GOV. DEFENDS HAUPTMANN REPRIEVE

Dramatic Antarctic Rescue Told by Radio

Through the Editor's
Spectacles
By GEORGE

Jim Boggs' dog, according to Jim, knows his medicines. Whether it is a case of phenomenal instinct or plain sense, Mr. Boggs was not prepared to say, but he swore to the verity of the following story which I pass along to you without comment or prejudice for your opinion.

Some time ago Mr. Boggs lost his dog. The animal was gone for several days, and Wednesday a man drove up to his house with a dog and asked Mr. Boggs if it was his. Assured that it was, the man surrendered the animal, which was found to have been caught in a trap, its paw badly swollen.

Mr. Boggs carried the dog into the yard and paid little further attention to him until he noticed that it had disappeared again. Back the animal came in the space of 30 minutes, carrying a cedar branch. Mr. Boggs declared the dog lay down with the cedar between his paws, chewed the bark and leaves from it and thoroughly moistened the injured paw with the resultant saliva. Believe it or not, declared Mr. Boggs, the next morning the dog was up and romping about on the foot as if nothing had happened to it.

They tell it on Abe Moore that he will never lounge in another barber chair. Some time ago, in his shirt sleeves, because the weather was warm, Abe went into the Elite Barber shop and, as we will invariably do, sprawled in an idle chair to loaf and read. Both Joe Meador and Sam Key (it was before Sam sold out to Joe) were busy.

Presently in came a strapping young fellow from the range, booted and hatted and well in need of a haircut. The youngster glanced at Abe, who looked like he might have been working there, and seeing that Abe made no move to recognize him, sat down on the customers' seat to wait.

Joe and Sam continued working on customers. Presently, however, the rancher began to shift about on his seat. He looked at Abe steadily. Then the color began to leave his bronzed cheeks. All of a sudden, he got up with a jerk of anger and strode across the floor. He seized the astonished Abe by the arm.

"Listen, Mister!" he exclaimed hotly. "If you don't mind, I want a haircut, and I want it right now. I'm in a hurry."

Abe, startled out of countenance, stared at the angry face of the young giant. "Say," he exclaimed earnestly, "honest, I'm not a barber. I'm just visiting here."

The customer looked as if he thought some sort of a joke was being pulled on him, and it was several moments before Joe and Sam were able to convince him that Abe was right. Finally he released his grip and, being in a hurry, he sought a haircut elsewhere. The moment he left Abe crawled out of the chair and sought another place to do his loafing.

FLIERS LOST TWO MONTHS FOUND ALIVE

Ellsworth and Co-Pilot Located in Little America

LONDON, Jan. 17. (AP)—The British relief expedition today flashed back from the bottom of the world word of a dramatic Antarctic rescue of Lincoln Ellsworth and Herbert Hollick-Kenyon, long-lost explorers, who were found alive and well in the frozen wastes of Little America.

The British royal rescue ship, Discovery II, pierced the ice locking the Bay of Whales and found the men had safely landed, having exhausted their fuel on a bold projected flight across the south polar regions. The long silence was due to a damaged radio transmitter. They were unheard of since November 23rd.

First intimation of the rescue came out of the Antarctic yesterday with receipt of a message from the Discovery II that it had sighted an airplane and a man.

It was presumed that the man must be either Ellsworth or Hollick-Kenyon, his Canadian copilot, since "no other persons are known to be in that vicinity."

One word of the wireless message was not decipherable and a repetition was ordered.

