BAIRD BANDIT TAKEN AFTER BATTLE

Loboes to Meet Breck Tonight

BANK EMPLOYE THROWS GUN AT EX-CONVICT AS WEAPON IS EMPTIED DURING HOLDUP

Gunman Surrenders to Sheriff and Rancher After Chase on Moran Road; Just Out Of Texas Prison; No Cash Taken From Bank

By FRANK LANGSTON

BAIRD, Sept. 25.—A slight, mild-mannered bank employe today battled a desperate ex-convict who attempted to hold up the First National Bank of Baird, emptied his gun at the intruder, and then hurled the weapon at him as the bandit tried to escape through the back door of the bank.

Less than an hour later H. L. Meyers surrendered to Sheriff R. L. Edwards and W. L. Henry, ranchman, on the Moran road after the latter had pursued him, firing a bullet from a high powered rifle through the rear fender of the bandit's car, and had trapped him at a mudhole.

Meyers blamed a Baird convict for telling him that the Baird bank would be easy to rob.

At the bank C. V. Jones, 34, assistant cashier, told how he had come to work this morning, entering the bank and picking up a newspaper under the door, to hear a sudden command behind him: "Put up your hands. This is a holdup."

ROBBER LAUDS JONES' NERVE

Robbery Hero Not Used to Gunplay

A man who didn't know how to use a pistol but who was the hero in thwarting a bank robbery at Baird today was praised by the man he battled as "the bravest man I ever saw."

C. V. Jones, assistant cashier of the First National bank at Baird, told The Daily Press this morning that "I never fired a pistol but once before in my life. If I had I might have hit the robber."

He told it in a simple, matter of fact way—not boasting, not making excuses for his marksmanship. He did not seem to think it extraordinary that his shots were fired "blind" from around a corner and with his left hand.

The man who had attempted to hold up Jones at the bank a few moments before had told a representative of The Daily Press that "that man who did the shooting has more nerve than anybody else I ever saw."

H. L. Meyers, ex-convict and would-be bank robber, said that he did not empty his pistol at Jones.

"Then why didn't you turn around and kill him when he threw his gun at you?" he was asked. "I wasn't interested in killing anybody. I wanted to get away from that hot lead," the confessed bandit replied.

Townsend May Talk Over Mexican Radio

CHICAGO, Sept. 25. (AP)—Dr. Francis E. Townsend charged today that he had been "consistently refused an opportunity to discuss politics on the radio in Chicago."

He said that as a result he is cancelling all his time over the local station and investigating possibilities of broadcasting from Mexico.

Colorado Danger Is Believed to Be Past

WHARTON, Sept. 25. (AP)—Danger from further Colorado river flood waters apparently had passed today. The river stood at 35.10 feet, the lowest mark here in three days.

Rebels Near Toledo As World War Is Forecast

(By Associated Press) The insurgent army, marching to aid the besieged Alcazar and Toledo, was reported almost without view of the city today, despite the government claims it had recaptured Torrijos, on the Maqueda-Toledo highway. In Geneva, meanwhile, Julio Alvarez Delvayo, Spanish foreign minister, told the League of Nations assembly that "Spain is already the battlefield of a World War."

He assailed European non-intervention as "Direct and positive intervention in behalf of the insurgents," and charged that war had been fomented and aided from the "outside."

This was construed by other delegates as an attack on Italy, Germany, and Portugal.

8 Eastland Co. Cases Docketed In U. S. Court

Eight Eastland county cases are docketed for the October term of the U. S. district court for the northern district of Texas, Abilene division, at Abilene. The term opens October 5 and contains 19 criminal cases. Judge T. Whitfield Davidson will preside. Those from Eastland county are:

Charles A. Johnson, Jack Lee Freeman, Eastland county, violation of liquor taxing act, five counts, possession of unregistered equipment and untaxed liquor.

Howard Hicks, Eastland county, violation of liquor taxing act.

R. R. Maxwell, Joe Custer, Eastland county, possession of untaxed liquor.

John Freeman, Charlie A. Johnson, Eastland county, possession of unregistered equipment and untaxed liquor.

Purly W. Squyres, Eastland county, violation of liquor taxing act.

FDR May Campaign Along West Coast

HYDE PARK, Sept. 25. (AP)—President Roosevelt said today that his first campaign swing into the west probably would terminate at Denver, but that he might go to the west coast.

