REBELS BLOCK ESCAPE FROM MADRID

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

Quite often one's attention is called with some evidences of shock to the unsuspected presence of danger in the common things around us. Friday afternoon, while leaving the Brownwood high school stadium at Brownwood where we saw the Buckaroo-Lions football game, Smitty Huestis, O. J. Russell and I hurried off the sidewalk between two cars to get into Ed Huestis' sedan where he was waiting to start the drive home. Smitty's swinging hand came in sudden contact with the corner of the license plate of one of the parked cars, inflicting a deep and painful gash. It was an ugly, bleeding wound that required the services of a doctor to properly dress.

That accident convinced me that the state ought to have the borders of these plates rolled to eliminate the sharp edge. I know Smitty thinks so, even if he did endure the pain without a murmur.

Cisco women who are supporting Roosevelt for re-election as president of the United States are making a strong campaign for funds and for the education of their women friends. They are seeking subscribers to the Democratic-Digest, with which the Roosevelt News is given. An advertisement in this paper makes the appeal.

Incidentally, there comes to this desk one of the most scurrilous pieces of campaign literature that I have ever seen. It is called The Roosevelt Red Record and Its Background, and if I were the republican national campaign committee I believe I should repudiate the book and its author, who, by the way chances to be a woman, which is more of a shame.

Man Motorist (barely avoiding roadside crash): "Why on earth didn't you signal?"
Girl (who has crossed into her home driveway): "I always turn in my signal."

Wife to new maid: "Now, Nora, when you wait on the guests at dinner, please don't spill anything."
Nora: "No, ma'am. I won't say a word."

"Parlor, miss, but swimmin' is not allowed in this lake."
"Well, why didn't you tell me before I undressed?"
"Well, there ain't no law agin' undressin'."

"These are especially strong shirts," said the clerk. "They simply laugh in the laundry."
"Oh, yes," said the customer. "I know! I had some of them which came back with their sides split."
Mrs. Clark: "Has your husband given up golf?"
Mrs. Foster: "Yes, but he still uses the language when changing tires."

Colonel Flies Here To Visit Professor

Col. Edward L. Branham of the U. S. army, Fort Sill, flew with an army pilot to Cisco Friday for a brief visit with Dr. and Mrs. H. E. Steele and Dr. and Mrs. J. T. McKissick of Randolph college. Col. Branham and Dr. Steele are former schoolmates.

The colonel promised to come to Cisco for a several days visit before going to the Philippine Islands where he is to be transferred shortly.

JAM STREETS FOR PROGRAM ON SATURDAY

Three Counties Send People to Annual Program, Exhibits
(Special to The Daily Press) RISING STAR, Oct. 10 — Thousands of people from three counties flocked here Saturday for the final and biggest day at the annual Rising Star fair. Eastland, Calahan, and Brown counties were represented.

A parade featured the opening of the fair Saturday, with a rodeo on the afternoon program and a pageant, "Texas Under Six Flags," furnishing the feature of the evening.
May Community Wins
May was awarded first place in the community booth event with Amity second and Romney third.

May Future Farmers took off first honors at the FFA booth division with Rising Star second and Williams third.

A crowd of several thousand was present for the pageant Saturday night. People from near-

No Clues Found In Slaying at Buffalo

BUFFALO, Oct. 10. (AP)—Admittedly without clues, G-men pushed an investigation Saturday into the killing of Miss Christina Mary Jurell, whose bruised body was found on a mound of fallen leaves on the Catteraugus Indian reservation.

The body of the attractive 31-year old woman—missing from home since she started for a movie Wednesday—was found 40 feet from a busy road. Two teeth were missing. Black and blue marks about the neck indicated strangulation.

Funeral Service To Be Held Today For J. L. Fields

Funeral services for J. L. Fields, 75, father of Davis Fields of Cisco, will be held at the Eastland Methodist church this afternoon at 2 p. m.
Mr. Fields died Saturday at 4:12 a. m. after an apoplectic stroke he suffered Monday. Mr. Fields was born May 18, 1861.
Survivors include the widow and nine children, C. L. Fields, Mrs. Noble Harkrider, Miss Edith Fields, Miss Doris Fields, Jimmie Fields, and Mrs. W. I. Young, all of Eastland; Mrs. L. B. Lippard, Odessa; George Fields, Monahans; and Davis Fields, Cisco.