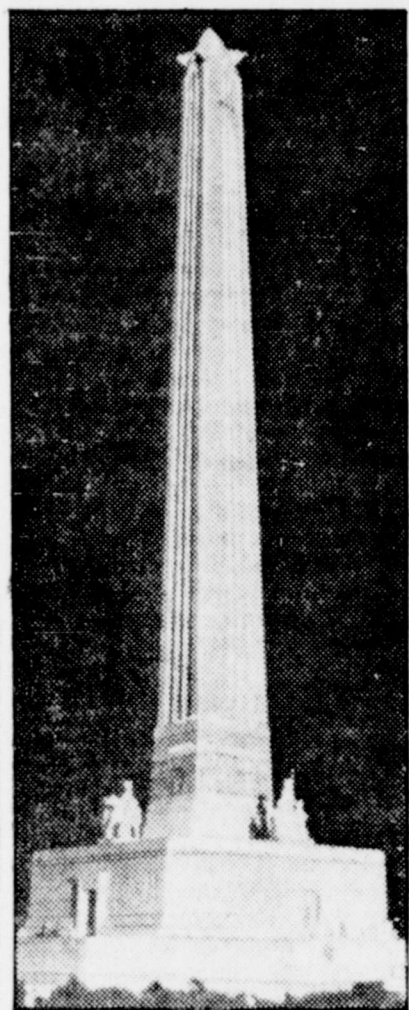

New Acreage Being Blocked Near Wend

Wisdom and Parson No. 1 Wend, drilling six miles south of Cisco in the vicinity of the Schoor gas well, today was reported drilling about 30 feet off the expected pay level.

The well is being drilled in a block of 3,000 acres blocked up for the test. Another block of similar acreage was reported to be in process of being worked out immediately south of the original.

Mrs. A. B. Berry of Abilene was the guest of Mrs. Charles George Thursday.

Texas Battle Shaft

Plans have been completed for erection of a memorial shaft, higher than the Washington monument, on the San Jacinto battlefield, near Houston, Tex., for the state's centennial celebration. The federal government is contributing $600,000 and Texas $250,000 for the monument.

SLIGHT HOPE FOR KIPLING

LONDON, Jan. 17 (AP)—Rudyard Kipling's end today was apparently a matter of a few hours. He remained in a coma, although a blood transfusion and oxygen were given last night.

H. S. Stubblefield, day desk sergeant at the police station, was in Wichita Falls today appearing as witness in a district court trial.

FD CONFIDENT OF NEW FARM RELIEF PLANS

New Taxes Intimated, But Issue Not Yet Discussed

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 17. (AP)—President Roosevelt today expressed confidence that a new farm plan proposed under the soil erosion and conservation laws would carry out the purposes of the AAA and bring what he considers a well-rounded agricultural life.

He intimated that new taxes might be necessary since the processing taxes were killed, but said he was not ready to discuss that phase.

Administration leaders who talked over the problem created by AAA's invalidation for an hour with President Roosevelt last night said that while details remain to be worked out, the general plan is this:

1. Crop production would be adjusted through retirement of acreage as a soil conservation and erosion prevention measure.
2. Farmers would be reimbursed for land thus retired through federal "rental" payments.
3. Such authorization as is necessary will be sought through amendments to existing laws, rather than new ones.
4. An appropriation of $300,000,000 to $400,000,000 will be asked to finance the program's estimated cost in 1936.

For Reimbursement
5. An additional appropriation of about $300,000,000 will be requested to reimburse farmers under the invalidated 1935 adjustment contracts.

6. A "permanent" program might be sought later this session or deferred until next year.

7. Provisions of the AAA untouched by the supreme court's decision would be strengthened and more fully utilized.

Speaker Byrns told newsmen after leaving the White House that the necessity of enacting farm legislation "is so immediate

HE 'FOLLOWED DICTATES OF CONSCIENCE'

Ready to Pay Price of Impeachment if Required He Says

BULLETIN

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 17. (AP)—Gov. Hoffman, striking back at threats of impeachment and answering editorial criticism, today defended the reprieve he yesterday granted Richard Bruno Hauptmann.

"If impeachment is the price that must be paid for daring to follow the dictates of conscience, I am ready to pay it. A good investigation of the Lindbergh case might be a healthy thing," he said.

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 17. (AP)

—Doctor John F. Condon informed Attorney General David Wilentz today that he would return immediately from the Panama canal zone if Wilentz desired.

Wilentz replied there was no need for Condon to change his plans. This was the chief development of a day spent by Gov. Hoffman in secretly pursuing an investigation which gave him "divers reasons" for reprieving Richard Bruno Hauptmann, convicted kidnaper-slayer of the Lindbergh baby.

Albert Hermann, court of pardons clerk, said the governor had signed the reprieve, which would be delivered to the state prison warden today.

Saw No Reason
In a message to Condon, Wilentz said the governor gave no reason for the reprieve and that no new evidence was reported.

Legal technicalities will fix the new execution date between March 16 and April 11.

Hoffman said of any demand for impeachment: "Just a dream." Governor Hoffman acted soon after the United States supreme court, in a one sentence decision by Chief Justice Hughes, denied Hauptmann's appeal for a writ of habeas corpus and a stay of execution.

