Shanghai in Uproar At Shooting of Jap Marines

Through the Editor's Spectacles By GEORGE

The hardest two people to find today were Horace Condeley and Hal Dyer. On the hunt for Horace I must have passed the pair a half dozen times in the course of one block without catching a glimpse of either.

A hobby that is gaining a considerable prestige and following among people addicted to stargazing, in the astronomical sense of the term, is that of telescope making.

The Rotarian, magazine of Rotary, this month carries an interesting article on the subject. The making of a telescope calls for little more than ordinary skill, and the average amateur with time, patience and a little capital can construct a very satisfactory instrument.

"Even the smallest telescope, made with parts of junked automobiles and home-ground lenses, creates a private planetarium," says the article.

In the field of radio, no doubt equally as absorbing, amateurs have done as much for the advancement of this means of communication as professionals.

Lions Hear New Rules Explained by Shelley

Lobo Team Next Year Due to Be Strong With Most of Squadmen Back, Coach Says

Cisco Lions today heard Dexter Shelley, Cisco high school coach, say that Cisco teams in the near future have a much brighter outlook than at any time in the immediate past, as he began a talk upon football rules changes.

He immediately launched into a discussion of rules and their changes for this year's football and pointed out the signals used by officials to designate infractions for which penalties are assessed.

Madrid and Toledo Capture Very Near

TALAVERA, Spain, Sept. 23 (AP)—The capture of Madrid and Toledo was declared imminent today by insurgent leaders who claimed victories on both fronts.

Reports current in Madrid said that the government was debating surrendering.

The insurgents, however, were prepared to take the capital by storm.

If the insurgents, now marching on Navalcarnero, capture it, the government troops would be thrown back on their last defense near the Madrid suburbs.

PATH TO TOLEDO IS REPORTED CLEAR

TOLEDO, Sept. 23 (AP)—Spanish fascists last night captured Torrijos, 15 miles west and slightly north of this city and had an apparently clear path in their march to battle for release of comrades within the long besieged fortress Alcazar.

The insurgents were consolidating their forces for a renewed thrust at Toledo after the capture of Torrijos.

FDR Calls Leaders To Discuss Politics

HYDE PARK, N. Y., Sept. 23 (AP)—A week in advance of his first speech bearing a campaign label, President Roosevelt Tuesday summoned democratic strategists to a political conference at the summer White House.

Commanders of the Japanese naval landing party declared martial law, supplanting the international police.

Stevens Will Not Face Other Handley Charges

FORT WORTH, Sept. 23 (AP)—O. D. Stevens, acquitted last night of murder charges in the slaying of Harry Rutherford, one of the Handley triple murder victims, will be returned to the Alcazar island prison, not to be tried again for the other Handley killings.

Officials indicated today that the triple slaying occurred after the Texas and Pacific mail robbery for which Stevens was convicted. The jury brought in the verdict of not guilty at a court session presided over by Judge George L. Davenport of Eastland last night at 6:43.

Stevens' face gave no hint of his feelings as he was brought into the courtroom. Two years before in the same room he had a jury decree that he should die in the electric chair for the death of Rutherford. The case was reversed and remanded.

THE WORLD WITH A FENCE

A New Novel by Marian Sims

Chapter 43 SOLACE

So Cornelia knew. Did that mean, then, that everybody knew? That she and Blake had been ostriches with their heads in the sand? She winced, and tried to push back the thought with the physical activity of making coffee and toast.

She felt the weight of horror, knew that she could stay in this room all day and be mad by night. She threw on her clothes with desperate haste and fled, locking the door behind her.

But the horror came with her, through the locked door and into the ray coldness of the outside could. If they were to eat they must keep the shadow at bay as long as possible.

But after dinner Carol made the plunge herself, breaking through Cornelia's laughing account of an unruly customer.

"Cornie, why did you come here tonight?"

Cornelia inhaled her cigarette slowly. "You know, or you wouldn't ask that question."

"Yes. The shock was in realizing that you knew, too. And that if you knew, there must be a lot of others who did."

