LEAGUE ADMITS PEACE EFFORTS FAIL

Teachers Elected for Coming School Year

Through the Editor's Spectacles
By GEORGE

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick J. Fisher of San Francisco, Cal., en route to Washington, D. C., read the "Spectacles" column in last night's Cisco Daily Press while pausing here. They were particularly interested in the last paragraph dealing with the interruption of the Southwestern Bell Telephone company's toll service by a tornado which tossed part of a house through the main line at Midland. They were in the house at the time the storm took off its roof and hurled it through the wires.

"We left San Francisco where there are earthquakes and now we run into tornadoes in Texas," exclaimed Mr. Fisher when he came to the Daily Press office this morning for copies of the paper. "I don't like that. We are going by way of Shreveport and St. Louis. Do you reckon there's be any storms on that route?" He laughed. He gave a graphic brief description of the gales made by the Midland storm. "Wires, poles, planks and wreckage tangled all over the highway."

"History Lecturer: 'Can anyone tell me what makes the Tower of Pisa lean?'"
"Stout Lady: 'I don't know or I'd take some myself.'"

Prof. W. F. Bruce has adopted a competitive method of luring lurking talent out of his English classes at Randolph college. He will conduct contests in essay, poetry and narrative writing among the students. The Daily Press has agreed to publish those chosen as best in each group. The competitive idea, thinks Mr. Bruce, stimulates interest and awakens the instinct to do one's best.

Landlord to prospective tenant: "You know we keep it very quiet and orderly here. Do you have any children?"
"No."
"A piano, radio, or victrola?"
"No."
"Do you play any musical instrument? Do you have a dog, cat or parrot?"
"No, but my fountain pen scratches a little sometimes."

Back from Rochester, Minn., came S. R. Wood last night feeling as chipper as a new cricket and singing praises of the famous Mayo clinic. Suffering from a back injury he sustained as a boy, Wood went to Rochester with visions of an operation and six months in plaster paris. He came under orders to take off the leather support he has constantly worn and to exercise himself gradually to develop the lacking strength in his back.

"You've heard about the Mayo clinic," he said, "but you don't have any idea of its magnitude." Housed in a 17-story building, employing a staff of 500 physicians and surgeons and using equipment that cost $23,000,000, the clinic is a wondrous thing," he said.

"Everybody, regardless of color, race, religion, finances or previous state of servitude is treated alike," he said. "Pauper or billionaire, it is all the same. All the resources and equipment of the clinic is at his service, whether it takes all day on one case or five minutes."

The Mayos operate no hospitals although there are numerous such institutions grouped around it and governed by standards set up by the clinic. The big clinic building houses nothing but the clinic, where patients are treated. More than 1,500 nurses and attendants are employed there, he said.

Wood spent a week at the clinic. He had its history when he returned, and he has a respect an

W. E. COOPER IS ASSISTANT GRID MENTOR

New Coach Graduate of Hardin-Simmons, Has Good Record

Election of public school teachers for the coming year was announced this morning by the Cisco school board.

Listed among the teachers was the name of W. E. Cooper, new assistant coach elected to fill the place vacated by Clyde Van Sickle, who will become head coach at Little Rock, Ark., next fall. Cooper will come to Cisco from Eldorado, Tex., where he has been phenomenally successful as a Class B coach. He is a graduate of Hardin-Simmons university and spent a year at Mercer College in Georgia.

O. J. Russell, president of the board, this morning said that the election of teachers is not yet quite complete. No special subject teachers had been considered and there still remained a few other matters for discussion by the board.

Superintendent R. N. Cluck today withheld assignment of teach-

WARNING! AN EDITORIAL

The picture frame racketeers are in town today. Following up on orders given a previous salesman for lithographed enlargements of portraits at a low price, these racketeers are calling on the customers, showing half-finished drawings of the enlargements and telling them that unless they purchase frames at ridiculously high prices the pictures cannot be finished or delivered.

It is the old army game in one of its many varied guises. The customer can compel the salesman to deliver the picture as ordered without the frame. As a matter of fact the whole enlargement and frame can be ordered through local photographers for a fraction of the price asked. The activities of these racketeers constitute a misrepresentation, if not an actual swindle, and any customer so approached ought to demand delivery of the picture as ordered and refuse to pay the exorbitant price asked for the frame. If you want a colored and framed enlargement of a portrait of a loved one, The Kizer Studio or Dean Drug Co. in Cisco can secure, at a fraction of the cost asked by the peddler, any style or design of enlargement and frame that you wish. If the work cannot be done in Cisco it will be done by reputable concerns for which the Cisco merchants are representatives.

These peddlers escape the laws and municipal ordinances governing peddling by a clever ruse. They take orders and deliver the article later. Thus they are outside the purview of the law regulating peddling. But they are racketeers, just the same. Turn them away. Patronize your home town merchants, whom you know to be reputable, and who are certainly more entitled to your confidence and your business than these fly-by-night creatures of deceit.

JUDGE RITTER IS CONVICTED BY SENATORS

65-Year-Old Jurist Removed from Bench on Scandal Charge

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 17 (AP)—The senate today convicted Federal Judge Halsted L. Ritter of Florida on house impeachment charges that he had brought his court into "scandal and disrepute."

The verdict automatically removed the 65-year-old jurist from the bench. Ritter was acquitted of the first six articles of the charge against him and convicted on the seventh, which combined all the previous six and added the "scandal and disrepute" count.

Senator Austin, Rep.-Vt., immediately challenged the conviction, contending that the six acquittals cleared him on the seventh article.

Ritter listened silently, apparently unmoved by the decision.

Dogs, Dogs, Dogs--- Overrun City Hall For Rabies Serum

Big dogs, little dogs, fat dogs, lean dogs— White dogs, black dogs, brown dogs, spotted dogs— Curly dogs, slick dogs— Good dogs, bad dogs, but each one somebody's pet. They were all making their way on leashes, at heel or in their master's car today toward the city hall, where they were to receive the serum that may save their lives.

Dr. Ross Hodges, veterinarian, was here today to vaccinate Cisco dogs before the police department opens its drive against stray dogs, designed to prevent rabies, and every Ciscoan, it appeared, had a dog he wanted to save.

ETHIOPIA NOT SATISFIED BY ITALY'S PLAN

Council Meets Monday; Italy Refuses Halt In Drive

The League of Nations committee of thirteen today agreed that attempts to effect a conciliation in the Italo-Ethiopian war have failed. It decided to convoke the league council in an extraordinary session Monday to consider the conflict in the presence of representatives of both belligerents.

The breakdown followed the Ethiopian delegation's flat refusal to consider Mussolini's modified peace proposals, which stipulated direct negotiations without league interference.

In Rome, an Italian spokesman said that Italy was willing to declare an armistice only after her armies had completed smashing the Ethiopian defenders, and had set up an authority sufficient to thwart military reaction.

Italians Near Capital

The Italians were believed to be nearing Addis Ababa, although torrential rains were reported slowing up the advance on the capital.

France addressed a "supreme appeal" to Mussolini, asking cessation of the war long enough to discuss peace.

In Addis Ababa, tribal chieftains and cabinet ministers met secretly after two Italian planes flew over the capital. The conferences were supposed to be mapping a defense.

Italy warned Britain against massing warships in the Mediterranean and not to push her too far.

BAGGAGE CAR SAFE ROBBED

Seven Hold Up Clerk; Get $58,000 Loot

NUTLEY, N. J., April 17 (AP)—Seven armed men today held up an Erie passenger train at a suburban station and escaped with $58,000 in silver and bills being carried to the federal reserve bank in New York, according to police.

The money was in a baggage car safe when the robbers forced the clerk to surrender his pistol and threatened him with death unless he handed over the loot.

Two passenger cars crowded with commuters and shoppers were unaware of the swift hold-up.

The robbery was over in a few minutes. The bandits jumped from the car and leaped into a waiting automobile reported to have been stolen. Federal reserve officials believed the loot was less than the police reported.

Beer Voting Due to Be Heaviest in County's History

Cisco and Eastland county today were preparing for what has been predicted as the greatest vote ever cast in a local option election, to be held tomorrow.

