BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

I will hear what God the Lord will speak: for He will speak peace unto His people.—Ps. LXXXV, 8.

Dark though my path in life may prove, The smile of peace the voice of love, If they my lamp and guide will be, Are all I need in following Thee.—Anon.

The peace which the Savior gives His own, is peace of heart and mind amid daily duties. It is that "central peace" which may subsist in the heart of endless agitation.—Boyd.

Amendment No. 6

THE press of the larger Texas cities almost uniformly opposes adoption of the so-called Moffett amendment to the Texas constitution. The amendment limits the number of representatives one county may have in the lower house of the legislature to seven until the population of that county exceeds 700,000, from which point it is allowed one representative for each additional 100,000 people. Opponents of the amendment argue that it violates the democratic ideal of proportionate representation on the basis of population. But they would have a difficult time justifying the principle of the United States senatorial representation on that basis. Representation in that body is based strictly upon geography, not upon population. Its institution has been found a happy counterbalance over the past 150 years of American government to the evils of increasing concentration of representation in the lower house. The Moffett amendment would apply the necessary counterbalance in a different manner.

THE author of the amendment, George Moffett of Chillicothe, gives the following strong reasons for its adoption by the people in the November 3 general election:

Unless our present constitution is amended, population will continue to be the only yard stick by which representatives are allotted to the various counties.

Thirty states take geography as well as population into consideration in laying out legislative districts.

Between 1920 and 1930 the population of Texas increased 1,161,000. Almost exactly one-third of this increase occurred in the three most populous counties. By actual census figures 69 rural counties showed a decrease in population between 1920 and 1930. Power farming probably accounted for most of this decrease.

The trend of population is unquestionably toward the large cities.

If Texas were redistricted today under our present constitution, Dallas would have ten members and Houston eleven. In 20 or 30 years more this would be doubled.

County commissioners' precincts, city commissioners' precincts, judicial districts, school districts and many other districts are not laid on a population basis but usually with an eye to giving each section or community adequate representation. Geographic and territorial considerations play an important part in shaping the aforementioned districts and should likewise be considered in laying out representative districts instead of using population alone.

