? Don't you know they always try to get away from their relations? Didn't he want to run away from home the very first night he came?"

"Indeed, yes," agreed Ellen. "You remember he even knocked you down, he was so violent."

Bemm's face darkened. "He's a bit too violent. The next time we'll put him where he can't get out."

"'We?"" queried Amy. "His-er-friends," Bemm hastened to explain. "He'll be apt to do himself harm, y' know, if he's allowed to run loose. "Before he is cured," added Ellen. Amy raised her flushed face. That most eminent of scientists-Charles Darwin-observed that the expressional after-effects of spasms of fear, anger and mirth are remarkably similar. There were tears in Amy's reddened eyes as she looked up past Bemm's fashionable straw. Suddenly her half compressed eyelids widened-she flung up her hand and made a quick downward gesture.

Bemm spun about and stared up at the rear window of Clinton's bedroom. The shade was down, but the morning light rippled on its watered surface as if it were shaking. Bemm confronted

Amy. "Your brother is in his room," he charged.

"Really?" she rejoined with heavy sarcasm. "You don't say !"

"How clever !" parried the girl, "One snatched up his hat and ran out through the front hall, without stopping to take leave of the ladies. "Mercy!" exclaimed Ellen. "Has everybody gone mad?"

"I guess he's hopping mad," observed Tillie. "My! Listen to the door slam! He's madder'n a wet hen." Amy looked significantly at Tillie and remarked: "You haven't done the upstairs work."

CHAPTER XIV.

"Insane!" he gasped. "I-am going-insane !"

He tottered to the rear window, opened the shade and sash with shaking, fumbling hands, and crouched against the sill in the midst of the instreaming light and air.

Downstairs Amy and Ellen were weeping in each other's arms, reconciled companions in misery.

The doorbell rang sharply. The weepers flew apart.

"S-some one's c-come!" sobbed Ellen. "My eh-eyes!"

Amy, regardless of her tear-wet face, flew in through to the front hall. But already the door, unlocked by Bemm, was opening to admit Dr. Kirkland. Mrs. Kirkland came in after her hushand as Amy rushed to meet them with well-feigned eagerness. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

Unconscious Humor.

The teacher of a third-year class during a test in written English requested each pupil to write an original sentence containing the word "character." After much thought one little girl evolved the following: "All the teachers on the third floor have a good character," which, doubtless true, sounded rather hard on the teachers of the other floors. In another school one of the teachers occasionally appears wearing one of the modern straight-effect gowns confined at the waist by a heavy silken cord with large tassels. One of the boys, writing upon the subject "Our School," referred to his teacher in flattering terms, but being unversed in the artistic as to raiment, finished his paper with the remark, "But sometimes she comes to school wearing her bathrobe '

Becomes Serious Problem.

With the shifting of population to big centers and the preemption of the former farming land in the suburbs by commuter settlements and estates, the marketing of milk has become a serious problem. The farmer who produces milk is only one step-the initial one-in a system which includes sometimes the jobber, the steam or trolley railway, and the big city distributing agencies. As an illustration of these changing conditions, one city may be mentioned which had 140 separate milk dealers three years ago, but is now almost entirely served by three distributing stations. The successful farmer has learned to adjust himself to this situation.

The principal conditions concerned wonder at John's perplexity. John's faith was not failing him, neither did in the marketing of milk are that it he send this deputation to Jesus for shall be clean, free from adulterations the sake of his disciples. He was a and disease germs, that it shall be true prophet and a faithful man, but cooled properly on the farm and kept cool while it is in the producer's 2. Violent hearers (11:12-19). These hands. farmer's part of the distribution stops, but his interest is not ended, for if the talk is soured at the other end of the route or if the health department test shows an excessive bacteria count due to improper methods of production and cooling, there may be a reaction that will reduce his year's profits,

The production and marketing of milk is exacting and requires a knowledge of modern methods. Success depends on factors once unthought of, and the farmer who meets these exactions is nearer to making successful settlements with the distributing companies than the one who lets things slide.

3. The stout-hearted unbelievers (11:20-24). In Chorazin, Bethsaida, and Capernaum, Christ had done most of his mighty works, but the people deliberately set their hearts against him and his message. It was not for lack of knowledge and opportunity that they were unsaved, but for their purposeful rejection of Christ. Tyre and Sidon, Sodom and Gomorrah were filled with immoral profligates and idolaters, but they will be more tolerably dealt with in the day of judgment than those who wilfully reject. Christ.