Everyone Denied It, So Buddy and Mary May Wed

Hollywood is speculating on whether Buddy Rogers and Mary Pickford are to be married soon. Friends say the wedding will be in October. All that is after the frequent denials since Mary was granted a divorce from Douglas Fairbanks last January. It would be an All-American marriage, too, for Miss Pickford is known as "America's Sweetheart," and Buddy as "America's Boy Friend."

TEAM IN FINE SHAPE; SCHOOL HOLDS RALLY

'Planning on Winning' Says Grid Mentor at Pep Rally

"The team is in fine shape," said Coach Dexter Shelley in his talk during the pep rally given this morning at the high school. "We're planning on winning tonight."

More pep than has been shown this year was displayed during the rally by the student body. Their yells were snappy and loud.

Talks were made by G. M. Grasty, Superintendent R. N. Cluck, Principal O. L. Stamey, Leon Maner, and the two coaches.

The band played several numbers at the rally including the school Victory March.

TEAM TAKES FINAL WORKOUT FRIDAY

The Lobo football team worked out briefly under the lights of Chesley field last night in preparation for their conference clash with the Breckenridge Buckaroos at Breckenridge at 8 p. m. The session followed a long afternoon drill in which the team tapered off for the game with their traditional Oil Belt rivals, a game in which they are decidedly the underdogs. It will be the first night contest on the newly lighted Buckaroo stadium, and Breckenridge is making it the occasion for a great homecoming celebration. The Loboes will leave for Breckenridge at 3 p. m.

A spirited pep rally this morning.

Four Books Of Biography Given To Library Here

Gift of four volumes of biography to the Cisco public library by Mrs. Hugh Taylor of Elizabethton, Tenn., was announced today by Mrs. William Reagan of the Twentieth Century club, sponsor of the library. Mrs. Taylor is the daughter of the late Dr. and Mrs. C. S. Vance of Cisco, and the gift was made as a memorial to her parents and her husband.

She was recently the guest of Mrs. Reagan and other friends here.

The volumes, all the work of Marcus James, are: Andrew Jackson, The Courageous Heart, Sam Houston and Six Feet, Six.

They are said to be unusually excellent biographical work, and Mrs. Reagan invited those interested in such literature to avail themselves of the opportunity of reading them at once.

Cisco Band Draws Praise For Its Part on Frontier Program

CHIANG WILL TAKE CHARGE

Hurries to Capital To Assume Control

SHANGHAI, Sept. 25. (AP)—Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek China's dictator, was believed tonight to be returning to the capital from southern China to take the troublesome Shanghai incident into his own hands.

Meanwhile Japanese marines seized police control of the Chinese Chapel district here. Japanese officials asserted that they would "proceed according to events and necessities."

Farmer Slain Over Settlement of Crop

NEWTON, Tex., Sept. 25. (AP)—Three shotgun charges took the life of Craft Griggs, farmer-cattlemaster of the Springtown community. A neighbor, who surrendered to the sheriff, said an argument arose over the settlement of a crop. The sheriff said the alleged slayer covered the body with a sheet and watched beside it until the officers arrested him.

Mrs. W. H. Hayes visited friends in Gorman Thursday.

Ciscoans Honored At Centennial; Large Crowd Is Present

Cisco's Lobo band yesterday was praised as the best which has yet appeared on any Frontier Centennial program at Fort Worth.

The praise came from both the Centennial officials and from those at the studios of Station WBAP where the band played a radio program.

The Lobo band played a concert on the Centennial grounds during the evening, after staging a parade as a part of the Cisco day program.

Misses Helen Crawford, Cisco sponsor, and Mary Elizabeth Clifft, Cisco hostess, were presented with Miss Dale Townsend, Moran sponsor, by Paul Whiteman at the Casa Manana revue. Cisco and Moran shared honors for the special day's program.

A large delegation of Ciscoans, headed by J. E. Spencer, secretary of the chamber of commerce, attended the Frontier Centennial yesterday. Secretary Spencer estimated the Cisco attendance at 150, including the band.

Green's Widow Claims Fraud In Will Agreement

PORT HENRY, N. Y., Sept. 25. (AP)—Mrs. Mabel Harlow Green charged today that her prenuptial agreement to renounce all claims to the $80,000,000 estate of her late husband, Col. E. H. Green, was obtained fraudulently.

The charge was made through her attorney in trying to establish that she had a legitimate right to prevent probate of a will excluding her from the inheritance.