County Stock Show Is Postponed Two Weeks

Postponement of the annual Eastland county livestock show in Cisco for two weeks was announced Saturday by the chamber of commerce.
The exhibit will be held October 30 and 31, the announcement said. It had originally been scheduled for Friday and Saturday of this week.
The announcement came Saturday after a conference of directors of the show, in which it was agreed that, in order to stage the kind of exhibit planned for this year more time would be needed.
The stock show has been growing steadily since it was begun here several years ago and each year attracts stockmen to show better animals. It had been expected that an unusually good exhibit would feature the 1936 show.

FOOD SUPPLY CUT OFF; RAIL LINES BROKEN

Asturian Miners Hurl Dynamite on Rebel Forces at Oviedo
(By Associated Press)
Spain's Fascists announced today that they had snapped the last rail line from Madrid to the east coast, shutting off the capital's food supply from the southeast, and had closed all but a highway avenue of escape from Madrid.

The insurgent defenders at Oviedo were bombed from all sides by dynamite-throwing Asturian miners, who were expected to complete occupation of the city during the day.
Socialists concentrated on an attempt to regain the strategic town of San Martin de Val de Iglesias from positions west of Madrid.

Last Rites For Mrs. McCarty To Be Held Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Anna C. McCarty, wife of Milburn McCarty, who died at Eastland hospital at 7:15 Saturday evening after a long illness, probably will be held this afternoon. No arrangements were announced last night, however. A number of blood transfusions had been administered in the hope of bolstering her failing strength, but to no avail.
Mr. McCarty, prominent Eastland attorney, is first vice president of the West Texas chamber of commerce and president of the Eastland chamber. He has been active in highway development and other sectional and community projects.

Austria Ousts Private Armies to Halt Strife

VIENNA, Oct. 10. (AP)—Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg, seeking to consolidate the Austrian military power in his own hands, ordered the dissolution of all private armed forces today.
The command, approved by the cabinet, would disband the Fascist Heimwehr, Schuschnigg's Catholic militia and consolidate private armies with the Austrian state militia which Schuschnigg planned to make the regular army under his control. It was expected to end the political strife of the country.
In the decree Schuschnigg apparently turned against the demand of Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy that Cice Chancellor Ernst von Starhemberg be placed at the head of a reorganized Austrian fascist armed force.

The Wrong Murderer

By HUGH CLEVELY

SYNOPSIS: Terence Mahony on his last night rescued Elsa Little the film star, and with Fraser from Ambrose Lawson's desperate gang of kidnapers. Although he is not sure, Terence thinks he may be suspected of the murder of Elsa's uncle, nevertheless, when he meets Lawson near his house, and Lawson suggests that Terence accompany him to the Little house, Terence agrees. But he dislikes Lawson's smug confidence that no suspicion can attach to him.

Chapter 14 BETRAYAL

When they had driven a short distance in the direction of the Little's house Lawson tapped on the glass in front of him and signalled to the driver to stop.

"You must excuse me for a moment," he said, "I want some cigarettes."

The taxi stopped, and Lawson got out and entered a small tobacconist's. Mahony noticed outside the shop a sign which said: "Public Telephone." He frowned. Lawson, he knew smoked Balkan Sobranies. It was unlikely that he would be able to get them at that small, shabby shop. In that case he had probably entered the shop in order to use the telephone.

But what for? What the devil was Lawson up to now, he wondered. Was he planning to have the taxi intercepted before it reached the Little's house? He slipped his hand into his pocket; his fingers closed on the butt of his automatic. The feel of it comforted him. If Lawson was planning to put over a fast one he was ready for it. He felt fine.