Only One Reprieve
There will be only one reprieve, "unless the evidence should warrant" another, the governor said. If Hauptmann is to be finally saved it must be through the presentation of sufficient new evidence to warrant Justice Thomas W. Trenchard, who sat at Flemington, granting a request for a

Laughing Around the World With IRVIN S. COBB

She Who Sought For Peace

By IRVIN S. COBB
YOUNG MRS. SMITH was in need of a domestic for general housework. She inserted a notice, stating her requirements, in the local paper. In answer to the advertisement a rather slatternly-looking colored girl came to her door and applied for the job.

"Where did you work last?" asked Mrs. Smith.
"I wukked fur de Jones fambly right down de street yere a piece," said the candidate.
"Do you mean the Herbert Joneses who live in the white house on the corner?" inquired Mrs. Smith.
"Yessum, they's the ones."
"When did you leave their employment?"
"Las' Sad'day night."
"Did you quit or were you discharged?"
"I quit. Yassum, of my own free will I up and quit."
"Why did you quit?"
"Me, I likes peace—that's why! I couldn't stand it no mo' to be stayin' in a house whar they's always so much quollin' goin' on."
Now the Joneses were friends of Mrs. Smith, and, to her always, they had seemed a happy couple, ideally mated. Naturally this disclosure shocked her greatly. She could hardly believe it. Still, she shared with the rest of us, an almost universal trait—she had a natural curiosity. If the household of her neighbors was rent by internal dissensions here was a chance to find out the true state of affairs.
"Do you mean to tell me that Mr. and Mrs. Jones have been quarreling?"
"Yassum. All de two months I stayed there they was quollin' constant."
"What did they quarrel about?"
"Diffunt things, ever' day. Ef 'twasn't Mrs. Jones quorrelin' wid me 'bout somethin' or other I'd done, 'twas Mr. Jones."

With Comanche Trail Scouts

TROOP NO. 31 WINS RALLY
Troop No. 31 of Breckenridge, scoutmastered by L. R. Tatum, won the north section rally held at Carbon last Saturday night.

Troop No. 9 of Ranger with R. A. Steele, scoutmaster in charge, took second place, while Troop No. 6 with Bill Jessop, scoutmaster in charge, took third place.

The rally was by far the best attended of any held in a long while. One hundred and seventy four scouts were present with some twenty-five scouter. Scoutmaster F. M. Wood and his troop, with the assistance of the scout mothers who graciously furnished home baked pies for the barbecue supper, acted as hosts for the rally. After supper all scouts and scouter went to the large gymnasium, where G. N. Quiri, scout executive, presented Russell B. Jones, who is scout commissioner for Comanche Trail council. Mr. Jones made a short talk. Twelve of the fourteen events listed were carried out with great enthusiasm being shown by both the scouts and visitors. Totem poles, patrol flags, troop flags, and scout uniforms were in evidence—giving the meet a real scout rally appearance. Scoutmasters who were in attendance other than the ones mentioned above were: R. W. Stubbs of Parks, J. B. Diggins of Breckenridge, R. A. Steele of Ranger, C. M. Allen of Eastland, Elbert Thurman of Flatwood, Ralph Barton of Cisco, J. V. Thompson, Ass't. Scoutmaster Carbon, Ass't. Scoutmaster J. O. Jones of Gorman, and Scouter Geo. D. Henshaw of Ibox, and possibly others who did not register. Scouters present voted to have the next rally the second Saturday night in April to be held in Eastland.

Troop No. 12 to Billy Gibbons
Troop 12 under Scoutmaster Holloway and Ass't. Scoutmaster Stuart Painter are planning a two day camp at Camp Billy Gibbons on Brady creek. They will leave Thursday and return Saturday evening.

Annual Meeting
More interest is being shown all of the time in the annual meeting which is to be held in Brownwood January 24. All Scouters in the council and especially committeemen, Eagle scouts and scouter's wives are expected to attend.

Auerbach Aims New Records Florida Waters

FLA., Jan. 17. (AP)—S. Auerbach, holder of four racing records and national champion in one class three years ago, likes the thrills of the dangerous sport they give him "a feeling of excitement and happiness."

Why the wealthy Atlantic City sportsman, who has turned the sport into a business, named all his boats "Emancipator."

Four years ago Auerbach drove his first boat in a Miami race. Since then he has raced at every opportunity. At Havre de Grace he was thrown from boats twice in one day's racing.