"No. That was what I came to tell you. I don't know how I cause—" she grieved—"I seem to hear thing whether they interest me or not."

"But—you weren't sure until this happened. How do you know that it won't open a lot of other people's eyes?"

Cornelia smiled. "You don't give me credit for being smarter than the mob, do you?"

"Oh, yes I do! But ferreting out this sort of thing hasn't got much to do with intelligence. Usually it's the other way around."

"True. But I've seen two or three people today, and I know none of them has guessed. The general verdict is: 'She never has been quite normal, anyway!'"

The mention of Irma shattered Carol's composure, so that she shivered and turned her face away.

"Cornie, I—I don't believe I can stand it..."

"Yes, you can," Cornelia said firmly. "You can stand it and eventually forget it."

"Forget that—you've killed somebody?"

"Oh, my God!" Cornelia said hotly. "I expected something better than that from you. You didn't kill her; it was her own rotten cowardice and spite that did it."

"No it wasn't. She wouldn't have done anything so desperate if she hadn't loved him terribly."

"Oh, no?" Cornelia said scornfully. "She'd have done it just as quickly if she'd hated him. She wasn't capable of love; you know that. Hate can make you just as desperate as love: hate and jealousy."

"Well, in either case we drove her to it."

Cornelia said more quietly: "Do you mind telling me what did happen? I can judge better if you do."

She told her, dully, of Blake's trip to Florida and of his filing the suit. But not of the ironic night of his return; nobody, she prayed, would ever know about that. When she had finished Cornelia nodded vigorously.

"If there's anything shameful or dishonest about all that, I can't see it. Good Lord, Carol, people get divorces every day! It doesn't cause a ripple."

"Not divorce, no. But—suicide—is another story. Don't you see," she cried out, "that it's not whether people guess it or not? That it's something that would be there—between us—if we lived a thousand years? He feels exactly as I do about it."

"How do you know he does?" Cornelia demanded bluntly. "You've got to see Blake as soon as he gets back. Maybe he can reason with you even if I can't."

Cornelia was probably right. You couldn't leave a thing like this suspended in midair—not if you hoped to keep your reason. She agreed listlessly.

"Yes, I guess I'll have to see him—once. But not here; it would be sure to be the one time he'd be seen and recognized, I—may get you to help me out."

"It's what I came for," Cornelia said sturdily. "And for goodness' sake do it right away. Don't let the thing eat your heart out first."

She stood up. "Get your hat. We're going and play bridge with the Gordons."

Carol spun around and her eyes were wet. "Cornie, I can't see anybody!"

"You've got to," Cornelia said flatly. "The sooner you start getting used to it the sooner you'll world. She boarded an uptown car, and felt its breath on her cheek. She almost expected the conductor to say "Two!" as she held out the money for her fare.

She bought a dress, wondering all the while if she could ever wear it, and lost the black shadow for a time in the crush of eager struggling women who hunted after-Christmas bargains.

She ordered lunch and made a pretense of eating it, then sought the sheltering darkness of a theatre, to sit staring blindly at shadows that moved and spoke and pretended to suffer beautifully in gowns by Adrian.

She made herself see the film through, then she boarded a car and got off at the market nearest the Sherwood. Cornelia, being invited to dinner, would expect to eat Lamb chops and artichokes, Gruyere cheese and lettuce, these things at least were real and permanent.

Cornelia came soon after six, straight from work, she said, and looking straight from Park avenue instead. She took off her hat and coat and went to the kitchen, where she began expertly to fashion a salad.

She talked lightly and steadily until the meal was done, and Carol followed her lead as best she guessed, except that I realized what would probably have happened to me in the same position." She smiled faintly. "I don't believe I could work with a man like Blake and not fall in love with him, and I didn't believe he could work with a girl like you and not do the same thing. I wasn't sure, of course, but when this happened I couldn't think of any other reason."

Carol started to speak, but Cornelia broke in quickly. "What I wanted to tell you was that nobody has suspected a thing; so far as I know, there hasn't been a breath that linked your name with his. And if there had been, I believe I would have heard it, because—"

A PRIMER OF THE WARNER SYSTEM

THE OLD T FORMATION

(Third in a series of 12 daily articles prepared by the coach of Stanford's Rose Bowl champions in collaboration with Russ Newland, Associated Press sports writer.)

