20-INCH DOWNPOUR REPORTED AT WATER VALLEY, CRISTOVAL SWELLS STREAMS OF SECTION

San Angelo Waterbound as Floods Threaten Water Supply and Slow Communication; Grape Creek and Carlsbad Under Water

(By Associated Press)

Torrential rains aggravated the San Angelo flood situation today, cutting the city off from the outside in all directions, threatening the water supply, and hampering communications following more than a four and a half inch downpour last night.

Water Valley had more than 20 inches of rain last night and today. Cristoval, at the head of the South Concho river, had an even heavier rainfall.

Grape Creek and Carlsbad, where the state sanatorium is located were under water. No fear for the safety of the sanatorium inmates was felt, however.

The South, North, and Middle Conchos showed the biggest rises of the week.

Streams Rising

Other streams in the southern part of the state were swollen where the prolonged drouth was definitely relieved.

Nearly every part of the state reported rain which for the most part was beneficial to farm and range lands.

Heavy rains were reported at Gainesville, Denton, Dallas, Fort Worth, Abilene, Sherman, Sterling City, Grape Creek, McKinney, and Van Alstyne.

Last night's rain brought the total for the San Angelo area to more than 17 inches.

6.5 INCHES OF RAIN FALLS HERE

Two inches of rain which fell here last night and this morning today had boosted this week's total for Cisco to six and a half inches.

Although the rain had fallen slowly and most of it had soaked into the drouth-parched ground, streams were running today and at least one case of highway damage near here was reported.

Reports that the approach to the overpass three miles west of the city on the Bankhead highway was sinking caused a warning sign to be placed there until repairs can be made.

Lake Cisco today had risen about two feet.

RALLY CHEERS LOBOES TODAY

Ciscoans Play Electra Friday Night

Each boy in the 1936 high school football squad was introduced to the student body this morning as a part of the pep rally given for the purpose of arousing interest for the Cisco-Electra game Friday night. The rally included talks by Coaches Dexter Shelley, William Cooper, Co-captain Royce Rainbolt and Joe Slicker, Principal O. L. Stamey, and Mrs. Alfred Irby. This was the first rally of the season.

All through the rally the fact was stressed that the Loboes have a chance to make a good showing in the conference race this fall if the school students and the citizens of Cisco will get behind the team. According to the coaches the Loboes will not have much of a chance if they do not. The Lobo band has already expressed itself as being willing to support the Loboes 100 per cent.

Cheers For Team

The rally ended with the student body giving several yells. The Loboes will leave by bus Friday morning at 7 o'clock for Electra.

Fiercest Spanish Battle Rages Near Toledo

Through the Editor's Spectacles By GEORGE

The institution known as the Little Theater has become so popular in many towns, especially in the small communities, that it has become a positive and valuable influence upon community culture, particularly so in revealing and developing latent talent and an appreciation for the better elements in drama.

In Dallas, Fort Worth and some of the larger cities these Little Theater companies have the advantage of ample financing for the employment of skilled directors and the provision of stages, properties, costume and so forth of the best kinds, as well as the advantage of a greater field for talent.

But the value of Little Theaters does not consist in the quality of the production but in their influence upon the people who take part. This influence is toward the cultivation of a finer artistic sense, and an appreciation of the best in the drama, and more valuable than all else, no doubt, the development of...

Trent Farmer Is Indicted for Two Murder Charges

ABILENE, Sept. 17.—Clarence Duncan, 28-year-old Trent farmer yesterday was indicted by both the Taylor county 42nd and the Nolan county 32nd judicial district grand juries.

The Abilene indictment grew out of the death of Duncan's first wife, Mrs. Mary Duncan, whose charred body was found in the smoldering ruins of their home near Trent the morning of April 10, 1935.

The Sweetwater indictment is the aftermath of the death of G. H. Jones, whose interest in Billie Lorene Allen, 19, did not cool when she became the second Mrs. Duncan on June 29, 1936. Body of Jones, 52-year-old Trent filling station operator, was taken from the waters of Lake Sweetwater Aug. 15.

Two murder indictments were returned by each the 42nd and 32nd juries. The second Abilene bill named Joe Totten, local willing station operator, for the death of Robert Cluney, 14. Body of the youth, a caddy at the Abilene country club, was found on highway 4-30 July 30. Totten was also indicted for driving while intoxicated and failure to stop and render aid.

County Fair Progresses Despite Rainy Weather

The Eastland county fair was going forward today despite the rain which has continued throughout the week.

Cisco's program for the opening session last night was cancelled because of inclement weather. The Lobo band had been scheduled to play a concert and Harry Schaefer's orchestra was due to present...

novelty musical numbers. Fair association officials at Eastland assured that, while the rain might slow the schedule, it would not cause the fair to be postponed.

Several communities sent in exhibits yesterday as the time was extended for entries to be placed on exhibition.

Animal Stars To Share Honors In Russell Circus

Animal actors are similar to the human performers when it comes to being sleepy and it frequently happens that at the night performance of Russell Bros. Circus, due in Cisco on Tuesday, Sept. 29, the beasts are either irritable or slow as they may have been awakened from a strong sleep to enter the ring.

Of the several score of animal actors with this circus, perhaps "Buddy" is the only one that is as alert and quick of action at the night show as he is at the matinee. Buddy is recognized as the best trained seal ever before the public and his act is perhaps the only case where one single animal is the sole performer during one number. Buddy works in the center ring under the direction of his trainer, Fred Jenier, and he seems to know that all eyes are always centered upon him as he does his best always and is well rewarded with liberal supply of fish during his act.

Notable as Buddy is, there are many animal acts which are interesting and some are very comical. The liberty horse act on the hippodrome track featuring Millers dancing horses; the riding monkeys and chimpanzees; the clown dogs; kicking donkeys and mules; leaping hounds; remarkable acts by fox terriers; the best herd of trained elephants ever with any circus; last and most sensational Reb Russell's famous horse "Rebel."