Rio Grande Rising Six Inches an Hour

PRESIDIO, Sept. 25. (AP)—Waters lapped over the international bridge today as the Mexican Rio Conchos and Cibolo creek combined to send the Rio Grande up at the rate of six inches per hour. Puerto Rico was isolated by a levee break.

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

One of those puzzling little riddles of accident which are both embarrassing and humorous occurred the other evening when R. L. Ponsler borrowed F. D. Wright's key to go to Wright's office to await a conference with Wright, who is attorney for the Hickok interests here. When Wright arrived at the Cisco Banking company building after dinner, he found Ponsler and Horace Condeley sitting on the curb.

"We couldn't get in," said Ponsler.

Wright was surprised. He wanted to know why. Ponsler told him the key would not unlock the door. "Why, it always has. You didn't use the right key," said Wright. "I'm sure I gave you the right one, because I never carry over three or four keys and there was no chance for it to get off the ring." Ponsler showed him the key. It was a Yale, but as smooth as a skeleton.

"This isn't my key. I never saw it before in my life," declared Wright. "I've used my key to unlock this door for years." Ponsler looked at him with some embarrassment. "It's the key you gave me," he said.

"I'm sure it isn't," denied Wright. "Come on, quit kidding. You put that key on the ring just to fool me."

Ponsler, more embarrassed and grinning in a half-quizzical sort of way, insisted positively he didn't. He continued to insist all evening, after Wright had secured another key and opened the door.

"You think I changed that key don't you?" he asked Wright when they separated that night. "I sure do," said Wright. "I need my key. Come on, don't carry the joke too far."

Ponsler maintained that he was not joking, that Wright had given him that very key, and that he didn't know how the change had occurred.

The next morning, after a night of puzzling over the mysterious transformation of the key, Ponsler met Wright again.

"You still think I'm joking, don't you?"

"I'm sure of it," said Wright.

During the day, Wright met Arthur Cunningham, his neighbor and showed him the key. Arthur looked at it, ran his finger along the smooth edge and then burst out laughing.

"Do you know what happened?" he asked Wright.

"I certainly don't," said Wright.

"Why the lugs were worn so they dropped off and left the key smooth," Arthur explained.

Thus ended—a simple thing

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

The law of truth was in his mouth, and iniquity was not found in his lips. . . He walked in peace and equity, and did turn many away from iniquity.—Mal. ii, 6.

Full souls are double mirrors, making still an endless vista of fair things before. Repented things behind.—GEORGE ELIOT.

Happy is the man who has that in his soul which acts upon the dejected, as April air upon violet roots.—H. W. Beecher.

The noblest mind the best contentment has.—Spenser.

Anti-Noise Campaign

The influence of noise on human comfort in the big cities has prompted the most general anti-noise campaign in history. Some nations have taken up the cudgels against the use of automobile horns and have ordered their elimination or disconnection. In the larger American cities various expedients for reducing the agony of traffic din are being tried out. Some of these call for disconnecting the horns. The constant river of uproar that channels down the crowded canyons of city streets is said by some psychologists to have a very serious effect upon the human nervous system and, through it, upon the physical state of well-being. Certainly this din is uncomfortable.

The automobile horn has a very good reason for being, but that reason can be transformed into a nuisance of the first order when the justification is overreached. Common-sense in driving will eliminate much of the reason for using a horn; and the complaint of communities through which trains pass that the locomotive whistle is employed with too much frequency and enthusiasm can be translated into a complaint against the unnecessary blowing of this horn. Modern living has become, in many places and ways, a succession of jitters and disturbances which so interrupt the normal course of quiet living and thinking that a great waste of economic and cultural energy is caused.

It is high time to lead a crusade against this sort of thing.

OTHER OPINIONS

Neither Communism Nor Fascism

THIS newspaper is still unconvinced that the American choice is between communism and fascism. It does not believe that the presidential campaign in the United States will be decided by the voters' antipathies for one or another European dictatorship. It is confident that American citizens with few exceptions register at the polls not their fears, their resentments or their hatreds so much as their loyalties to constitutional methods, their hopes for larger opportunities, and their thoughtful views as to what kind of government will give them the greatest assurance of those things.

The Monitor believes that one of the stanchest bulwarks of self-government is this insistence on voting for something instead of against somebody. We have observed that the present dictatorships have been set up by leaders whose appeal was almost wholly to the people's fears or their hatreds. We shall oppose, therefore, every effort of American political partisans to write the name of a bogey on the November ballot. We do not believe that either Moscow or Hearst deserves a place—even a negative place—there.