Approximately 7,000 votes are held by citizens of the county, with 4,539 in Eastland, Ranger, and Cisco.

Wet advocates recently secured a countywide local option election for the purpose of legalizing the sale of 14 per cent alcoholic content beer and wine. Dry forces likewise have been working to keep the country dry under the existing laws.

Judges in East Cisco are W. W. Wallace, C. L. Gilmore, and A. A. Michael. Judges in West Cisco are Fred Grist, Lee Owen, D. E. Waters, and J. S. Stockard.

Red Cross Will Open Highway Aid Stations

As part of the nationwide emergency highway first aid program inaugurated by the Red Cross recently, plans are in preparation for the opening of stations on the highways of Eastland county, it was announced today by County Commissioner J. E. Spencer.

Robert T. Bridge, field representative of the national organization, has been in conference with chapter officers during the past few days relative to this program. In general, most of the stations will be located out on the open highways, in filling stations, garages or wayside stores; in some cases they will be located in small towns or on the edge of large towns. Each station will be equipped with first aid supplies and the personnel will be given Red Cross first aid training.

Volunteer Service

This is essentially volunteer service, it was announced. When accidents occur, the station attendants will give emergency

PORTER RITES NOT ARRANGED

Details Pend Arrival Of His Survivors

Funeral arrangements for J. C. Porter had not been completed today, pending arrival of relatives. It was understood that they likely would not be made until late this afternoon.

Mrs. Porter had arrived in Cisco and a son was en route from Lubbock and a daughter from El Paso, it was learned.

Mr. Porter, a painter and paperhanger, was found shot to death in Chesley baseball park yesterday afternoon. Justice of the Peace Joe Wilson returned a verdict of suicide. There was a single wound in the right side of the head and the gun, a .38 caliber pistol, had recently been fired. The man's car was found a short distance away from the body.

Acquaintances said Mr. Porter had been despondent for some time.

Strong Gas Hampers Drilling in Kleiner

With 3,600,000 feet of gas roaring up the hole, the Charles J. Kleiner, et al, semi-wildcat in north Callahan county was having difficulty pounding its way into the pay. The well topped the Hope sand at about 1170 where the strong gas was encountered. It was said to look good for oil.

But the strong gas pressure prevents lowering bailer or getting water on bottom for drilling and the bit must drill dry. The well is about 10 miles north of Baird.

POLITICS TO BUSINESS

BENWOOD, W. Va., April 17 (AP)—Mayor Henry Healy has resigned his office, effective May 1, to become manager of a liquor store.

Young People's Service at 12th Street Tonight

A special service for the young people with the evangelist, the Rev. J. D. Smoot of Comanche, preaching on "Wrecks by the Way," will be held at the Twelfth Street Methodist church this evening. It was announced.

All young people of the city were invited to attend this service.

Sunday at 11 a. m. the evangelist will preach on "The Battle of the Christian Home." He urged everyone interested in Christian homes to be present.

The meeting, which began last Sunday, will probably close Sunday evening, the pastor, the Rev. Preston Broxton, said today. Excellent interest and attendance have marked the course of the services.

House Bloc Determined to Carry Fight for PWA to White House

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 17 (AP)—A house bloc today determined to carry directly to the White House a fight to save Secretary Ickes' PWA from oblivion in next year's relief program. It announced it had 200 signatures on a petition seeking to earmark $700,000,000 for Ickes.

The members were irked by a report that Harry Hopkins' WPA was to get the bulk of the proposed billion and a half dollars appropriation. Observers believed an Ickes-Hopkins showdown at A avenue and Sixteenth street

Phil Kenamer Denied New Trial in Slaying

OKLAHOMA CITY, April 17 (AP)—The state criminal court of appeals today denied a rehearing for Phil Kenamer, convicted of manslaughter in the death of John Gorrell, Jr., and sentenced to 25 years in prison.

Rev. Moad Will Hold Revival at Ballinger

Rev. C. S. Moad, pastor of the Church of God, will leave tomorrow for Ballinger, where he will conduct revival services through April 26.

There will be no preaching at the local church Sunday morning or evening nor the following week, but Sunday school will begin at the usual time, 9:45 a. m.

New Boston Store Has Opening Sale Beginning Today

Formal opening of the New Boston Store began at 8:30 this morning when doors were thrown open to admit Ciscoans to a sale intended to introduce to them the values of the city's newest business enterprise.

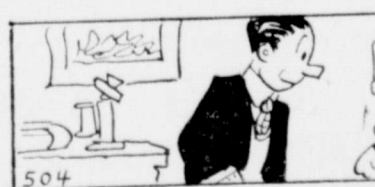

M. Sheinberg, owner of the store, recently moved to Cisco from Eastland, where he had been in the department store business. He took the location formerly occupied by the Boston Store, owned by I. Moldave, who had moved his business to Brownwood.

The proprietor of the New Boston Store announced in The Daily Press that the get-acquainted sale would last for 10 days, enabling Ciscoans to learn the values and type of merchandise offered.

Almost Startling, Really
By IRVIN S. COBB

IN THE days when Frank L. Munsey was in active editorial charge of his various weekly and monthly publications he had a serious-minded office boy who took things literally—and with due deliberation.

One day Congressman Thomas B. Reed, then Speaker of the House, came from Washington to New York and dropped into the office of Munsey's Magazine to see its proprietor. He stepped into the anteroom and without giving his name said he wished to see Mr. Munsey. The office boy told him Mr. Munsey was in conference. More than half an hour passed before the caller was admitted to the inner room. Then he told Mr. Munsey how he had been kept waiting.

Indignantly the latter issued forth and descended upon the youthful keeper of the outer gates.

"Do you know who that gentleman is who you kept dawdling about here?" he demanded. "That is the Hon. Thomas B. Reed of Maine!"

"I'm sorry, Mr. Munsey," said the youth. "I thought all the time it was Dr. John Hall."

"But don't you know that Dr. Hall is dead?" said Mr. Munsey.

"Yes, sir," said Truthful James, "that made it seem rather strange to me that he should be calling."

Softball Meeting Is Called for Tonight

A meeting of Cisco business men and others who are interested in the formation of a city softball league, such as was in operation last summer, has been called to take place at the chamber of commerce this evening at 8 o'clock. D. E. Perry summoned the meeting.

Softball has created a great deal of interest in Cisco each summer and rivalry between clubs sponsored by the various business houses has reached a pitch which has drawn enormous crowds to the lighted diamond at A avenue and Sixteenth street.

Cleveland Anticipates Fireworks as G. O. P. Prepares Convention

CLEVELAND, April 16. (AP)—Public Hall, in recent years the setting for colorful pageants, noisy circuses and the splendor of grand opera, will echo beginning June 23 with what may be the most interesting republican political show in many years. The republican party, in choosing Cleveland for the nomination of its 1936 presidential candidate, selected a city and state where political contests are bitterly fought and widely appreciated. The hall itself has political background. Calvin Coolidge was nominated there in 1924 amid cries of "Keep cool with Coolidge." The economy platform which Coolidge took into the White House was approved there. Expectations of national G. O. P. leaders who hope the convention will generate power for a sweeping concerted drive against the "new deal," are matched by those of Ohio republican leaders. They expect the convention to provide the stimulus for a successful attack on the democratic regime in Ohio government.

A spirited, boisterous gathering generally is expected. Lafayette B. Gleason, temporary secretary of the republican national convention, expects the convention will be a "fighting one for the first time since 1912."

The 1924 convention was a moderately quiet affair. Coolidge was nominated on the first ballot, 1065 to 44.

Republicans who attended that convention will find changes when they come to Cleveland this year. Arriving by train they will find a new Union Station. There are more hotel accommodations. If they arrive by plane, they will see a larger airport.

The hall itself has been enlarged so that it will now seat 14,200 persons. The lack of smaller halls where delegates might hold private conferences has been corrected. There are now 15 such rooms.

The main arena, 120 feet wide and 248 feet long, affords an unobstructed view from any part of the hall. A glass ceiling, 110 feet high, conceals the lighting system.

