Election of Bishops for Limited Term Instead of Life Urged

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., May 2 .-Recommendations to elect a number of bishops, to change their terms of office to a number of years instead of for life and to propose unification of American methodism by changing the name of the church, are among principal matters to be considered at the Nineteenth quadriennal session of the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, south, which opens here tomorrow. The conference is expected to continue three weeks.

To Every Employer In New Mexico

THE work of the state department of industrial rehabiita-I tion is to find men and women partially disabled, train them for jobs they are physically and mentally able to fill and then find them the jobs.

To be carried on efficiently this work must have the cooperation of every employer in New Mexico-large and small. This department must be informed of your needs if it is to fill them

The people who come under our jurisdiction do not seek alms, pensions or soft snaps. In other states they have proven to be willing workers of the highest type. The training we give them is practical—can be carried on in your own business at no expense to you—if you see fit—until you pronounce them thoroughly trained.

Can your books be kept by a man or woman able to work part time every day? Can you use a worker who hasn't all his fingers—if he is properly trained for the job? Do you need a highly trained man or woman for any position?

By cooperating with us you can find just the right person for the right job—and do a humanitarian service at the same time. If you know of any jobs or positions—no matter how responsible or how unimportant they are-open to people of the right training and ability, communicate with us.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—Wealthy and highly placed in the Chicago business world, Benjamin Corvet is something of a recluse and a mystery to his associates. After a stormy interview with his partner, Henry Spearman, Corvet seeks Constance Sherrill, daughter of his other ousiness partner, Lawrence Sherrill, and secures from her a promise not to marry Spearman. He then disappears. Sherrill learns Corvet has written to a certain Alan Conrad, in Blue Rapids, Kansas, and exhibited strange agitation over the matter.

CHAPTER III

Discussion of a Shadow Alan, as he looked confusedly and blankly at her, made no attempt to this friend of Benjamin Corvet toanswer the question she had asked, or to explain. His silence and confusion, he knew, must seem to Constance Sherrill unwillingness to an- Constance Sherrill had had after Alan swer her; for she did not suspect that he was unable to answer her.

"You would rather explain to father than to me," she decided. He besitated. What he wanted now was time to think, to learn who she was and who her father was, and to adjust himself to this strange reversal answered. "I told her all that I know of his expectations.

"Yes; I would rather do that," he

She caught up her fur collar and muff from a chair and spoke a word to the servant. As she went out on to the porch, he followed her and stooped to pick up his suitcase.

"Simmons will bring that," she said, "unless you'd rather have it with you. It is only a short walk."

They turned in at the entrance of a house in the middle of the block and went up the low, wide stone steps; the door opened to them without ring or knock; a servant in the hall within took Alan's hat and coat, and he fol lowed Constance past some great room dates or events in your own. Will you upon his right to a smaller one farther down the hall.

"Will you wait here, please?"

He sat down, and she left him: when her footsteps had died away, and he could hear no other sounds except the occasional soft tread of some servant, he twisted himself about in his chair and looked around. Who were these Sherrills? Who was Corvet, and what was his relation to the Sherrills? What, beyond all, was their and Corvet's relation to Alan Conrad-to himself? The shock and confusion he had felt at the nature of his reception in Corvet's house, and the strangeness of his transition from his little land. Duluth, and Milwaukee were Kausas town to a place and people such as this, had prevented him from inquiring directly from Constance they couldn't ship except by lake; Sherrill as to that; and, on her part, hundreds of thousands of tons of ore she had assumed, plainly, that he already knew and need not be told.

He straightened and looked about, then got up, as Constance Sherrill came back into the room.

"Father is not here just now," she said. "We weren't sure from your telegram exactly at what hour you would arrive, and that was why I waited at Mr. Corvet's to be sure we wouldn't miss you. I have telephoned father, and he's coming home at once." She hesitated an instant in the doorway, then turned to go out again,

"Miss Sherrill-" he said. She halted. "Yes."

"You told me you had been waiting for me to come and explain my connection with Mr. Corvet. Well-I can't do that; that is what I came here hoping to find out."

She came back toward him slowly, "What do you mean?" she asked. He fought down and controlled resolutely the excitement in his voice, as he told her rapidly the little he knew about himself.

