Little Albert came home from school with a new book under his arm. "It's a prize. Mother," he said.
"A prize? What for, dear?"
"For natural history. Teacher asked me how many legs an ostrich had and I said three."
"But an ostrich has two legs."
"I know that now, Mother, but the rest of the class said four, so I got the prize."

Sunday is ground-hog day—the day when tradition says that furry little prognosticator of weather conditions will tell us whether spring will be early or late by the simple means of his rejection to light and shade. The ground-hog, which is not a member of the porker family but in reality a cousin of the squirrel, more properly known as the woodchuck, is supposed on that day to poke and inquisitive nose out of his hibernation after his winter's sleep. Paradoxically enough, if the animal sees its shadow, so tradition says, it returns to its hole for another six weeks. If, on the contrary, there is no shadow, he stays out side and spring is not far away.

Eastland County Pioneer Buried

EASTLAND, Jan. 31.—Thomas Tanner, age about 75, died at a local hospital Thursday morning following an illness of more than two months. Two sons, Rufus and Ben Tanner of Flomot, Texas, were with him when the end came.

His widow and two other sons, also a daughter, Mrs. Rosa Fonville of near Desdemona, survive. He also has a large number of other relatives in the Tanner community, 12 miles southwest of Thurber.

Mr. Tanner was a pioneer settler of Eastland county, his family having given the name to the school district and community in which his home was located, and for nearly a quarter of a century Tanner postoffice was maintained there.

Study of Bonus Revenue Needs Is Being Continued

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31. (AP)—President Roosevelt said today that a tax-raising measure would be necessary at this session of congress to meet the cost of the farm program, and that study on the bonus revenue needs continuing.

Silent on Channels

President Roosevelt's advisors were silent on proposed channels of new revenue when they emerged, but it was known that they considered these requirements:

$440,000,000 is the estimated annual cost of the new Bankhead-Jones program continuing subsidies to farmers.

$296,185,000 is needed to pay farmers for acreage reduction contracts carried out before AAA was invalidated.

Studies Continued

The white house conferees, including Secretaries Morgenthau and Wallace and the Attorney General, said no final conclusions.

No Relief, While the Lubricants Lasted

By IRVIN S. COBB

DOWN below Macon lived a highly respected old colored woman. Of her belongings, a bull, next to her two pickaninnies, was easily first in Aunt M'iss' affection.

The inevitable lawsuit for damages followed, with Aunt M'iss as the plaintiff. But the railroad won and the case was thrown out of court.

The old woman determined upon reprisal. Her revenge took the form of a daily surreptitious lubricating of the tracks where Old Buck had passed from this life; a spot which happened also to be at the beginning of a rather steep upgrade. For several weeks the locomotives had an exceedingly hard time of it to make any headway at all at this point. Investigation showed that the rails had been at heavily anointed with beef fat, and the finger of suspicion aimed at the old woman.

THREE DEAD, 31 HURT IN TRAIN WRECK

Express Plunges From Bridge at Midnight Last Night

SUNBURY, Pa., Jan. 31 (AP)—Three dead and 31 injured were counted today as railroad crews and volunteers, working in sub-zero weather, took the last of the casualties from the wreckage of the Reading Railroad company's express train which plunged 30 feet from the Susquehanna river bridge. The express train, the "Williamsporter," hurtled from the north end span of the bridge last midnight, down to the end of an abandoned canal, a few feet from the river.

The injured were rushed to a hospital here, where many were laid along the floor because of the crowd.

Tailored Styles Are Popular for Spring

Short, tailored, mannish types, swagger coats and the new "fish-tail" styles are leading the fashion parade for spring, said Mrs. Wallace Britain, who has just returned from a market trip for the Boston Store.

Dresses in the new aqua blue shades are also extremely popular among buyers at the market centers, she said. Hats in felts and straws were purchased for the military department of the store to offer the spring trade, she said.

GASOLINE IS EXPLODED IN TRUCK CAGE

Two Guards Painfully Burned Trying to Free Prisoners

SCOTTSBORO, Ala., Jan. 31. (AP)—Twenty negro convicts were burned to death today in the cage of a transfer truck when a 30-gallon drum of gasoline placed in the cage exploded. Two other convicts were seriously injured, and two guards were painfully burned about their hands and faces in attempting to rescue the negroes.

The guards said the sliding of the truck on the icy highway apparently sloshed the gasoline on the floor of the cage, where it ignited by the heat of coals in a fire bucket, placed inside the cage to shield the convicts from the severe cold.

At Montgomery, however, State Highway Engineer Ister said a negro had "struck a match" near the drum.

"The first we knew," Guard Middlebrook said, "we heard the negroes shrieking for help. As soon as we could stop the truck, I dashed to the rear and Wasson, the other guard, and I unlocked the door and attempted to pull them out. We succeeded in getting two of them, but couldn't reach the rest in that inferno."