Ohio's Political History

In 1928, one of the crucial battles in the pre-convention campaign was fought in Ohio with Col. Carmi A. Thompson of Cleveland aligned with the then secretary of commerce, Herbert Hoover, against a "favorite son," Senator Frank B. Willis. In the background, directing the primary was another Ohioan, Walter F. Brown of Toledo, who became postmaster general.

Former Senator Simeon D. Fess, another Ohioan and former national republican chairman, cooperated with Thompson and Brown in obtaining the 1924 convention for Cleveland.

Five major party conventions have been held in Ohio. The democratic convention of 1856 was held in Cincinnati as were the republican convention of 1876 and the democratic convention of 1880. The Liberal republican convention of 1872 was held in Columbus. The last was the 1924 convention here.

Six Ohioans have been elected to the presidency, William H. Harrison, Rutherford B. Hayes, James A. Garfield, William Mc-Kinley, William Howard Taft and Warren G. Harding.

Three Ohio nominees were defeated: Harrison, in 1836; Taft, in 1912, when a split occurred in the republican party, and James M. Cox, in 1920, when as democratic nominee he was defeated by a fellow Ohioan, Harding.

Abstract Made 100 Years Ago Is Sent to Client

EASTLAND, April 16.—An abstract to title of land in Wise county 100 years ago—prepared in Texas centennial year—will be sent by R. L. Rust, Eastland attorney, to a client, J. H. Hughes, at Colorado Springs, Colo.

Rust had the abstract prepared by a Decatur firm.

The title is to "80 acres of the J. M. Wade survey in Wise county, northeast one-half subdivision of Lot No. 9 of the said survey."

The land is part of an original grant by the republic to John Wade, who received 4,605 acres—a league and labor—because he did not aid the enemy and stayed in what was Texas during the war with Mexico.

The land was originally in Shelby county, before its division and is now in Wise county.

The Eastland attorney stated he believed a person who desired land from the republic had to institute suit, as papers in the abstract indicate.

In an affidavit, Wade swore: "I do solemnly swear that I was a resident citizen at the date of Declaration of Independence. That I did not leave the country during the campaign of the spring of 1835 to evade participation in the great struggle. That I did not refuse to participate in the war and that I did not aid nor assist the enemy; that I have not previously received a title for my quantum of land, and that I consider myself entitled under the constitution and laws to one league and labor of land, for which I now apply."

TROOP 6 WINS RALLY

About 200 scouts and scouters were in attendance at the scout rally that was held at the city park in Eastland Saturday night. This north section rally, for Scouts from Troops in Eastland, Breckenridge, Ranger, Cisco, Carbon, Gorman, Olden, Parks and Colony, was one of the most successful meetings of its kind that has been held in many months. Those present showed much enthusiasm in all of the contests. Troop 6 of Eastland won first place with a total of 208 points. Troop 17 and Troop 18, both of Breckenridge, tied for second place with 152 points each. Troop 20 of Breckenridge took third place with 150 points.

The radio patrol of Troop 4 in Cisco was on hand with a loud speaker system, which was very beneficial; and their bringing it to the rally was greatly appreciated. These scouts are to be congratulated on their good workmanship.

The next rally for the North section will be held in Breckenridge Friday night, June 19.

Ranger Hotel Man Buried at Decatur

RANGER, April 16.—J. C. Shaw, 33, manager of the Paramount hotel of Ranger, died in a Ranger hospital at 1:30 Tuesday morning as the result of injuries sustained in an automobile accident near Strawn early Monday morning. The body was shipped early Tuesday to Decatur, his former home, where funeral services were to be conducted Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. A number of Ranger friends and members of the Ranger Lions club, of which Shaw was an active member, are to attend the services at Decatur. Burial will be in the Decatur cemetery.

The accident victim is survived by his mother and step-father, Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Buck, two brothers and an uncle, all of whom live in Decatur, and one sister living in Decatur, and one sister living in Fort Worth. All were present at the time of his death.

Shaw came to Ranger several months ago to accept the position as manager of the Paramount hotel after the death of Bill Derssey, former manager. Since moving to Ranger he had been actively engaged in all activities of the town and had acquired many friends.

The accident in which he was killed occurred as he was returning from Mineral Wells, where he had been visiting friends. Between Strawn and Ranger the car he was driving struck a guard rail. Three other occupants of the car were uninjured in the accident.

"Voluntary comments from satisfied customers tell their own story of HUMBLE products and HUMBLE service"

"ALL our stations are furnished with Service Check cards. These cards are provided for the convenience of customers who wish to comment on our service and our products. Their comments are voluntary; in fact, we rarely see them. But the Company gets literally thousands of them every year, and we think we've some right to be proud of the fact that over 99% of the comments are complimentary... They come from homefolks—from Texans, that is—and from out-of-state visitors alike. They tell us that motorists like the courteous, helpful service they find at Humble Service Stations, that they like the spotless cleanliness of Humble restrooms, that they appreciate the care with which Humble stations are maintained, that they like the products they get at the Humble sign... We invite you, too, to stop for service, for products of tested quality, where you see that sign. We are confident that both will please you—that you'll come back for more."

HUMBLE SERVICE STATION SALESMEN

Humble Service Stations are carefully designed and landscaped to make them attractive features of the neighborhoods in which they are located. They are fully equipped for your comfort and the expert care your car requires. Humble men are proud of the Stations which they man, and this Centennial year, they're putting their best foot forward.

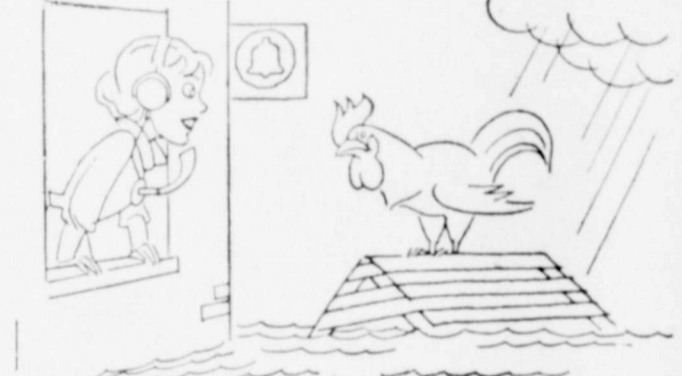

Restrooms at Humble Service Stations are as carefully kept as your bathroom at home. Many of them are tiled—all of them are spotlessly clean and sanitary. They are equipped with every modern convenience for your comfort.

In a recent study of Humble Service Check Cards mailed to the Company by Humble customers, nearly half the comments complimented Humble Service Station men on their friendly courtesy. These trained men render the kind of service which motorists find helpful.

We make no exaggerated advertising claims for Humble products, but we do say, you'll find them definitely second to none. We ask you to try them in your own automobile; to test Humble Motor oils and Humble motor fuels under your own driving conditions. When you do, we're confident you'll come back for more.

A TEXAS INSTITUTION MANNED BY TEXANS

Chicken dinner to starboard!

"Here comes a rooster, floating by on a chicken coop! The repairman is rowin' out to catch him—we'll have chicken stew for supper!"

In the flood-swept little river town, only the telephone operators remained, keeping the lines open for levee workers fighting the angry torrent. And at sundown, by long distance, the marooned office reported all well—and a chicken dinner in sight!

Good times and bad, it takes people to give you telephone service—men and women with the ability to do a good job in fair weather, and the courage to stay at their posts when emergencies threaten.

The entire specialized organization of the telephone system—this company, the expert staff of American Telephone and Telegraph Company, Bell Laboratories, Western Electric—exists for one purpose only:

To help the men who patrol the lines, and the women who work at the switchboard, do a better job of giving you good, economical telephone service.

SYNOPSIS: Iris Lansing has changed the quiet but charming life she has led in old Persia, Pa., for the giddy whirl of her Aunt Phina's New York. She likes the nonsense, now, much to her surprise, she finds herself in the house of old Mrs. Morgan, representative of old New York. This house and its owner are much like the Persia house—except Allan Beckley, Mrs. Morgan's grandson. Allan is showing Iris his Matisse collection. Iris just has enchanted the dinner guests with her singing.

