Girl Is Recovering From Cut Upon Leg

Jeanette Lee, 10-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fielding Lee of Colorado, Texas, and granddaughter of Dr. and Mrs. W. P. Lee of Cisco, suffered a severe cut on her leg at her home recently from which she is recovering satisfactorily. Dr. Lee said today after a trip to Colorado to treat the wound yesterday.

First Lake Sand Coring Due Soon

What is said will be the first time that the lake sand in this area has been cored will take place in the Hickok City of Cisco No. 2 well shortly after July 4.

Six-inch casing is being set just above the stratum now and the plug will be drilled and a core taken after Saturday, it was said.

The well is located on the city airport property immediately north.

SECOND TWIN DIES

MEDFORD, Mass., July 3. (AP)—The baby girl, Siamese twin, who lived 30 hours attached to the body of her dead sister, died today.

SOUTH TEXAS FLOODS ENVELOP FARMS AND CITIES

The flood-swollen Guadalupe river swept through Gonzales Wednesday, sending residents hurrying to high ground and turning portions of the city into a lake. The top picture shows a part of the city under water. Below, a farm house in the vicinity isolated by the flood.—(Associated Press Photo).

LAKE CISCO TO BE SCENE OF PROGRAM

Holiday Observed By Bank, Tailors And All Utilities

A crowd of several thousand persons today was expected to jam the parks and fill the swimming pool at Lake Cisco tomorrow for the Fourth of July and Golden Jubilee Centennial celebration.

The program will begin tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock and will continue until well after midnight. It will include a water carnival, addresses by representatives of the state health department, band concerts, political speeches, picnicking, swimming, fishing, dancing, a bathing revue and a fireworks display.

The post office, bank, all utilities, including the city water department, and the cleaning plants of the city will observe the national holiday. The dry goods and variety stores, including J. C. Penney, The Leach Store, Economy Store, Garner's, Altman's, Style Shop, The Boston Store, and

County Acreage In Cotton Is Not Yet Determined

"So far as I have been able to ascertain the acreage planted to cotton in Eastland county is an undetermined amount," said E. S. Huey, Cisco cotton factor.

"I find that there are 400,000 cotton farmers in Texas, 300,000 of whom have signed the farm work sheets of the federal agricultural department, and there are 2,700 farms in Eastland county, and am told about 29 percent are working under the federal program, but I have not been able to ascertain the number of acres planted to cotton in the county."

"I have inspected many fields in the county, and unless the crop

President Leaves To Dedicate Park

WASHINGTON, July 3. (AP)—President Roosevelt left by car today for Big Meadows, Va., where late today he is scheduled to dedicate the Shenandoah National park. He speaks tomorrow at Montecello, the former home of Thomas Jefferson.

Dams Transferred To River Authority

WASHINGTON, July 3. (AP)—The interior department today announced the transfer from the reclamation bureau to the Texas Lower Colorado River Authority, the supervision of construction in connection with the first two dams of the $20,000,000 Colorado control and irrigation project.

FRANCE ASKS REGION PACTS

System Guarantee Of Peace, Claim

GENEVA, July 3. (AP)—France called today for a reinforced system of regional pacts, supervised by the League of Nations, to guarantee world peace by military force. Yvon Delbos, French foreign minister, urged 'before the League assembly a speedy reformation of the international peace body by which aggressors would suffer armed punishment.

Douglas Dumbrille says he failed in 14 lines of endeavor before he made his stage debut and won success.

Texas Flood Worst One in Many Years

British Denial In Slaying Ires Japs in Peiping

PEIPING, China, July 3. (AP)—A storm of Japanese disapproval today greeted the British consular decision denying the implication of two British soldiers in the slaying of a Japanese soldier. The Japanese called a mass meeting to "consider counter measures" and besieged the Japanese embassy to protest the court's findings.

Little Damage At Blaze in Theater

Small damages to the Ideal theater were reported following a fire above the stage there about 9 o'clock last night. The fire was between the Elks club rooms and the stage of the theater.

TEXAN SLAIN IN GUNFIGHT

Battle Is Climax For Drinking Bout

SANTA MONICA, Cal., July 3. (AP)—A shooting that climaxed a night of drinking brought Jimmy Henderson, 32, an Alpine, Texas, cattleman, into the hands of the police today, and sent Leroy Patton, 50, to the hospital critically wounded.

Henderson is held on suspicion of making an attack with a deadly weapon. Chief Detective Lingo said Henderson told him that he and his wife, Leona and Patton were drinking in the beer parlors when Patton and his wife left the room. They were followed later by Henderson who found them in a bed room.

Moors Battle Against Jews In Tunisia Riots

PARIS, July 3. (AP)—An outbreak of Mohammedan rioting against the Jews in Tunisia, in which one native was killed, was reported today. Troops were ordered to patrol Gafsa, near Sousse, where, according to dispatches, Mohammedans had sacked Jewish stores after fighting the gendarmes. The outbreak has aggravated France's troubles with her North African colonies.

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

A complacent democratic administration may be counting a great many eggs that never will hatch, to judge from comment—and often the lack of comment—that I pick up about the streets and in the offices and stores of Cisco. The prospect that the democratic national ticket will sweep Texas again like a new broom next fall is not so certain after one has listened to the reactions of many citizens who have been, and still declare themselves to be good democrats. There is implanted in their minds a sizeable question as to the trend of national policies and particularly of what appears to be a drift away from the established principles of private initiative. Once that question is implanted, it is difficult to be rid of, and the person so affected is apt to turn in a direction in which he can profess confidence that his economic interests will find sympathy.