The old T formation was popular in the early days of football. So were shin- and nose-guards, laced jackets and handle-bar mustaches.

In its time the T formation was all right. But in this day of reverses, fake reverses, laterals, multiple spinners and fancy shifts, the boys would be tramping on each other's toes, cracking heads and generally messing things up if they tried to run plays from such close quarters.

When the game started to open up the T formation passed out of the picture.

Out if the football wilderness, so to speak, in the early 1900's came a juggernaut to menace the gridiron peace and prosperity of the big three—Harvard, Yale and Princeton—and other old, established colleges and universities.

This upstart in the great American college sport was the Carlisle Indian school. The Carlisle Indians contributed one of the most thrilling and colorful chapters to the history of football. Remember Jim Thorpe, Exendine, Mt. Pleasant, Little Bear Guyan, Kelly, Gardner, Calac and others of that era?

They augmented fleetness of foot, courage and sheer power with the most amazing trickery of the times—footballs hidden in the backs of jerseys, halves of footballs sewed on jersey fronts and what not.

Not the least spectacular was the

Bruins Holding Secret Sessions For HSU Opener

WACO, Sept. 23. (Spl.)—Hoping to make an auspicious 1936 debut against the Harding-Simmons Cowboys Saturday afternoon, Coach Morley Jennings is sending his Baylor Bears through strenuous drills behind locked gates this week. The Hardin-Simmons tilt will be played at the new Municipal stadium in Waco, and advance ticket sales indicate that one of the largest crowds ever to see an early season match in Waco will be on hand to witness the fracas.

The Baylor coaches are not under-estimating the strength of the Abilene eleven. Coach Jim Crow, Baylor freshmen pilot, who scouted the Cowboys last week when they downed the Daniel Baker team 20-0, is loud in his praise of the invaders. "Even though they were playing under cover," Crow stated, "they showed plenty, and the Bears will have trouble in beating them Saturday."

Lloyd Russell, Bruin quarterback, who has been the spark plug of the team for the past two years, will not be in the best of shape for Saturday's contest. He reported for practice for the first time last Saturday, having been detained in Cleveland, Ohio, where he has been playing semi-pro baseball this summer. He will probably, however, see service in the opener.

Parks Is Threat

Mitchell Parks, squadman from Elkhart and passer de luxe, will alternate with the fleet Russell this fall. Parks is a triple-threat star, who has been showing splendid possibilities during the training season. Bob Masters, Bubba Gerand, and Carl Brazel, all lettermen, will round out the first string quartet.

Sam Boyd, end from Cleburne, and Walter Higgins, guard from Fort Worth, are the only sophomores slated to start against the Cowboys. Billy Patterson, another freshman graduate, will see service at a halfback post.

Ken Clark, senior wing, will likely start at the terminals along with Boyd. James Kimbriel and Clois Mansker, junior from Taylor, are expected to be the starters at the tackles slot. Shuford McDonald, Waco, and Hervey Blue, Quanah, will also be seen in action.

Frank Huessner, Waco, will play alongside Higgins at guard, and John D. Reynolds, another Wacoan, will open at center.

NEW FIELD HOUSE

BOULDER, Colo. (AP)—Colorado university's new $115,000 field house is expected to be ready for use by September 25. Dedication ceremonies will be held before the Utah-Colorado football game November 7. The structure will seat approximately 5,000 for basketball games and will be large enough for football drills in inclement weather.

Georgia Net Queen Shadow-Boxes to Tennis Championship of the State

By BILL BORING
ATLANTA, Sept. 23 (AP)—Whenever Gladys Vallebuona starts shadow-boxing and punching the bag her friends know she soon will be fighting for another net title.

Holder of the Georgia and Alabama women's singles tennis championships, the striking brunette conditions for a tournament in a manner similar to the method used by boxers in training.