He could not tell definitely how she was affected by what he said. She flushed slightly, following her first start of surprise after he had begun to speak; when he had finished, he saw that she was a little pale.

"Then you don't know anything about Mr. Corvet at all," she said. "No; until I got his letter sending for me here, I'd never seen or heard his name."

She was thoughtful for a moment. "Thank you for telling me," she said. "Til tell my father when he comes."

"Your father is-?" he ventured. She understood now that the name of Sherrill had meant nothing to him, "Father is Mr. Corvet's closest friend, and his business partner as well," she explained.

He thought she was going to tell him something more about them; but she seemed to decide to leave that for her father to do. She crossed to the big chair beside the grate and seated herself. As she sat looking at him, hands clasped beneath her chin, and her elbows resting on the arm of the chair, there was speculation and interest in her gaze; but she did not ask him anything more about himself, She, he saw, was listening, like himself, for the sound of Sherrill's arCorvet was not yet rich, but unless accident or undue competition intervened he was certain to become so. Then something happened." Sherrill looked away at evident loss how to describe it. "To the sbips?" Alan asked him. "No: to him. In 1896, for no apparent reason, a great change came over him." "In 1896!"

"That was the year." Alan bent forward, his heart throbbing in his throat. "That was also the year when I was brought and left with the Weltons in Kansas," he said. Sherrill did not speak for a moment. "I thought," he said finally, "it must have been about that time; but you did not tell my daughter the exact

"What kind of change came over him that year?" Alan asked. Sherrill gazed down at the rug, then at Alan, then past him. "A change in his way of living," he replied. "The Corvet line of boats went on, expanded: interests were acquired in other lines; and Corvet and those allied with him swiftly grew rich. But in all this great development, for which Corvet's genius and ability had laid the foundation, Corvet himself ceased to take active part. He took into partnership, about a year later, Henry Spearman, a young man who had been merely a mate on one of his ships. This proved subsequently to have been a good business move, for Spearman had tremendous energy, daring, and enterprise; and no doubt Corvet had recognized these qualities in him before others did. Since then he has been ostensibly and publicly the head of the concern, but he has left the management almost entirely to Spearman. The personal change to Corvet at that time is harder for me to describe to you."

Sherrill halted, his eyes dark with thought, his lips pressed closely together; Alan waited.

"When I saw Corvet again, in the summer of '96-I had been South during the latter part of the winter and East through the spring--I was impressed by the vague but, to me.

alarming change in him. I was reminded. I recall, of a friend I had had in college who had thought he was in perfect health and had gone to an examiner for life insurance and had been refused, and was trying to deny to himself and others that anything could be the matter. But with Corvet I knew the trouble was not physical. The next year his wife left him." "The year of-?" Alan asked.

"That was 1897. There was no question of their understanding and affection up to the very time she so strangely left him. She died in France in the spring of 1910, and Corvet's first information of her death come to him through a paragraph in a Sherrill nodded; he did not seem surprised to hear this; rather it appeared to be confirmation of something in his own thought.

"Following his wife's leaving him." Sherrill went on, "Corvet saw very little of any one. He spent most of his time in his own house; occasionally he lunched at his club, at rare tioned; no doubt any other man used intervals, and always unexpectedly, he appeared at his office. I remember only to the prairie might have felt the that summer he was terribly dis-"He was a shipowner, then," he, turbed because one of his ships was lost. But he has made very few acquaintances in that time, and has kept almost none of his old friendships. He has lived alone in the house on Astor street with only one servantthe same one all these years.

"The only house he has visited with any frequency has been mine. He has always liked my wife; he had-he has a great affection for my daughter, who, when she was a child, ran in and out of his home as she pleased. My daughter believes now that his present disappearance—whatever has happened to him-is connected in some way with herself. I do not think that is so-"

Sherrill broke off and stood in thought for a moment; he seemed to consider, and to decide that it was not necessary to say anything more on that subject.

"Is there anything in what I have told you which makes it possible for you to recollect or to explain?"

Alan shook his head, flushed, and then grew a little pale. What Sherrill told him had excited him by the coincidences it offered between events in Benjamin Corvet's life and his own: it had not made him "recollect" Corvet, but it had given definiteness and direction to his speculations as to Corvet's relation to himself.