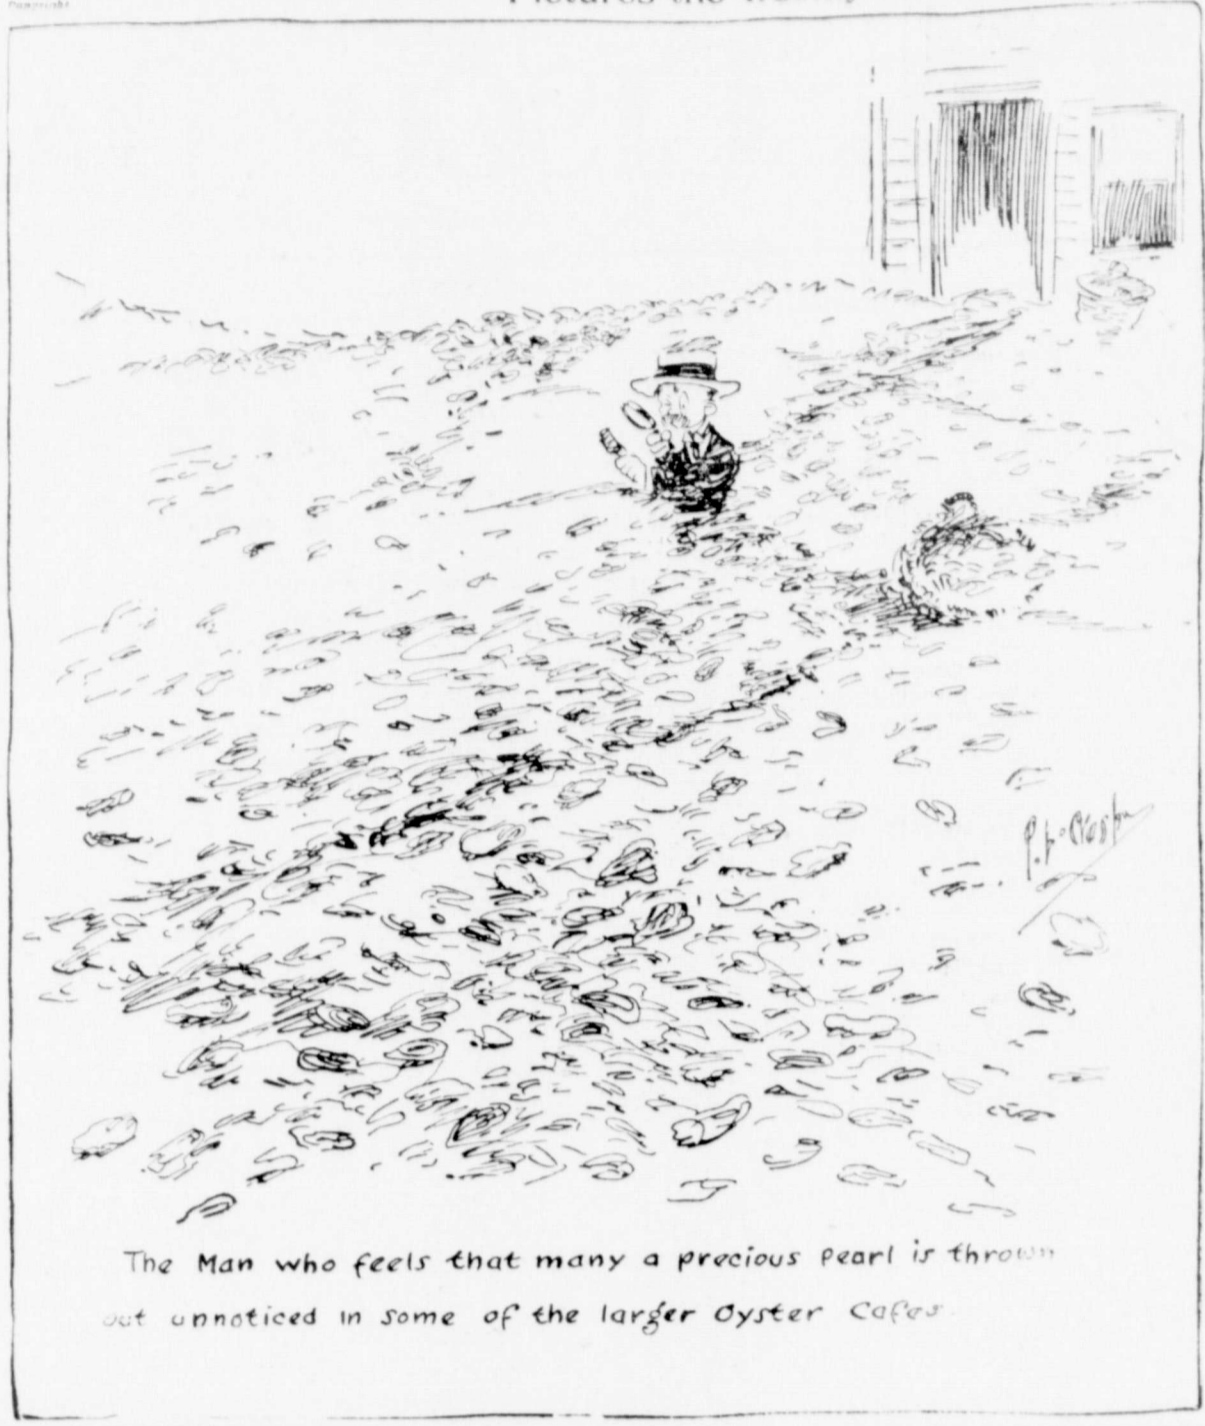

Our forefathers wrote it into the federal constitution that the president and vice president of the United States should not come from the same state. They opposed concentration of power and Amendment No. 6 does the same thing.

The U. S. supreme court in 1932 definitely held that congressional districts need not be even approximately equal in population.

A fair and impartial study of the problem clearly shows that Amendment No. 6 should be adopted by the people at the November election.