Trained wild animal acts are tedious and tiresome as compared with the acts by the domestic and more docile beasts. The public has come to value and admire horses as never before and for that reason several specimens of the beautiful ring horses, dancing horses, jumping horses and "Rebel" are exhibited in the menagerie tent of the Russell Bros. Circus, together with the cute shetland together with the cute shetland pony.

Many, it's not hard to guess, look with relish to the day when they will get home and tell neighbors and friends that they sat in the prime minister's chair.

THE WORLD WITH A FENCE

A New Novel by Marian Sims

SYNOPSIS: Now Carol Torrance and Blake Thornton are about to face their great trial. For they love each other, and Blake is on his way to Florida to tell his cold and selfish wife, Irma, the truth, and ask her to divorce him. Carol and Blake have told each other good-bye, and Porter, a casual friend of Carol's, has come to take Carol to the train. Porter is on time, which is unusual about it.

Chapter 38 CONFESSION

Porter grinned. "Have to be. Trains and ships are the only thing I can't bluff into waiting for me. Of course I could bear missing this one, but I'm afraid it'd make me unpopular."

"You're darn right it would." She phoned for the porter and then turned and smiled at him. "I'm sorry I can't ask you to sit down."

"Oh, yeah? You're fairly championing to be off. Vibratin' with excitement and all that."

"You're so bloomin' sane—for an esthete. How do you get that way?"

"That's the way to see a family," he said bluntly. "Every six months."

"Cynic." She picked up her gloves and pocketbook and went to open the door for the bell-boy.

When the negro had taken her bags Porter stared at her gravely. "I wish you weren't going."

"But I'll be back Thursday, and you sometimes go for days without seeing me. What's the difference?"

"A lot. I don't like the idea of your being out of reach. How about letting me drive over to Meredith and bring you back?"

She held her breath. Actually she was coming Wednesday, because Blake would be back then.

"That's sweet of you, but—I don't know. I'll drop you a note."

When I've thought up a good excuse, she added to herself.

The city was gay and brilliantly lit as they drove through it. A deceptive brilliance, she thought, hiding weariness and unease and a despair intensified by the knowledge that despair had no place in the picture. Remembering the disillusionment of her last Christmas at home she tried to steel herself by expecting nothing this time.

Nothing but three days with her family, who were incapable of disappointing her.

Porter was quiet, too, apparently absorbed in his skillful, breath-taking driving. At the station he bought magazines and chocolate, and put her on the train with his usual flourish. Porter had a flair for living; even the most casual attentions took on a certain grace and significance when he performed them. He sank down beside her for a minute.

"See anybody in this car that you know?"

"No. Why?"

"Nothing." He grinned, and leaned swiftly over and kissed her. "By, beautiful. Please decide to let me drive you back."

He went down the aisle without looking at her again, and she sat and stared blindly out the window.

She would not, Carol had promised herself, confide in any of her family. But she had overlooked Pat's gift of divination. Sunday afternoon he pulled himself lazily from his chair and stretched.

"I feel like a stuffed hog. How's about a brief turn around the Mall, Carol, before the callers swoop down and start their drinkin'?"

"It sounds that attractive," she admitted. "You, too, Jill?"

Jill shook her head and smiled. "I've got a date with a man."

The last vestige of constraint about Don had vanished. Carol realized gladly. He came and went gaily, and made no attempt to hide his happiness and his devotion. Don as a prospective brother-in-law was far more satisfactory than Don as a possible husband.

"Oh, in that case. . . Where's Milly?" she asked Pat.

"Upstairs, sleeping off her eating jag. Come on."

They went off briskly, and turned towards the hills beyond the house.

"You haven't forgotten how to walk," Pat approved. "Even if you are a city slicker."

"I'll never be that, I'm afraid."

Those beastly pavements still hurt my feet; I like grass, and red clay, to do my walking on."

She was savoring again the sense of ease and completeness that Pat's presence inspired. She might never know elsewhere, she realized, so effortless a companionship as hers with Pat.

When they had left the pavement for the dirt road she threw back her head.

"Gosh, this is good! Why do any of us struggle along in cities?"

"Because some of us want one thing and some of us want another."

"And some poor idiots—like me—want it all. The ease and leisure of a little town, and the breadth and variety of a city."

"Sure," Pat said comfortably. "And the thing to do is to decide which one you want worst, and then quit looking over your shoulder at the other one."

She wrinkled her nose at him. "You're so bloomin' sane—for an esthete. How do you get that way?"

He scowled. "Smile when you call me that, darn you! I dunno; I guess I'm just lazy. It's a swell substitute for sanity; fools the smart guys every time."

She breathed the cold air deeply, and let her eyes sweep the quiet fields about them. The fields were sleeping now—golden brown with sedge and weeds and dead corn stalks—and the soil beneath their feet was red, and crusty from frost.

The Old Red Hills of Georgia, she thought with a swift nostalgic ache; I can't imagine living anywhere else in the world.

Pat said lightly: "Of course this walking business was a gag. I want to hear about you and how you're making out."

She knew at once that she was going to tell him about Blake. That the thought of Blake had been in her mind like an orchestral accompaniment to everything she had done and said and heard in Meredith. And that she wanted desperately to talk about him, and to hear his name spoken aloud. She said slowly:

"Well, right now I'm like—a prisoner at the bar, waiting for a verdict."

He looked sharply at her and then straight ahead. "What do you mean?"

She told him, in a quiet, controlled voice, about Blake, and Irma, and Blake's mission. Pat listened in complete silence until she was done, then he said: "He sounds like a pretty grand guy."

"He's all of that. I'm living for the day when you and he can know each other."

"This wife of his. What's she going to do?"

What was she? Carol wondered. Her worst, whatever Blake might hope for. She said slowly:

"God knows. Blake thinks she'll be decent, but that's because he's a man, and decent himself. He's got no idea what devils women can be—even when he's lived with one for years. I've never seen Irma, but I've diagnosed her as an—egomaniac, if there's such a word."

"And if she refuses to play ball?" Pat asked quietly.

"Again—God knows. I said I'd go all the way with him."