Chapter 30 SITUATION

A feeling of being something he might collect along with Matisse and lion heads came over Iris for the moment, and then she felt she was being the little girl from the country again. She rose and began looking at the pictures, commenting on them. She was on safe ground here.

"You know an astonishing amount about art," he said. "Do you like the zoo?" For a moment she was going to be courteous, then she told the truth.

"Honestly, I don't. They're too much like putting traitors' heads on London Bridge, as they did in the old novels!"

He liked it; he laughed. They were on the low furry couch again. He put a casual arm about her.

"Do you know," he said, "why the room went silent when granny spoke of the benefit for the Anna Lispenard Home? It's the accolade."

Iris nodded. She didn't especially like his arm around her but she supposed there was no point to being Victorian. "I'm quite crazy about you," his soft voice said suddenly; his mouth pressed her bare shoulder. "Be crazy about me too."

It was done lightly, his lips were hot on her flesh. Before she could move or speak, she felt something else flung about her shoulders. "Don't move," he said, pressing her gently back against the pillows, and rising for a moment to adjust a mirror. "I want you to have this to remember your first evening in my house by."

Over her shoulders he had thrown a beautiful wide long fur, gray with black rosetted markings. He held her fast, the arm that had thrown the fur over her shoulders still around her.

their faces pressed together, as the mirror made the picture of his smooth light head, his smiling face, against her dark hair and startled flushed face.

He had pushed her into a half-lying position on the couch, and half knelt, half sat, close to her. She tried to move from him, but he kissed her again. "Crazy over you," he said once more. As she sprang up, scarlet, pushing the fur away, Georgia's clucking footsteps, her sparkling red frock, her bright angry eyes, seemed to fill the room.

"I thought you promised me that fur," she said with the complete lack of courtesy which was one of her weapons.

"A fur," said Allan, quite unmoved, "not that fur."

"You shoot a snow-leopard once in an age, you told me so!" Iris had pulled it off her shoulders to hand it proudly to Georgia, but the girl's words checked her. "The usual routine," Georgia went on sharply. "The Matisse room, the present from the Lord of the Harem, the couch—"

Allan's usually slow speech hastened a little. "Georgia, you're impossible."

Georgia's face flamed. It was a shrew's face, Iris had always known. She clutched Allan's arm, and did something close to shaking him.

"And you. You dare—after everything—"

A man servant stood in the doorway, quiet and incredibly decorous in the middle of these whirling passions.

"Mr. Beckley, Mrs. Morgan wants to speak to you, sir!"

With what Iris could not help thinking was a certain male relief at getting away from a scene, Allan spoke a word of apology and left the girls together. Iris braced herself for a continuation of the scene. But instead Georgia changed as suddenly as if someone had turned a key in her. Her face smoothed to sweetness, and she laughed easily.

"Here, put it back," she said, throwing the fur about Iris's bare shoulders again. "What a pig I was!"

"But if you are engaged to Mr. Beckley," said Iris, "you are right. He hasn't any business to give presents to other girls without your knowledge."

Georgia stared at her for a moment, then laughed again, more shrilly. She kissed Iris suddenly. "You cunning thing!" she said. "You and I are going to be great friends."

Iris was not a fool. She had been reared to a courtesy which had at least to seem to accept such friendliness as the girl offered. She said something, she scarcely knew what. One thing she did know. If Georgia had had any real rights over Allan, she'd have said so. Iris pulled the fur closer.

"But what I came up to say was that most of the crowd are going," Georgia went smoothly on. "I suppose Mrs. Morgan sent Williams to tell Allan so, as I forgot to. But after they're gone some of us are going to drive somewhere and dance and have something to eat; we want you along. And Allan, of course."

"My aunt—" began Iris, but Georgia said, "Oh, your brother and the Silverwheels girl are coming, of course. Run along down and say nightie-night to the old lady, and come back up here to wait."

Iris was glad to escape from Allan's room, and get away from Georgia for a little while. She ran down the narrow winding old stairs to change her dress, find her hostess and say good-by to her.

"Don't forget, I'll write you, aunt," was old Mrs. Morgan's last word. She made her final farewell, and slip up the back stairs as Georgia had told her to do. Her brother and Sigrid, Dicky, and a couple of men and a girl, she did not know, were sitting a bright-colored flock with black patches, all over the couch and the floor.

Presently they were all flocking out to the cars. Allan laid the snow-leopard fur about her shoulders.

"How does it feel to have fun from the Himalayas drop down the chimney?" he said in her ear as he put her in a low racing car.

They were the symbol of her victory over Georgia. And yet something stung her at his praise. Someone had said that before. Suddenly she remembered Morgan.

The first day she had met Morgan. And he, innocently, thinking her a girl of fifteen in her short dresses, had said, "Let me give you money for a dress, say it's dropped down the chimney." And she had been angry, been insulted.

"Comfy?" he asked her, breaking into her thoughts.

She smiled at him brilliantly.

"Quite. Where are Owen and Sigrid?"

"Behind in the Andersons' car," he said. She was relieved to find the Georgia was not with them—nobody was in the rumble seat, indeed—and sat happily silent while the car made its clever way through a westbound street and up the west drive to Riverside. She had not, so far, been to any of the Harlem cabarets, and she thought that must be where they were going. NO

It must be Arrowhead Inn—they were on Broadway, finally, turning north.

"Where are we headed for?" she demanded finally. "Won't I be late when we get there?"

"It will indeed," said Allan, in his amused soft voice. "We're late now. Does it matter?"

"Why, I suppose not—" She was being a country-mouse again. After all, there were no early engagements tomorrow. She drowsed a little. They were still sliding swiftly along the silver ribbon when she awakened. "Aren't we there yet?" she demanded sleepily.

"Almost," said Allan. You're a wonderful child. The only girl I ever drove with who could stop talking and enjoy all this in silence." She stared at the trees, the low hills at one side, the meadows stretching out on the other—all silvered and still and beautiful. Suddenly her dreamy delight was broken by a low "damn" from Allan.

She knew enough about cars to know that the jar, and the grinding noise which followed it, was probably the sound of a broken differential.

He was all right in a moment. "Something wrong with the car," he said. "It'll take us as far as the roadhouse, anyway."

That was all right, then. They would get a lift back in one of the other cars. They went carefully after that, finally landing at a queer turreted sort of place, a roadhouse high up from the road.

The warmth and light of the odd little place were comforting. It had none of the ornate luxury Iris expected. She supposed it was liked, then, for being "quaint." Allan ordered bacon and eggs, and when Iris came back from checking her wraps, said "We might as well eat when the food is ready."

Chips From Political Bloes Are Puzzle to John Smith, Voter

By ALEXANDER R. GEORGE
WASHINGTON, April 17. (AP)—Voter John Smith and the "wise-men" of the regular political factions face a bewildering potpourri of unprecedented philosophies advocated by non-party organizations.

These groups, such as the Liberty Leaguers, Share-the-Wealthers, Sentinels of the Republic, and Coughlinites, generally have no definite alignment with the regular parties.

Their objectives range from "freedom from governmental tyranny" to "governmental assurance of economic security for all." Leading the list of anti-"new deal" groups is the American liberty league with prominent democrats like John W. Davis and Alfred E. Smith and republican and independent voters as members. The avowed league aim is "preservation of the American system of government and protection of group and individual rights to work, earn, save and acquire property."

One League for Roosevelt
Specifically pro-Roosevelt is labor's nonpartisan league, recently formed by Major George L. Berry, John L. Lewis and other union leaders to seek united labor support for the president's reelection.

Direct control by congress over the monetary system and a "square deal for the workers" are advocated by the Rev. Chas. E. Coughlin and his National Union for Social Justice.

Concentrating on congressional candidates is the Townsend old age pension organization. It aims its appeal at the needy aged, driving for $200 a month pensions for persons over 60.

The late Huey Long's share-the-wealth clubs are still functioning, but with reputed loss of strength since the death of the founder.