His oddest accident took place in a race at Toronto. He was knocked unconscious when his chin struck the boat's steering wheel as it rocketed over the rough waters.

When Auerbach awoke later, he found he had finished fifth in the race. His mechanic riding with him had steered the boat across the line.

championship for hydroplanes of 135 cubic inches over a mile course.

He was clocked at 50 1-2 miles per hour the first time at Ocean City, N. J., in 1933. In 1934 he won at Havre de Grace, Md., with a speed of 53.624 miles per hour. Last summer he won again at the President's Cup Regatta with the same speed he made the year before.

Emancipator IV, in which Auerbach raced to victory both in the one-mile and five-mile events, is driven by a 160-horsepower, six-cylinder engine, which turns up 5,000 revolutions per minute. It is 16 feet long, has a four-foot beam and weighs 1,350 pounds with the motor.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

And they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, know the Lord; for they shall all know me, from the least of them to the greatest of them.

The love thou hast bestowed on me is theirs to have abundantly. Help me to point to them the way that leads to the eternal day.

-A. E. DESLER.

Some day people will learn that material things do not bring happiness and are of little use in making men and women creative and powerful.

Profits for the Processors

THE supreme court decision which invalidated the Agricultural Adjustment administration act was a profitable one for those who joined as plaintiffs in the Hoosac Mills case and the Louisiana rice millers case, in which cases the supreme court ruled the AAA unconstitutional and also that impounded processing taxes in the sum of $200,000,000 should be returned.

FEDERAL JUDGE ATWELL at Dallas the other day ruled that, in view of the supreme court's decision, the impounded taxes should be returned to 15 plaintiffs.

Those who will receive large payments of these taxes held in escrow pending determination of the suit, are numbers of large flour mills, some of which will receive between a quarter and a half million dollars in returned taxes. The DeLeon Peanut company will receive $30,000 from one bank, while the Southwestern Peanut company will receive nearly $19,000 from an Abilene bank.

Peanut Price Discrimination

AN instance of the rankest sort of discrimination is reflected in the price survey bulletin of the agricultural department of the United States government just distributed. It shows a difference of 30 and 35 cents per 100 pounds paid in the southeastern area beyond the Mississippi as compared with prices paid in Texas and the southwestern area for peanuts of the same quality.

THE apparent explanation is that the peanut crop of the area is not sufficiently large in comparison with the peanut crop east of the Mississippi and the available market outlet is restricted to such a point that there is not sufficient competition.

WE do not think the processing tax had a thing to do with the discrepancy. It was a convenient goat while it lasted. Its value to the farming industry is dubious.

WE should have satisfactorily explained why Eastland county peanuts of the same class and quality are not as good as Georgia peanuts, and the government, if it intends to help the farmer, ought to be "in" on the finding out.

Twelve Poll Tax Days

THERE are only 12 more days in which to pay poll tax and qualify as an American citizen with full powers to have a voice in the government of the nation, state, county, precinct and municipality.

THIS is not an off-year in elections, yet there seems to be no rush to get a poll tax receipt. This is presidential year, as well as the year in which the people will elect or re-elect an entirely new set of officers.

THOSE exempt from poll tax payment by reason of being over 60 years of age prior to January 1, 1935, are not required to procure an exemption if they reside in towns of less than 10,000 inhabitants, but those living in towns or cities of over 10,000, and those becoming of age after January 1, 1935, though residents of towns less than 10,000, must have exemption certificates to be qualified to vote.

GET your poll tax receipt or exemption certificate (if required) before February 1. If you neglect to do so you have no right to complain if your favorite candidate or public measures fail in the elections that will be held this year.

Besides the national, state and county elections there will be a city election, as the terms of three commissioners will expire in April. So, qualify as an American citizen.

THE GAY THIRTIES

Politics At Random

By BYRONE PRICE (Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington)

Several important probabilities are presented by the tumbling events which have greeted the infant 1936 at Washington: The AAA decision brings home to the democrats, much more forcibly than anything heretofore, the necessity for deciding whether to favor a constitutional amendment to enlarge federal powers.

It likewise forecasts for republican leaders and candidates a season of severe ordeals as the various party groups seek to unite on some substitute plan for farm relief.

The president's annual message makes relations between the White House and organized business still more difficult—a fact which is sure to be reflected in some degree during the session of congress.

The new budget, encountering immediately the prospect of soldier bonus payment and invalidation of the processing tax, has been thrown into a state of confusion which puts even the details of government finances into the center of the political campaign.