The new deal enactments of an emergency character have been justified on the score of emergency, but there is a distrust of what are designated the "reform" elements. Most business men feel that the emergency is over, the country is now on the road to prosperity and that the extraordinary activities of the federal government should be retired with those functions which have been found permanently good fanned into the regular organization of this government, and further experimentation stopped.

There are some interesting deductions to be drawn from the development of such a condition in a country so overwhelmingly democratic. It has been so that it required a charge of political dynamite to jar enough republican votes out of Texas to put a figure on the adding machine. That sectional compactness of party affiliation was inspired by the uniformity of economic interests in agriculture and slavery which precipitated the Civil war, the influences of the reconstruction policies of a short-sighted northern republicanism and by the tariff issues that arrayed the southern farmer against the tariff-protected northern industrialist. What today's reaction in this country to the policies of the national administration indicates to my mind is a melting of geographic lines of political and economic demarcation into a general stratification. What this eventually will lead to is a condition such as

Hamilton Charges Platform Plagiarism

CHICAGO, July 3. (AP)—John Hamilton, republican national chairman, accused the modelers of the 1936 democratic platform of plagiarizing some planks from the republicans, and declared that the democratic pronouncements in opposition to monopoly, plans to balance the budget, and promises to uphold the civil service system, was made with an eye to the platform previously adopted at the rival convention.

Applewhites Are Honored Tuesday With Reception

The Rev. and Mrs. M. H. Applewhite were honored guests at a reception given by the Woman's Auxiliary of the First Presbyterian church Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Fee, 402 West Fifth street.

Summer flowers in varied hues formed the floral decorations. The guests were greeted at the door by Mrs. Fee who presented them to the president of the auxiliary, Mrs. John H. Kleiner, who in turn presented them to Rev. and Mrs. Applewhite, Rev. and Mrs. J. S. Pearce, Mesdames P. R. Warwick, Homer Slicker and Fred Watson, circle chairmen; Rev. and Mrs. C. S. Moad, Dr. and Mrs. J. T. McKissick, Rev. and Mrs. E. S. James, Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Cole, and Rev. and Mrs. J. B. Curry, composing the receiving line.

The program was directed by Mrs. Lucille Gragg. Rev. C. H. Moad extended the welcome to the new minister and his wife, and Misses Jean Alexander and Mary Catherine Donohoe sang a duet which was followed by two readings by Mrs. W. H. Cole. The program closed with a violin solo by Miss Jewel Ely. Punch was served during the evening.

VETERANS HOLD ON TO YOUR BONDS

Set the world an example of level-headed thrift. In the mad scramble for your money—keep your heads.

Don't spend for the sake of spending. Don't "blow in" your nest egg. Don't even cash your bonds unless from necessity or to get out of debt. Save them for a rainy day which will surely come.

Take your time. If you spend be sure that you spend wisely, that you get the utmost for your every dollar but give serious thought to saving rather than spending.

Ammonite shells had air chambers, which enabled the animals to float. They caught their prey with long tentacles. Their eyes were unusually large. When danger approached they retreated into their shell, which was rather thin. Most of the fossil forms are coiled in a flat spiral, and are similar in appearance to today's chambered nautilus and common snail. Their nearest living relatives are the octopus, the inkfish, and the pearly nautilus.

Oyster Reef Flourished in Pecos County Ages Ago, Geology Reveals

(Special to The Daily Press)
AUSTIN, July 3.—East of Fort Stockton in Pecos county on what is now known as University Mesa, an oyster reef flourished 125,000,000 years ago. Geologists dug into the formation or rock at that point, known as the Duck Creek formation, and as a result have reproduced the oyster reef as it was when fish were swimming about it.

In a large habitat case at the University of Texas Centennial Exposition summer centennial visitors may see the oyster reef, with marine life reproduced around it.

The deep, blue background of the case, seen through a glass-front gives the visitor the impression that there is actually water inside and that the animals within are actually alive.

Three ammonites—fossils which serve modern science as a guide through geologic time—are shown floating about in the water immediately above the oyster reef.

Having opened June 1 it will continue until December. Visiting hours in the various buildings are from 9 a. m. to 10 p. m. daily except Sunday when buildings will be open from 3 p. m. to 10 p. m.

Because her father was so impressed with Texas bank in 1848, Mrs. Medina Texas Shaw, 90, of Bexar county, Texas, was named for a river of the state and the state itself.

Scenarists Rewrite --- And Authors Weep; Then Directors Revise --- And Scenarists Weep; And So Movies Are Made

By LAMAR TROTTI
 HOLLYWOOD, July 3.—Screen writing is, and probably will remain for a long time, a matter of collaboration in which the writer is only one participant. Chief among his collaborators are the director and the producer, or if one would be circumspect, the producer and the director!

Seldom does a screen play reach the screen exactly as written even though a script has been read a dozen times in conference. There are many reasons for this, the most devastating being the director's remark: "It doesn't play." A speech is too long, the actor has difficulty with the words, or he doesn't feel at ease in the situation.

Ideas Develop

New ideas may develop on the set. Sometimes these changes on the set have unhappy effects and lead to inner-office hair-pulling. On the other hand, they often improve the picture.

Usually screen plays are written with a definite cast and a director in mind. In fact, stories are bought for personalities. This means that original material frequently must be altered. That is one reason the charge is made that screen writers wantonly change established works of art. Our only defense is that this is still a business of personalities. What fits a hero on paper may not fit a Hollywood actor in the flesh.