But nothing happened to interfere with the taxi. It drew up safely outside the Little's house and Lawson paid the driver and rang the front door-bell. A trim maid admitted them and showed them into a drawing room where Elsa, a short, fair man, and a tall, dark-haired man of thirty-three or -four were sitting. The dark man was Inspector Kennedy.

"Good morning, Elsa," said Lawson. "I've brought Mr. Mahony along to see you. Well, Kennedy, how are you?"

"Where did you meet Mr. Lawson?" asked Elsa.

Her lovely face was pale and her eyes showed signs of recent weeping. As she asked Mahony that simple question there was an air of suppressed but intense excitement about her that was not easy to account for. It affected the others in the room, both Lawson and Kennedy were listening in attitudes of expectant attention.

"I met him at the end of Mulverton street, near his house," Mahony answered.

Now both Kennedy and Lawson were looking at Elsa. On her face was an expression of the most utter horror and dislike. He might have been some sort of big, white, poisonous slug, the way she looked at him. She spoke slowly and clearly:

"I recognize this man's voice. He was the man who was with me in the study last night," she said.

Her words struck Mahony with all the force of an unexpected blow between the eyes. He had thought it in the last degree improbable that Elsa would remember his voice. And he objected strongly to her thinking that he had killed her uncle. The horror and contempt in her eyes stung him. The gleam of satisfaction in Lawson's eyes infuriated him. For a second he was moved to indignant protest.

"It wasn't I who murdered your uncle," he said hotly.

At that Inspector Kennedy leaned forward slightly with the eager air of a tiger about to grip its prey.

"So you know Mr. Little has been murdered," he said keenly. "Will you explain how you know that? The news has not been published in any of the newspapers yet."

He paused. "I have to warn you that I am a police officer, and that anything you say may be used as evidence," he added. "You are not obliged to answer my questions now."

It was obvious to Mahony that he had made a bad slip. The knowledge jerked him into a realization that he had to keep his wits about him.

"How do you think I know he's been murdered?" he asked bluntly. "Lawson told me on the way here."

"What's that?" exclaimed Lawson.

For a moment he showed his white teeth in a smile. He would have smiled in the same way at an opponent who had made a good shot at tennis, particularly if the shot was not quite good enough to win the point.

"I didn't mention the murder to you on the way here," he said.

Mahony stared at him with an expression of utter amazement on his face. He appeared to think that Lawson had suddenly gone quite mad.

"You didn't mention it?" he exclaimed. "Why, good heavens, man, you hardly talked of anything else. Don't you remember asking me not to stay too long, because Miss Little was very upset?"

He really seemed to believe what he said. For a moment he paused.

ed. Then he scowled and went on suspiciously: "What's the idea? Why are you trying to pretend that you didn't mention the murder?"

He seemed to suspect Lawson of dark deeds and sinister intentions. Lawson retaliated by merely looking superior. He shrugged his shoulders with a nonchalant air. "The man who came running out of the house when the constable and I arrived, shortly after the murder, hit me and the constable very hard with his fist," he observed dispassionately.

He made a slight gesture towards Mahony's right hand. "How did you get that graze on your knuckles?" he asked.

Mahony glanced down at his knuckles. He had grazed them knocking out one of Mulgrave's teeth.

"I fell over and scraped my hand on the pavement," he answered.

All his indignation had gone; he felt quite cool and collected now. In a way, he was rather enjoying himself. He recognized that his position was very awkward, but it was not necessarily disastrous.

Elsa claimed to have recognized him by his voice as the man who had killed her uncle, but that recognition alone, especially considering the dazed state she had been in after her uncle's murder, was not sufficient to convict him in a court of law without a good deal of corroborative evidence. It was up to him to see that no such evidence was forthcoming.

"Can you give me an account of your movements after ten o'clock last night?" asked Inspector Kennedy.

Mahony shrugged his shoulders. "Very roughly," he answered. "I've been away for about four years, you know, and last night I simply wandered alone about London seeing the sights. I walked along Oxford street, the Strand, and back by the Houses of Parliament, Ebury street, Sloane street and Hyde Park. I stayed in the Park for some time listening to one of the stump speakers. I don't know what time I got home, but it must have been pretty late because everybody was asleep."

