IRON FALLS TO REBELS, CITY BURNS

Through the Editor's Spectacles By GEORGE

The subject today is snakes. Now, the great majority of snakes may be perfectly harmless so far as their bite is concerned, but when their effect upon the human nervous system is considered they are far from being so.

Therefore, I can sympathize with Lee Mahaney when Lee declares he'll never walk in a certain spot on Eighth street again after what happened night before last night.

A three-foot rattler with eight buttons was corkscrewing his way along the street about the fall of darkness when Lee drove along the street so that the wheels of the machine straddled the reptile.

A much more amusing if startling experience, however, was the lot of Harold Farquhar yesterday. Harold and a companion had gone dove hunting to Lake Bernice.

Believe it or not, said Harold, a prairie runner snake had the other end of the bird in its mouth and was doing its best to pull it out of his hands.

Said Harold: "I thought, 'Well, Mr. Snake, I'm not going to argue with you, because if you want this bird worse than I do, you can have it!' So I gave the snake the bird and I got up and went away from there."

(AP)—Investigation of all state and national political activities in Michigan was ordered today by the senate campaign expenditures committee after it received charges that approximately $3,000,000 contributions had been accumulated by "political parties and candidates" for this year's campaign for major officers. The identity of the party was not disclosed.

12 Trench Silos Filled With 214 Tons of Silage

By ELMO V. COOK (County Agricultural Agent) Twelve trench silos with a total capacity of 214 tons of silage were filled in Eastland county by September 1, 1936. There were no trench silos in the county prior to 1936.

One hundred and twenty-five farmers, ranchers and others interested attended a trench silo filling demonstration in Eastland on July 31 at which time a two-ton trench was filled with bundled hegar and E. R. Eudaly, extension dairyman, discussed all phases of trench silos.

When they saw that their corn was making no grain except "nubbins," Oscar and Conrad Schaefer of Romney community dug a trench and filled it with 15 tons of corn stalks, adding plenty of water.

The largest trench silo in Eastland county was constructed by S. O. Montgomery, dairyman of Ranger with a capacity for 125 tons. His feed was in two fields and the first field that ripened produced only 55 tons.

W. L. Connell of Olden wanted a trench silo 4 feet deep. He struck rock at 18 inches and instead of being discouraged he stated he believed the layer of rock would keep the water in and the air out, making better silage.

Old Friction With King May Help Oust Baldwin

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

NEW YORK, Sept. 4. (AP)—Europe's next political sensation is likely to be the compulsory retirement of Britain's conservative premier, Stanley Baldwin, if young progressives in his own ranks are successful in the fierce attacks they have been directing against him.

The summer recess of parliament has provided a breathing spell in the warfare to unseat Baldwin, but the insurgents are bent on purging the party of what they call the reactionary Old Tory guard, in which they accord Mr. Baldwin a high place.

An important aspect of the situation is the statement circulated in high quarters in England that young King Edward does not regard Mr. Baldwin with high favor. A ruler is not supposed to mix in politics in democratic Britain, but his private views have a strong influence.

Those who have watched the relationship between Edward and his portly premier over a long period are not surprised to hear the king lacks any deep affection for "Farmer" Baldwin, who is said to have set himself up long ago as mentor of the then Prince of Wales.

Mr. Baldwin is credited with having compelled the Prince to abandon his favorite pastime of riding to hounds in 1929, on the grounds that the heir to the throne was endangering his life. The premier also is said to have been Attacks on Stanley Baldwin by young progressives in his own party are seen as greasing the skids for Britain's premier.

Host Communities Appreciate Band

By R. W. H. KENNON

Whether the business people of Cisco appreciate the importance of the weekly good-will trips that are being sponsored by the junior chamber of commerce, there is no question of the appreciation by those people to whom these visits are made.

The people of Pleasant Hill last night, like the four preceding trips, gave the Jaycees a most enthusiastic welcome. But the interest manifested by our business folk was not so enthusiastic, judging by the presence of only 15 or 20, other than members of the Lobo band, who availed themselves of this opportunity to meet and mingle with their customers and friends in our rural communities.

Director R. L. Maddox and his Lobo musicians gave one of the best concerts of any of the trips, and the large number of Pleasant Hill folks that filled the grounds about the school building demonstrated an appreciation that was highly complimentary to Director Maddox and his school band. These concerts show that the band, under Maddox's direction, speaks volumes for the ability of the Lobo director to impart that musical efficiency that will take

Mr. Cole and the Rev. J. B. Curry are in Dallas today attending a regional conference of the church.