It was my good fortune to write one original story, and to collaborate with Dudley Nichols on the adaptation of two others, for the late Will Rogers. Irvin S. Cobb's "Judge Priest" fitted Mr. Rogers so closely that little or no character changes were required. With "Steamboat Round the Bend," however, a major operation had to be performed.

Studio Joke
 It was a studio joke that the author wept on our shoulders at the changes we made in his story, and that we wept on his shoulder when we saw the changes in our script which Mr. Rogers and Mr. John Ford made on the set. This was a studio joke, but not necessarily a fact.
 As a writer I can sympathize

Jane Withers, child film star, and Lamar Trotti, young screen writer, both from Atlanta, confer about a scene in a new movie.

with other writers who see their works changed by Hollywood screen craftsmen. But as long as we have to tell our stories in a different medium, and make them conform to establish players' personalities, occasional alterations will be made.

Robins, Bluebirds Eat Insect Pests

RALEIGH, N. C., July 3. (AP)—Experiments conducted by the federal bureau of biological survey indicate the robin and bluebird are the farmer's friends—not enemies. Survey workers examined the contents of stomachs of robins. They found 42 per cent of the robin's food is animal matter; 16 per cent beetles; 5 per cent grasshoppers; 9 per cent caterpillars and 11 per cent various insects.

Contents of 244 stomachs of bluebirds consisted of 58.51 per cent animal matter and 41.49 per

Fan Mail Sings Just One Tune; "Gimme-Gimme"

By ROBBIN COONS
 HOLLYWOOD, July 3.—The middle name of many a movie fan is Gimme.

Gimme-a-photograph is a fellow who writes to every player, even to players who have never appeared in a film.

But photographs and autographs by no means end the demands. Money, money, money is an endless refrain, varied by such pleas as these:

A New Yorker would like Gary Cooper's latest sports suit.

A rubber nose from Charles Laughton, who had six made for "Cyrano de Bergerac," would be appreciated by four different fans.

'Send Me Your Dog'

George Raft's neckties have a special appeal to a certain English fan.

"Party ideas" from Carole Lombard would please several fan hostesses. (But Jane Peters of Rockland, Ill., wanted just a letter from Carole signed with her real name, Jane Peters.) A woman in Milwaukee lost her pet dachshund—she thinks the Lombard pooch would substitute admirably.

Stuart Erwin, the candid camera addict, can please several fans who want no more than an Trwin-

Wanted: Blueberry Pie

A Cleveland fan knows that Una Merkel's blueberry pies would "keep" long enough to reach her by parcel post.

Ann Harding, Jean Harlow, Ginger Rogers get requests for locks of hair, but Mary Boland was asked for the combings from her brush.

Jean Hersholt, often a screen doctor, has been asked for asthma cures.

A Rochester, Minn., woman wants her son to have medical education. She wrote 15 different players about it.

Myrna Loy could please a souvenir hunter by sending the wig she wore in her first film role. But Myrna treasures that herself.

Bail Bond Sought

Mae West's letters contain requests varying from "Please send me one of your Christmas cards" to "Please get my husband out of jail."

Cary Grant and many other players could adopt, right now, any of several youths who think it would be a great idea. Usually all the fan asks is a job and servant's quarters, but one lad has written Grant with the adoption plea for three years.

Claudette Colbert, if she wants to make youngsters happy, has only to buy sports outfits for a dozen-odd teams.

But Ted Healy probably has the toughest assignment. A woman fan wanted one of his "stooges" to marry.

STUDY CRIME SLANG
 AKRON, O. (AP)—Believing Akron detectives weren't familiar enough with the language of criminals, Sgt. Jasper McKinney ordered several copies of a book on underworld slang by a Tennessee convict and asked the force to study it.

F. M. Smith, Laredo, Tex., set a wolf trap to catch rats, but caught an even dozen 'possums... a mother carrying 11 young in her pouch.

Both Nominees Facing Charges Of Insincerity

By PRESTON GROVER
WASHINGTON, July 3.—Many delegates thought Senators Barkley and Robinson in their convention addresses adopted identical methods of defense against republican charges that the democrats failed to live up to their 1932 platform.

The method of defense in both instances, talk at Philadelphia indicated, was to launch a counter-attack. Barkley quoted a republican platform charge that the New Deal "has dishonored our country by repudiating its most solemn obligations." Without denying that statement at once, he said:

"On that platform they (the republicans) nominated a candidate who, three years ago, urged the payment of public and private debts in money of the printing press redeemable in neither silver or gold.

"In 1920, 1924, 1928 and 1932 the hollow and hackneyed promise was made by republican platforms and candidates to restore agriculture to economic equality with industry. The promise was never fulfilled nor intended for fulfillment."

Robinson Joins Chorus
Said Robinson: The democrats "faithfully complied with the spirit" of the 1932 platform. But if there has been a "partial failure" in respect to economy and balancing the budget, that failure, he said, was due to changing conditions and necessities and—

"To the guerrilla warfare of the republican army."
Robinson went even one better. He dug out of the republican platform this statement:

"The acceptance of the nomination tendered by this convention carries with it as a matter of private honor and public faith, an undertaking by every candidate to be true to the principles and program herein set forth."

"You're Another"
The average listener may have interpreted that as another side swipe by republicans at Roosevelt for the quality of his platform performance. But not Robinson. Again he was using the method of counter-attack.

That statement, he said, was meant as a sort of oath imposed upon Governor Landon by republican platform makers who suspected he might dodge fulfillment.

The Colossus of Golf Balls!