II. The Antagonism of the Kingdom. (ch. 12).

In chapter 11 we saw the shameful indifference of the Jews to their King. In this chapter we see positive and bitter antagonism manifesting itself against him. They are not only without a heart for him, but do their best to destroy him. The immediate occasion of their wicked determination was Christ's relation to the Sabbath. Because the hungry disciples plucked corn and Jesus healed the withered hand on the Sabbath day, they sought to destroy him. They accused him of being in league with the Devil. Jesus with unanswerable logic showed them that they had blasphemed against the Holy Ghost, and were therefore guilty of an unpardonable sin. They did not deny the miracle but sought to account for it without owning him as the Messiah.

What Tenderness Is. Tenderness is the extreme susceptibility of the softer emotions and pas sions. It implies the refinement of pity, the sensitive delicacy of love, the culture of sympathy, and the most complete embodiment of a fervent, deep-seated, and impulsive gentleness. -A. M. A. W.

and properly protected during transit. Big city distributing companies and ears were closed to everything but local boards of health have pretty their own carnality. They would not thoroughly impressed upon producers repent when called upon to repent by the necessity of keeping milk cold; John, nor rejoice when called upon by and if the farmer is inclined to demur, he receives an uncomfortable experience by having milk turned back to him. One creamery returned over $2,000 worth of milk and cream to farmers, A milk-distributing plant received more than 50,000 gallons of sour milk in one year.

Getting the milk down to a low temperature will be much easier if you have ice; and this is the season of the year when it is timely to speak of ice storing for dairy purposes. Where a stream or pond is available in the northern section of the United States, natural ice can be harvested and stored at low cost.

Under ordinary circumstances about one-half to one ton of ice should be (11:25-30). There were some among allowed for each cow for cooling cream, or 11/2 to 2 tons of ice per cow for cooling milk. The United States Messiah, and they opened their hearts Department of Agriculture will send to receive him. Christ invites those Farmers' Bulletin 1078, giving full directions for storing ice, on request, There are a number of milk-cooling devices that can be used. An efficient surface cooler, where the milk passes in a thin layer over an ice or brinecooled surface, can be constructed at small expense, and will pay for itself. There are several types of these coolers, a description of which may be obtained by writing the United States Department of Agriculture for Farmers' Bulletin 976. To hold milk at low temperature over night during the summer a properly constructed cooling tank is also destrable. A good covered cooling tank also protects the milk from insects, dust, foul odors and other impurities, and if well insulated also protects the milk from freezing in winter.

Where milk is to be shipped long distances, some method of maintaining low temperature during transit is necessary, and for shorter distances some kind of an insulated can or felt jacket for the can is practically indispensable. Ice, jackets and insulated cans add to the expense, but usually pay for themselves by reducing spoliage and securing a better market for the milk. With the advent of good roads and motortrucks, co-operative hauling of milk is becoming more common. In some sections large regional cooling stations have been es-tablished, to which many farmers haul their milk. Many farmers still haul their own milk to small cities. Milk should be cooled, to at least 50 de-grees F. before leaving the farm. The farmer can then prevent the tempera-ture of the milk from rising more

Cattle Are Usually the Ones First Affected.

Following investigations of a livestock ailment commonly known as "alkall disease" or "milk sickness," the United States Department of Agriculture has found the rayless goldenrod to be the probable cause. Experimental work with this plant produced symptoms corresponding to those characteristic of this disease. Investigations by the department included regions in New Mexico, Texas, and Arizona where "alkall disease" has caused many fatalities among domestic animals. The rayless goldenrod is known to botanists as Isocoma wrightli; in Arizona cattlemen sometimes call it "jim my weed." Dr. C. D. Marsh, poisonous plants specialist for the bureau of animal industry, has found the plant to be poisonous to cattle, sheep, and horses. Among cattle, typical symptoms are drowsiness and weakness. If the animals become excited or attempt to travel far their motions become perky and their legs seem to give way. Some are unable to get up after falling. The fattest cattle are usually the ones first affected. Considerable numbers of work horses and stock horses have died in the regions mentioned from influences now attributed to the rayless goldenrod. Horses frequently died in from one to three days after showing symptoms of poison. Sheep show symptoms similar to those of cattle and horses, and it is also likely that burros are poisoned by the same plant. The rayless goldenrod is a stout perennial herb commonly growing about 2 feet high, though under favorable circumstances it may reach a height of 4 feet or more. The heads are numerous and have yellow flow-

To prevent losses from this poisonous plant, the department points out the feasibility of eradicating it from pastures. When dug out to a depth of 2 or 3 inches it seldom reappears; this plan of eradication is practicable where the growth is not too extensive. Where plants are too numerous to be dug, reliance must be placed in moving the animals so that they can get no more of the poison and may receive an abundance of good feed.