Kentucky Could Keep Liquor Lead In Spite of Dries

FRANKFORT, Ky., Oct. 12.—Even though every Kentucky county should vote "dry" in local option elections, this state could legally maintain its position as the nation's leading distiller. Director Theo Hageman of the division of alcohol control points out. Manufacturing and wholesaling of liquor are legal in "dry" counties, so long as the product is not sold here.

Horned Frog Band To Wear Overalls

FORT WORTH, Oct. 12.—The Horned Frog band will make the trip to College Station next Saturday in white overalls. Why? Well, their white serge uniforms are terribly susceptible to dirt. The overalls will be worn until the train pulls into Aggieland. Then they will step forth in comparatively clean white serge.

commodated only four or five passengers. The 400-horsepower motor was the wonder of the industry; tomorrow's airplane will lift off the ground under four motors of 1,000 horsepower each.

transport service was inaugurated. Only 36 hours coast-to-coast, it advertised; today the machine which cannot cruise from Newark to Burbank or San Francisco in 16 hours is obsolete. That first ambitious transcontinental line, of course, was a combination rail-and-air proposition. Its big transports flew at 100 miles an hour; today's machines, dwarfing their predecessors, cruise at 190 miles an hour.

Machines Get Faster The gyro-pilot, the clean sweep of wing and fuselage, aluminum alloy materials, the twin-row 14-cylinder motor and improvements in two-way radio transmission combine to produce a machine which travels between Cleveland and Chicago in an hour and 50 minutes.

When the airplane was turned to commercial pursuits in 1918, the wing was still an internally-braced structure with a fabric covering. The covering, structurally, was excess weight. Engineers discovered the "skin" or wing covering could be made to strengthen the wing and reduce the degree of internal bracing required.

New Gas Made Before the airplane went big business, propellers had fixed pitches. Maximum efficiency required a low pitch for the take-off, a high pitch for flying. In practice, a compromise in pitch was found necessary. Now the pilot controls his propeller pitch at will with the turn of a knob.

Oil company research produced fuels which would "burn" with less residue and produce more power. Engine manufacturers could, and did, increase the compression of their cylinders. They obtained more horsepower per pound of motor weight.

What has happened to American aviation? Aeronautical engineers will tell you they have been rubbing Aladdin's lamp so hard the brass is worn thin. In design, improvement in fuels, the "stepping up" of motors, the development of flying aids and the expansion of the nation's airport system lie the answer to the advancements achieved in a romantic calling which suddenly went big business.

Specs-- of Mr. and Mrs. Kleiner for whose benefit against a worse reaction to winter influences here the trip was made, likewise responded brightly to the climate. The most discouraging factor about the trip, however, was the impossibility of securing a Texas newspaper. They scoured all the drug stores and news stands in Tucson without result. Copies of the Press, started immediately after the family left, had not arrived. There was no news at all from the home state. They called for any Texas paper, no matter from what part of the state, just so it had a Texas name on it.

The Wrong Murderer

By HUGH CLEVELY

SYNOPSIS: Terence Mahony has been accused of the murder of Mr. Little. The difficulty about the case is that Terence Mahony is a man of honor and a man of means. He is a man of honor and a man of means. He is a man of honor and a man of means. He is a man of honor and a man of means.

Chapter 15 RUTH AGAIN

There was another brief pause. She had been growing restless during this process of questions and answers. It seemed to her to be a flagrant injustice that Mahony should be standing there so much in the dark, and with such an air of guilt, when he had just rescued her.

"Hullo, Anne," said Ruth. "Look here, old hag, if anybody asks, can you tell them that I've been staying with you for the last three or four days? Do you mind?"

"Dec-lighted, I'm shore," replied Anne. "But if anybody does want to ask, they'll have to do it pretty quick, because I'm off to Berlin for a show of pictures today. I don't suppose you'll mind that, though."

"That's grand," said Ruth. "Thanks ever so much, Anne. How are the landscapes going these days?"

"They've gone," answered Anne, who had rather a literal mind. "They went a fortnight ago. The show starts tomorrow."

"Oh, you're going to a show of your own pictures, are you?" said Ruth. "That's good. But what I really meant was, how is art going? Are you selling lots of stuff, and making a heap of money?"