Officers Minus Fees When Fines Laid Out

AUSTIN, Jan. 31 (AP)—The attorney general's department held Thursday that county attorneys were not entitled to fees where a defendant laid out a fine in jail.

An opinion by Joe Alsup, assistant, said "we have failed to find any statute authorizing the county attorney to collect a fee of the defendant in a misdemeanor case elects to lay his fine out in jail, and thence conclude he is not entitled to any such fee."

The opinion recited that a criminal code article provided the county should be liable to an officer or witness having costs in a misdemeanor case for one-half where the defendant satisfied the fine and cost by labor in a work house, on the county farm, on the public roads, or upon any public works of the county.

Alsup held that article was 'only applicable to counties wherein the prisoners are required to labor in a work house or on a county farm,' in which case "the attorney would be entitled to a fee." In the absence of such a work house or farm, he said, "we do not feel they are entitled to such."

200 Eastland County Farm Families Get Loans From Resettlement Ad'n in December

EASTLAND, Jan. 31.—The Resettlement Administration made loans to 200 farm families in Eastland county during the month of December, it is reported by Geo. I. Lane, county supervisor.

Loans for the month averaged $18.00 per family. The money was usually for the purchase of teams, tools and supplies which the borrowers could not obtain through any other agency. Loans are repayable in cash in one to five years. In Texas as a whole 25 per cent of the loans made last year have already been repaid. Repayments in this county to date total $8,000 and $5,000 in deferred work.

In addition to loans, grants to be repaid in work were made during November and December to 235 families in the county, the average grant being $18.00 per family. Grants were made for subsistence while farm and home management plans are being worked out upon which loans are to be based at a later date.

9,000 New Families

Reports from state headquarters at Dallas show that 9,000 new families were enrolled in Texas during December who had not previously been included in the rehabilitation program. The total number of farm families in the state who have received either loans or grants has now passed 47,000 and includes practically all farm families on relief a year ago. More than ten thousand of the families who last year received such financing have required no additional aid since, and most have repaid a considerable part of the loan.

The supervisor said that 70 per cent of those who have received rehabilitation help had no employment whatever a year ago. Of the farm laborers, 90 per cent were unemployed, and sixty per cent of the share-croppers. Forty percent of the farmer third-and-fourth tenants had been unable to get land to work or the means to work it, or any other employment. Thirty percent of the former landowners had lost their land and had no sources of income.

The rehabilitation program does not necessarily provide for land ownership. If the Bankhead-Jones farm tenancy bill is passed, land ownership activities of the government will be greatly increased but only a few hundred, among the thousands of families on rehabilitation in Texas, will be assisted to the purchase of land this season. The remainder are being aided by loans based upon farm and home management plans approved by the organization and by local advisory committees in each county. The plans require, first of all, that clients grow as much as possible of their own food and put up at least 125 cans per person. Plans must also promise sufficient cash income to liquidate obligations to the Resettlement Administration and to other creditors.

Loans on Livestock

Loans are made for livestock, construction material, farm machinery, household equipment, and "other farm improvements, essential to successful operation of the approved farm and home management plan." Food and clothing are also included, and other "subsistence goods for human needs," as well as "indispensable medical services. Loans are not made to individuals for refinancing real property mortgages. Chattel mortgages and liens on personal property may be refinanced, "when it is found impossible to make other equitable adjustments." But no loan will be made "which will result in the payment of otherwise uncollectable debts."

Applicants are required to obtain financing or refinancing from other agencies wherever possible. The Resettlement Administration requires a first lien as security of all loans, except in special cases approved individually by the regional director.

Swiss Arm Heights Facing Across Rhine

LOERRACH, Germany, Jan. 31. (AP)—Residents of this town are greatly impressed by the modern fortifications that the Swiss are putting up, just across the Rhine near Basel.

The forts, of stone and concrete, seem to lie along the Jura heights—one directly opposite the German town of Saackingen, and another above the historic city of Laufenburg, Switzerland.

The Swiss government, it is said here, has appropriated nearly $2,000,000 for these works.

Man About Manhattan

By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK.—Even the waxen figures in the windows were ravishing in their new creations, so an inspection of one of those fascinating style shows in the cafe-bar of the Sherry-Netherland seemed just the thing for such a cold day.

Some of the lovely femmes had already arrived, the brunette ones, but just two winks behind them were the blondes and the redheads. There were a couple with deep ivory skin and raven hair and beautiful sloe eyes. Others were platinum and honey-haired. And there was one whose peach-glow complexion seemed to have been kissed softly by sunlight.

Naturally they were gorgeous, having been chosen for their figures and their ability to show off frocks, and so I need not go into a treatise on why, at such moments, food seems to lose its significance. All I may say is that dishes were brought and taken away, and in the interim I must have made subconscious attempts to eat, but of what food there was I have no recollection.