"I find shadow-boxing increases my speed afoot, aids my wind and loosens me up generally," declares Gladys, 19, and a junior in college. "All these, you know, are of tremendous help on the court."

Tap Dances Too

Strengthening her wrists and arms, and sharpens her eye for timing tennis shots.

She clinched a fist and drew up her arm.

"Feel that muscle," Gladys said, proudly.

Something else she recommends as a phase of tennis training: tap dancing.

"I tap about an hour a day," she declares. "Makes you shifty, you know."

Gladys says before she started her gymnastics, dancing and other forms of training, boys called her "Lead Foot."

"But they don't now," she is quick to explain.

Walking four miles a day, bicycling, an hour or two of tennis a day—sometimes with an electric machine that fires chops, loafs and drives, as a partner—all these Gladys enumerates as features of her training.

She's Stamina-Conscious

Noting she was about to omit one, her mother interposed: "Don't forget the stairs. They helped you a lot."

Mrs. Vallebuona referred to the fact that Gladys often takes the stairway route to the top of a 12-story building—to strengthen her leg muscles.

Gladys believes stamina is one of the most valuable assets of a woman tennis player and, she reasons, her heavy training program provides it.

She says she started playing the game three years ago and that her father, who knows the fundamentals of tennis but is no star as a player, has coached her.

This year, besides winning the Alabama and Georgia titles, she entered two other meets—the Atlanta city tournament which she won, the Mid-Atlantic, where she lost in the finals to Eunice Evers of Miami and the Tennessee State. In the latter she teamed with

Game Tragedy For Punjab Youngsters

SHEIKPURA, Punjab, India, Sept. 23. (AP)—A mock trial staged by village children ended in tragedy here.

Two "prisoners" were chosen. One was charged with cattle-stealing, the other with killing a squirrel. Both were found guilty, and solemnly the youthful judge pronounced sentence—life imprisonment for the thief, death by hanging to the killer.

Amid laughter, the condemned "murderer" was taken to a tree. A rope was thrown over a branch, a noose fitted around his neck, and he was made to stand on a buffalo.

A sudden noise frightened the buffalo, causing it to bolt. The children stared for a moment, in bewildered curiosity, at the form dangling above them. Then they took to their heels.

Jack Lovelock Will Run Last Mile October 3

LONDON, Sept. 23. (AP)—Curly-headed Jack Lovelock, Britain's great miler, plans one more crack at his American rivals before hanging up his spikes for good.

He will return to the Princeton stadium, scene of his triumph in the 1935 "mile of the century" race against the cream of the world's runners, on October 3.

It will be the last race of his career, he said in an interview here, and his last shot at the world record for the mile established by Glenn Cunningham, in 4 minutes, 6 4-5 seconds, at Princeton, June 16, 1934.

Lovelock's old world mark, 4 minutes 7 3-5 seconds, was made at Princeton on July 15, 1933.

Now at the height of his form, soon after capturing the 1500-meter at the Olympic Games in Berlin, where he set a new world record of 3 minutes 47 4-5 seconds, in that event, Lovelock is ready to set a hot pace against Cunningham, San Romani, Don Lash, Phil Edwards and others who will toe the mark against him at Princeton.

After his appearance in the United States, Lovelock will retire from racing and devote all his time to studying medicine at St. Mary's hospital, London.

Thief Schedules Game for Emporia

EMPORIA, Kan., Sept. 23. (AP)—When a thief looted the College of Emporia locker room recently, he could not have known he was adding another game to the school's football schedule.

The loot was more than $300 in cash and valuables belonging to College of Emporia athletes, and the school was without sufficient funds to pay the losses in full. Consequently, a benefit game was scheduled with Bethel college, the proceeds to go into a fund to reimburse the athletes.

The lurking cold germ is waiting for your defenses to be lowered. Leading doctors tell us that fifty per cent of all disabling diseases start with a "common cold." America's Public Health Enemy Number One, the common cold germ, strikes with such viciousness that sixty per cent of the population has three or more "colds" each year. Think of this startling total of over two hundred million illnesses—many of which could be avoided with adequate heat and proper ventilation throughout the home.