Sherrill drew one of the large chairs nearer to Alan and sat down facing him. He felt in an inner pocket and brought out an envelope; from the envelope he took three pictures, and handed the smallest of them to Alan. As Alan took it, he saw that it was a tintype of himself as a round-faced boy of seven.

"That is you?" Sherrill asked. "Yes; it was taken by the photog rapher in Blue Rapids." "And this?"

FATHER OF RADIO

Story of the Gifted Italian's Work In Development of Air Communication.

While experiments along the line of radio really started as far back as 1827 and hundreds of scientists were interested in solving the problems involved for many years, it was not until 1896 when Senatore Guglielmo Marconi took out his first patent that the mastery of air communication got its first great impetus. His life history is to all practical intents the history of radio communication. Senatore Guglielmo Marconi, G. C.

V. O., L. L. D., D-Sc, M. I. E. E., was born in Bologna, Italy, April 25, 1874. His mother was Irish, while his father was of a family whose mechanical ability was marked. After an edu- including the Nobel prize, has not cation at Leghorn and Bologna, the given up active work, but is even now young man interested himself in the problem of wireless telegraphy, start- ments. ing his research in 1895. He went to England and in 1896 took out the first patent ever granted for a practical system of wireless telegraphy, by the use of electric waves. His early experiments in England were made at Westbourne Park. Shortly afterward Marconi saw W. H. Preece and at his request made some experiments for purposes of telephony, where at for officials of the postoffice. Some further experiments were made in May, 1897, in the Bristol channel, wireless communication being established between Lavernock and Brean Down, a distance of nine miles.

On the invitation of the Italian government Marconi afterward went to Spezia where a land starton was erected, which was kept in constant communication with two Italian battleships working from a distance of 12 miles. For this success the Italian government conferred upon Marconi the honor of knighthood. After a return to England further experiments were conducted and on July 20, 1897, the first radio company was formed and two permanent stations erected. In 1898 wireless reports of yacht races in Kingston were made and proved the usefulness and adaptability to which the system lends itself to commercial purposes. In December, 1898, Marconi installed apparatus to provide communication between the South Foreland lighthouse and a lighthouse on the south coast. In 1899 Marconi read a paper on "Wireless Telegraphy" before the Institution of Electrical Engineers in Early in 1901 telegraphic communication was established between two points more than 250 miles distant and at the end of that year Marconi transmitted signals from Poldhu, in Cornwall to St. Johns, Newfoundland. In 1902 he received on board the steamship Philadelphia in the presence of the officers, good messages on the tape when at a distance of over 1,500 miles from the transmitting station and signals at over 2,000 miles. In December, 1902, the station established at Cape Breton, Nova Scotia, under a contract with the Canadian government for transatlantic

WHAT OF THESE OLD MEN? Congress enacted a law in 1890 requiring all heads of departments and independent establishments in the federal service to report each year to the secretary of the treasury the number of employees under them who were below a fair standard of efficiency. Every year this is done and the letters the various departments and bureaus of that allowed. are printed in the book of estimates of appropriations compiled for use by congress in making up the annual supply bills. Congress never pays the slightest heed to these reports. They nefficient are never fired.

For example, last year the chief clerk of the treasury reported 170 employees of the Treasury department as below a fair standard of efficiency. But nothing will be done about it. The Interior department reported 139 inefficients, and will probably go on reporting them till they die of old age. There are employees of the government in Washington who are totally blind and who are led from their homes to their offices each day and back home again in the afternoon.

I knew in 1920 one gentleman of ninety-two years who had been in the government service for seventy-two years. He was being paid at that time $900 a year. His maximum pay during his long service was $1800 a year. James K. Polk was President when this old gentleman came into the service. He was born on January 10, 1828. His father was a captain of the regular army in the war of 1812. After that service he led an active life in other occupations until 1848, when he died, leaving a dependent family of nine persons, three of them boys. It fell to the lot of one of them to be the chief support of the family.

It came to pass, then, that at the age of twenty he received through the influence of navy friends of his father words of sense and wisdom which make up the sailing directions, the wind and current charts and other publications issued from the observatory for the benefit of the world.