"Good for you." He had drawn her arm through his, as if to interpose his own strength between her and Irma's uncompromising hate. "Just remember this," he went on steadily, "that people have a genius for forgetting things like that. You may have a few weeks of hell before you bring her around, but when it's over the pack will forget all about you and start tearing the flesh off a new victim. Hang on to that."

"I'll try. Because of course you're right. I can stand the hell so long as it doesn't ruin—what Blake and I feel for each other."

"It won't unless you let it. That's up to you and him. Will you bring him up here as soon as you can—no matter which way it's going to be? I'll have the ground all broken and the family in line when you say the word."

"You darling! I'll do it as soon as I can. He wanted to come this time, but I thought we'd better wait."

He turned and looked closely at her. "This what you've been looking for kid?"

Her color and her voice deepened. "This is what I never expected to find—anywhere. Even if this were all, I'd still feel better about living and dying."

His arm pressed her against his side. "That's the way to talk. I envy you like the devil."

She was suddenly ashamed of her own absorption. "Pat, you're worse than I've been. Sooner or later you've got to get out and find a life for yourself." She smiled faintly. "Lord, what a lover you'd be!"

He laughed shortly. Don't fool yourself. The girl would be entirely out of luck—assuming that I ever found her."

Second Skeleton Murder Trial Set For November 2

Trial of Mrs. Della Henry for the murder of her former husband, H. L. McBee, was set Saturday by Judge B. W. Patterson of the 88th district court for November 2.

The trial will be the second in Eastland county's famous "hanging skeleton murder" case. Raymond Henry, husband of the accused woman, recently was sentenced by an Eastland county jury to 50 years imprisonment.

Disappeared in 1933
McBee, a highway worker, disappeared from his home at Rising Star on or about March 1, 1933. The state charges that he was buried that night and that the body was later disinterred and hung by a wire from a tree north-east of Rising Star, where it was found by two rabbit hunters in December, 1934.

Some time after McBee's disappearance Mrs. McBee was granted a divorce on the grounds of desertion and soon afterward married Henry.

The specific charge upon which Henry was tried and convicted was that he stabbed McBee with an ice pick in the latter's home on March 1, 1933, that he, M. E. "Sandy" Tyler, and Jack and Lynn Smith buried McBee's body that night, and that the body was later dug up and suspended from a tree in an oak thicket.

Four Indicted
Indicted with Mr. and Mrs. Henry for the murder were Jack and Lynn Smith. Jack Smith committed suicide in the Eastland county jail while awaiting trial. Lynn Smith's murder indictment later was dismissed on motion of the state, leaving only the indictment of accessory to the murder.

Star witnesses for Henry and expected to appear in defense of their mother were the two McBee children, Billy Ray and Geneva. Billy Ray testified that he was in the room with his mother and father and Raymond Henry at the time the stabbing was alleged to have occurred and that there was no fight. Sandy Tyler, Ted Crosswhite, and Pete Fenwick were the principal witnesses for the state.

Frank Sparks of Eastland is Mrs. McBee's attorney. It was not known whether Frank Judkins, attorney for Lynn Smith, and R. E. Grantham and L. H. Flewelling, attorneys for Raymond Henry, will aid in the defense. District Attorney Grady Owen probably will be aided by Allen Dabney.

Zeal for Il Duce Embarrasses Paper

ROME, Sept. 17 (AP)—The unflinching zeal with which the controlled Italian press credits Mussolini with every undertaking which enhances Italian glory betrayed the Roman newspaper into an embarrassing error.

An early edition displayed on the front page a photograph of a public works project captioned "Vistas of Mussolinian Rome." A hasty correction was made for later editions to make the caption read merely "Roman vistas." The photo was taken in St. Peter's Square which is in Vatican City and under papal sovereignty.

Claude G. Bowers, ambassador to Spain, was writing learned newspaper editorials when he was 19 years old.

With Comanche Trail Scouts

San Saba
Scoutmaster Tommie Hendrick of San Saba reports that his troop took an overnight hike. Archery was featured during the hike. Hendrick boasts that every scout in his troop has an archery set. Each scout has made his own set. Twenty flat bow staves have been ordered since camp. They are going to experiment with the round and flat type bows to determine which is preferable. A number of rabbits and squirrels have been shot by the bow and arrow at the hands of the San Saba scouts.

Lampasas
Troop 33 of Lampasas sends in two new registrations. Scoutmaster Matthews says they are still holding together even though vacation period has taken some of their scouts.

Dublin
Scoutmaster Sanders of troop 24, Dublin, says that he has the best softball junior team in the council. Maybe some of his neighbors would like to see about that.

Breckenridge
Scoutmaster Banes of Breckenridge had a note in the daily paper calling his scouts together with a statement that vacation time is over. That sounds like some advancement is going to take place. Banes also states that he is expecting at least twenty-four of his boys to attend the national jamboree next spring in Washington.

Cisco
Scoutmasters Hittson and Barton viewed the centennial with about 38 of their scouts, who were in the care of the scoutmasters. They had a grand time.

Eastland
Scoutmaster Jack Dwyer now takes over troop No. 103 succeeding C. M. Allen. He starts off by taking a group of Eastland Scouts to the centennial. We understand that the scouts mowed lawns, washed windows, etc., to earn money for the trip. One of the scout laws is: A scout is thrifty—He does not wantonly destroy property. He works faithfully, wastes nothing, and makes the best use of his opportunities. He saves his money so that he may pay his own way, be generous to those in need, and helpful to worthy objects. He may work for pay, but must not receive tips for courtesies or "good turns."

Troop Cabin
Scoutmaster Jessop of Troop No. 6, Eastland, we suppose is working with his scouts on the new troop cabin, which they have

Pupils Will Go To Desdemona In School Transfer

C. S. Eldridge, county superintendent, met with the board of trustees for Desdemona and Robinson Springs school districts, at Desdemona last Friday night when these two school boards entered into a two-year contract transferring the scholastics of Robinson Springs to the Desdemona school. Robinson Springs school is in Comanche county.

Lowell school, four and one-half miles over the line in Erath county, is another school that has contracted to transfer its scholastics to the Desdemona school for one year, Eldridge said.