Some time ago the Monitor expressed its conviction that Mr. Hearst was not an issue in the campaign. We pointed out that the republican candidate could not in fairness be blamed because the publisher was one of his earliest and most ardent supporters. Mr. Landon quickly showed his opposition to pet Hearst measures like the teachers' oath and hidden taxes. In the same way we believe the American people will not hold Mr. Roosevelt responsible for any support that may be given him by small radical groups. They will respect his statement that he "does not want and does not welcome" the support of individuals or groups taking orders from alien sources.

Moreover, they will require more proof than has yet been offered by the Hearst press that Moscow is indeed backing the democratic ticket. Some newspaper men remember that ten years ago that press uncovered some "secret documents" disclosing a Moscow-Mexico plot against the United States, documents which were quickly shown to be forgeries. Some of the present material may have a better basis, but reasonable men will question whether the statement of the communist candidate for president expressing the belief that workers who support Mr. Roosevelt need not be barred from co-operation with the communists is any reason to blame the president.—Christian Science Monitor.

POLITICS at Random

By BYRON PRICE
Chief of Bureau, The Associated Press, Washington.

The definite submergence of what once appeared the paramount issue of the political campaign could not be more positively demonstrated than by what happened—or failed to happen—on "Constitution day," 1936.

It is not long since that political prophets were agreeing almost unanimously that this would be a year made forever memorable by a terrific political struggle over the preservation of constitutionalism.

Neither of the principal nominees for President took any notice of it. A scattering of lesser political orators mentioned it, but mostly their remarks were tucked away on the inside pages of the newspapers. In the country's largest city the chief address was delivered by the president-general of the national society of the Sons of the American Revolution.

Public Not Interested
This decade of an early favorite among the issues is doubtless due in large part to the same affirmed their allegiance to "constitutional government" (without detailed definition), but neither has made any effort to start the fire which was to have swept the nation.

So far as both candidates are concerned, the situation seems fairly lucid: Mr. Roosevelt is content, either from choice or necessity, to let the matter drift, hoping by a supreme court reversal or otherwise to establish his policies without an amendment.

Mr. Landon is not inclined to stake his campaign on anything as involved as a constitutional argument. He prefers, in the words of one of his confidants, to "talk bread and butter issues."

Both Content to Drop
Since then, not so much has been heard about the constitution. Both nominees have, of course, re-

Human and Other Nature

By W. F. BRUCE

From the midst of a clump of oak came a whirl of wings as if a dove had taken sudden flight and were getting away. Two or three notes were dropped, quivering like, as if from the agitation of its quick departure. It guided its way among the trees so skilfully as to conceal the direction it had taken, until I caught a glimpse as it went over a hill at a distance. But there was a peculiarity about its notes that had awakened my interest. They brought memories—late summer, in a hay field dotted with cocks of millet, sharp stubs of stalks and nettles discovered at every bare-foot step, dust and chaff down one's perspiring back, ricks of wheat in one nearby field awaiting the threshers, yellowing Indian corn and another ready to cut into fodder, and quite likely a stiff southerly breeze blowing over all this Kansas landscape. But as the bird appeared to land amid the bushes on the far hill I had an urge to follow and see if it was a plover and not a dove. Nearer than I expected I came upon its landing but not to see it until it was off again in full view, a plover in its quivering note and its manner of flight. The bird took off at an angle that made it a pretty shot for a sportsman with a gun, or a pretty picture for a nature-lover with a kodak. But so far as the bird had a point of view it was just a wild creature, perhaps in migration, stopping for a little rest in our picturesque section, or feeding for a little while on our grasshoppers and crickets before continuing to the far south for winter.

Statistics compiled by H. D. Booth, state highway department traffic supervisor, show male drivers in Arkansas were involved in more than eight times as many traffic fatalities as women during the first six months of 1936.

He has been forced to devote so much time to explaining the peculiar expressions and customs of that tiny Corvay county community, that he has about concluded that it would prove a great saving if he should compile an explanatory pamphlet and distribute it so as to acquaint his future audiences with these terms and customs for better understanding of his statements.

Motor Crash Bares Death Plot In Cisco Daily Press Newest Serial

Hugh Clevely, whose new story, "The Wrong Murderer," begins Sunday in The Daily Press uses an automobile smashup as a means of putting Terence Mahoney on the trail of a first-rate mystery. The hero of Clevely's lively tale, a bored hero as the story opens—but not bored for long.