"I suppose you didn't meet anybody you knew during your wanderings?" asked the Inspector.

"No. But it's not likely that I should. I hardly know anybody in London," explained Mahony.

There was a pause. The Inspector's next question came very suddenly and curtly.

"I understand that you have recently returned from a four years' stay in China. Did you know anybody out there engaged in the dope traffic—exporting drugs, I mean?"

Mahony hesitated for a moment. Then he decided to be quite truthful.

"Yes," he replied. "I met a man out there who talked to me about that sort of thing. He was a Russian named Vladimir Kosoff. I believe I broke his jaw."

"You seem to be a somewhat violent person," observed Inspector Kennedy. "I take it that the Someone, quite evidently, had put this dope idea into the Inspector's mind, and he was merely engaged on exploring its possibilities.

Russia Through Upheaval Topic For Club Meet

"Russia in Upheaval" was the subject of the lesson at the meeting of the Twentieth Century club held Friday afternoon. Mrs. Geo. P. Fee was hostess. Mrs. E. P. Crawford gave a paper comparing Stalin and Lenin. Mrs. C. H. Fee, the negative and Mrs. C. R. West for the affirmative, debated the subject, "Resolved that Russia has lost through communism more than she has gained." Both presented such strong and convincing arguments in such an able and brilliant manner made it a difficult question for the judges, Messrs. H. Seale, J. B. Cate and S. E. Hittson to decide. The negative side was given the winning decision.

Those present were Mesdames J. T. Anderson, J. J. Butts, J. B. Cate, E. P. Crawford, C. C. Jones, G. B. Kelly, W. J. Keach, P. Pettit, William Reagan, Hubert Seale, John Smetzer, Alex Spears, J. E. Spencer, C. R. West and J. D. Meredith of Moran.

Mrs. H. R. Garrett and daughter, Dorothy Jo, have returned from a visit in Birmingham, Ala., with Mrs. Garrett's mother.

China Protests At New Jap Consulate

NANKING, China, Oct. 10. (AP)—Bitter opposition is voiced by the central government here against the establishment by Japan of a new consulate at Chengtu, inland city in the rich Province of Szechuan, where a large number of American missionaries are stationed.

Japan opened the consulate, according to the Chinese, without any treaty, agreement, or the official approval of the Chinese government.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Be strong in the Lord and in the power of His might. Let the peace of God reign in your heart. —Eph. vi. 10; Col. iii. 15.

He who hath never a conflict Hath never a victor's palm; And only the toilers know The sweetness of rest and calm. —Haverall.

There is an idea abroad among most people that they should make their neighbors good. One person I have to make good; myself. But my duty to my neighbor is much more nearly expressed by saying that I have to make him happy—if I may. —Stevenson.

Another Act -- Same Drama

Another tragic scene in the drama of Riding A Good Horse to Death is being enacted under the noble dome of the state capitol at Austin where a bewildered and timorous legislature is endeavoring to raise money to pay the state's share of old-age pensions—rather the old-age bonus that it so liberally authorized a couple of years ago. The lawmakers are feeling the monkey's claws. The legislators magnanimously placed the creature on their collective back when they submitted the pension amendment to a vote of the people without specifying therein the manner in which the revenues should be raised to pay the benefits. They were afraid to put the whole picture before the people in the submission of the constitutional amendment, because they were afraid they would be criticised for proposing a resolution that the public would vote down. Well, after the people enacted the amendment about nine to one, naively looking to the legislature to provide some means of raising the enormous sum that would be required to meet the state's ultra-liberal and unreasonable obligation, the next legislature came along and straddled the fence. They passed an old-age pension statute that provides for a bonus to almost every person in the state over 65 years of age. More than that, they made it discriminatory, so that the person who really needs a pension to keep from starving is the less favored of all, while the man or woman owning a considerable amount of property and enjoying a reasonable income is the most favored. Nothing but the strict provisions of the federal cooperating administration prevents the gates being thrown down under this foolish and extravagant legislation—legislation that is extravagant not merely in the projected distribution of money but in the destruction of character and ideals.