More Teachers
Robinson Springs is transferring 104 scholastics, while Lowell is transferring 44. These transfers will increase the Desdemona school from an eleven-teacher school to a fifteen-teacher school, according to Superintendent Eldridge. These transfers were accomplished through the efforts of the superintendent, who is working for the best interest of the scholastics, as he sees it.

The superintendent has been of material assistance to R. N. Cluck, Cisco school superintendent, in putting over the transfers of the five schools transferred to Cisco this year. Two of the five transferred, Bedford and Central, were made on the superintendent's own motion, acting under school rule No. 79, which gives him the authority to act when the trustees fail of agreement.

These transfers for better educational advantages are in line with the plans of the superintendent's office, Eldridge said, as it is started as a troop project for the coming winter.

Rising Star
Scoutmaster Bob Buckingham, Troop No. 115, Rising Star, says that he is looking for a good assistant scoutmaster to help him with his fall and winter program. Some of you fellows tell Bob how to bait his hook!

Brownwood
Scoutmaster Noad, Troop No. 16, Brownwood, is planning a Parents' Night for his troop in the near future. He states that summer attendance has been quite good, and that his troop has some boys on the waiting list.

Troop 2 of Brownwood has planned a number of hikes and outdoor programs for the fall months. Troop 5 of Brownwood is now under the leadership of Mr. Hochhalter, who is organizing the work for the fall months.

the purpose of the superintendent to see that every child in Eastland county shall have free access to some affiliated high school.

Eastland Scouts To Get Meeting Place

EASTLAND, Sept. 17. — Light poles to be used in the construction of a cabin for a meeting place of Boy Scout Troop No. 6, sponsored by the Rotary club, has been donated by the Texas Electric Service company and work will begin soon, Scoutmaster Bill Jessop, announced Tuesday.

The cabin will be located on the south point of the hill. Dimensions of the house have been planned at 30 by 20 feet, Jessop said.

To aid in the construction of the cabin, the troop is sponsoring a skating rink here for 30 days.

The troop, formed long ago, was re-organized April, 1935.

New Mechanical Sheep Aids Army In Pounding Dam

FORT PECK, Mont., Sept. 17 (AP)—A "mechanical sheep" with tiny steel feet is helping pound a huge dam into place here.

Army engineers in charge of Fort Peck dam, largest earth-fill barrier in the world, explained they are applying a lesson learned by sheepmen when they first brought flocks to graze on western frontier lands.

The sheep, it was noticed, packed the range down so tight that the earth hardly could be plowed.

So engineers devised a heavy machine called a "sheepsfoot roller" that is proving a big help as a dam-builder. The "mechanical sheep" consists of two steel cylinders, weighing 15,000 pounds. On each cylinder are 72 projecting "feet," shaped like the hoof of a sheep.

Pulled by a heavy tractor, the rollers revolve and the steel "feet" pack down thin layers of dampened soil along a 2,500-foot strip that tapers out to meet the natural ground level at the extreme west end of the dike section of the dam.

The dam is being built across the Missouri river in the heart of a country where cattle kings spilled blood in pioneer days to rid the range of the animals whose hoofs serve as models for the mechanical tamper.

EASTLAND, Sept. 17.—Governor James V. Allred has announced a 90-day reduction of sentence for Danny Leach, convicted and sentenced to 15 years in the penitentiary from Eastland county upon a charge of murdering R. C. Leach, serving a 40-year sentence because of the Eastland county conviction and others in Green and Newton counties, who conducted himself in an exemplary manner in a prison break on July 19, 1936, which resulted in the death of a guard, Felix Smith. The governor said Leach could have escaped with others but chose to remain with a squad of 19 and aid to a remaining guard.

JONES and STASNEY MAKE LEASE SALE

ALBANY, Sept. 17.—Pitzer and Stasney, Albany geologist and oil firm, sold 80 acres a quarter mile south of the recently completed 200 barrel well of Roberts-Hodges on the G. R. Davis ranch, 14 miles west of Albany to Fain-McGaha Oil Corporation of Wichita Falls, one-half cash and one-half cut one-fourth oil. O. survey 3, and is adjoining an 80 acre lease on which Fain-McGaha Oil Corporation is drilling its No. 1, G. R. Davis.

The new well caused considerable interest when it made a nice producer from the Humble sand at 1723 feet, being about 30 feet below the regular Cook horizon, and more than 100 feet below the Bluff Creek sand which is the largest single sand blanket in western Shackelford, and one-half interest in the original discovery well and 160 acre lease in south east quarter section 190, E. FULL SCHEDULE—OF CLASSES

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP)—The professors must have helped draw up the 1936 football schedule for Kansas State college. Gridders do not leave until Friday afternoon for most of their trips, and consequently miss only a half day of classes on Saturday afternoon. The only exception to this rule is one long trip scheduled each year for the team—but the long inter-sectional jaunt has been dropped from the 1936 card.

Besides the six bath tubs, two large shower bath rooms, and the hot air and massage rooms, Berlin's Olympic swimming hall includes a Finnish steam bath.

In the not far distant past Horned Frog coaches were pleased to have eleven good men on the squad. Old-timers can recall road trips made with a squad of 13 to 15 players.

Coach Dutch Meyer told his men. "Any position is wide open, and it belongs to the man who will hustle the hardest."

Forty-five men are on Coach Meyer's squad, 16 of them being letter men and 21 sophomores.

Job Insurance Act This Session Asked

AUSTIN, Sept. 17. (AP)—Wallace Reilly, executive secretary of the Texas Federation of Labor, said today an unemployment insurance act should be passed at the special session of the legislature. Appearing before the Governor's Jobless Insurance committee, Reilly argued Texas had all to gain and nothing to lose by immediate enactment of a law. If the law should be upheld, he said, employees would receive insurance benefits from this year's federal taxes. If it should be invalidated, a state constitutional amendment could be submitted. Reilly opposes taxing employees to help maintain the insurance fund.