Terence has the company of his old friend, Billy Ross and has been wondering what could have brought about such a change. A terrific motor crash in which Billy is injured furnishes the first clue to the mystery. Mahoney starts out tracking the criminals "responsible"—and finds himself suspected of a brutal murder. His subsequent adventures make lively reading.

Clevely has been writing mystery stories since 1929, and at 38 looks back to a career which easily could have furnished material for a story. Born in England of an English mother and an American father, he was 17 at the beginning of 1915 and joined the crack Grenadier guards. Wounded, he was sent home in 1917 and then commissioned as a pilot in the Royal Flying Corps.

He survived two crashes, leaving the flying force at the end of the war without further injury. Came then a job in a bank, a bit of engineering and two years' service with the police in Egypt.

"I had half a dozen jobs after that," Clevely says. "Can't remember them all."

Humble to Broadcast Rice-Louisiana Game

The first Southwest conference football game of the radio season will be brought to listeners Saturday night by the Humble Oil & Refining company. The occasion will be the renewal of the annual contest between Rice Institute and Louisiana State university, which will be broadcast direct from the playing field at Baton Rouge.

Due to prior commercial commitments by most Texas stations of the Humble Network, KTRH, Houston, will be the only Texas station to carry the entire game. At nine o'clock, however, stations KTSA, San Antonio, and KRID, Dallas, will be tied into the group.

The game is scheduled to begin at 8:15 p. m., and the broadcast will take the air 15 minutes earlier at 8 p. m.

Mysticism Leads To Slain Man's Grave

RIO GRANDE CITY, Sept. 25. (P)—Isadoro Garcia told Sheriff G. A. Guerra mysticism enabled him to lead officers Sunday to the grave of Cristobal Perez, who disappeared July 15.

Garcia said he could name the dead man's slayer if given 30 days of concentration.

Justice Saens examined the mangled head of the corpse and said Perez had been murdered.

Sheriff Guerra said Garcia was a student of hypnotism and spiritualism.

Judgment Awarded In Highway Death

DALLAS, Sept. 25 (P)—W. B. Stokes, whose wife, Mrs. Hazel Stokes, sister of Governor Allred, was killed in a highway accident near Mineola last March 21, was awarded $4,450 under an agreed judgment entered in Judge Royall R. Watkins' court here Wednesday.

Mrs. Stokes was injured fatally when the automobile in which she was riding with her husband was in collision with a truck driven by J. R. Johnson and W. E. and L. P. Ellis, owners of the truck.

The judgment also awarded $25 each to Rene Allred, Sr., and Mrs. Mary M. Allred.

The judgment explained that all parties concerned agreed to the settlement.

THE WORLD WITH A FENCE

A New Novel by Marian Sims

Chapter 45
"YES," SHE SAID

Blake's control forsook him again. He gripped her shoulders and made her look at him.

"Carol . . . I never thought you'd be a coward."

She broke down then and cried, and he forgot his scruples and pulled her to him and held her as tight as he dared.

She drew away at last and looked at him. "The reason I can't, Blake—not now—is because the thing was so perfect. I didn't know people could feel that way. If I hadn't loved you as much as I did, this wouldn't seem so hopeless. We wouldn't have had so much to lose."

"Carol, you love me, don't you?"

"Yes, I always will."

"Then listen. I'm not going to crowd you against your will; I'm going to be here, day in and day out, waiting and hoping for you to stretch out your hand. We couldn't marry, or even be together, for a while, but knowing you were ready and willing would make life another thing. If I could feel that you were near me, and that you loved me and were going to belong to me I could even be happy waiting." He took her hands and held them tight. "Will you make me a promise?"

"If I can."

"You can. Promise me that the day you feel differently you'll tell me so. Will you promise that?"

"Yes. . . ."

He leaned over and kissed her hands, one at a time, and then looked long and straight into her eyes.

"My own darling . . ."

He got up quickly. He would have prolonged the talk if he had dared, but there were limits to his self-control. He left her without another word.

She sat motionless, with his words throbbing in her ears. Finally Cornelia came in, and smashed the moment deliberately with a heavy hand.

"I hope you told him everything would be all right," she said bluntly.

"No, I couldn't do it. . . ."

Cornelia made a quick incredulous sound, and stood and stared at her.

"You damned sentimental fool," she said brutally. "It would serve you right if you lost him."