Combined, these various circumstances indicate a long and acrimonious congressional session, in place of the short, harmonious one hoped for by the administration. They complicate almost beyond description a political situation which already was tangled and uncertain.

Neither Party Will Rest The trouble and turmoil arising from the supreme court's rejection of AAA is not the heritage of the democratic administration solely.

When NRA died, those who had been sacrificing to keep it alive rejoiced, and it passed into history. The case of AAA is far different. Its pulling power was not sacrifice, but tangible benefits in the form of checks from Washington. Neither party will rest until it has offered some substitute.

Months of wrangling in congress, much agitated flying of trial balloons by candidates, and bitter division in the national political conventions all appear inevitable.

For the democrats, long-range discussion of the subject seems certain to center around the question of a constitutional amendment.

It is not a question on which Mr. Roosevelt is expected to commit himself hastily, but it is one on which his friends believe he must speak plainly, soon or late. The need for a plausible republican farm plank has been a

Human and Other Nature

By W. F. BRUCE

This looking over examination papers reminds me of taking samples out of containers of thought that are supposed to be more or less representative of the whole contents. As a boy on the farm it used to be my lot in turn with other members of the family to haul cream to the local market.

Although it was easy, listening to the president's annual message, to conclude that he had turned to the "left" finally, irrevocably and without restraint, some of the wisest political philosophers found room for doubt.

They recalled that in politics, as in war, there are two kinds of strategy. One general prefers to stand on a given line and fight, another relies on the art of maneuver. Up to now, Mr. Roosevelt has been a recognized master of maneuver, seeming to turn left today, and right tomorrow.

Besides, neither the annual message nor the budget message contained proposals for new legislation repugnant to business. The security markets held firm, perhaps on the theory that "sticks and stones will break my bones, but words will never harm me."

It is what Mr. Roosevelt does, more than what he says, which will hold the interest of the country in the present situation; and the determining question may easily be what he does about a constitutional amendment.

Pine straw should be left beneath trees to protect the soil and supply needed plant food.

Although one of the most pronounced "dry" states, North Carolina sometimes is referred to as "the wine country."

The governor announced his decision in his office shortly after talking with Mrs. Anna Hauptmann who presumably had called upon him to plead for her husband's life. There was no formal statement by the governor, who spoke temporarily. He said: "The attorney general and I have been in conference on this matter, and I have decided to announce a reprieve of 30 days. "We have agreed that this will not be challenged. "It is my intention to grant only this one reprieve. There will be no further reprieve. "I am giving this reprieve for divers reasons which I do not care to disclose at this time. It is an act of executive clemency and there can be no extension of the reprieve unless the evidence should warrant it. "No formal request was made to me to take this action. "There is plenty of precedent for the action I am taking." Supreme Court Is Unmoved by Stir Over AAA Ruling

By ALEXANDER R. GEORGE
WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Seemingly oblivious of the clamor created by its invalidation of AAA and other "new deal" measures, the supreme court of the United States moves serenely from case to case in the most momentous session since the time of its Dred Scott decision.

Still cloaked in the tradition of great power, preeminent integrity and detachment from political squabble, the "nine old men in black" continue to function in a mysterious atmosphere of aloofness despite their prominent position in the national spotlight.

While the justices in their fateful roles as "guardians of the constitution" personify abstract justice beyond the realm of ordinary political or personal influence, they remain quite responsive to ordinary human impulses even in their attitude toward their work.

"Privately Interested" Veteran court observers say that a number of the present members of the court have privately manifested intense interest in the reaction of the public to their decisions in important cases and in the various suggestions for curbing their power or changing the status of the court in the American scheme of government.

Justices have asked friends confidentially about "outside" appraisal of opinions they personally had written and they privately have explained and defended their positions on various questions of broad public interest.

But the court remains a sanctuary of great privacy, and for 18 years there apparently never has been a "leak" as to a decision to be returned. In 1918, a law clerk of a justice and an employee of the department of justice were dismissed from the government service after there had been allegations someone had been "tipping off" court opinions to certain parties in New York City.

Monday is "Opinion Day" The opinions are known to the law clerks of the justices and to a Washington printing firm which has been handling them on a confidential basis for about 35 years, but outsiders (and the term includes the president of the United States) do not have an inkling of their nature.