Landonites Cautious

This general set of circumstances appears to have contributed also to the delay in the republican camp. A great party is not rebuilt in a day. It was apparent that Governor Landon and his friends were suffering somewhat from surprise after their easy victory at Cleveland, and wanted time to familiarize themselves with the vastly-complicated party machinery which had come suddenly into their possession. They were made cautious by the magnitude of the responsibility, and by the torrent of conflicting advice which poured in upon them. Especially, would it be better merely to attack the New Deal, or should Mr. Landon present a substitute program? It is well known that elections often are won because the voters are against someone, not because they are for someone else. Most politicians agree that the majority voted against the Wilson policies in 1920, not affirmatively in favor of Harding; against Smith in 1928, rather than for Hoover; against Hoover in 1932, more than for Roosevelt. That the present administration has made bitter enemies is plain. Are they numerous enough and

Politics at Random

Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington. From the standpoint of major strategy, mid-September finds the presidential campaign still in a waiting stage. Nothing is plainer than the intent of the democrats to reserve for the final hours of the battle whatever bombshells may repose in their arsenals, whatever dramatic strokes of policy they may be considering. On the republican side, there is no evidence of a decisive choice between the two alternative courses which are open. The party still is free to adopt a plan of attack only, hoping to be voted into power by the force of anti-administration sentiment, or to appeal affirmatively for support by presenting a definite program of its own. Both major party nominees are delaying a detailed discussion of those issues which have been regarded generally as paramount in the campaign. Governor Landon has not yet laid out the program he would adopt, if elected, with respect to relief: nor has President Roosevelt made specific reply to those numerous criticisms which have fallen upon his own relief policies. It is much the same with respect to the farm problem, the labor issue—even the constitutional issue.

Human and Other Nature By W. F. BRUCE

The fall would have come anyway, I suppose. The summer temperatures had been modified a little as the sun ambled off toward the south. The breeze was cooling down a little and one did not hunt the shade quite so eagerly. But it was not easy to tell amidst the lingering heat and drought of the early days of September that we had left the summer of 1936 behind or that we were changing seasons. Then suddenly the clouds that had faded away so often began to grow threatening, the sky became lowering, and the wind shifted and freshened. Those tropical disturbances off the Gulf Coast must have thrown us a state of weather. Rain began falling as easily now as seemingly it had been disappearing in the thirsty air. The evenings indoors are longer all at once; we even think of a cozy blaze as a possible convenience. We can pull a little cover over us and enjoy it; and can close some of the wide-open windows and not suffer. We begin to look for colors in the leaves—besides the gray-brown of premature withering. We have moved into autumn.

$123,992,587 WPA Texas Expenditure

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17. (AP)—The Works Progress Administration reported Wednesday it spent $123,992,587 in Texas up to Aug. 1 and had approved expenditure of about $55,000,000 more. A survey of funds available under both the 1935 and 1936 relief acts showed strictly WPA projects in Texas had cost the government $33,214,521 but incurred obligations for this work totaled $36,688,683 and an expenditure of $43,226,356 had been approved. The report showed that 134,115 persons were on jobs financed by Works Progress Administration funds July 25 in Texas with 76,442 on WPA rolls, 21,626 in emergency conservation (CCC) work and 36,047 employed by other government agencies. Most of the latter group—22,836—were working on agricultural department projects, principally public roads, and the Public Works Administration program, using WPA funds, was employing 11,547.

The Cisco lodge, Reed said, disbanded about six months ago and many members transferred their membership to the "phantom" home lodge at Weatherford.

Split in Labor Ranks Will Mark Political Year

By PRESTON GROVER WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Many thoughtful social economists will wager that 1936 will be remembered less by the election or defeat of Roosevelt or Landon or the schism in the American Federation of Labor than by the demonstration at Stoneville, Miss., of a mechanical cotton picker—that worked.

Single inventions have in times past wrought revolutionary social changes. The factory system, for instance, gained great impetus by development of the steam engine. But the effect of the cotton picker, like the effect of the cotton gin, seems destined to be felt heavier in the southern states than anywhere. In the south are concentrated the several millions of negroes who have been a major factor in the cotton industry since its beginning. They have supplied the cheap labor that matched the climatic and soil conditions to make a cotton producing center unrivaled elsewhere. In the years immediately before and after the revolutionary war the slavery question was heading toward a solution. Cotton was not then the tremendous crop it later became. Even with slave labor the cost of separating seed and fiber by hand was tremendous. Then came the cotton gin invention in 1793 which, one historian said, "fixed the institution (of slavery) firmly on the south."

Demonstrated Abroad, Too

War ended slavery but many a southerner will tell you that the position of the negro in the rural south is one of almost complete dependency upon the white landholder, who often provides him a cabin, a bit of garden land and a trickle of money in return for his periodic labor in the cotton fields. What now will be the effect of the machine cotton picker if it proves to be as successful as these early tests indicate? Will perpetual relief be the fare of the displaced negroes, as well as the share-cropper whites cut off from a livelihood? Cries for suppression of the invention seem like beating the kettle to scare off devils. The invention is here. Not only is it here, but it is abroad, being demonstrated in Russia. Looms as Big Problem Economists challenge anyone to show that labor saving inventions ever brought permanent disaster to any people. But it is hard to see how the next dozen national administrations can escape the tremendous task of preparing several million southern laborers to take up tasks perhaps far removed from the picking of cotton at which they have been employed for generations. John and Mack Rust's invention may knock $10 to $20 a bale off the cost of putting on the market a bale of cotton now worth around $60. If that proves true it will

Roper Predicts Boom Dangerous To U. S. Interest

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17. Secretary of Commerce Roper predicted today that this country is entering into one of the greatest business eras in its history.

At the same time, Roper warned that improved business may lead to "boom" proportions.

"We are treating business from a national standpoint," he said. "There is a great upward swing."

Roper added his words of warning in the wake of this new era of prosperity, we may have trouble keeping it from boom proportions.

Simultaneously, Roper announced he would appear before business advisory council today to suggest formation of a permanent government bureau to safeguard business already made by industry.

The commerce secretary added that he had in mind a department of commerce division comparable to the bureau of agricultural economics.

"This," he said, "would serve as a clearing house for business. We would seek to find out how the federal government can co-operate with business."