FACED now with the problem of providing the increasingly enormous sum to meet the demands of the increasing number of pensioners, the legislature turns again to threaten one of the chief industries that support the state—its oil industry. Legislation under consideration at Austin would levy as much as ten cents a barrel against the development of this great resource. Ever since oil started spurting from the ground under the genius of the human hand people and most of the lawmakers have the idea that an oil well is a gold mine. They have burdened the industry with a pyramid of taxation that is greater in total revenue than the original value of the oil itself. It has been smothered and stifled with taxes until it is no wonder that it has at times been threatened with destruction at the hands of bad markets and hot oil runners. Instead of nurturing this industry and taxing it with an eye to equity, it has been made a sort of goat, doomed to excessive penalties for the privilege of giving prosperity to this civilization.

AND the tragic humor of the situation is simply that the consumer—the man and the woman who have no oil wells but who operate cars, the legislators who think they are getting around the vexatious problem of providing the revenues without taking the great body of their constituents, and all the people in the state who depend directly or indirectly upon consumption of gasoline and oils in the mechanical world that supports them—all these pay the bills. For every tax is ultimately absorbed by the consumer, no matter how far from him it may originate.

THE federal social security board, which is already looking askance at the Texas old-age pension system, should refuse to match its expenditures until a more satisfactory system of pensions, based on need, is provided. The present system discriminates against the pensioner who needs it, by making him share with the pensioner who doesn't need it.

Rising Star's Fair

THE Rising Star Free Fall Fair which closed last night was an outstanding success. The product of aggressive community enterprise and planning, the Rising Star event was a demonstration to put to shame larger neighboring cities. It cost the people of Rising Star between $700 and $800 to put on this fair, but the results achieved in attracting interest and trade to that community and in the development of its trade territory amply repay the expense and the effort invested. It is not the first fair of this character that Rising Star has put on. As a matter of fact, such expositions have become a habit with that energetic community.

THE significant thing in connection with Rising Star's success as a trading center is the fact that the community leaders recognize where their support comes from. They are indulging in no "kidding" of themselves. They are seeking first a primary and solid support to which, once attained, the profits of oil development and similar gratuitous industries are a happy complement. The farm territory that surrounds the community is its first concern, and the community program is developed with service to that territory uppermost in mind.

MEANWHILE Cisco, with a much larger territory to draw from and to serve, is having great difficulty raising a mere $150 to finance the annual Eastland County Livestock show to be held here next week.

By PERCY CROSBY

A Washington Daybook

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—Americans in Spain gave the state department no end of headaches by failing to get out of the danger area when told. That won't happen in China in case that nation comes to blows with Japan. Chronically upset conditions in China have taught foreign residents to be on their toes when their consuls pass the word to get out. But the word has not been passed from here and if it should come it likely won't be officially from the state department. The consuls out there have wide enough leeway to act when danger threatens. The last widespread evacuation was in 1926 in the days of the many war-lords. The flight of foreigners into Shanghai's international settlement during the Japanese siege five years ago was localized but showed again how quickly the evacuation machinery can work. In China those Americans doing business or missionary work far from the shelter of American guns don't argue with the consul or wait for another boat before heading for safety. They take the first way out. League Step Expected. Out of the December meeting of American nations in Buenos Aires is likely to come no "American league of nations." But a step toward it will be taken, or many with their ears close to the state department will be surprised. In calling the conference 10 months ago, President Roosevelt suggested that peace should be promoted either through full ratification of present American peace treaties, by amending them, or by creation of new "peace instruments." Out of the latter grew talk of an American league to reinforce the Geneva league. There is some sentiment for it in the United States. At the state department you glean that the feeling is shared in some South American states—but not enough. One outlook is for a sort of permanent secretariat to start peace machinery operating faster than under the present system of arbitration treaties which provide mainly for appointment of commissions after the trouble presents itself. Of the several present treaties, not one has been ratified by all the state. So there is no great American peace code to which all can have access. One may evolve. See Wider Tariff Range. Trade experts foresee that "most favored nation" relationships will be broadened. At present reciprocal tariff agreements can be shaken out of line by currency and quota juggling. Such antics don't sit well with the state department, guardian of trade agreements.