California's EPIC
Upton Sinclair's EPIC supports left-wing democrats in California and is still rated a strong factor in politics there. EPICS have proposed "Reciprocal Economy," a system of cooperative production and consumption by the unemployed.

"Rightist" organizations are the national economy league and the crusaders. The former seeks to build sentiment for reduced governmental expenditures. The crusaders, one-time powerful anti-prohibition organization, opposes governmental interference with business.

Avowedly anti-Roosevelt is the Southern committee for defense of the constitution, headed by John Henry Kirby, wealthy Texas lumberman.

The Sentinels of the Republic, headed by Raymond Pitcairn of Philadelphia, also have made "defense of the constitution" their major objective.

All hems were to be one half inch wide except the ones under the arm, they were one fourth wide. The points of the pockets were to go toward the center of the aprons. Each girl wrote her name on a piece of white material two and one half inches wide and three and one half inches long. This was sewed on the wrong side of the apron in the right hand corner. 600 Acres Signed in Star Melon Program

RISING STAR, April 17.—Between 500 and 600 acres of watermelons were reported as signed up at a mass meeting of interested farmers here Monday afternoon. The meeting held under the auspices of the chamber of commerce was attended by more than 60 farmers, who reported interest in the proposition as being keen. Many more acres are expected to be added before the end of the season.

Cecil Shults, president, and Frank Robertson, secretary, stated at the meeting that the chamber of commerce, in view of the interest manifested, were ready to proceed with the work on the erection of the market shed and would have it ready weeks before the first melons were ready for sale.

The plan is to place the fair stock pens under the shed for bins to place the melons in so that each raiser may keep his melons separate from others. Truckers are expected to come to the market square and select the melons they want. The lot is easily accessible to trucks for loading and unloading, and as Rising Star is located on main highways in three directions buyers should easily be drawn to the market here.

Says Dangerous Varicose Veins Can Be Reduced At Home

Rub Gently Upward Toward the Heart as Blood in Veins Flows That Way
If you or any relative or friend is worried because of varicose veins, or bunches, the best advice for home treatment that anyone in this world can give, is to get a prescription known as Moore's Emerald Oil.
Simply ask your druggist for an original two-ounce bottle of Moore's Emerald Oil (full strength) and apply night and morning to the swollen, enlarged veins. Soon you should notice that they are growing smaller and the treatment should be continued until the veins are no longer troublesome. So penetrating and powerful is Emerald Oil that old chronic sores and ulcers are often entirely healed.

Sights and Sounds Of Hollywood

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD — Ralph Bellamy turned "inquiring reporter" on his recent personal appearance trip east, and learned some interesting things about "what the public wants."
He chatted with film exchange men, exhibitors and salesmen in cities and towns along his route. He played in two large cities, but visited in a great many more.

Now he thinks Hollywood would be surprised at the film needs of the smaller centers where Hollywood looks largely for its revenues.

"Pictures that Hollywood thinks little of are likely to be exactly what the patrons in a small town want, and on the other hand," he says, "a picture that Hollywood applauds most loudly can be what they don't want at all."

Fans Want Simplicity
"The fans want pictures about people they understand, people whose problems are like their own. Pictures that pride themselves on sophistication, on what Hollywood calls smartness, are likely to have tough sledding. The top hat and tails type of picture starts out with a handicap.

"They'll accept a star like Joan Crawford in these dress-up films. They know that she is one of them, a girl who had to work hard for her success. But some of the others don't seem to fare so well."
"Costume pictures are all right, provided the characters are real enough to be related, in their problems, to everyday life of the present."

Besides relishing the chance to get acquainted with the people who see pictures, Bellamy is enthusiastic about the personal appearance idea for all actors. This was his first return to the stage since he came to pictures six years ago.

Plans Another Tour
He is planning to repeat, at least once a year, on the theory that every time an actor steps before the footlights he adds four months to his professional life—provided he strives to please and does not take it for granted that audiences are interested in him.

For Bellamy touring was real work. He saw the sun rise almost every morning for 31 days, attended parties, personally viewed fan mail and gave autographs. He distributed $600 worth of photographs, all autographed on request—and gave interviews to all comers.

"But you can't call it work," he says, "because I really enjoy it. Autograph-hunters? Say, I'm going to start worrying about them when they stop asking me for mine. Any actor is flattered by an autograph request—and don't let any of them tell you otherwise!"

Just when, and in what role, he will emerge from the eclipse which followed his resignation from the foreign secretaryship, are unanswered questions.

But the Marques of Linlithgow, in one of his last speeches before leaving for India to become viceroy, predicted Sir Samuel "will soon be back in a part even greater than before."

The wiry, sharp-featured Sir Samuel is 56—but a young 56 to anyone who has seen him upon a tennis court or, clad in black sweater, tights and yellow gloves, on the ice rink. In his favorite pastime of figure-skating he can still execute complicated movements that would tax the suppleness of a youth.

Sir Samuel Hoare Comeback Seen as Troubles Ignored

By OSCAR LEIDING
LONDON, April 17. (AP)—Sir Samuel Hoare, swept out of the British cabinet in the storm over the Hoare-Laval plan for peace in Ethiopia, is expected to stage an early come-back in political life.

Just when, and in what role, he will emerge from the eclipse which followed his resignation from the foreign secretaryship, are unanswered questions.

But the Marques of Linlithgow, in one of his last speeches before leaving for India to become viceroy, predicted Sir Samuel "will soon be back in a part even greater than before."

Laughs at Troubles
Punished but still unremorseful for his part in the ill-fated proposals to bring peace to East Africa, he has been resting and building up his health.

In his rare public appearances since he retired from the foreign office to nurse at the same time a broken nose sustained while skating in Switzerland, he has been able to joke about his troubles.

The accident to his nose he describes as "politically embarrassing" but he has admitted he missed a great opportunity when the Swiss "expert in noses" who treated him asked him what kind of a nose he wanted.

"I answered: 'The same over again,'" Sir Samuel recently said. "Think what an opportunity I missed!"

"Suppose I had asked him to make me a nose like that of William Pitt—challenging and interrogatory—or a nose like Mr. Gladstone's massive in its Roman impressiveness?"

"How different would have been my return to the house of commons!"

Has Few Regrets
He has less regrets over his political downfall.

"Bad times have a scientific value; those are occasions a good learner would not miss," he quoted from Ralph Waldo Emerson in addressing his constituents in Chelsea.

"It was a time I would not have missed," he said. "It showed me, perhaps, more than any other incident in my life who were my true friends and how many friends I have."

The nation, too, he feels, benefited from his action.

"I do not think," he said, "that as a nation we had attached full importance to such a significant event as had taken place in the last two years—the rearmament of Germany."

"I believe, myself, that my resignation, whether I was right or wrong in that particular controversy, did have the effect of concentrating the attention of the country upon realities."

"Particularly, it concentrated attention upon the urgent need for a great strengthening in our national defenses."

Vote To Help The Old Age Pension Fund

When You Vote In The Beer Election Next • Saturday •

The taxes that beer would pay in Eastland County would provide the state's part of Old-Age Pensions for 125 Old People. These are taxes that are not now being paid on the illegal beer consumed in this county.

A vote for beer is a vote for decency and law enforcement --- It is a vote for proper regulation and good business.

Those precincts which do not want it legalized would still be dry, while Cisco, Eastland and Ranger, would be able to compete with cities which have legal beer.

Cast your vote the common sense way in next Saturday's election and vote to put beer out in the open.

The Whole Issue

ON this page today the CISCO DAILY PRESS presents the viewpoints of two Cisco ministers on the issue of the legalization of beer in Eastland county tomorrow. We welcome the opportunity to publish a variety of views on this and other public questions, not merely because it is the duty of any newspaper to strive to present the whole body of a question in order that the public may be enlightened for the formation of a judgment thereon, but because such a policy brings about a stimulation of public thought and action that is healthful in a democratic community.

WE have attempted to do that in relation to this beer issue. It is our firm opinion that Eastland county will best serve the ideal of temperance and law enforcement by voting to legalize beer in tomorrow's election. But no matter what the result of the vote, it will fail to be conclusive if only a small part of the citizens register their wishes and opinions.