"What a brave fellow you turned out to be!" a soft voice suddenly chided.

"What do you mean?" I inquired, recognizing a lass who writes fashion articles for the magazines.

"You're the only male here. But don't let that throw you; nobody will notice you. What is any man in the life of a woman when there are new styles to see?"

"What is this show about?" I ask, ignoring the insult. She informs me it is an exhibit of some original Creed importations, which sets me wondering all over again why style creators insist on having no first names.

There's Schiaparelli in Paris and Adrian in Hollywood, and any of a dozen others including Molyneux, Chanel, Vionnet. . . . "Reboux is exerting a tremendous influence in Paris," the magazines say. But what I want to know about Reboux is whether that first name is Pete or Daisy!

The Fashion Group, I suspect, has a lot to do with this. At least they abet the practice. This group is composed of people who criticize the new vogues. That is, they are to fashions what dramatic critics are to new plays, and they go around quoting one another and referring to each other by last names. . . . "Jones says Chanel will revolutionize hostess gowns this fall." . . . Jones may be a perfectly lovely little girl or Jones may be an ex-marine with a flair for describing lines. It's very confusing.

"Go on," I judge, "what about Creed?"

"Creed is very imaginative," she decides. So is the man who writes the Tarzan books, I feel like saying, but I don't. She's a nice child and I don't want her flouncing away. So I attempt a pun which falls pretty flat, but it keeps her on her favorite subject. I say, "Well, I know what your creed is now." "Creed is doing really great things," she continues. "He's English, you know, and for 100 years his family have been pioneers in tailoring. Now take this frock," she says, pointing to a model who is gracefully floating our way. "Imagination—sheer imagination!"

She's right. She sure knows her Creed. And does Creed know his sheep?

Brazil's railroad growth was shown in recent official figures as follows: In 1904 the miles in operation totaled 11,319.631; in 1934, 20,494,100.

THE BOOMERANG CLUE

BY AGATHA CHRISTIE

SYNOPSIS: Bobby Jones and Dr. Thomas have found the body of a man at the foot of a cliff on the Marchmont golf course. The only person who has even mentioned foul play is Lady Frances Derwent, and Frankie was "only talking." At the inquest the man is identified as Alexander Pritchard by Mrs. Cayman of London, who says he is her brother. Bobby is disappointed in Mrs. Cayman, because he had seen a photograph of a very beautiful woman in Pritchard's pocket, and Mrs. Cayman is by no means beautiful.