Out in Wyoming, where men are men, golf balls are colossal. Along the highway between Riverton and DuBois stands a natural golf ball, six feet in diameter, teed up on stone, ready for a giant's nibble. Nobody knows how long it has been there, toughened by the sun just as modern golf balls are vulcanized artificially to insure equal permanency.

To many democrats that latter interpretation appeared a neat job.

It was not unlike the childhood game of calling names in which one lad shouts derisively at another:

"You are double anything you can call me."

Scanning New Books

By JOHN SELBY

Even the most eager reader might be forgiven a feeling of dullness when confronted by still another book on the Jews and Germany. Yet, although over-written desperately, the subject still can be made attractive when done sanely, as Marvin Lowenthal's "The Jews of Germany" (Longmans, Green) proves.

The Jews of Germany have a very long continuous history, for they never have been expelled from the country as have the Jews of England and Spain, for example. They also have a long record of persecution and trouble—the first recorded incident of this was the work of the Emperor Constantine, who lessened the privileges of Cologne's Jewish colony in 321 A. D.

Nevertheless, through nearly 2,000 years of living on German soil, the German Jews became as nearly German as would be possible for a minority as clannish as the Jews. The first Zionist conference was held in Switzerland rather than Germany because of pressure from Jews who felt that their German allegiance came first. The long record of Jews in Germany therefore becomes, to Mr. Lowenthal, more the record of one minority among many than a unique manifestation.

Examples do not exist of Jewries who in the long run have saved themselves the expense of other threatened groups, or of other minorities who have saved themselves at the expense of the Jews," writes Mr. Lowenthal. "And no majority is free so long as it holds a minority enslaved."

Mr. Lowenthal, incidentally, shares his vision of the Jewish problem, as merely one among many minority problems, with Rabbi Lee L. Levinger, whose "Anti-Semitism Yesterday and Tomorrow" (Macmillan) is a beautifully balanced discussion of this important matter.

Thumbnail Reviews
"The Tumult and the Shouting," by George Slocumbe (Macmillan): a Parisian legend discusses personalities in the news, and recently out of it, he has known through his life as a newspaper correspondent; the book might be better if there were more of Mr. Slocumbe in it.

"The Founder of the House," by Naomi Jacob (Macmillan): another of Miss Jacob's Gollantz novels, also Paris and Vienna from Napoleon to the sixties.

"The Mother of the Bride," by Alice Grant Rosman (Putnam): June 26 is always Rosman day; Rosman day always produces another Rosman novel; Rosman novels are excellent hammock reading.

"The story of Scotland Yard," by Sir Basil Thomson (Doubleday, Doran): the record of England's great Metropolitan police, studied with examples of their work; both a history and a book for amateur criminologists.

"Ocean Racing," by Alfred F. Loomis (Morrow): all the great blue water races from 1866 down to 1935, and a grand collection of pictures as well; for the yachtsman and the would-be yachtsman. "Summer Will Show," by Syl-

America Due To Travel Light On Its Vacations

By ADELAIDE KERR
NEW YORK, July 3.—Smart Americana is "traveling light" on vacation this summer.

The old story of a half dozen heavy handbags and several trunks is as out of date as an old-fashioned "bathing dress." The modern modern plans her wardrobe to take little space, and very often fits it into airplane luggage—striped canvas over thin wood—while the woman who insists on leather bags can use one of the new cowhide cases made over a thin wood frame.

Frances Clyne, New York fashion designer, on a six months' round-the-world cruise which will touch even Sigeria, took 95 pounds' total weight of luggage and wardrobe, including two suitcases, a hat box, shoe case and toilet case with the clothes and fittings inside.

Bantam-Weight Wardrobe
Her clothes, planned according to weight and bulk for minimum space, included two coats, eight day dresses of sheer crepe and printed silk, sports frocks, linen shorts, slacks, sweaters, a silver fox cape, four hats (two knitted turbans, a felt and a panama), six pairs of shoes (street, sports and evening models) and four evening frocks of lace chiffon and printed silk.

For comfortable traveling most women are turning from the fitted case which mingled bottles, brushes and clothes in one mass. Much newer than these are "bottle bags" (oblong leather cases whose shape resembles a camera case) fitted with bottles and jars along the sides.

Sleeping Clothes Simple
For women who do not want to carry an extra case there are new silk travel pouches lined with rubber, with a flat bottom, closed with a slide chain fastener. They have compartments for bottles, jars and face cloths and are designed to prevent spoiling clothes by leaking bottles. Similar bags made to carry shoes eliminate the extra shoe case.

Travel sleeping clothes follow simple designs. The favorite this year combines mannishly tailored pajamas with a mannish dressing gown of the same material. Figured silks—crepes, foulards and the like—generally are used for these, and colors often are fairly dark—delft blue or wine red printed with small white conventional figures.

GIANT ONION
GUYMON, Okla. (AP)—A local farmer who raised an onion 32 inches long with a 20-inch bulb and root, calls it a "Dust Bowl" model. Growing through layers of silt, piled by successive dust storms, caused the plant to elongate, he explains.

Cold Shower Shocks But Doesn't Cool

CHARLESTON, S. C., July 3 (AP)—As a cooling off method, the cold shower or bath is discredited by Roper hospital officials.

"Shun them in favor of water of about body temperature," they advise. "Cold water shocks—does not cool and calm you."

Another summer hint: "Watch your salt intake!"