PREFERENTIAL NOT FAVORED BY GOVERNOR

Finds System Is Too Complicated For Wide Areas

AUSTIN, Sept. 4. (AP)—Governor Allred said today that he would not endorse a preferential primary system for Texas at this time. His opinion was based on a report by Professor J. Alton Burdine, of the University of Texas, which said the "system was too complicated when administered over a wide area."

In preferential voting, the voters register choices for second and third places, possibly others depending upon the length of the ballot, in addition to first choice. The winner is determined on the basis of a system of percentages worked out to give proper values to each of the successive choices.

Thus a second primary, or "run-off," is obviated, and the nominee is determined in only one election, no matter how many may have entered the race.

The visitors will bring a team of outstanding players, some of them former baseball stars, to the local lot for the contest.

20 Arabs Killed by British Regiment

Organize County for Red Cross Roll Call

R. T. Bridges, Abilene, field representative for the National Red Cross in west Texas, is in Eastland county this week assisting Chapter Chairman J. E. Spencer in organizing the county for the annual roll call to be made between November 11 and Thanksgiving day, November 26, inclusive.

The two went to Ranger today, where a roll call chairman was to be named. Chairman has been named in other communities of the county as follows:

Rising Star, J. F. Roberson; Gorman, Mrs. Charles Underwood; Carbon, the Rev. H. H. Nance; Desdemona, chairman to be appointed with Mrs. W. H. Davis assisting in the arrangements. Eastland, where conferences with Red Cross workers have been held, has not yet selected a roll call chairman.

Will Observe Labor Day

Labor day next Monday will be observed by the Cisco post office as a holiday, no windows being open and no deliveries being made. Postmaster Luther McCrea announced. The day is a national holiday. Offices of the county agents at Eastland will also be closed.

$1.00 Charge to Attend Calcutta Pool, Barbecue

Those who do not wish to take part in the golf tournament may attend the barbecue and calcutta pool at the Cisco Country club Saturday evening by paying only $1, it was announced today. The tournament entrance fee is $2, which includes the right to participate in the golf matches.

The barbecue and calcutta pool will begin at 7:30 on the Country club lawn. J. E. Caffrey and R. W. Mancill are in charge of the barbecue. Horace Condeley is calcutta pool chairman.

Sale of the tickets is in the hands of H. L. Dyer and O. J. Russell.

Although the field of golfers will not be larger than in other years, the quality of the competition will be much greater because of the attraction of so many outstanding young golf stars of the section. The use of grass greens for the first time and the excellent condition of the course has appealed to more top flight players than before, with the result that a faster and more highly competitive field is in prospect.

By this morning 33 players had qualified, T. C. Williams reported. Saturday, the first day of the tournament is the day for qualifying. Match play will start Sunday and finals in all flights will be held Monday.

Fire engulfed Iron today as rebels advanced through the fallen city. Behobia, on the Franco-Spanish border, was also occupied by the rebels.

Meanwhile Great Britain and France renewed efforts to get Germany and Portugal to join the international non-intervention committee, assuring the latter countries that the committee does not intend to mediate the Spanish civil strife.

In France the communist party asked the socialist government to end the French non-intervention effort because the "foreign fascists are continuing to arm the Spanish rebels."

Olives Flourish in Cisco, 2 Trees Are Bearing Here

That the Cisco country is adapted to the growing of practically all kinds of fruits and crops, with the exception of tropical plants, has been demonstrated in the growing of olives within the limits of this city.

The climate of Eastland county is said to be practically the same as that of the Jerusalem country, where olives are indigenous. Many have known that there is a bearing olive tree on the park site back of the federal building here. Although never given any attention the tree has borne full crops of olives.

The Daily Press has just been notified that another young olive tree is bearing its first crop at the Kennon home, 507 West Fifth street. This shrub was brought in during the winter of 1934 by Frank Hagerman, living south of Cisco, and was planted on the Kennon lot. The shrub has grown into a lively bush now, the Press was informed by Mrs. Abbie C. Daniel, who with her daughter, Miss Elizabeth Daniel, are occupying the home. Mrs. Daniel stated that the bush is bearing two well developed berries this year, its first crop.

In describing the shrub, Mr. Hagerman said the original seed was smuggled out of Japan, but at the time he did not know whether it was an olive or not. He said the exportation of the seed of this tree had been prohibited by the Japanese, but an American, about to sail for the United States from Japan, had swallowed one of the seed just before sailing, and on board the ship had taken an emetic and vomited it up, bringing it to the United States where it was planted. Hagerman got hold of some of the seed and has grown them on his farm for several years.

heretofore was considered insufficient to warrant such machine operation. Small threshing outfits have been purchased in many instances by groups of neighboring farmers whose crews are fed by ladies' aid societies instead of the individual farm wife.