Chapter Six CALLERS

The coroner said a few soothing words and dismissed her. He addressed the jury. Their task was to state how this came by his death. Fortunately the matter appeared to be simple. There was no suggestion that Mr. Pritchard had been worried or depressed or in a state of mind where he would likely to take his own life. On the contrary he had been in good health and spirits and had been looking forward to his day. It was unfortunately that when a sea mist was on the path along the cliff a dangerous one, and possibly they might agree with him it was time something was done about it. The jury's verdict was prompt. We find that the deceased died of his death by misadventure, and we wish to add a rider in our opinion the Town Council should immediately take steps to put a fence or rail on the sea side of the path where skirts the chasm. The coroner nodded approval. On arriving back at the Vicarage about half an hour later, Bobby found that his connection with the death of Alex Pritchard was quite over. He was informed by Mr. and Mrs. Cayman that they had seen him and were in the city with his father. Bobby made his way there and had his father gravely making a stable conversation without, apparently, much enjoying his task. "Ah!" he said with some slight relief. "Here is Bobby." Mr. Cayman rose and advanced towards the young man with stretched hand. Mr. Cayman was a big florid man with a bulldog-beaty manner and a big and somewhat shifty eye that rather belied the manner. As for Mrs. Cayman, though she might be considered attractive in a bold, coarse fashion, she had little now in common with that early photograph of herself, and no trace of that wistful expression remained. In fact, Bobby reflected, if she had not recognized her own photograph it seemed doubtful if anyone else would have done so. "I came down with the wife," said Mr. Cayman, enclosing Bobby's hand in a firm and painful grip. "Had to stand by, you know, Amelia's naturally upset." Mrs. Cayman sniffed. "We came round to see you," continued Mr. Cayman. "You see, my poor wife's brother died, practically speaking in your arms. Naturally, she wanted to know all you could tell her of his last moments. "Absolutely," said Bobby unhappily. "Oh, absolutely," he grinned nervously and was immediately aware of his father's sigh—a sign of Christian resignation. "Poor Alex!" said Mrs. Cayman, dabbing her eyes. "Poor, poor Alex!" "I know," said Bobby. "Absolutely grim." He wriggled uncomfortably. "You see," said Mrs. Cayman, looking hopefully at Bobby, "if he left any last words or messages—naturally I want to know." "Oh, rather," said Bobby. "But as a matter of fact he didn't." "Nothing at all!" Mrs. Cayman looked disappointed and incredulous. Bobby felt apologetic. "No—well—as a matter of fact, nothing at all." "It was best so," said Mr. Cayman solemnly. "To pass away unconscious, without pain—why, you must think of it as a mercy, Amelia." "I suppose I must," said Mrs. Cayman. "You don't think he felt any pain?" "I'm sure he didn't," said Bobby. Mrs. Cayman sighed deeply. "Well, that's something to be thankful for. Perhaps I did hope he'd left a last message, but I can see that it's best as it is. Poor Alex. Such a fine out-of-door man." "Yes, wasn't he?" said Bobby. He recalled the bronze face, the deep blue eyes. An attractive personality, that of Alex Pritchard, attractive even so near death. Strange that he should be the brother of Mrs. Cayman and the brother-in-law of Mr. Cayman! He had been worthy, Bobby felt, of better things. "Well, we're very much indebted to you, I'm sure," said Mrs. Cayman. "Oh, that's all right," said Bobby. "I mean—well, I couldn't do anything else—I mean—" He floundered hopelessly. "We shan't forget it," said Mr. Cayman. Bobby suffered once more that painful grip. He received a flabby hand from Mrs. Cayman. His father made further adieus. Bobby accompanied the Caymans to the front door. "And what do you do with yourself, young man?" inquired Cayman. "Home on leave—something of that kind?" "I spend most of my time looking for a job," said Bobby. He paused. "I was in the Navy." "Hard times—hard times now—" adays," said Mr. Cayman, shaking his head. "Well, I wish you luck, I'm sure." "Thank you very much," said Bobby politely. He watched them down the weedgrown drive. Standing there, he fell into a brown study. Various ideas flashed chaotically through his mind, confused reflections—the photograph—that girl's face with the wide-apart eyes and the misty hair—and ten or fifteen years later Mrs. Cayman with her heavy make-up, her plucked eyebrows, those wide-apart eyes sunk in between folds of flesh till they looked like pigs' eyes, and her violent hen-na-tinted hair. It all came perhaps of marrying a hearty bouncer like Mr. Cayman. If she had married someone else she might possibly have grown older gracefully. But perhaps anyway— Bobby sighed and shook his head. "That's the worst of marriage," he said gloomily. "What did you say?" Bobby awoke from meditation to become aware of Frankie, whose approach he had not heard. "Mullo," he said. "Hullo. Why marriage? And whose?" Bobby explained. He found Frankie unsympathetic. "Nonsense. The woman's exactly like her photograph." "When did you see her? Were you at the inquest?" "Of course I was at the inquest. I was thrilled to the teeth." (Copyright 1935-35-36, Agatha Christie)

Bobby writes, tomorrow, to the Caymans.

GORMAN WELL REACTS TO ACIDIZATION

EASTLAND, Jan. 31.—Reacting to acidization, States Oil Corporation's No. 1 S. H. Huckabee near Gorman was flowing and blowing considerable gas Wednesday. Recognizing the uncertainties of duration of influence of the acid, States Oil corporation's officials advanced opinion that the well will become a 25 or 30-barrel per day producer. The test is in section 60, block 2, H. & T. C. survey. The acid was used from 2,830 to 2,850 feet.

TWO TESTS NEAR BLUFF CREEK SAND

ABILENE, Jan. 31.—Two tests in the north extension area of the western Shackelford Mims pool, about three miles southeast of Lueders, are due to top Bluff Creek sand soon, one to determine a west trend of the Vickers production and the other trying for east offset production. Root-Rhodes No. 1 Thomas H. Lattimer, testing a west extension, was drilling around 1,550 feet, after setting six-inch casing to 1,412 feet. It is located across one eighty-acre tract from the Ray & Stanforth No. 1 Vickers which proved a half-mile north extension to the Mims pool. It is located 220 feet from the south and east lines of the west half of section 207, ETRR survey. A. R. Eppenauer No. 1 Vickers, an east offset to the Ray & Stanforth No. 1 Vickers, was drilling at 1,400 feet. Pay in that area is encountered around 1,580-1,600 feet. The Eppenauer well is in the southwest corner of the northeast quarter of section 207, ETRR survey.

Cement for Moran Paving Is Unloaded

MORAN, Jan. 31.—Rockwell Bros. & Co., unloaded a car of cement Monday for the WPA, to be used in paving the business block of Fisher street and building culverts. The car of cement was bought by bids, Rockwell Bros. & Co. getting the contract. The project for paving calls for 1600 sacks of cement. The city council has been making plans to pave this block since work was mapped out last fall. The people of Moran are very anxious that this block be paved, as it will add much to the convenience and appearance of the street and will enhance the value of property. Plans call for excavation of 6 inches of gravel on the block, to be filled with cement. Drainage will run toward the highway.