Exertion during summer results in the loss of much of the body's vital salt through perspiration. This breaks down physical resistance, brings on headaches and possible spasms, say the doctors. They advise dropping a pinch of salt in drinking water occasionally.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Now the God of hope fill you with all joy and peace in believing, that ye may abound in hope, through the power of the Holy Ghost. Holy, holy is the Lord of hosts; the whole earth is full of His glory.—Rom. 15: 13; Is. 6: 3.

Eyes, that with holy tears are dim, Shine when God's sunbeam on them plays, In stricken souls angelic lays, And rising like a happy hymn. —SILSBEE.

To be truly happy is a question of how we begin, and not of how we end; of what we want, and not of what we have.—Stevenson.

Why Re-Elect Thompson?

ONE among a number of good reasons is of itself a sufficient reason for the people of west Texas to vote to return Ernest Thompson to his place on the Texas Railroad commission. It is the fact that Col. Thompson has been an effective champion of the right of Texas and Texans to govern their own resources in oil and gas, and of the principle of proration. Without proration the producers of the "stripper" areas would have long ago been forced out of business. The flush fields of east Texas and other newly developed sections would have flooded the market with cheap oil and forced the market price so low that marginal wells could not be produced with more than a fractional return on the lifting costs. By far the greater portion of the oil producing area of Texas is marginal in character. That is, the production is so small it will just about pay the cost of bringing it to the surface. Most of the investments of oil producers in west Texas are in properties of this character. They must be protected in a reasonable price structure or their investments will be wiped out. If such a flush field as east Texas, where numerous wells flow thousands of barrels of oil at the turn of a valve, were permitted to flood the market without restriction, the price would drop so low that all marginal properties would have to be abandoned or sacrificed to the large companies which have the resources to hold them. Texas came mighty near having a terrifying experience of that character shortly after the east Texas field developed proportions and got out of hand for a time, with oil catapulting to ten cents, and the "hot oil" fraternity was defying regulation with disheartening success. For a time paralysis gripped the whole industry. The sickness quickly extended to other industries. Even the farmer, who might be supposed the most remote from its influence, felt the stagnation. The long struggle that ensued to bring about order and equitable production in the industry has certainly not been forgotten. Many in the industry became frantic. There were appeals to federal control, a demand that the state desert its birthright and surrender to a central and unsympathetic authority at Washington—an authority overwhelmingly dominated by states which purchase and do not produce oil—the control of its greatest resource. That long and bitter struggle came to a conclusion when Texas, in cooperation with sister producing commonwealths, gained the ascendancy over the elements which would destroy the whole industry for a moment of profit, and thus proved that state regulation can be capable in a crisis. Col. Thompson and Gov. Allred were two men who did the most for Texas in this matter.

THE oil industry in Texas is now under control. The battle has been won; the furore has subsided. In these moments of a peaceful order after chaos the voter may be beguiled by extravagant charges and demagogic oratory, and neglect a caution for his own interests and the interests of his state. Let him examine what motives may lie behind this smokescreen. Is it a destruction of proration with its inevitable prostration of the industry? The people of Texas know by the record how Col. Thompson stands on this question. It is common sense to return him to office rather than "buy a pig in somebody else's poke."

Human and Other Nature

By W. F. BRUCE

Now for the Fourth of July! I don't know just what I'll be this year when this celebration comes off that I am hearing so much about. All I say (says I to myself) is, "stay sober!" and, "Don't get hurt." But as a boy what I usually was, and usually did, was to be a distant onlooker, and to watch the skyrockets. The Fourth generally happened to come right in the midst of wheat harvest, or else the harvest happened to fall around the Fourth. We boys, and girls in their way, would spend the day in strenuous labor. Then at dark, at the county seat eight miles away but in sight across the stretch of prairie land, the celebrators began the fireworks. We prolonged our stay out of bed a little longer than usual, until weariness from work and anticipation of more work sent us to sleep.

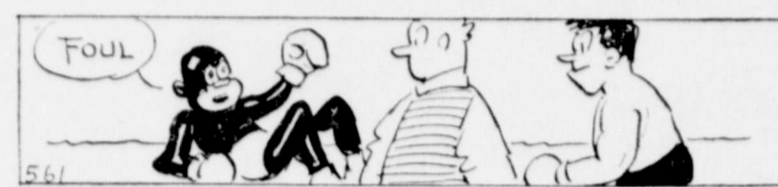

Lads on the farm who had never been around very much and had never come in contact with much of the world's excitement looked forward, with some of the expectation that we did to the few other holidays, to this hour or two of thrill we got from watching these fiery red rockets flash high into the air and then descend trailing their tails of sparks behind them, occasionally adding to their resemblance to the battles of the Revolution and other wars we read about in our histories, the sound of distant booming. Of course we had a few fire-crackers of our own to add to the danger and the noise; and just rarely, a wheat failure or some other fortuitous circumstance gave us a chance to attend the celebration in person, to drink the red lemonade, buy the pink or blue balloons, and see the sham battles, three-legged races, greased-pole climbing, et cetera, whoop-ee! hurrah!