"I'm hanged if I know," answered Anne. "Incidentally, I can hear my hired car stopping outside. So I must fly. Good-bye, my pet. Be careful."

Ruth hung up the receiver, laughing. Anne was quite mad, but a terribly good sort. She was glad she had fixed that up all right.

She told her guardian what she had arranged, and went on with her breakfast. The previous night she had been much too tired to bother much about the ways and wherefores of things; her only curiosity had been about the identity of her rescuer.

This morning, after a good sleep, that curiosity was intensified, and added to it was a curiosity about the rest of the story. Mysterious things had been happening to her. Not many girls of her age had had such adventures.

The one fly in the ointment of her bliss was the fact that she did not know her rescuer's name. That did not suit her at all. "One thing she had to work on—that he had been friendly with Billy Ross. In that case, other friends of Billy would probably know him. Elsa Little, for instance, would probably know him; there was not much about Billy that she didn't know. Ruth decided to go to see Elsa, describe Mahony to her, and try to find out who he was.

After breakfast she drove round to Elsa's house in her big cream-colored sports car. The maid who admitted her knew her as a frequent visitor, and showed her at once into the drawing-room, where Elsa, Mahony, Lawson, and the two detectives were assembled.

For a moment she was astonished; she had not expected to find all these people present. But her astonishment was swallowed by her delight in meeting Mahony there.

"Hullo, Elsa," she said. She turned to Mahony and smiled; her eyes sparkled with mischief.

"Hullo," she said casually, fancy meeting you."

Inwardly she was purring with glee. Mahony had said that they would not meet; she had been quite determined to prove him wrong; and by the most incredible good luck she had succeeded first shot. She could not resist the temptation to rub it in a little.

She looked at him, smiling. He had no answering smile for her. Nor had Elsa. Then, for the first time, she perceived that somewhere something was definitely wrong. Her glance travelled round the solemn circle of the people in the room.

Lawson was staring at her with an expression of the utmost bewilderment on his face, as if he could hardly believe that she was real. Nobody had yet told him of her rescue from the house near Watford; his presence in the room was his first intimation of it.

"What's the matter with all of you?" she asked. "Why are you all looking at me as if I'd come out without any clothes on? What's wrong?"

For a moment nobody answered. Then Inspector Kennedy replied to her.

"I'm sorry to have to tell you that Mr. Little, Miss Little's uncle, was murdered last night."

"Murdered?" Ruth was horrified. "How . . . how dreadful. Elsa . . . I'm terribly sorry to hear it. Is there anything I can do? Have they . . . have they caught the man who did it?"

Elsa made a little gesture with her hand indicating Mahony.

"That man did it," she answered.

Everyone except Mahony stared at her in a shocked fashion. Mahony scowled ferociously at her. Was this fool girl, he wondered, going to spill all the blasted beans, when he had particularly asked her to keep her mouth shut?

Ruth guessed what he was thinking; she went on hastily: "He came down into the country, in his car, to fetch me from my friend's cottage. I've been staying with a friend named Anne Dowson in a cottage near Harfield, in Sussex. I asked him if he'd come down and give me a lift back to town, and he came."

"I am Inspector Kennedy, of the Criminal Investigation department, and I am investigating the murder of Mr. Little," said Inspector Kennedy. "May I ask your name?"

"My name is Ruth Fraser," answered Ruth.

"Aren't you the girl who has been missing from home for several days?" he went on.

"Yes," she admitted. "But that was all a false alarm."

FEDERAL PART OF PENSIONS RECEIVED

Red-Probers Summon Two Professors

Through the Editor's Spectacles
By GEORGE

The school board did the wise thing when it approved transfer of the Cisco-San Angelo football game this week-end to San Angelo. With the result of the forthcoming contest merely a matter of how big San Angelo can make the score, there is little chance that more than a handful of the faithful would attend here, whereas the San Angelo fans, their hopes for a championship buoyed on a sparkling early season record, will follow their team to the gridiron at the eager cost of many hundreds of dollars, no doubt. The statement above is not attempted discredit to the Cisco team. It simply is not in the class with the bigger schools, because the boys are young and inexperienced and the squad is too light to compare with most of the rival schools.