All Three Got Away, Says Unlucky Angler. ALLENTOWN, Pa., Oct. 10. (AP)—Henry S. Drinker, lawyer-traveler, returned from British Columbia with this fish story: "I was fishing in a clear pool when a small rainbow trout took the line. Along came two big bull trout, chasing it. Just as I had the line near the surface, one of the bull trout swallowed the small one. I was just about to net him when he opened his mouth and out came the small one, still alive. The line broke and the last I saw, all three trout were headed downstream."

Polish Army Units To Do Public Work. WARSAW, Oct. 10. (AP)—Impressed by the smart appearance and road-building achievements of Hitler's compulsory labor service troops, Poland has decided to create new military units for the execution of public works. The service, however, will be purely voluntary. Young men who enlist for it will get good food, shelter and free uniforms; in addition they will receive some military instruction and occupational training. Britisher Walks To Forget Lost Love. LONDON, Oct. 10. (AP)—Nate Mervier, rejected lover, put women behind him—by taking a 1,500-mile walk around the English coast. "Walking's good exercise," Nat explained. "It takes your mind off things. There's the sun, the air, the open road—and consolation."

Patron Crashes Gate With an Automobile

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 10. (AP)—Andrew Tramonte worked a month preparing for the grand opening of his Penn Township inn. The big day arrived, and in crashed the first customer—in an automobile, through the front door, stopping in front of the bar. The driver said he lost control. Human and Other Nature
By W. F. BRUCE

Each one of us apparently has a private self and a public self. But a close analysis obliterates the line of distinction between the two. It is true that an individual is rated according to the institution or the community of which he is a part. Contrariwise the group reputation is affected considerably by the reputation of each individual. But good judgment will always make a fair discrimination between the individual and his group.

As a part of Randolph college I may rest somewhat under the blame that has fallen upon it from time to time. And I may have been given a share of the credit that has been given the institution during the years I have been with it. I certainly want such credit as belongs to me for that will not be an overabundance. But I also want to accept responsibility for such failure or blame as may be my personal share. But I do not want any judgment to be placed upon me that belongs to some one else, whether that be blame or credit. The longer one lives in a community the more the community begins to draw a line between the institution and the individual part he may have in it. No one passes the gauntlet of public opinion without receiving—and meriting—some criticism; but that public also will find in everyone some cause for favorable comment as well as some cause for adverse comment.

Churches, lodges, political parties and all other organizations come under the same principle of evaluation. We may be too prone to become conscious of our adverse judgments; but it is evidently not because we cherish them more than we do the favorable. Perhaps it is similar to what is said about news: when one behaves himself and does well it is the common and the ordinary and hence not unusual enough to become news; but the vagabond, the rascal, the wayward boy or girl is uncommon enough to make news. So it is to be hoped that harsh judgments are uncommon and therefore taken account of; and that faults and misconduct that appear to our critical judgments stay with us because they are rarer.

New Books For Children

With the crispness of autumn air and the beginning of a new school year, the mind becomes more ordered and eager. Included in the interesting new reading for boys and girls is a revised edition of Champlin's "Cyclopedia for Young Folks," with two additional volumes on science and invention edited with wise inclusiveness and careful selectivity by George Moreby Acklom. The cyclopedia now has six volumes.

Humorous Find
The humorous find of the season is from Australia—"The Magic Pudding," by Norman Lindsay. It tells about a bear named Bannyp Bluegum and his friends, the sailor and penguin, and the pudding name Albert (which can be eaten without sacrifice to size, feelings or personality) and of the robbers who kept trying to capture the "puddin'." The book is of the nonsense kind that approaches sheer inspiration and incalculable laughter that has vitality.