Well, that would be a tame way for Cisco to act in this year of our depression and our independence, 1936, wouldn't it? Well, all I say (says I to myself) is, "Stay

Laughing Around the World With IRVIN S. COBB

A Hit Above the Collar Line

SOME years ago there was a colored stagehand at the Colonial Theatre in Chicago who fancied himself a pugilist. He took lessons in sparring; he practiced shadow boxing until he could lick any shadow that ever lived. Presently he announced himself the all-weights champion of the Colonial Theatre. A musical comedy came along to play the Colonial. Included in its stage crew was a large, brawny person of Swedish antecedents who knew a thing or two about handling his fists. The negro promptly challenged him for a fight and the stranger accepted the challenge. On the first Saturday night of the troupe's engagement a ring was fitted up back stage and here, after the performance the bout was staged before an audience consisting of the members of the company, the theatre staff and a few specially invited guests. For a joke, Jay Brady, the manager of the Colonial, acted as manager for the house entry. The leading comedian of the musical show sponsored the cause for the Swede. Presently the referee called time. The two men advanced to the center of the ring. The darky led, feinted, tapped out daintily and deftly for an opening and then swung. The Swede started a haymaker from his knees. His padded fist whizzed upward through the air and as the darky ducked it landed on the side of his head with a terrific thump. The negro landed on his back half way through the ropes. Even in this sudden and unforeseen catastrophe though, he did not lose his wits. "Mister Brady," he yelled, "claim a foul—claim a foul! Dat man hit me a deliberrt brain blow!" (American News Features, Inc.)

Frankly Speaking

By FRANK LANGSTON

There will be a lot of words—about two-bit words, some of them—used at Lake Cisco tomorrow. The candidates of this and a lot more counties are planning to make a day of it and present their respective cases at this city's celebration.

Whether you are interested particularly in the candidates or politics generally, you will do well to hear the various speeches and learn more about your government.

Cotton Acreage--

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1) is destroyed by boll weevils, there will be a big crop harvested this year. The crop is as fine as I ever saw in this section, and there is plenty of moisture to insure a bumper crop if no more rain falls, unless the weevils get it.

Corn Needs Rain

"Corn is needing more rain. The rain Wednesday will help some, but there was not enough to mature the corn crop."

"Most of the fields of the county had rain, but not enough. Some localities report a nice rain, but generally the precipitation was light all over the county." Mr. Huey said.

"We had an estimated rainfall in the Curtis community of three inches," was the report of J. W. Brawley, of that community, while here Thursday. "But this was only estimated, as I did not have a rain gauge. The rain was heavy, but much of it ran off, and hardly gave us a season. The rain was accompanied by a heavy wind that blew down some of the corn and up-rooted trees, but no other damage was done," Brawley said.

Revival Continues As Tent Repaired

The Pentecostal revival being conducted at the corner of D avenue and East Tenth street will continue, it was announced today.

The big tent, badly damaged in the windstorm Wednesday evening, has been repaired. Services will be held at 8:30 each evening.

POLITICS at random

By BYRON PRICE. Broken party lines are by no means a phenomenon new to American politics, yet the present situation has some aspects it would be difficult to match in the history books.

Roosevelt's speech of acceptance is one of them. Not only was his appeal very frankly and openly to the members of all parties, but so far as memory serves, that mammoth notification meeting on Franklin field was the first occasion when a presidential candidate accepted nomination without mentioning on what party ticket he was running.

But if there was no precedent for this specific omission, there was ample example for the President's general text of non-partisan pleading. The republicans did the same thing in their Cleveland platform, and at the moment Roosevelt was writing his speech Republican Chairman Hamilton was warmly inviting a former democratic presidential nominee, Al Smith, to campaign for Landon and Knox.

All Very Confusing. It is all very confusing to people who are used to selecting their politics by the old standard labels.

Undoubtedly, among some politicians on both sides, there is plenty of pretense about it—plenty of talking about principles—above-party coupled with very definite and energetic efforts down underneath to oil up the same old party machinery which the spellbinders are pretending to discard.

Nevertheless, much of the cross-party appealing appears genuine enough. The obsolete character of the party divisions as they have existed in recent years is recognized by many intelligent public men. For various reasons they have found it very difficult to get away from the old party names and old

Human and Other Nature

By W. F. BRUCE

Now for the Fourth of July! I don't know just what I'll be this year when this celebration comes off that I am hearing so much about. All I say (says I to myself) is, "stay sober!" and, "Don't get hurt." But as a boy what I usually was, and usually did, was to be a distant onlooker, and to watch the skyrockets. The Fourth generally happened to come right in the midst of wheat harvest, or else the harvest happened to fall around the Fourth. We boys, and girls in their way, would spend the day in strenuous labor. Then at dark, at the county seat eight miles away but in sight across the stretch of prairie land, the celebrators began the fireworks. We prolonged our stay out of bed a little longer than usual, until weariness from work and anticipation of more work sent us to sleep.

Lads on the farm who had never been around very much and had never come in contact with much of the world's excitement looked forward, with some of the expectation that we did to the few other holidays, to this hour or two of thrill we got from watching these fiery red rockets flash high into the air and then descend trailing their tails of sparks behind them, occasionally adding to their resemblance to the battles of the Revolution and other wars we read about in our histories, the sound of distant booming. Of course we had a few fire-crackers of our own to add to the danger and the noise; and just rarely, a wheat failure or some other fortuitous circumstance gave us a chance to attend the celebration in person, to drink the red lemonade, buy the pink or blue balloons, and see the sham battles, three-legged races, greased-pole climbing, et cetera, whoop-ee! hurrah!

Well, that would be a tame way for Cisco to act in this year of our depression and our independence, 1936, wouldn't it? Well, all I say (says I to myself) is, "Stay

Coalition Of Sentiment

Before the republican convention there was an active movement for a coalition ticket, with a prominent democrat to team with a republican presidential nominee. There were those who wondered whether this seeming coalition of sentiment expressed by Smith and his associates would have, to a degree, the same effect as an actual coalition ticket.