Roper cited new gains in several industries as indicative that the

'Little' Back Is Looming Big In Gophers' Plans

MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 17. (P)—Minnesota, producer of giant line crashers, may go in for a "pocket fullback" this season as Bernie Bierman's gridgers seek to extend their record of three years of undefeated play.

The variation will not be a voluntary move on Bierman's part, but as the season approaches the stubby figure of little Rudy Gmitro looms large as fullbacks are discussed.

Big fellows are abundant but apparently not of the class required by the quick-hitting Bierman system. Two sophomores, Marty Christiansen and Phil Belfiori, are being mentioned and Vic Spadaccini, a smashing junior, will be on hand.

Any of these athletes has 25 pounds on Gmitro and almost six inches in height. But Gmitro, tow-headed and unorthodox, pays no attention to the handicappers. "Too small for Minnesota football"—that was the hasty judgment of Gopher coaches when they first saw the little former Minneapolis high school star. They learned that Gmitro respects no opinions, however.

He cut loose against Michigan for long touchdown runs last year. He throws his 160 pounds with knockout force in off-tackle plays and holds his feet.

Lake Vernal (Babe) LeVoor, Bierman's "handy man" of 1935, Gmitro plays any backfield post with an ease that bespeaks natural ability.

Lowell (Red) Dawson, now Tulane's head mentor, when he was backfield coach at Minnesota, predicted the little fellow was destined for stardom. "The first day he came out, I played him in every backfield position. He never made a mistake. He's an instinctive football player. Watch him," Dawson says.

And it is no less an authority than Dawson who opines that Gmitro, despite his lack of size will play fullback in 1936.

Benedict Denies Haley Fired From Faculty at Texas

(Special to The Daily Press) AUSTIN, Sept. 17.—The following statement has been released by President H. Y. Benedict of the University of Texas:

"Recent newspaper notices and the headlines prefixed thereto dealing with the connection of J. Evetts Haley with the University of Texas contain enough of error to justify this corrective statement.

"For several years past Mr. Haley has been employed to collect for the university library material relating to the history of Texas. In this work he has been successful to a remarkable degree, the value of the material collected, mostly acquired by gift, very greatly exceeding the cost of its collecting. No one, I think, could have done a better job.

Appointments for Year
"Appointments in the bureau of social science research, the subdivision of the university to which this collecting actively belongs, are usually for a year, September 1 to September 1, and never longer and the budget is usually fixed by the regents later than the rest of the university budget. This year it will be fixed by the regents at their next meeting on September 26.

"When late in August Mr. Haley asked me by letter for a leave of absence without pay for six months beginning immediately, I replied by granting him a leave from August 24 to August 31, the end of the period for which he had actually and officially been appointed. I wrote him as follows concerning his leave:

"Inasmuch as the budget for 1936-37 for the bureau of research in the social sciences has not yet been sent in to me by the director thereof, no appointments to this bureau for 1936-37 have yet been made; and inasmuch as appointments to work on 'projects' in this bureau are not made for a period longer than the fiscal year, your appointment as collector in Precedent No. 12 ends September 1, 1936, and you have not yet been reappointed for 1936-37. Hence, in recommending to the board of regents the approval of your request for an immediate leave, I shall recommend it for the period August 24 to 31, 1936, leaving for future action continuance of project 12."

Commercial units and products including a V-12 Lincoln-Zephyr, H. B. Reynolds, Dearborn, is the driver.

Daily Press Want Ads will get the job done.

Three-Millionth Ford Truck Will Come Here Soon

It's coming here soon! The 3,000,000th truck built by the Ford Motor Company is scheduled to come to Cisco on September 18th about 10 a. m. o'clock. This truck is part of a large caravan passing thru here on its way to the Texas centennial exposition at Dallas, where the truck will be placed on exhibition in the Ford Exposition building. The 3,000,000th truck will pause at the showrooms of Nance Motor company, local Ford dealers, for photographing by still and motion picture cameras before proceeding on its long cross-country journey.

Above is a photograph of Henry Ford, founder of the Ford Motor company, and Edsel Ford, president, standing in front of the 3,000,000th Ford truck just after it was taken off the assembly line at the Rouge plant. This V-8 1 1/2-ton panel truck marked the manufacture by Ford of more than one third of all the trucks turned out by the automobile industry in its history. The first Ford truck was built in 1917. Some idea of the position Ford has attained in the commercial vehicle field since then is gained from the registrations of all commercial vehicles in service in the United States. On January 1, 1936, 40.3 per cent of these were of Ford make, a proportion more than one-half larger than that of any other manufacturer.

Traveling with the truck is a caravan of the latest Ford com-

Chapter VI FORT WILLIAM HENRY

At Fort William Henry, Colonel Munro awaited the arrival of his daughters, long overdue. He paced the ramparts like a restless lion, repeatedly asking the same question of the sentry: "Any sign of Major Heyward's party?" And received always the same answer: "Not yet, sir." Suddenly the sentry pointed excitedly: "Look! There's a flicker in the woods—like a torch light, sir." Munro turned with relief to his aide, "Hurry! Send a detail to guide them in." The words were scarcely out of his mouth, however, when the whole woods seemed to burst into flame, dozens of bright points of fire at intervals of fifty feet.

Hawkeye and Alice

"The French!" The aide cried excitedly. "Sound the alarm!"

Munro had reached the fort ahead of time, by forced marches. The garrison was surrounded! Colonel Munro moaned: "Alice—Cora—they'll never get through!"

He had no time, however, to dwell upon his personal anguish. The alarm sounded, British and Colonial troops were pouring out from the inner stockade, muskets in hand, to man the outer earthworks. The heavy guns were swung into position—gun crews rushed forward with ammunition. There began some desultory firing, but this ceased when it became apparent that the French were out of range.

Fort William Henry was little more than a log stockade, surrounded by earthworks built around heavy timbers, with a wide moat running around three sides. The unprotected side faced a wide lake, swampy on all sides and considered impassible. The French, therefore, when they invested the fort, built their own earthworks hardly extending to the water's edge.