January. Happy New Year, Miss Torrance! The same to you, Mrs. Martin. . . . We're having a brawl Tuesday afternoon, Carol; I hope you can come. Happy New Year, Carol. Thanks, Freddie, the same to you. . . . But were New Years ever happy? This time last year, for example, Mike and Annabel got married, Miss Torrance! And next year and the year after what?

February. Won't you be my Valentine? Tea roses and delphinium, with no card at all. She buried her face in their fragrance and cried, knowing what was on the card he had not written.

In February, Porter Murray asked her to marry him, and astonishment made her momentarily alive. "Porter, my dear, why on earth. . . I'm not your type at all." And Porter, with the magnificent egotism of the wife-hunting male: "Good Lord, you don't think I'd ask my type to spend the rest of my life with me, do you? That's only why I want you; you're not like anybody I know."

She refused him as gently as she could. "I'm sorry; I guess I'm destined for spinsterhood. One of these tailored, middle aged women who sit by themselves in tear-rooms, eating spinach and poached eggs and baked potatoes. . . ."

He scoffed. "Don't make me laugh. If you don't object I'll keep on sticking around and see if I can't change your mind."

She did her work—after a fashion. The spontaneity and informality of her copy had become such a habit that no one—except perhaps Blake—would notice that the heart was missing. There was even a respite from unhappiness in work; a certain satisfaction in discovering that your brain could function in a ruined city.

But there were few conferences with Blake regarding the work. She found assignments and suggestions on her desk when she arrived in the morning, and she left the copy on his desk when he was out for lunch. When he came in to the room to consult a member of the force she never dared to raise her eyes.

Apparently no one noticed it; anything Blake did was excusable and understandable in these days. Laura confided to her that he certainly was taking it hard, and that he ought to get away for a couple of weeks. Mrs. Martin had remarked in distress that he was apt to catch anything in his run-down condition. Carol murmured suitable words of concern and felt an intolerable ache in her heart.

March. Winter turned and plodded back northward, and spring was once more a whisper from afar, sensed rather than heard. She was the last to leave one Saturday, and she went to the window and stood looking at buildings tinted with a thin gold wash of sunlight.

The window was open and the air that brushed her face seemed to come from another place and another season. Strange that a breeze through an office window could be laden with the odor of daffodils in the rain. . . .

She turned away from the window and went to get her hat and coat. Blake's door was open, and she saw him sitting motionless, staring at his desk. Without knowing what she did, she turned and walked into his office.

He got awkwardly to his feet, like a puppet, and stood and looked at her. She heard herself saying harshly:

"It's late. Why haven't you been to lunch?"

The words astonished them both, and he smiled slightly.

"I was waiting for you to leave. I—haven't left here before you half a dozen times since—in over two months."

She knew that it was no use. No matter what happened she could never get away from him; he was the other half of her self. She closed the door and stood with one hand behind her, clinging to the knob.

"I don't know why you're this way," she said, "because I'm not worth it. I'm afraid. Maybe I'll always be afraid. But I'm more afraid of living without you than I am of anything that could happen with you. Do you want me—even that way?"

He said: "I want you—any way. I lied when I told you I didn't."

He said, almost angrily: "Come here!"

She came, astonished into obedience. He put his hands on her shoulders and gripped her so tightly that she winced.

"But you've got to help," he said bluntly. "I won't have you be a coward. You've got to turn your back on what happened and hold your head up. Will you?"

With his hands on her shoulders and his face close to hers it seemed easier. Alone in her apartment the dread would come back, but then—when the time came—she wouldn't be alone. She would have to remember that. And if you could not recapture ecstasy, you could at least hope that the gods had had their revenge; that henceforth they might leave you in peace.

"Yes," she said.

Arm Is Broken When Car Strikes Trailer

EASTLAND, Sept. 25.—En route from Monahans to the centennial at Dallas, Mrs. Bob Ball sustained a broken arm injury when her automobile hit a trailer on the highway in Eastland.

It was reported the automobile driven by Mrs. Ball, formerly of Eastland, struck the trailer. She continued her trip to Dallas, where she was scheduled to undergo treatment for her arm, which was reported broken in four places.

In North Carolina the office of sheriff was the first to be filled by popular vote.

Frontier Circus" New Feature For Young Co. Fair

SAHAM, Sept. 25.—Featuring entertainment program of the county fair's 14th annual Frontier Circus, a new type of outdoor presentation, G. W. Hart, association president...

hibited by members of the boys' agricultural clubs of Young county. In addition, approximately 100 fed lambs and about the same number of pigs will be shown by the farm boys.