Monday is "opinion day" of the court but on what Monday a particular opinion will be handed down is never definitely known even by the press. The "biggest" opinion may be the last of a batch handed down on a given Monday. Seniority is reversed in the order of presentation, the youngest justices with opinions to read being heard first regardless of the relative importance of the various cases.

Chief Justice Hughes is one of the majority in a case which has been decided, he designates the justice who will prepare the opinion if he does not do it himself. The justice on the minority side who ranks senior in service chooses the judge who will present the dissenting opinion.

Particular effort is made to reach a common ground upon which a unanimous decision can be based. The court regards a 5 to 4 verdict as unfortunate since the almost 50-50 division of opinion tends to diminish the strength of the court's verdict and its prestige as the supreme arbiter of the nation.

Chief Justice Hughes, long famed for his celerity of mind, has speeded up the processes of the court. He himself can turn out an opinion very rapidly and is particularly adept in assisting counsel before the court to get down quickly to the "meat" of their contentions. Associate Justices Roberts, Stone, Cardozo and Butler also are rated fast in preparing opinions.

While in session, the court sits daily, excepting Saturday and Sunday from noon until 4:30 with a half-hour off for lunch. The justices have luxuriously comfortable chambers and conference rooms and a well-equipped library in the new palatial building but they do a large share of their work in private offices at their homes.

The Judge's Corner

By R. W. H. KENNON

EDITOR'S NOTE—Opinions expressed in this column are the personal ones of the "Judge" and do not necessarily reflect the editorial policy of the Cisco Daily Press. The writer is a member of the staff of the Press and the column is published because of its interesting and incisive comments on issues and news of the day by a journalist of the "old school."

WOMAN WHO ACCOMPLISHED MUCH IS DEAD AT HEARNE

PUGH—Hearne, Tex., Jan. 13.—Funeral services were conducted here Sunday for Mrs. Fannie Reese Pugh, 78, pioneer school teacher of this section, first woman secretary of a chamber of commerce in the United States, and organizer of the Hearne chamber of commerce, which she served as secretary for ten years. A bronze tablet on the $220,000 bridge linking Robertson and Milam counties bears her name as a prime promoter of the building project. Mrs. Pugh was prominent in the Texas federation of women's clubs, having held state and district offices in the organization. She had been critic and parliamentarian of the Hearne Shakespeare club for twenty years.

As a young newspaper man, in 1900, at Childress, Texas, I was intimately acquainted with Mrs. Pugh and her husband, the late Dr. Pugh, a former prominent practicing physician of Robertson county. The couple had removed to Childress when the county was young to "grow up with the country," and to further their purpose of making a fortune Mrs. Pugh engaged in the real estate business with indifferent success, while her husband continued in the practice of medicine.

One would naturally think that such an active character would take on more or less of the masculine aggressiveness, but the contrary was true, as this lady retained all of her feminine attributes, womanly graces, etc. She was a woman of high intellectuality, well posted on the affairs of the day as well as the classics, and a most delightful conversationalist.

But the firm of Pugh & Pugh did not gather to itself riches, either in the reality business or the medical profession, and after a stay of about two years they returned to Hearne, the doctor to his medical practice and Mrs. Pugh to her activities, where much of her accomplishments were achieved after they left the panhandle town.

When patients were few and far between I had often heard Dr. Pugh threaten to return to the "Brazos bottoms," as he said there "was none sick in the panhandle, as it required heat and moisture to cause people to become ill, and neither were manifested in that section." He said he was going back to the "Brazos bottoms where there was always sugar in the practice of medicine."

Both were well known in Childress, and many there will be interested, through regretfully, in the news of her death.

Dr. Pugh and the writer, with Judge A. J. Fires, still living in Childress where he is judge of the 100th judicial district, and others of that place, formed a company to organize Cottle county. However, the scheme never materialized, as there were certain members in the organization we thought advisable to get out of the company, and to do so, the company was dissolved. No attempt was ever made to reorganize, and there are now several men that might have counted their earthly holdings in five figures, at least, whose combined possessions at present would not exceed those figures—and "one of whom I am which."

A few years after Dr. and Mrs. Pugh returned to Hearne where he died, but Mrs. Pugh continued to carry on, with the result stated above, a record that would be creditable to any person.

SPORT SLANTS

By PAP

Now that the pigskin has been packed away until the 1936 season it's about time again for the old question as to whether a good college team can beat a good professional eleven.