BUSY Dallas business men should be interested in Lake Cisco and what is taking place there. It represents an unusually fortunate combination of recreational opportunities. Experienced promoters with adequate capital would shortly make the Lake Cisco area one of the most popular resorts in Texas.

OTHER OPINIONS

Correcting An Error

THE report has gone out over Eastland county that if the county does not vote the wet ticket in tomorrow's election it will be denied the benefit of the old age pension relief. The ministers of this county have through a committee wired the Old Age Commission at Austin, and they have in their possession a reply stating that this propaganda is entirely without foundation.

THE ministers of this county do not wish to be contentious, nor do they wish to make a single enemy; but they do feel that it devolves upon them to tell the people the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth concerning all issues of life. Therefore, as one of the local pastors, as president of the county pastors' association, and as a friend of the community I hereby appeal to you to go to the polls Saturday and cast a vote against the legalization of humanity's enemy.

TO vote for the legalization of fourteen percent liquors is not a vote for beer. It is a vote for whiskey. There is not a single thing to gain by legalizing it in our county, but there is much to lose. If you want to increase the hazards of the highways and streets; if you want to put your stamp of approval upon debauched poverty; if you want to say to our boys and girls that you believe it wise to drink; if you want to drive men to an untimely grave, women to the poor house, and children to the orphanage; if you want to retard the work of the churches, lower the standards of morality, and hasten the ruin of society; if you want to contribute to the damnation of souls, then vote the wet ticket.

If you vote dry tomorrow and lose your vote, (I do not believe you will), you will have the satisfaction of knowing that you did the thing that was right. Then when the ambulance calls to carry away the mutilated or lifeless remains of your neighbor, when the court pronounces sentence upon the intoxicated driver, when the mantle of eternity rolls back to receive another into its long abode, you will not have to acknowledge to yourself that you have been accessory to the cause of the sorrow.

Respectfully submitted, E. S. JAMES.

Hesitate Before Voting

MY friends, hesitate before you cast your vote, for the return of legal sale of intoxicants next Saturday. From the time it leaves the distillery until it empties itself into the jaws of death, wrecks, dishonor and crime are in its path. I do not believe that anybody can contemplate the object without being prejudiced against the liquor crime.

every thoughtful person is prejudiced against liquor.

IT cannot be trusted. It is powerful, aggressive, and universal in its attacks. It produces weakness, not strength; sickness, not health; poverty, not wealth; death, not life; misery and woe, not happiness. It will make wives widows, children orphans, husbands fiends. It is the mortal enemy of peace and order.

WHO can profit by its return? It can uplift no essential industry, it will remedy no wrong. It comes to mislead human souls, and to crush hearts under its mighty power. It comes to convert wife's love into despair, and her pride into shame. It comes to still the laugh of little children. It comes to empty the churches, ruin body and mind, to wreck homes, and it will measure its

A Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER

WASHINGTON -- With the plans of administration leaders for adjournment of congress early in May apparently blasted, there are signs of increasing nervousness on the part of business leaders as to what may happen on capitol hill before senators and representatives actually get out of town.

Not all of their nervousness can be attributed to what finally will be done on the pending tax bill or relief appropriations, as disturbing as they are.

Other pending measures, at varying stages in both houses, contribute to the general uneasiness and uncertainty. Several have been characterized openly by business leaders as "disciplinary and hostile."

Prominent among these is a bill to expand the inquisitorial powers of the federal trade commission. Despite vigorous opposition, the measure has been reported out of the senate interstate commerce committee. A similar committee in the house has taken no action.

Business Anxious

There are several pending bills affecting labor which are keeping business on the anxious seat. They include the so-called "little NRA" for the textile industry; the government contract proposal, which would impose NRA wage and hour conditions in government contracts by department of labor fiat, and the 30-hour week bill.

Mere mention of the proposal on the senate side to require all business enterprises whose goods or produce enter interstate commerce to take out federal licenses is sufficient to make the average business man shudder.

Pending on the senate calendar is a proposal to regulate and prevent undue price discriminations. Other pertinent bills are in the senate's judiciary committee. The house judiciary committee has ordered favorably reported a measure widely at variance with those pending in the senate.

The outcome of this highly controversial legislation is anybody's guess.

Adjournment May Intervene

Some of these proposals, of course, have little or no chance of making any headway toward serious consideration during the present session of congress. Others do have. Business' scouts and tip-off men in the capital are taking no chances. They are advising their clients that they should understand clearly such measures are under consideration and act accordingly.

Admiration leaders themselves say privately, however, that once the tax bill and relief appropriations are out of the way the pressure for adjournment will be such that it will be almost impossible to keep congress in session much longer, regardless of what legislation is hanging fire.

Evidence of that pressure already is to be had. A group of members in the house have organized to force adjournment by May 11. They intend to introduce a privileged resolution to that effect when ever opportunity permits, not so much in the hope of securing adjournment by May 11 as to keep the subject of quitting in the minds of the members.

Human and Other Nature

By W. F. BRUCE

As I sense the state of atmosphere, the turn of the wind, and the probable stage of weather cycles that puts us in the midst between two weather changes, tomorrow (Saturday, April 18) will be a fair day. I am not a native Texan, but have been here just long enough to begin to be fairly well acclimated, therefore would prosperity by the swiftness and certainty with which it does its work.

IT will undo the work of schools, and cut the ground from under law and order. It buys from the state the right to lay dynamite under its foundation. For a handful of gold it is given the right to nullify the work of law-makers. Huge battleships have been built, vast sums have been spent on war equipment, to be ready for a peril which we hope shall never come. Yet for the pitiful purse, this terrible thing is given the right to unmask all its powers upon boys and girls, every day and night. Is the revenue worth more than our noble boys and girls? A vote against it is a vote for your home, your school, your community, your church, and above all for the boys and the girls.—T. J. Sparkman.

probably be classified as betwixt and between. If I am guessing rightly then Randolph Hill will be a scenic spot taking on its spring beauty. For whatever may be said about the buildings and their marks of bygone days, or of the looks of some of us who live on the hill, no one would be ready to deny that the site of Randolph College is as picturesque as could be found.

Once in a while every one of us ought to abandon himself to a glorious relaxation of body, mind, and soul. I am not talking about dissipation, but about recreation. The former scatters energy, the latter recreates it. Tomorrow is the time. A basket picnic at the noon hour, during which you can rub elbows, or swap the time of day, or dispute the political probabilities with a neighbor while at the same time regaling the appetite, will give you the opportunity. Then if the weather turns against us—which turn would really be in our favor if it took the form of more rain—there are plenty of available sheltered places about the premises so that the proceedings need not be interrupted at all. The dining hall is capable of accommodating a crowd; and there are other places to take care of the overflow.

Politics At Random

By BYRON PRICE (Chief of Bureau The Associated Press, Washington)

The republican pre-convention eggs are beginning to hatch, but the business of chicken-counting is fraught with unusual complications.

So many delegates are unstructured, and the methods of indicating degrees of favor for individual presidential candidates are so numerous and ambiguous, that it is difficult for even the campaign managers to determine exactly where they stand.

It appears that in spite of all the state laws which have been passed on the popular assumption that they would simplify the political expression of public sentiment, it still is possible to keep many things concealed.

To one unversed in such matters, it might look easy to tabulate the delegate strength of the various candidates to date, and set forth the situation graphically in parallel columns of figures.

In fact it has been possible to do just that, with a fair degree of accuracy, in some previous years. This year it is virtually impossible.

About 'Stalking Horses'

To tabulate accurately the delegate strength of any leading republican candidate today would require, not one column of figures, but at least four.

From the statistical point of view, the easiest class of delegates to deal with are the "unstructured" delegates. Yet even here there are many pitfalls for the mathematician.

Some states instruct their national delegates for one candidate with the expectation that they will stand for that candidate to the bitter end. Others use exactly the same language to instruct for a favorite son or other stalking horse, never really meaning that the instructions are to be followed for more than one or two ballots.

But this complication is nothing compared to the situation with respect to a second class—the "pledged" delegates, such as usually are chosen in state-wide primaries.