Frank Rush, Jr., owner of Craterville Park, well-known and successful producer of rodeos and other Western attractions, will produce and direct "The Frontier Circus" to be given in front of the fair park grandstand at matinee and evening performances, the last three days—October 15, 16 and 17—of the fair.

The club boys division and the general livestock department, which will be larger than at any time in the past, will be housed in four new livestock exhibit barns, now being erected on the fair park. These new buildings will give the exposition here undisputed claim to being the largest county fair in the southwest.

"The Frontier Circus" will not be a rodeo, but will offer twelve acts of high quality Western vaudeville. Included among the performers will be Raymond Ramsey of Tulsa, Okla., and his famous trained horse "White Cloud" presenting a pantomime, "Pals of the Prairie." A series of sensational Roman hurdle jumps will be given at each show by the Ramsey's team of horses, "Flying Clouds." Charlie Schultz, Ponca City, Okla., a headliner with the old Miller Bros. 101 ranch show, will work his cowboy clown act with his trained donkeys and pet coon. A "bucking" automobile act, trick and fancy roping and riding, a square dance on horse-back, and other events will be included on each program.

The fair will be officially opened at 10 o'clock on the morning of October 13, with a mammoth parade, in which a number of bands and other uniformed groups will take part.

Close Figuring Got 3-Day Run of Ziegfeld Film

K. N. Greer and his staff had to do some close figuring to arrange a three-day schedule for "The Great Ziegfeld opening at the Palace next Sunday, Sept. 27, for a three days run. The film runs exactly three hours now, having been trimmed only to the extent of eliminating an eight minute overture. So clip this schedule if you want to see the most magnificent of all musical film biographies intact, as you should see it. Doors of the theatre will open at 12:30, shorts will start at 1 p. m., feature starting times thereafter are 1:30-5 and last feature starts at 8:30, short reels will be run between 1 and 1:30, and 4:30 to 5 and between 8 and 8:30. Curtain falls on the last show close to midnight.

There is no greater entertainment than "The Great Ziegfeld." It is three hours of entertainment that runs the gamut from carnival sideshow to a musical production more lavish and beautiful than even Ziegfeld ever dreamed of. It has laughter and tears and failure and triumphs, all real, all human. It takes the master showman through his ups and downs, from the time of the Chicago Columbian exposition, when he pitted Sandow, the Strong Man, against Billings, "Little Egypt," to that sad hour when the curtain fell on Florenz Ziegfeld.

Nat Pendleton's musical wiggling as Sandow, the Strong Man... Ziggy's smart ruse to snatch

Anna Held (Luise Rainer) out from under the nose of his friend and rival Billings (Frank Morgan). Fannie Brice's sad look as Ziegfeld snatches off the finery and puts her in rags to sing a ballad... Ray Bolger's rubber-legged dancing... These and a dozen other little episodes are gems in themselves. But the really great scenes in "The Great Ziegfeld" are Luise Rainer's telephone call and the "Grand Staircase" number... Calling to wish Ziegfeld happiness after his marriage to Billie Burke, Luise Rainer chokes back the tears with such emotional genius that you give up yourself and grab for a handkerchief.

For that scene alone, if nothing else, the Viennese actress is remembered long after William Powell, Mryna Ley, and everyone else in "The Great Ziegfeld."

WINGBACKS
A PRIMER OF THE WARNER SYSTEM
by TINY THORNHILL

SINGLE WINGBACK, QUARTERBACK ROVES FROM TACKLE TO TACKLE

(Fifth in a series of 12 daily articles prepared by the coach of Stanford's Rose Bowl champions in collaboration with Russ Newland, Associated Press sports writer.)

From the Carlisle Indians' tandem of the early 1900's to the present day single wingback football formation is a long jump but the two are related in a direct line of descent.

Glenn Scroby Warner probably visualized the far-reaching effects when he broke away from the old T formation with three of the backs standing shoulder-to-shoulder, but see what we have today. Probably more coaches use the wingback lineup or variations of it than any other so-called system. The original Carlisle Indian tandem formed a backfield line, almost at a 45 degree angle from the front line. From that has evolved the current single and double wingback formations with either unbalanced or balanced line. The single wingback with unbalanced line, such as Stanford uses, puts three men in position to receive the ball from center. The quarterback roves from tackle on either a left or right strong side. One of the advantages of this formation is it minimizes the time in which the defense can get set.