The importance of the Fort as an outpost was indicated by the fact that General Montcalm, himself—the same who fell later before Quebec—headed the invading army. With him were his Huron allies—of whom Magua's band was a part. The French were superior not only in numbers, but also in artillery. Hope for the beleaguered forces lay in holding out long enough for relief to arrive.

This possibility formed the topic of Montcalm's conversation with his aides, as the French officers the men, Montcalm suddenly threw up his arm. "Stop firing!" he shouted. "They're women."

The Hurons stared at him in amazement, but obeyed the order long enough to give Hawkeye and the others time to reach the ramparts to safety. The gates were thrown open to receive them, and hastily clanged shut. Alice and Cora flung themselves into the arms of their rejoicing father.

"My darlings!" Munro exclaimed. "You're safe, safe at last."

And turning to Munro, he said: "I'm very grateful, I'll never forget this."

"Don't thank me, sir," Heyward answered. "The credit belongs to this Scout, sir."

Munro turned to the Scout. "I hadn't suspected you as an ally," he said, smiling.

"I'm not," Hawkeye answered stiffly. "My only reason for helping the Major was because of the ladies."

"At any rate," Munro said, still smiling, "accept my thanks."

Alice, too, approached the scout, and laid her hand on his arm. "Will you come to the Colonel's quarters?" she asked. "I want to thank you, too."

Heyward observed the affectionate gesture, and interposed. "I'll attend to that, my dear, and reward him personally."

Hawkeye eyed him quizzically. "Any reward I've got coming from you, I can do without." And he turned on his heel and walked away.

"I wish," said Heyward irritably, "you wouldn't be so familiar with that fellow."

Alice stared after the departing figure of the scout. "Duncan," she said, "you're talking like a fool." (To be continued)

Farmers Helped By Resettlement Aid This Year

(Special to The Daily Press) EASTLAND, Sept. 17. — Guion Gregg, state farm debt adjustment supervisor here this week, reports that 19 farms have been saved from foreclosures during the government's resettlement administration program in Eastland county since Sept. 1, 1935. The properties were saved by either refinancing or extensions of farm debts.

Farm debts in the state have been reduced $1,020,487 during the year by the administration. The agency has arranged for payment of $178,233 in taxes, involving 597,252 acres of land.

The farm-debt adjustment program was instituted at the request of President Roosevelt in October, 1933. It was formed to bring the distressed farm debtors and their creditors together to discuss their mutual problems and arrive at adjustments which would prevent wholesale foreclosure of farm homes, and to aid in agricultural rehabilitation. It arose out of a crisis in agricultural credit which had been aggravated by weather and crop conditions and in which thousands of farmers found themselves hopelessly unable to meet their obligations, and the number of farm foreclosures was mounting rapidly.

Another Burbank Awaited as Garden Of Plant Wizard Remains Show Place

By SAM JACKSON
SANTA ROSA, Calif., Sept. 17.—Ten years after the death of Luther Burbank, his world-famous experimental garden here stands practically unused—a challenge for someone to step into the wizard's place.

There is no sign out reading "Genius Wanted," but according to Milo S. Baker, professor of botany at Santa Rosa junior college, that sums up the situation.

"When Burbank died his work stopped," said Professor Baker. "He trained nobody to follow him and left few notes on his work. His mantle has fallen to no one."

The famous horticulturist had more than 2,000 plant creations under way at the time of his death, but scarcely 20 of them have been perfected and put on the market. In one ambitious experiment he was growing 300,000 rose bushes in an attempt to overcome mildew and many of these plants still survive—some of them resistant to the blight but the job as a whole uncompleted.

Misconceptions Numerous
Burbank's widow has turned his garden over to the Santa Rosa junior college, which maintains it as a free public showplace. It contains some of his most notable productions, including the thornless rose, spineless cactus, "rain-bow" corn, the hybrid mulberry tree with which Burbank hoped to foster an American silk industry, and his striking, red "combustion plant," which he described as "the most brilliant plant human eyes have ever seen."

Professor Baker's botany classes use the garden for study, but the college is not equipped to foster research on the Burbank scale. Some experimentation is carried on by J. B. Keil, custodian of the garden, but most of his time is taken up correcting misconceptions of visitors.

"Most people believe Burbank developed the grapefruit and the seedless orange," says Kiel. "Such is not the case, although the statement has even been put into textbooks. The grapefruit is a citrus variation discovered in Florida, while United States government naturalists imported the seedless orange from Brazil."

Cedar Marks Grave
The famous naturalist is buried in the acre-and-a-quarter tract, his grave unmarked except for a giant Cedar of Lebanon. Mrs. Burbank lives in the small frame house nearby where he resided during his 50 years of research. A pretentious home built just before his death has been converted into a business college.

Nearest thing to a success to Burbank, experts here say, is a century-old nursery concern, Stark Brothers of Louisiana, Mo., whose erstwhile manager, Maj. Lloyd C. Stark, is democratic candidate for governor of Missouri. The Starks have leased a 13-acre farm which Burbank operated at Sebastopol, Calif., and have introduced successfully some of his fruits and flowers into the middle west.

One of Burbank's assistants, William Henderson, who was with him six years, now operates a nursery business at Fresno, Calif., and another, Carl Hanson, is with the royal gardens in Copenhagen.

"It was impossible for Mr. Burbank to train anyone to succeed him," says Mrs. Burbank in commenting on the cessation of her husband's work. "His gift was like that of an artist—something that cannot be taught. His work necessarily closed with his own life."

Making Revenue Cover Budget Of City Is Problem

The city administration faces the difficult problem of making an estimated 1936 fiscal year income of approximately $55,000 do the work that required $78,000 to do last year, according to a statement prepared for Mayor J. T. Berry Saturday. The figures do not include revenue for bond services the same difficulty applied there, Mr. Berry said.

On the basis of the 1936 valuations (the 1936 fiscal year of the city began May 1, 1936, and will end April 30, 1937) the city has a potential ad valorem revenue of $56,314 of which three-fifths, or $33,788.40 is allocated to the general fund and $22,525.60 to the bond sinking fund. Estimated water and sanitary department revenues are $30,000, making a total potential municipal income of $86,314 for the current year.

actual cash revenues, which, added to the estimated $30,000 of water and sanitation revenues, will make approximately $55,000 available funds for defraying expenses of the municipal operation during the current fiscal season.