In the primary a man runs for

At least two employes of each station must complete the standard Red Cross first aid course before the station may be accredited. First aid classes for employes who are to do this work will be arranged for by the Eastland county chapter as soon as arrangements for the stations are complete.

Throughout the country nearly 400 of these stations are already in operation and over 2,000 others are in process of development. The exact locations of stations in Eastland county have not yet been determined, but the Chapter Highway first aid committee, under the chairmanship of Jess Proctor, will make a survey of the highway and determine the locations at an early date.

Locations to Open in 1936 It is anticipated that at least three stations will be opened in the county during 1936. On the highway first aid committee will be representatives from Eastland, Cisco and Ranger; J. E. Spencer, chairman of the Eastland county chapter, has general supervision of this and all other chapter services.

Bridge explained that very often prompt first aid care means the difference between life and death to a seriously injured person, particularly in cases of profuse bleeding where fast work is necessary if the patient is to recover. The stations to be established in Eastland county are made possible through support given during the annual roll call.

Efficient Beauty In Air; Hostesses Making Tradition

By CLYDE A. FARNSWORTH
 NEW YORK. (AP) — Requirements are strict, yet thousands of young women are seeking the comparatively few hostess jobs available on passenger ships of the nation's air lines.

Six years ago the first major transport line announced it was adding women to its regular crews. Since then the beauty, charm and bravery of the hostesses who cruise the nation's skies have become traditional—and applications from young women have crammed the files of the major companies. One line has 2,000 applications, but insists there is a shortage of qualified women.

Generally stated, the air-minded young women must fill these requirements if she would don the pert uniform of the stewardesses: She must be a graduate registered nurse.

Her height must not be more than five feet, four, nor may she weigh more than 120 pounds. She must not be more than 26 years old.

She must have an engaging personality, be solicitous of the comfort of others and capable of performing a variety of tasks, from explaining the fundamentals of aerial navigation to helping change a diaper.

They Go to School

One of the air lines operates a school to polish its stewardesses, classes going into such things as passenger psychology, how to make air travelers comfortable, serving lunches and answering questions about the geography of the routes flown.

The stewardess must be a registered nurse, explains an air line representative, "because the institutionally trained girl has an understanding of discipline and a knowledge of how to deal with the public that is required in the job of stewardess."

The stewardess may not be "beautiful but dumb."

Conversationalists Favored

She must have sense enough to be able to carry her end of almost any conversation. She must have poise in the presence of the great and near great, for many in these classifications travel by air—politicians and movie stars, opera singers and captains of industry.

The ranks of these aerial Jaquelines-of-all-trades are constantly being depleted by that quick bank-and-turn which lands women in front of altars. Says an air line official:

"A majority of the stewardesses who have given up their work to become housewives have married pilots, while several others have married passengers."

Teachers Named for Next Year at Ranger Schools

RANGER, April 17. — At the regular meeting of the school board, held this week, teachers for the Ranger school system were elected, but no salaries were set. All teachers have now been elected with the exception of a librarian, as Miss Eleanor Kirkpatrick has tendered her resignation to the board in order that she might attend school next year.

It was pointed out by E. A. Ringold, secretary of the board, that some of the teachers who do not have degrees were elected subject to their qualifying for the positions under the state law requiring them to do summer work toward their degrees.

The complete list of employees of the school system, with the exception of one janitor for the Hodges Oak Park school, which position was not filled, is as follows:

Lone Star Sets 10 Inch in Brooks 4

MORAN, April 17.—The Lone Star Gas company set 10-inch casing in the R. W. Brooks No. 4, at 2,170 feet the first of the week preparatory to drilling through the Moran sand found there at that depth. The Lone Star has a number of big gas-servers producing from the Moran sand but expect to drill to the 3,340 foot lime where they have a big oil producer in a well some 600 feet away. The well came in six years ago, estimated at 4,000 barrels daily. Production from the well has been held down by proration, but is still capable of making an enormous amount of oil from the Caddo lime.

Drillers are cleaning out the well at the present time, and will begin drilling again in a few days. Quite a bit of local interest is being shown in this well.

Tyler and Holden Buy Gas Supply

RISING STAR, April 17.—A deal was consummated the past week in which W. E. Tyler of this city and Tommie Holden, of Cross Plains purchased the gas properties of Jim Anderson and associates in the Burkett area and acquired the contract to supply the city of Cross Plains with natural gas.

Messrs Tyler and Holden, who are partners in oil production near Cross Plains, get three gas wells in the deal, the pipe line and all properties of the Anderson firm in the Burkett area.

We Want To STAY ~ In CISCO ~

MR. VOTER: For 18 years we have been in business in Cisco, where we have built a good cafe business, a business of which Cisco as well as ourselves can be proud. We have conducted a good, clean business, furnishing the best of food and attracting a high class patronage. Our homes are here, we have made our investment here and we employ a number of people who, like us, spend their money in Cisco. Since we have been in Cisco we have paid over $17,000 in rent.

Before beer was legalized in Texas, our business was not affected. But when it became legal in counties nearby, it did affect our business to such an extent that it dropped off and we are threatened with having to move. If Cisco cafes cannot sell beer as a beverage this business will go to Breckenridge and Baird and other towns where it is legal.

Help us stay in Cisco by voting to legalize beer next Saturday.

"Screen Son" Faces Real Drama As Mother Fights for His Custody

By ROBBIN COONS
HOLLYWOOD—The screen son of Greta Garbo, Dolores Costello Barrymore and Elizabeth Allan went through assorted tragic moments in his storied relations to each.

Now 12-year-old Freddie Bartholomew has become the center of real-life dramatic situation that has all Hollywood interested.

On one side in the controversy is Freddie's aunt, Miss Mylicent Bartholomew, who has had charge of his education and training for past nine years, and who recently had herself appointed his legal guardian in the California courts.

On the other side are Freddie's parents. His mother, Mrs. Lillian Mae Bartholomew, has come from London to contest her sister-in-law's custody of the child "wonder actor" whose film earnings are more than $1,250 a week. His father, Mrs. Bartholomew explained, remained in England because of illness.

And in the middle is—Freddie.

Two Versions

When Freddie and his aunt arrived in Hollywood more than two years ago in answer to the movies' need for a "David Copperfield," Miss Mylicent Bartholomew explained they were present—with his parents' permission—on a vacation. That he should be "Copperfield" was "in the back of their minds," of course, she said. Freddie's mother says that, when they left, his aunt already had the contract.

Freddie, a precocious youngster who intends to write "content-plative novels" when he grows up, and meanwhile belies his almost fragile appearance by indulging in the roughest sports permitted, became of starring calibre after "David Copperfield," played Garbo's son in "Anna Karenina," did "Professional Soldier" with Victor McLaglen and most recently was "Little Lord Fauntleroy" to Dolores Costello's "Dearest."

Mother Arrives

Somewhere along the way his salary was jumped from $100 a week to $1,250. Last October, Miss Mylicent went into court in Los Angeles and was granted sole legal custody of the boy, with his parents granted a limited period of appeal. His mother arrived in New York before that period expired.

In Hollywood the lad always has been voluble in his affection for his aunt, who started him on nursery rhymes and had him reciting Shakespeare—and liking it—before he was six.

So the stage is set (barring that amicable settlement the attorneys talk about) for one of the town's most heart-rending off-screen dramas.

Plump Fugitive Ethiopian Wants Italian's Wine

By EDWARD J. NEIL
MAKALE, Ethiopia, April 17.—Ras Kassa Sabat, a short plump little man, is the center of one of the funniest incidents in the Italian-Ethiopian war, if anything about war can be funny.

Since last November General Mariotti, one of the Italian division commanders, has been working might and main on the tough little warrior who is the nominal lord of much of the Danakil desert regions, as well as large territories approaching Lake Ashangi from the east.

First Mariotti moved against Sabat with a column that drove through the Danakil, fought clear of an ambush, and finally put the Ethiopian chieftain to rout at Asbi. Sabat, after that, was finished as a fighting factor.