(Tomorrow: Evolution of the double wingback.)

Bankers Urge Less Government Spending

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 25. (AP)—The American Bankers' association Thursday advocated less spending by federal, state and local governmental agencies.
In resolutions adopted at the closing session of their 62nd annual convention the bankers said the nation's fundamental credit remained sound, conceded the necessity of great emergency expenditures, but added that budget balancing was the prime consideration of a sound fiscal policy.

Job Insurance Is Asked for Session

AUSTIN, Sept. 25. (AP)—A committee which studied the subject today recommended to Governor Allred that unemployment insurance be considered by the special legislature session convening Monday. The governor said that it would be announced probably tomorrow whether he would submit the subject along with the old age assistance revenue raising plan.

ing stirred up more Lobo spirit for the clash. A certain grim determination has been noted in practice sessions of the squad and about the high school, as if the players and students alike were determined to upset predictions on the outcome of the contest.

Well Represented

Though the team appears to have lost much of the support of Cisco fans, the student body of the high school will be well represented at the game. All this week the students have gathered in groups between classes and given yells. Each day at the noon hour the yell leaders have assembled them in front of the high school building and lead them in yells and songs.

The Loboes will be seeking their first win away from home since 1932.

After a week of hard drilling and long workouts the Loboes will meet a larger and more experienced buckaroo team with the squad in good condition. None of the players will be physically unable to play. Co-captain Royce Rainbolt was the only player injured in the Electra game and he will be ready for the Buckaroos. Several of the players have been shifted during the week and the starting lineup will probably be much different from the one which started against the Tigers Saturday.

Flaws Corrected

Many of the flaws discovered in the Electra game have been remedied and the Loboes should play much better against Breck than they did last week. They face a better team.

The Loboes will use mostly tricky line and pass plays, while the Bucks will probably resort to power in an effort to rip open the light Cisco line. Both teams use the Notre Dame style of play.

Today is homecoming day for the Bucks, and if the weather permits a large crowd is due to fill the stands of the Breckenridge stadium.

Breckenridge has practiced all year and will be well prepared for the Loboes. The team is in fine shape as was shown in their game with Paschal high last Friday. The score was a 6-6 tie. The Buck starting lineup played the entire game against the Paschal team. The Loboes used almost every member of the traveling squad against Electra, and will probably use many of them tonight.

Last year the Loboes lost to the Buckaroos at Chesley Field by a score of 21-7 on a muddy field. Many of the Cisco people predict that the score will be much worse this year.

A look at the records of the meetings of the two teams in the past 14 years shows that they are about even. During the first seven years of their meeting the Loboes won five of the contests and tied one, but during the last seven years the Buckaroos have won six.

JESSE JAMES IN PERSON
He will pay five thousand dollars reward to any peace officer or anyone who can prove he is not the original Missouri outlaw. Many settlers in Cisco recall when Frank James formerly of Fort Worth, offered to reveal his brother's hiding place if they would give him a pardon. The law refused to do this.

Also Hank Farris, former double for Ken Maynard and Ann Alexander, cowgirl screen star in a fancy roping performance.

Bank Robbery---

shooting around the corner of the bank cage where he was crouched, firing with his left hand.

Unable to escape through the door, Meyers fled through a back window.

Rancher Chases Bandit

W. L. Henry, a Baird ranchman, was called and immediately began pursuit of the bandit, who later told officers he was driving a car he stole at Abilene. Henry chased the robber some distance, firing at him with a 30-30 rifle he had in his car, before the sheriff, hastily summoned, reached him and Meyers surrendered to them.

Meyers, brought back to the Calhoun county jail, talked freely with officers and a representative of The Cisco Daily Press. He posed for a picture but admitted that "I'm not particularly looking for publicity, my old lady in San Antonio is going to be up in the air when she sees this."

Officers from all the nearby counties were in Baird this morning. The opinion was expressed by some that an effort might be made to connect Meyers with a recent hijacking and shooting in McCulloch county.

Prison Record

Meyers, about five feet eight inches tall, grey-haired, told The Daily Press that he had been out of the Texas penitentiary about three weeks. He gave his home as San Antonio and his age as 38. His prison record consisted of one five-year term for robbery by assault, he told officers.

Meyers was driving a Ford V-8 coach which he said he had stolen in Abilene. It had license plates from San Antonio.