Small and large tractor-drawn combines are handling grain harvests in some cases 24 hours steadily. North Dakota farmers, and those in some other states, too, are working through the nights with aid of powerful searchlights.

Hay Now Pickled Corn binders have replaced crews of knife-men in cutting, husking and placing corn in shocks.

Purdue university, Indiana, is developing a hay drying machine adaptable to handling of wheat and corn in the fields, thus aiding combines which require that crops be quite dry.

A new method of pickling hay with molasses in silos bids fair to do away with hay lefts in barns. H. H. Musselman, head of the Michigan State College of Agriculture engineering department, predicts that the process of storing green or partially cured hay in silos by pickling it with molasses will supplant the old loft system because it prevents much loss of protein in the feed.

All has not been rosy for the machinery owning farmers, however. In drouth states, particularly, heavy overhead and depreciation of expensive machinery have cut into bank accounts.

But despite difficulties the fact remains that gasoline and steel are doing the work of muscle and bone on America's farms.

THE WORLD WITH A FENCE

A New Novel by Marian Sims

When Carol Torrance was teaching school in Ashland, she found it impossible not to think about her friends and her life. She thought she was escaping for a while when she went to work for Blake Thornton at an advertising agency in Atchison. For there is nothing very attractive about advertising, and there is something very attractive about Blake and his wife, Irma. Blake is from over the week-end in town.

Chapter 27 PARTY TRICK

Sunday morning Margery was up. "One of the crowd are coming this afternoon," she said. "Can't you come too?"

"I have to," Carol said promptly. "The idea of spending her first party alone had no charms."

"That's a damn shame," he said in his natural voice. "She'd be a knockout if she wasn't afflicted. How did it happen?"

"Mastoid," Harry explained briefly, and Carol exploded in a rather unconvincing cough.

Porter Murray was solicitous. He was a patent-leather man of forty or so, and obviously a squire of dames.

"Fix her a drink, Harry," he ordered at the top of his lungs, and Harry began opening liquor and White Rock. Carol subsided and smiled ravishingly at Porter Murray.

Two more couples arrived, both strangers to Carol, and the game went on under Harry's expert guidance. Porter exerted himself manfully, with occasional asides that convulsed her.

"I could go for her in a big way if she wasn't deaf," he confided to Margery, "but I'm already getting hoarse. Somebody else will have to take over." He launched into a parlor story about a small Negro in a racing stable.

Carol looked puzzled. He repeated it at the top of his lungs, and she gave up the struggle and laughed herself breathless.

"I can't keep it up, Harry," she gasped. "Another thirty minutes of this and I will be deaf." She smiled apologetically at the bewildered Porter.

"It was one of Harry's cute ideas," she explained. "I didn't know he was going to do it until he got me in here. I'd forgotten how many bright ideas he had."

Porter Murray crimsoned slowly. It had just dawned on him that she had heard the asides as well as the rest of his remarks. She reassured him quickly.

"Don't worry; I call that real gallantry. It's a lot nicer to overhear a compliment than to hear it."

The party grew in size and volume, and the talk was full of personalities. She listened for an hour with an expression of intent interest, and felt that her face was congealing.

After a while the guests began to drift away, until at last no one remained but Carol and Porter. He said gaily:

"Why don't we all four go down town and get a sandwich?"

Margery looked at Harry: "I don't know whether Elvira would stay on. I only asked her to stay until the children were in bed."

"Wait a minute," Porter ordered, and disappeared into the kitchen before they knew what he was doing. He came back immediately.

"She says it's all right," he announced. "Get your hats."

Margery said: "Porter, you oughtn't..." and Carol reflected that a generous heart must beat beneath his perfect shirt front. Elvira probably recognized but one form of argument.

Harry grinned shamelessly. "Oh, he's one of the big rich. Don't deprive him of the pleasure."

They drove hilariously off in Porter's sport phaeton, and ate club sandwiches at the Boar's Head Afterwards he dropped Harry and Margery at their house and insisted on driving Carol home.

"Won't you come in for a while?" she asked when they reached the Sherwood.

He accepted promptly. "Thanks. I was hoping you'd invite me."