Lively Season
"Fierce-Face," by Dhan Gopal Mukerji, illustrated by Dorothy P. Lathrop, is a beautifully told story of an Indian tiger, while "Little Black Ant," by Alice Crew Gall and Fleming H. Crew, illustrated by Helen Torrey, is done with such a delightful blending of interesting biography and entomological accuracy that I'm wondering if I can ever object to uninvited ants anywhere.

Girls will enjoy "Betsy's Napoleen," by Jeanette Eaton, a spirited historical story, and Rhoda Morris' "Sun Bird," with the scene laid off the coast of Siberia. For boys "David and Jonathan," by Donal Hamilton Haines, is to be recommended. This author really has the art of

'Nine Old Men' Return to Bench Tanned and Fit

By PRESTON GROVER
WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—Regardless of what critics may say of its decisions, the supreme court is always majestic.

Once housed in niches and corner of the catacombic capitol, the court now has a building of its own two blocks away that cost a dozen million.

Far to the rear in this noble house of the law, sits the court in a chamber flanked on two sides by double rows of marble columns.

In the half hour before the court convenes the atmosphere of the chamber is like nothing so much as a funeral. There is a bit of whispering. Acquaintances nod gravely.

Enter, the Court
Far back of the chamber a muffled electric buzzer burrs exactly at the noon hour. All in the court rise. From a half dozen apertures back of their seats come the justices, black gowned, unsmiling, assured.

"Oyez, oyez, oyez—" begins the solemn litany of the clerk, ending: "God save the United States and this honorable court." The nine justices sit, four upon either side of the gray whiskered chief justice, Charles Evans Hughes.

They looked fit and alert after a summer's vacation, their faces bronzed, their figures erect. One reporter cracked: "The summer didn't make a dent in any of them." Another said the lead on his story would say: "The court is here to stay." Yet six are over 70, all eligible to retire. The three others are past 60.

Among the first duties imposed upon them was to decide whether to consider again an act of the New York state legislature fixing minimum wages for women. In a first decision the court held the law unconstitutional.

Laundryman Falls
Another law, perhaps more primitive, more elemental, long since has acted on the man who challenged the validity of the law. Joseph Tipaldo, Brooklyn laundryman, told reporters that after the decision he made quick money. Paying less for his laundry he could charge less for his laundry and trade boomed. But soon housewives began turning his drivers away, other trade fell off and he had to quit.

Out in Idaho Senator Borah tells his audiences:
"One voice your senators and congressmen will always obey—the voice of public opinion."
Labor quarters in Washington believe that public opinion ultimately will compel federal or state legislation guaranteeing minimum wages.

COLLINS HARDWARE

An Appeal to Cisco Democratic Women

The first drive for the Democratic-Digest began March 15 and closed July 4. The second drive began July 15 and closed September 30. Now that the drives are over for all contests, it does not mean that the chairmen sponsoring the drives have ceased to work.

Of course, the main objective of all of us now is that women may do their part toward the reelection of our great President. We feel that if we are to work effectively, we must be armed with the facts, and this is the first purpose of the Democratic-Digest—to present the aims and accomplishments of the New Deal accurately and in a simple language that all may understand.

There has been, and is still, a dual motive in our victory drive. If we are to continue the benefits and further the developments of the government for the people, we must unite the thought, influence and effort of the women of this nation.

To do this we need a national publication of our own as a medium of exchange and a stimulus to party activities.

A newspaper man at the Philadelphia convention remarked, "The Democratic-Digest is the best political publication I have ever seen. Why don't you put it on the map?" We can with your help.

To reduce it to a concrete proposition here's what we are asking you to do: Enlist with us. If you are not a subscriber, won't you PLEASE call Mrs. J. E. Spencer, Phone No. 261 and give her your subscription today?

The Democratic-Digest is a monthly magazine and one of the most informative magazines published. You need this magazine to keep informed on national affairs. Subscription price is $1.00 a year. With the Digest you will receive the Roosevelt Record News all for $1.00. A portion of the magazine fund will go to the National Campaign Fund.