Harry Newman, a headliner in college football at Michigan and a star with the New York Giants, is qualified as well as anyone to give his opinion. The Giants were beaten 26-7 by the Detroit Lions for the national professional football championship.

"Detroit would beat any college team of 1935," says Newman. "I think the best college team of the year was Minnesota and the Detroit team would beat Minnesota. There is no doubt that Detroit would win."

Lions Have 'College Spirit'
"Some argue that the college teams have the spirit of the professionals lack. Detroit is a team of high mechanical skill plus a love for the game. The Lions have the old college spirit."

"Detroit would have just as much spirit as Minnesota, Ohio State, Princeton, Southern Methodist, Texas Christian, Stanford or any other college team you can mention. They would play just as hard as their college opponents and they would know so much more football, would be much more daring and far superior in fundamentals."

Newman said that Detroit, a team that played at top speed, is easily the best team in the country today.

The former Michigan all-American is sharpening his ice skates in preparation for the 1936 professional football season.

"Skating is the best thing I know of to develop hip-swinging, judgment of distance, suppleness, dexterity, pivot and angle turns. I was off form in 1935 and the main reason was because I did not skate last winter. I did a lot in 1932-33 and followed it up with a great season on the gridiron. I'll be ready next fall when the season opens."

No Wolves for Wolverines
Newman's alma mater, the University of Michigan, has approved a $190,000 budget for the 1936 Wolverine sport program, and incidentally, the coaches aren't going to worry about the usual post-season rumors about grid coaches destined to lose their jobs.

Salary increases have been voted the coaches and athletic clerical staff by the board of control of athletics. The salary boost will represent about half the reductions caused by depression economy moves.

Michigan alumni, in defending Coach Harry Kipke's won, lost and tied record since he took charge of the Wolverine grid program, point to his record to counter the few "removal rumors" which floated around a few weeks after the season and then quietly died.

Since 1929, Kipke-coached teams have won 41 games, lost but 14 and tied 4. In 1930, 1931, 1932 and 1933 the Wolverines were Western Conference champions.

A 15 per cent increase in retail business was registered in Birmingham, Ala., during 1935.

NEVER MIND THE LADY

by David Garth

SYNOPSIS: Allaire West finally has checked the social whirl she has lived in all her life and decided to follow Terry Willett to South America, to try to make him understand that she loves him. She has left her socialite parents and the disappointed George Fox behind. And when she lands at Propionaire she will find Terry and Bucks Corrigan, two very tough and self-confident young men, fighting one of the most difficult engineering jobs in the world. Fighting hard.

Chapter 37 TRAVELING LIGHT

The coastwise steamer from the capital followed a long tropical shoreline, nosed into the harbor proper, proceeding slowly under the direction of a native pilot, gingerly feeling the way through waters that recently had been infested with mines.

The long stolid phalanx of sun-baked roofs spread out before her, coming right down to the long shipping front with its warehouses and cranes and coffee chutes.

When she landed at her berth, a slim girl dressed in tropical white with a gay touch of color in the form of a silken purple scarf about her throat, stepped ashore into an atmosphere of humming chutes, staring sweating coffee porters, jabbering hybrid tongues, and noisy steamship cranes.

It was queer to see a girl landing alone, queerer still to see that nobody met her. White women of her type didn't come to Propionaire unattached.

This girl wore dark glasses against the glare of the sun, and if she felt strange and alone in that stunted smelly part of the world, she didn't show it. Her step was elastic and she moved quickly and surely across the dock toward the customs house, a steward carrying two suitcases following her.

Allaire West was traveling light this trip. Usually she had several trunks, also a maid.

When she came out of the customs a flock of waterfront hack drivers besieged her like chattering incomprehensible magpies, elbowing each other to shriek their terms, crowding on her in an unwashed mob.

But this cool-appearing Senorita wasn't flustered. She walked calmly to a taxi and got in.

That settled everything. Whoever owned it could drive her.

"Cafe Nacional Compania," she said, and added to herself, "Atrocious Spanish, my dear."

But the driver understood. National Coffee company. He was a thin, tall, man in soiled limp white ducks and a battered straw hat. His car was a creaking arrangement, stuffed bulged through gaps in the upholstery and the leather seat was sun-dried and cracked. Allaire had ridden in better equipages. She smiled slightly.