Ohio and other border line states of the American political map have experienced for a long time. The schools of political thought will be about balanced so that Texas will desert its role of a democratic fortress and become a doubtful territory appealed to by both parties. The increase in the diversity of Texas interests, the flow of new population into the state and the multiplication of industry all tend to bring about this condition. Eventually, Texas as a doubtful territory vital to the success of a national administration, may become one of the principal battlegrounds of national politics.

MURDER TONIGHT

BY LAURENCE W. MEYNELL

SYNOPSIS: Inspector Hylton from Scotland Yard, and Sergeant White are about to begin an inspection of old Arthur Burdett's house at Hope Enderton, guided by Burdett's unprepossessing manservant. The occasion for the inspection is the murder of Burdett, and the curious fact about the murder is that almost everybody in the village is secretly rather relieved that the old miser has been done in. The house is large, but mostly unused, and the atmosphere is eerie.

Chapter 10 COLD BLAST
Enderton Court was built in the mid period of Victorian industrialism. 1940 saw the foundations dug, a year and a half later the place was finished. It was a multiplicity of rooms and great lengths of cheerless corridor, which possibly did not matter so

The house looked doubly deserted. much in the days when servants were cheap and plentiful. Such a place needs life and plenty of it, if it is to be at all bearable, and for half a generation Enderton Court had known little enough life. In one corner of it a savage, inward eating spirit had sat jealously huddled over an occasional spark of begrudged fire, and somewhere in the outer regions a servant or two had passed a cold and comfortless existence; for the rest its big rooms were sheeted and silent. It looked doubly deserted now as the three men made their way about. Even Inspector Hylton felt a certain eeriness from that damp, deserted mausoleum. They inspected the ground floor thoroughly. "Even a house agent would have a job to describe this in glowing terms," was Hylton's comment; "now what about the upstairs?" "This way, Mister," Lumsdale said briefly, leading the way up the fine wide staircase. "This is where the old man slept, and my room's three doors along." Inspection was duly made of two bedrooms, which Hylton privately thought must be as bleak and uninviting as ever any human beings slept in. "And the other rooms?" he queried. "All empty. Bits of furniture in some of 'em; old boxes and the like, but for the most part empty." "Well, we'll poke our heads in," the Inspector said cheerily, and they duly poked their heads in to find only too dismal a verification of Lumsdale's account. "Can't say I altogether blame you for not falling in love with the place," was Hylton's comment. "This part's all right," Lumsdale said. "We can go in the other wing if you've a mind." "I've a mind to everything," Hylton assured him. "That's my one besetting sin in life—curiosity. Which way?" "This way," Lumsdale led them down a long corridor which turned sharply to the right at its end. "This is where all the servants used to sleep when the house was full like, I suppose." "Anything interesting here?" "Nothing as I've ever heard of, Mister." Kingsley Hylton was last out of the third bleak bedroom they visited and for a moment, the Sergeant with the lantern being down the corridor, was virtually in darkness. "Hallo," he cried sharply, "who's opened a window?" "Neither of the men ahead seemed to hear him. "Who's opened a window?" he called out more loudly, and there seemed to be a sort of sardonic satisfaction in the voice that floated back, "No windows been opened here for long enough." It was an assurance that did not satisfy the Inspector. "Fetch the lamp back and let's have a look," he ordered, and the three men made a silently thorough inspection of all the windows they could find. All were fastened, many shattered. "Why, did you hear something Inspector?" Sergeant White asked. "No, I didn't hear anything," Hylton answered. "I just wondered." He caught sight for an instant of the grin on Lumsdale's queer face, and noted for anything would he have added that for a brief space, ten seconds or more maybe, as he had stood alone in the darkness, he had felt across his cheek a chill, damp blast of air. "Anything else you want to see?" Lumsdale asked when they regained the hall. "No, I don't think so. Not at present. When's the inquest, Sergeant?" "Friday morning, Inspector." "Um. We shall see what that brings out." "I can tell you that now, Mister," Lumsdale said, a trifle unexpectedly. "Nothing." A considerable experience of inquests inclined Kingsley Hylton privately to agree with this monosyllabic prophecy, but he did not say so; instead he said, "Just tell me about that chain on the front door, Lumsdale, I'm not quite clear about that." "Simple enough. Whenever I went out and old Burdett was alone all the back was shut up and locked, like I've told you. I had to see to that. Then after I'd gone and banged the front door behind me, the old boy put the chain up." "Was it on when you came back?" "Last Monday night d'you mean?" "No, any ordinary night." "Yes, I'd ring the bell and the old man would come shuffling over the hall with a candle and open the door two or three inches. Then when he saw who it was, he'd let me in, mostly without a word, and I'd have to put the chain up again after me." "Now, last Monday night when you went down to fetch Sergeant White, which way did you go out?" "Front." "Was the chain in place or not?" "No, I noticed that particular." "Um. I see. Well, I don't think we need worry you any more tonight. We shall be up in the morning of course. Good night." "Night."

Lumsdale blasts a theory about the crime, Sunday.

Tracks Millions Of Years Old Are Shown at Exhibit

(Special to The Daily Press)
AUSTIN, July 3. — Footprints made millions of years ago by tiny animals on the muddy shores of a shallow lake near what is now the site of Abilene have been recovered by geologists and are on exhibition at the University of Texas centennial exposition. These are known as Permian footprints—Permian denoting that they were made more than 200,000,000 years ago—and were found on the J. B. Lilly farm in Taylor county. These were given to the University of Texas by Lilly. They were discovered by Mrs. Augusta Hasslock Kemp of Seymour, and collected with the aid of the Min-

Napoleon Role In 'Legitimate' Excites Lorré

HOLLYWOOD, July 3.—Ever since Peter Lorré went on the stage, people have asked him why he did not undertake the role of Napoleon Bonaparte.