But he still was at large with a small bodyguard. And for the prestige involved, as well as definite progress toward the ultimate peace, Mariotti wanted him—either captured, or surrendered as a prisoner of war.

So a manhunt started for Sabat through the mountains. Somehow Sabat, his followers diminishing to a handful, managed to keep one jump ahead of the pursuers.

He made at least a hundred promises through native intermediaries to meet Mariotti in some mountain fastness and talk the situation over. But he kept none of these rendezvous.

Finally he ran out of mountain retreats and with the simplicity of the native mind, or maybe the cunning, he moved quietly into the native quarter at Adigrat, hiding there at the very time that Marshall Badoglio, high commander of the Italian armies, was making Adigrat his headquarters.

By the time informers told the Italians where to look, Sabat was gone again.

Sergeant Gets His Man
 Mariotti, still in charge of the hunt, located him once more in the mountains, and sent a trusted sergeant of native troops, a Bimbashi, to talk once more with Sabat.

The Bimbashi found Sabat. He talked to him. In fact he's still talking to him, after a month.

Every now and then a runner comes to Mariotti from his faithful sergeant with messages something like these:

"Ras Kassa Sabat would like a fiasco of wine. Still talking to him."

"Sabat would like a bag of flour. He may surrender shortly."

Actually it all works out very well, for Sabat will do no more harm while the sergeant accompanies him everywhere arguing with him. And for the first time in months, he's eating and drinking regularly.

In 1900 North Carolina had 950 log schoolhouses.

June 5, 6 and 7 Set As Dates for Philpeco Tourney

RISING STAR, April 17.—At a meeting of the directors, June 5, 6 and 7 were set as the dates for the annual Invitation Golf Tournament at Philpeco Country club and plans set in motion to make it one of the biggest and best ever held by the club.

The tournament comes one week earlier this year and following just after the west Texas open at Mineral Wells. It will probably be the first of the Oilbelt tournaments this year and should draw the best players from all the clubs of this section of the state. Invitations are to be sent out within the next few weeks to leading players everywhere and an effort made to line up a fast field. J. T. Hammett, the club's own sharp-shooting ace will be defending champion, but he, no doubt will have some very stiff competition this year. Wayne Middleton and Bobbie Hafele, former Philpeco players, who are shooting sensational golf in Fort Worth, say that they will be on hand. Panny Farmer, No. 1 player at Texas Tech, and who has hung up some brilliant records in west Texas play, has also announced his intention of being present.

Committees Appointed
 The following committees have been appointed to handle the various details of the tournament and will soon be busy at work on their duties:

Pairings and starting—J. H. Gregg, J. T. Hammett, Horace White and W. B. Nicholson.

Rules—Porter J. Davis, Bill Tunnell and Ross Newton.

Driving contest—Lowry Horton, Charles Rutherford and O. T. Jarvis.

Barbecue—Dutch Shults, Jack Embry and L. C. Cash.

Calcutta Pool—F. B. Joyce, C. E. Williams, Fred Tunnell and Charles Rutherford.

Entrants—Fred Roberts, Jake Dupree, Babe Wood, Jack Scott, W. A. Wright and Alva Harrell.

Hitler's Army Is Great Issue For Voters of France

By JOHN EVANS
PARIS, April 17. (P)—German remilitarization of the Rhineland and the war scare in its wake may change many votes in the elections for deputies April 26 and May 3.

Adolf Hitler put political south-sayers on a spot until he denounced the Locarno pact, for as German soldiers stomped into the Rhineland, observers were predicting a sharp swing to the left.

Since then, however, the rightists have taken full advantage of the tense situation and their appeals for "a strong man at the helm" to face Germany may alter results.

Left Leaders Worried
Rightist leaders are warning that the World War broke on France shortly after it turned to the left in the 1914 elections and are asserting that a strong nationalist government, ready to assume a stern attitude toward Germany, is the best guarantee of peace.

Leftist leaders admit worry and discouragement. It is against their policies to advocate big armies and navies.

Political meetings turn to war talk. Voters ask candidates why Hitler tore up the Locarno pact and escaped punishment. The danger of war will, however, be only one of the thorny problems which those of the four thousand candidates elected to the 518 seats in the chamber of deputies will have to face when they assemble in June.

Money Problem Acute
Besides the war menace they must deal with an empty treasury, the devaluation problem and bitter internal discord.

Parliament will be under pressure from the military-minded to strengthen national defense and negotiate treaties that won't be torn up like Locarno with nothing more effective than speeches as a result.

The empty treasury is a sore spot. Financial writers, long accustomed to supporting national credit, make biting observations. They recall that France had to borrow $200,000,000 in England and that the country's bank account recently has been enough for only a day's expenses.

Government bonds, at 85 a year ago, are down around 67 and Bank of France stock has lost

Cooper Praised

President Russell, speaking for the school board this morning, said Cisco is fortunate in securing Cooper as assistant coach. He pointed out that he is both an outstanding classroom teacher and a successful athletic coach, and one who will be a worthy successor of Clyde Van Sicke.

Cooper was a back on the Hardin-Simmons grid team, an all-conference basketball man, and captain of the Cowboys' track team. He is 26 years old and married.

Two years ago Cooper's team at Eldorado defeated the strong San Angelo Bobcats after spotting them a four touchdown lead in the first half.

The board, while praising Cooper and announcing that Cisco is fortunate in securing him, expressed regret at losing Van Sicke. The latter recently accepted a position as head coach of the Little Rock, Ark., high school, third largest school in the United States. This was regarded as a definite promotion in recognition of his work at Cisco and at DeQueen, Ark.

The hopes, prayers—and money—of Florida racing folks will be backing Brevity when Joseph E. Widener's beautiful dark bay colt goes to the post for the Kentucky Derby, May 2. Those who saw the picture horse match Discovery's world mark of 1:48 1-5 for the mile and a furlong in winning the final running of the Florida Derby are confident Brevity will not fail them.

Perhaps it is a mighty good thing that the colt does not realize just how much his victory in the blue grass classic would mean to Florida racing. It would be the biggest thing yet to happen toward establishing the winter tracks as a training ground. It would "make" Florida racing.

The Viewpoint Changes

Most horsemen have stoutly maintained that it was unnatural to train and race 3-year-olds so early in the South and expect them to stand up through a hard campaign of summer racing. Circumstances have changed in the past three or four years and the old idea has lost supporters. A Florida racing has made marvelous strides in recent years and Derby would knock their theory Brevity victory in the Kentucky on winter training sky high.

this because of the fact that the racing fathers have seen fit to move along cautiously and build on a solid foundation. The announcement of a $50,000 purse for the Joseph E. Widener Challenge Cup to be run at Hialeah Park next winter is an indication of the growth of the sport.

Announcing the event Mr. Widener pointed out that in inaugurating this rich event he had no idea of competing with the huge sums offered at other winter tracks but that he was convinced that Florida racing had grown to the proportions which warranted such a fixture. In other words, the $50,000 race is a land-mark in Florida racing.

Vanderbilt Goes South
Racing in Florida received a rare boost when Alfred G. Vanderbilt let it be known that he was planning to ship his entire stable to Florida tracks next winter. The youthful owner is extremely popular with racing folks in Florida, and that goes for the stable boys on up through the official family.

Walter H. Donovan, president of the National Association of State Racing Commissioners, pointed out that the effort to bring about periodical international races was a step in the right direction. Not only will such races mean another gesture toward good will, but it will properly place the emphasis on the sport. There is a lot of truth in the statement that — emphasize the sport of racing and the mutuels will take care of themselves; but emphasize the mutuels and the sport will die.

The National Association of State Racing Commissioners has made remarkable strides towards its goal by working together with understanding. The value of approaching racing from a national angle has been demonstrated by the results obtained by the formation of the bodyeaoishrdlumfwh of the body. Its action has done much to win national confidence and support. It behooves the operators to realize the need of cooperative action and not to permit individual competition between tracks to transcend their common interest which is reflected by the standard of operation throughout the country.

Racing is riding high on the crest of popularity and the need for united and coordinated action in supervising the sport becomes more and more apparent each day.