Now she was here and a big question mark rode with her through narrow streets of houses with iron balconies and little short pillars. She was glad when the car got out of that waterfront district and swept into a wider cleaner avenue past parks and plazas of shrubbery trimmed in artistic design.

The Latins would let their industries go to rack and ruin while they flew at each other's throats, but their parks never suffered, even in Propionaire. That sight of green beauty steadied and reassured her somewhat. It was something familiar in the midst of grey squalid confusion.

She alighted before the National Commerce company office. It was the only place she had to start. They were Terry Willett's employers.

The native clerk stared at her in amazement, and so did Drake, the tall Englishman who was manager of the branch office. "Willett?" he repeated. "Why, he's been in town the past few days, but he's leaving right away. Going up the river to work."

"Where can I find him?" she asked quickly.

Drake rubbed his long chin with bony fingers. Where in the name of all that's holy had Willett ever met a girl like this? She seemed very anxious to find that man who'd come back from the states not saying much.

"He might be in the Santini Hotel. If you'd like, I'll take you up there."

"Thank you," she said gratefully.

The Santini was no luxurious-looking hostelry. It was a two-story white stone building with walls at least a foot thick and ornamented with those omnipresent little iron balconies.

Its bar was the most famous thing about it, and a smell of beer and liquor seemed impregnated in the lobby, although a few potted palms strove valiantly to keep up appearances.

She ascended the stairs with her taciturn companion, walked down a corridor and stopped before a door. Drake knocked.

"Come in!" roared two voices in unison on the other side.

"There's a lady here to see you, Terry," called Drake.

A slim girl in tropical white with a purple scarf about her throat stood on the threshold at Drake's side.

Corrigan's feet came off the table with a crash.

"Holy Moses!" he murmured, dazed.

There was another crash as a glass fell from Willett's fingers, which were suddenly like those of a small child. He stared incredulously, the tan ebbs from his cheeks and the sound of many waterfalls in his ears. If his father had stood there he couldn't have been much more flabbergasted.

Drake excused himself, Corrigan looked from the girl to Willett and back to the girl again.

"Aren't you going to ask me in, Terry?" she said, a little tremulously.

He didn't say anything for a moment. He couldn't. Willett was usually quick to recover from a surprise, recover and adopt a course of action with the speed and snap of a cracking whip.

But this was something that beat any surprise he'd ever received in his young life. Surprise! There had to be another word for it.

"Wait a minute," said Corrigan. "I'm in the way here."

He got up and walked to the door, stopping to beam at the girl.

"I'm Corrigan, that lug's partner," he announced, "and if you get tired of looking for him, start looking for me."

He grinned and went out, closing the door behind him. And still Willett was silent.

"Oh, please say something, Terry," the girl begged. "I know you're surprised—but couldn't you act as if you liked it?"

Suits --- Slim And Youthful --- Lead Spring Mode For '36

By ADELAIDE KERR

(Associated Press Fashion Editor)

PARIS, Jan. 17.—Suits play a big role in midseason fashions. An army of youthful models has appeared as the advance guard of the 1936 spring mode. They fly the standards of youth, slimmness and practicality and are designed for every event in the day's program — shopping, running about town, lunch, cocktails and dinner.

Creed shows new suits with slender dark skirts and straight box jackets made of double-faced wool—one side plain, the other plaid.

Chanel displays suits of striped neols peppered with polka dots or of pheasant's eye tweeds, designed with jackets which nip in at the waistline and flare slightly below.

Mainbocher launches something new, with suits of jersey and tweed (gray, blue and black) fashioned with belted jacket fronts and backs which swing loose from the shoulder to the hem of the skirt. Another novel idea displayed by the same designer is a Palm Beach suit of plaid gingham combining a knife-pleated skirt and trim jacket.

Smart little Chinese jackets cut on the box-like lines of a Chinese woman's coat, but extending no lower than the hip-bones are the stars of another designer's suit collection.

Maggy Rouff likes capes instead of jackets in her midseason suits. She tops a dark blue wool frock with a corduroy velvet, hip-length cape of the same color and throws a hip-length leopard cape over a black wool dress. Both frocks are trimmed to match the capes.

Afternoon suits for bridge and cocktail wear are made of plain or blistered satins with a high shine, cloque silks, heavy laces and satins patterned with microscopic prints.

Evening suits of black satin or crepe designed with short jackets and slender instep-length skirts and worn with lace lame or bead blouses are shown by many designers for dinner wear.