Lorré, the roly-poly, gentle-souled "monster" of several films, is answering the question now. He will play Napoleon on the stage and, most likely, in a movie based on the play.

"Always before," he says, "I would have hesitated. I always thought that he would need a new angle in dramatic treatment—well, I found that angle abroad."

He found it in a conversation with Ferdinand Bruckner, Viennese playwright, who proceeded forthwith to write a play with Lorré in mind.

Due Next Fall

Lorré talked about the play to Sidney Kingsley, the playwright, on his return to New York from making "Secret Agent" in London.

"I arrived at midnight, called up Sidney, and we discussed the play until 4:00 in the morning. At noon the next day Sidney sailed for Europe, to see Bruckner."

And so Sidney Kingsley is translating, producing and directing Bruckner's "Napoleon" for autumn presentation in New York.

For years actors of varying stature have discussed and yearned for the role. Chaplin, who sometimes mimics Napoleon at parties, spoke of attempting it, but never did. Next to Hamlet, Napoleon has been the thespian dream.

Physical Resemblance

Warner Bros., two years ago, imported Emil Ludwig, the biographer, to prepare a screen adaptation of his book. It was intended for Edward G. Robinson. There was mention also of Paul Muni. The picture never was made.

Lorré now has the field to himself, with his height of 5 feet 4 inches compared to Bonaparte's 5 feet 3, his head slightly more massive than Napoleon's, his eyes as large and penetrating—and his enthusiasm.

"To break through the outward semblance of the man as he is known and portray him as a human being, yet not to discard all the traditional symbols for that would be snobbery."

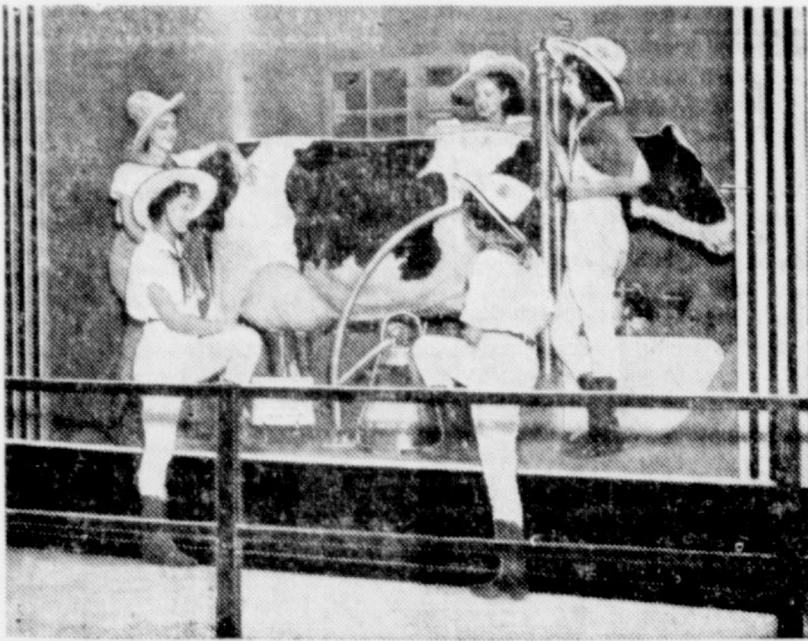

CISCOANS MAKE BOND

ABILENE, July 3.—Bonds of $50 each were made Thursday by Joe Custer and R. R. Maxwell, who face charges of possession and concealing of non-tax paid whiskey.

The two were brought to Abilene Wednesday from Cisco, where violation of the liquor taxing act is alleged to have occurred June 29. They were arraigned before Ida M. James, United States commissioner.

Both Frances Drake and Francis Lederer, movie stars, credit the late Edward Laurillard, London manager, with their "discovery."

Mechanical Cow at Centennial

Among the mechanical marvels that entertain and mystify visitors to the Texas centennial exposition at Dallas is one that attracted wide notoriety at the Chicago fair.

It is the mechanical cow on exhibit in the International Harvester company's display.

This cow, looking for all the world like the real thing, gives milk, moos, and moves her body just as does her living model.

The animal was constructed by the International company's engineers.

A. Grist Hardware company are the local representatives of the International Harvester company.

Coats Named Deputy Liquor Supervisor

ABILENE, July 3.—Appointment of John W. Coats of Knox City to the position of deputy liquor supervisor for the Abilene district was announced by C. A. Paxton, chief supervisor of the state liquor control board, visiting the local headquarters office Thursday.

Coats will assume duties this week, replacing P. H. Murphy, who has been here since April. Murphy is being transferred to the West Texas border.

Paxton, in charge of the Austin office, is on his first tour of the state's 16 field offices. He is accompanied by J. H. Ramsey, personnel director of the board. They will return to Austin today, and later in the week will go to the lower Rio Grande valley district to supervise establishment of other border tax-collecting agencies.

Investigators working in Abilene's 13-county district have filed 136 charges, 75 per cent of which have been disposed of, Murphy said. More than 100 violators charged have pleaded guilty.

The state men, Paxton said, are for the purpose of supplementing activities of local county officers. Evidence is gathered by the investigators and turned over to them. Coats, the new deputy, has served as one of the five investigators for the Abilene district.

Marion Davies and Richard Dix are two of the film stars who still employ sideline musicians to play for them on their sets.