Laughing Around the World With IRVIN S. COBB

Once Bitten, Twice Shy!

By IRVIN S. COBB

A GENTLEMAN who lives in the northern part of Georgia went to Texas for a visit. One morning on the main street of a small town in the Panhandle, he met an aged negro whom he had known years before on a Georgia plantation owned by his father. After greetings, the visitor made inquiries touching on the present circumstances of the old man. "You're looking mighty prosperous, Uncle Henry," he said. "Still farming, I suppose? As I remember, you used to raise more cotton on your ten acres than any hand on the place."

"Naw, suh," said Uncle Henry. "I give up farmin' right soon after I moved out yere."

"What are you doing then?" "I use a minister of de Gospel. I tuk to followin' after preachin' fur a livin' an' been at it ever sence. I got a church out yere 'bout six miles from dis town an' I preach reglar twict ever Sunday, not countin' prayer-meetin's and revivals an' fune'ls an' weddin's."

Knowing that Uncle neither could read nor write, the Georgian was slyly moved to question him further. "You deliver regular sermons then?" he asked. "Yas indeed, suh."

"Well, do you take notes?" "Naw, suh, not no mo'! I user tek notes 'fore I learnt better, but now I meks dem niggers pay me cash."

removed from radio reception. The amateur works for the love of the game. He is more daring in defiance of tradition, more explorative by instinct and more actuated by interest.

In the field of astronomy, amateurs have also done important things and made important discoveries. The amateur in any field is the real "liver" in the field. We all love or work, but that is nearly always dominated by necessity, which somehow counteracts the beneficial and encouraging effects of pure interest. But one's hobby is where one really enjoys living.

Tips on CONTRACT

Take Your Tricks

It is well at times to beware the Greeks bearing gifts. If a declarer in a close contract lets the defense have a trick which he could have won, he probably has a purpose. In illustration:

South engaged to make four hearts in the following auction: South West North East 1H 1S 2D P 2H P 3H P 4H P P P

West led the spade queen. The declarer, Henry Enoch of Bridge House, New York, permitted the queen to win the trick. West became suspicious of something—he had no clear idea of what—and shifted to a low diamond.

Enoch then illustrated what a good player can do in the way of profiting by a defense error. He maneuvered so that he lost only one spade and two heart tricks. Perfect defensive would have caused him to lose two spades and two hearts.

Winning the diamond with the ace in the North hand and discarding a spade South, he led a low diamond and trumped it

South. The ace of hearts was laid down, followed by a low heart which went to West's queen. West returned the queen of diamonds. It was trumped South.

A club led to the king enabled Enoch to trump another diamond, setting up the fifth diamond in the North hand. The South hand then out of trumps.

The ace, queen and pack of were laid. On the last club last spade was discarded North spade from the South hand trumped with the last heart in North hand, the jack.

By that time the declarer had his ten tricks. The jack of diamonds, led from North, was East with the king of hearts.

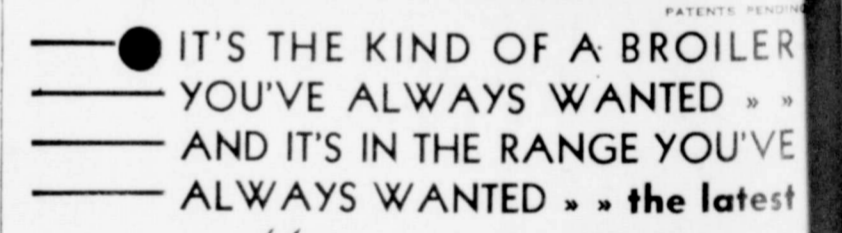

Had West played the ace spades when South permitted queen to win the first trick, third spade could have trumped East by an overruling any heart that could have played from North. Then not could have prevented the declarer from making another trick.

DISCUSS U. S. IMPORTS

MANILA, P. I. (AP)—The Philippine commonwealth cabinet, headed by President Manuel L. Quezon, discussed recently the question of admitting American ports to the islands free from taxes. The plan would be designed to encourage greater consumption of American goods and at same time promote better business relations between United States and the commonwealth.