He stayed until eleven, talking almost constantly; skating blithely over surfaces. Carol decided he was one of the eligibles that Cornelia had dismissed so contemptuously; a sort of cosmopolitan Ben Tyler. She let him talk to his heart's content.

He got up finally, with flattering reluctance. "How's about dinner and a movie with me next Thursday?"

"I think that would be grand." "So do I. About half-past seven?" "Then we can catch a nine o'clock show."

"Fine. I'll see you then. And it's been a lovely evening."

She knew from the speculative look in his eyes that he was debating the possibility of kissing her goodnight, so she smiled with twinkling finality.

"Goodnight."

He shrugged and grinned. "Goodnight, darn you!"

When he had gone she undressed slowly and almost happily. Even a single engagement ahead with even a Porter. Ah, ay, kept the days from being quite empty.

The city gasped and sweated in the clutch of August. The morning cars were merely tepid; the late afternoon cars were crawling, clanking infernos. Today, the evening papers would announce with sadistic glee, was the hottest tenth of August since 1892, and there had been two prostrations—a thing almost unknown in the south. The sun was molten brass in a cloudless sky and drouth hovered, grinning at whirling lawn sprays.

At Rockbrook Irma Thornton read of the heat wave with detached interest, as people read, uncomprehending, of a famine among millions in China. Blake went about his business like a machine, and noticed indifferently that his clothes were becoming too big for him. Carol discarded a great deal of apparel she had hitherto considered necessary to a business woman, and found the world too weary to notice or care.

If the society columns were to be believed, No One remained in town.

ed slowly and almost happily. Even a single engagement ahead with even a Porter. Ah, ay, kept the days from being quite empty.

The city gasped and sweated in the clutch of August. The morning cars were merely tepid; the late afternoon cars were crawling, clanking infernos. Today, the evening papers would announce with sadistic glee, was the hottest tenth of August since 1892, and there had been two prostrations—a thing almost unknown in the south. The sun was molten brass in a cloudless sky and drouth hovered, grinning at whirling lawn sprays.

At Rockbrook Irma Thornton read of the heat wave with detached interest, as people read, uncomprehending, of a famine among millions in China. Blake went about his business like a machine, and noticed indifferently that his clothes were becoming too big for him. Carol discarded a great deal of apparel she had hitherto considered necessary to a business woman, and found the world too weary to notice or care.

If the society columns were to be believed, No One remained in town.

Sunday, Carol has an unexpected dinner guest.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Turn unto the Lord your God; for he is gracious and merciful, slow to anger, and of great kindness, and repenteth him of the evil.

Remember: It is not a life upon thy gifts to live. But to grow fixed with deeper roots in thee. And when the sun and the shower their bounties give.

An Empire of One

THE report of the Texas Planning board for 1935 has just been distributed. The pamphlet gives in succinct form a survey of the state's history and resources...

support of a thriving industrial and commercial development and for the support of an industrious and large population. Leafing through the report, one is impressed with the fact that Texas, her resources judiciously and economically exploited, is a potential empire beyond the dreams of avarice.

A great deal of emphasis has been placed upon the bigness of the state, and a feeling of great pride in that mere bigness has been inbred in Texas people. The fact of size alone, however, is of small value. But what is of value is the happy association within its borders of so many allied resources in combination with the opportunities for developing them.

THE strongest argument for maintaining the identity of Texas is to be found in the extent and magnitude of its resources. The development of these resources and the regulation of the industrial, commercial and social organizations that occur as a result of this development, can certainly be the best achieved and the most economically and expeditiously advanced by the maintenance of one state organization, free of the interference of new state lines, and grouped, instead, under a common and democratic rule.

Eventually the old curtain pole snapped. It led to better things. Earle bought a cane pole and his skill increased.

A GERMAN composer of distinction, lately landed, was visiting an American songwriter at the latter's country-place. He manifested much interest in various typical American domestic appliances and household conveniences. What particularly caught his attention was a sleeping-porch, screened in. In broken English he asked his host the purpose of the screens.

"Why, to keep the flies out in the summertime," said the Yankee.

"Still the visitor seemed perplexed.

"You have flies in Berlin, don't you?" asked the American.

"Sure—millions of dem," said the German, with true Teutonic pride in the products of his native land.

"Well, what do you do at your house to keep the flies out?"

"We don't haf to keep dem out," explained the foreigner. "Dey alreavty are in."

Amateur Cameramen Take "Best" Photos

CHICAGO, Sept. 4. (AP)—Amateur photographers produce more artistic photographs than the professionals, says Alex J. Krupy, chairman of the committee in charge of the seventh international salon of photography being held here until September 23.