Time flies—We must be on our way if we roll up this double victory in November.

MRS. J. E. SPENCER, County Chairman
MRS. J. D. MEREDITH, District Chairman.

County Budget for Year Is Adopted By Court After Careful Estimates

Preparing the county budget for 1937 the commissioners court, assisted by the county clerk, estimated expenses of the county administration upon a practically accurate basis as there is little change in disbursement from one year to another. Lone Star Gas Case Will Go To Supreme Court

DALLAS, Oct. 10.—Officials of the Lone Star Gas company have announced that they expect to appeal to the United States Supreme Court from the decision of the Texas supreme court denying the company an appeal in the company's gate rate case. Attorneys for the company will first ask for a rehearing and if this is denied they plan to go the highest tribunal in the land, they stated.

This case involves an order of the Texas railroad commission reducing the city gate rate from 40 cents per thousand cubic feet to 32 cents. The company appealed from this order to the Travis county district court and a jury decided for the company holding that the commission's order was unreasonable. The state then appealed to the court of civil appeals which reversed the jury verdict. The state supreme court was then asked to review the case but has declined to do so.

Officials of the company said they believe the jury verdict was correct and that in order to protect their service to customers they are bound to go on with the case. They also expressed the opinion that because of increasing taxation and regulatory expenses and the increased cost of doing business it is more than ever necessary to maintain present rates.

Laughing Around the World With IRVIN S. COBB

And It Wasn't Moving Day Either

By IRVIN S. COBB

IN KENTUCKY in the old days, we had for the chief-justice of our highest court a gallant old Confederate Cavalryman. After his retirement from the bench he decided to see something of the world. He got on the train and came to New York. Arising early the next morning he set out for a walk in the great city, going south on Broadway. After a while he came to Canal Street, then, as now, one of the busiest cross-town arteries and likewise the widest river-to-river street in lower Manhattan. Here, for a space, the old judge stood on the edge of the curbing watching the quadrupled lines of vehicular traffic that passed him east and west. As far as he could see in either direction there was no end to the interweaving tangles of loaded trucks and wagons and vans and delivery cars.

At length he made his way to where a policeman stood on the middle of the crossway directing travel. "Excuse me, suh," inquired the visitor, in his rich Southern accent, "but air you connected with the city government yere?" "I'm a policeman, if that's what you mean," answered the bluecoat. "So I judged from your costume and depo'tment," said the venerable Kentuckian.

"Anything I can do for you?" inquired the officer, stirred to special affability by the courteous manners of the stranger.

"No, son, I reckon not," said the judge benignantly, "but if it's not too much trouble I would like to ask you a question."

"Go ahead with the question."

"Well, suh," prefaced the judge, "you boys suttinly have got a lovely city here—I'll say that much. But tell me, son, haven't you got powfully behind with your hauling, someway?"

Film Star's Home Is Done in Italian

LONDON, Oct. 10 (AP)—The decorations in film star Jack Hulbert's new home show a marked Italian influence.

Wherever possible, there are wrought-iron grilles, and most of the fireplaces are elaborately carved.

Heavy brocade claret-colored curtains, claret plush upholstery, and a claret carpet give the morning room an atmosphere of warmth.

The modern idea of central heating is planned so that it blends perfectly with the old-world style of decorations.

The only modern room in the house is the study which has beige painted walls.

You'll be HAPPIER with an Electric Refrigerator

... and you'll be money ahead, too!

Of course many of your friends and neighbors can tell you of many of the conveniences and satisfactions of a modern electric refrigerator. But no one or all of them is likely to remember all the story. And you naturally want the whole story. So by all means visit our display rooms and have one of our representatives there demonstrate to you—without the slightest obligation on your part—not only the conveniences, but also the costs. For these facts are not merely the story of one or two refrigerator users but the average experience of hundreds, and you know there's safety in numbers. Get the whole story of modern electric refrigerator advantages, particularly the low operating costs.

Do you know that your increased use of Electric Service is billed on a surprisingly low rate schedule... and adds only a small amount to your total bill?