During the year closed last April 30 it required approximately $78,000 to finance the city's operations, exclusive of bond servicing. This rate of expenditure still continues, and on the basis of anticipated revenues, promises a deficit of $23,000 at the end of the year.

How to reduce the city's expenses to a point where the outgo will coincide with the income is the present serious concern of the city. It must be done, Mayor Berry declared.

Still Not Enough
He explained further that the estimated 75 per cent collection of ad valorem taxes allocated to the sinking fund would provide only $16,894.20 for payment of the more than $30,000 interest and principal installments that will be due.

Some of the institutions maintained out of the tax revenues are made mandatory in the city's charter. Among them are the municipal chamber of commerce and zoo, costing about $6,000 annually to support. This various departments of the municipal government will bear an intense scrutiny, it was indicated, in order to determine where expenses may be drastically reduced.

The estimates quoted above are predicted on the basis of a normal year. They do not take into consideration the effect of drought or other abnormal conditions.

From Texas oil fields—Humble motor fuels and motor oils

When Texas was young, crude oil was produced with dippers from the surface of springs and from water wells gone wrong. It was used as a medicine—for man or beast!—and locally as a poor sort of lubricant. Today, Texas produces more oil than any other state in the Union—(approximately four hundred million barrels annually)—and ranks first in proven oil reserves.

NO INDUSTRY STANDS ALONE, and the vast oil industry of Texas is no exception to that rule. Its expansion has been fostered by the widening use of the automobile, which has created an ever widening market for the products of Texas oil fields and Texas refineries. On the other hand, the development of the automobile has been dependent on the development of motor fuels and lubricants, so that the two industries are interdependent, each on the other.

The Humble Company recognizes this fact and it stands behind Humble's policy of continuous improvement, a policy rigidly adhered to. As new automotive needs appear, Humble technicians discover new ways to satisfy them. Behind the Humble trademark stands an army of over 11,000 Texans seeking day by day to improve the motor fuels and the motor oils sold under the Humble sign . . . We ask you to try Humble motor fuels and Humble motor oils, to test them the only sure way—in your car. We know they'll please you, because we know—continuous improvement keeps Humble ahead.

Hollywood Gaga Again as Garbo Returns to Set

By ROBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 17.—The crowds about the big studio gates in Culver City are larger nowadays, and gather earlier. Inside the lot there is a new air of curious expectancy, and occasionally a twittery stenographer or office girl or waitress exclaims proudly and excitedly: "Guess what! I saw her today. Yes!" Studio guides escorting visitors pass by one stage and whisper, almost reverently: "Sorry, this one is closed."

All of which means that Greta Garbo is back at work. Stage 21 is sacred, for there "Camille" is in the throes. From within some bulletins on progress and events—notably, as fitting sequel to the fact that Garbo's Camille had met Robert Taylor's Armand, that recent one about Taylor's rescue of Garbo from peril on the set.

Must Not Stare

It is etiquette on the lot that one does not stare at Garbo. One glances covertly, even though the heart be in the throat, or looks the other way as she approaches. One must not embarrass Garbo, ever. And yet, when it comes time for her closed car to draw up before the door of Stage 21, there is usually an uncommon number of workers who find themselves with urgent business in the vicinity.

The other day a young woman in make-up, garbed in early American costume, stood near the stage entrance with the others. She was due on her own set at 9, but she had arrived at 7:30 to be on time for this. So she was standing there, waiting—but let Joan Crawford, Garbo fan, tell her own story:

"I like to see Garbo once in a while," she said, "and I hadn't had a glimpse of her in nearly a year. I know it sounds trite, but she is always an inspiration."

"I saw her car coming, and then I became nervous. I tried to hide my excitement, but I was afraid it would show in my face. I held a newspaper before my face—and when I took it down, she was inside. I had missed again!"

Very Moods Make News It is an odd commentary on Garbo that other stars—many of them more potent than she at the box-office—are as interested and curious about Garbo as visiting movie fans. One player will tell you that she knows Garbo's shyness to be real and painful and not an "act"; another will wonder if the famed Garbo elusiveness is not tinged with business sagacity, but all are interested, very politely, to be sure.

And the bulletins continue: Garbo is merrier these days; or Garbo has overcome shyness to the extent that she lets extras watch her rehearse; or Garbo has invited Basil Rathbone, her Karenin of "Anna Karenina," to visit on her set, et cetera.

To all of which the ready "So what?" is not sufficient answer—for Garbo remains the only movie actress whose very moods make news.

Railroads Withdraw Seed Rate Petition AUSTIN, Sept. 17.—Three Texas railroads which had requested reductions in rates on cottonseed and products withdrew their applications Wednesday.

The Texas and Pacific, Missouri-Kansas-Texas, and Louisiana, Arkansas and Texas withdrew petitions because experts reported the bulk of the movement had taken place. Reductions had been sought in the hope of regaining tonnage taken by trucks.

Here in Cisco a small company could, I think, be well developed and there is no doubt but what it would add much to the cultural atmosphere of the town. FREE PICK-UP AND DELIVERY SERVICE

Western railroads urge shippers to take advantage of this new Free door-to-door service on less than carload freight. Started early in 1936, it has already saved millions of dollars for shippers. It is a great convenience, for the railroads take full responsibility from door to door.

Other noteworthy improvements in railroad freight service include faster schedules.

Railroad passenger service is also being revolutionized. Western railroads pioneered in reducing fares to the lowest point in history, with substantial reductions on round trip tickets. Then they provided air-conditioned cars with temperature and humidity control. If you haven't yet traveled in a cool, clean, healthful air-conditioned car do so on your next trip—a revelation in luxury—but costs nothing extra.

Travel by train because it is safer, more comfortable, more economical, more dependable, faster. . . . Ask the railroad agent about travel or shipping to any part of the world.

Proud of our achievements, we appreciate the public's good will and increased patronage, and pledge continued progress