"The reason," Krupy said, "is that after spending hours daily on commercial work, the professional has not the patience of an amateur and cannot prevent a certain amount of commercialism entering the picture."

The upward trend in world ship construction evident in the early part of this year continued through the second quarter, according to the department of commerce.

Successful Poultryman Attributes Success to Care and Good Feeding

Wyman Blair, poultry demonstrator living five miles west of Eastland, who made a profit of $996.77 during the first eight months of 1936 with a flock of 500 hens and 500 pullets, attributes his success as a poultryman to good management, well bred white leghorns, properly feeding home-mixed feeds, and comfortable, economical housing of his flocks.

Blair has been away from his gravely, well drained poultry farm only a few hours at a time during the last five years and never at night. He has practically lived with his leghorns, always giving with his leghorns, always giving his water, feed, egg gathering, and other small details careful attention. He raised 90 to 95 per cent of his baby chicks to pullets, having on hand now 500 of them ready to start production. The pullets were vaccinated for fowl pox in July.

Baby chicks are bought each year in April from one of the most reliable breeders and placed on a commercial starter. Buying from a blood-tested flock has prevented any loss from bacillary white diarrhea.

Blair once lost money feeding commercial feeds to his laying hens. He now feeds a ration he mixes according to an A. & M. formula. The hens are given dry mash in feeders, supplemented with wet mash at noon, three pounds to each 100 hens. Faucets dripping water into clean troughs in his houses supply water of uniform temperature. Alfalfa hay supplies a substitute for green stuff during dry months.

A loft over his laying house stores straw for litter, and feeds and helps keep the house at a uniform temperature. Side ventilations can be adjusted according to the weather.

Blair's hens have averaged 190 to 200 eggs per year during a five year period. He stamps his trade mark on each egg, guarantees infertility, sets his own price, and cannot supply the demand.

A. E. F. Reunion Is Scheduled at Centennial

DALLAS, Sept. 4. (P)—Buck privates and generals will recall the white highways of France, the red sky at night . . . St. Mihiel . . . the Argonne . . . Varennes; gobs and admirals will swap tales of patrol duty on the high seas.

"Our purpose is to renew the friendship and keep alive the memories of our service overseas in the most gigantic war in the world's history," says Major Gen. Beaumont B. Buck, retired, national chairman for the P. A. E. F. reunion. Dallas expects to entertain 120,000 ex-soldiers and sailors at the Texas centennial exposition for the reunion September 10-13.

General Buck In Charge

General Buck, who now lives at San Antonio, commanded the third division of the American army in the Meuse-Argonne battles. His aides for the reunion include General William R. Smith of the 36th division, General J. P. O'Neill of the 90th; Patrick J. Hurley, former secretary of war; O. A. Davis of New Mexico, Bruce Baird of Louisiana, Governor Landon of Kansas, and Colonel Frank Knox of Chicago.

Others, General Buck says, may attend include former Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels, now ambassador to Mexico; Lieut. Gen. R. L. Bullard, who commanded the second army, A. E. F.; Ray Murphy, national commander of the American Legion; James Van Zandt, commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars; Major Gen. Frank Parker, commander of the first division during the war and now commander of the third army and the eighth corps area; Col. Theodore Roosevelt, of the first division.

"Buddy Will Be There"

"You will tell of marching in the rain and mud in blackest darkness," General Buck said in his official announcement to "members of the army, navy and marine corps, and all others who were auxiliary to the military service of the United States in the World war overseas."

"You will again work your way over or through barbed wire entanglements; you will again par-

Autoists Learn Why They Don't Pass That Test

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 4.—The California State Automobile association lists six leading reasons for motorists failing to pass driving tests. They are:
Lack of control in congested traffic and while parking.
Improper signals.
Discourtesy and failure to serve right of way.
Carelessness at intersecting streets where there is no traffic signal.
Disregarding stop signals.
Making turns from the wrong traffic lanes.

Participants in a trench raid or stand guard on the edge on no-man's land.

"Your buddy will be there, the man who stood firmly by your side in the stress of battle; the man who shared his last bit of mulemeat tobacco with you."

Special meetings of regiments and divisions, banquets and balls to be given by various organizations are on the program for the reunion.

The Deep River section of Moore and Chatham counties in North Carolina—where coal and iron both were to be found—was called the "Sheffield of North Carolina."

Postmaster Cooper Green, of Birmingham, Ala., still rates the dog as a postman's enemy. He says five Birmingham letter carriers were bitten by dogs in a 10-day period.