I think that the current season record is having a salutary effect upon the community, however, in that it is demonstrating quite clearly that a team must be built and supported if it is a successful team. Other towns in the oil belt have worked long and earnestly and spent much money in developing good high school teams and the results have been excellent and marked. That statement neither promotes nor supports the sordid commercial ideal. Rather it is intended to point out the fact that a good thing costs effort, time and expense, while the conscientious and sensible support of high school football toward the ideal of winning high school teams inspires an attitude and a spirit in the school and community that is definitely healthful.

One has but to examine the records of schools where the citizens, the business men and the parents have taken a positive and promotional interest in athletics to see that a strong and good atmosphere of community aggressiveness and loyalty to home institutions developed by that activity and by the fruits of that activity as seen in teams that win and schools that accomplish.

If we should be able in Cisco to get back the old interest, the old determination to win and the old spirit to send us singing and shouting down the streets of rival towns behind a team that wins the greatest number of its games, we should shortly find our whole community atmosphere and activity more vigorous and satisfying.

What became of that much publicized tooth "desensitizer" which an eastern dental professor so magnanimously gave to the profession about a year ago? I asked Dr. Charles Jones this morning.

He laughed. "It went out, poof!" he said. "In a few instances and under a few conditions the liquid which was supposed to make the pain of grinding out a cavity a thing of the forgotten, would have a good effect. But for the most part it went the way of about 20 such agencies that Dr. Jones said have AUSTIN, Oct. 13 (AP)—The house committee appointed to investigate charges of communistic teachings in state-supported institutions, issued subpoenas today for Dr. R. H. Montgomery and Charles A. Timm, Texas university professors, and Otto Mullinaux, student to appear at the initial session tonight.

Montgomery was recently on leave of absence during which time he held a post with the national administration at Washington. Mullinaux was defeated for the legislature in the recent primary. Timm taught at the university for several years.

Senate Hearings

Senate state affairs committee-men hoped to complete hearings today upon the house omnibus tax bill so that floor consideration of the measure could start within a few days. The hearings began yesterday.

The constitution provides that revenue-raising measures must originate in the house, and the lower branch so far had sent the senate only the omnibus proposal. Representatives were at work, however, on a separate bill to increase the oil tax.

The house voted 60 to 59 to boost the oil levy from two to five cents a barrel. The action was not final, as the figure would be subject to

Landon Defends Labor's Rights of Organization

TOLEDO, Oct. 13. (AP)—Governor Landon, addressing Ohio's labor vote, said today that "labor has false friends" who in other nations "have already betrayed the men and women who work."

"I am absolutely opposed to any infringement on the rights of labor to organize, or any curtailment of the right of assembly. It is the government's duty to protect labor and people in these rights."

Landon closed his Ohio campaign and is going to Detroit tonight.

GOP Leaders Tell "Fairy Tales"-FDR

WICHITA, Kan., Oct. 13 (AP)—President Roosevelt, bringing his campaign to Gov. Landon's home state, said today that republican leaders are telling "political bedtime stories" in "spreading a gospel of fear" about the new deal setting one class against another.

He said that certain American people are not to be frightened by "fairy tales" in November, adding: "People who talk about class distinctions are the very ones encouraging class antagonism. For they tell one story in the east and another in the west; one story in the cities and another on the farm."

At Denver, speaking from the rear of his train yesterday, Roosevelt likened republican leadership to the "two-faced" Janus, Roman god, charging it lacked consistency. At the same time he pledged the democratic new deal to preservation of a constitutional and representative form of government.

LOBO-BOBGAT GAME SENT TO SAN ANGELO

Larger Attendance Is Motive for Change Friday

The Cisco school board last night approved transfer of the Cisco Lobo-San Angelo Bobcat football game to San Angelo. The game, scheduled here for Friday, will be taken to San Angelo because of the larger attendance expected there.

San Angelo made no guarantee, however.

Supt. R. N. Cluck reported to the board that the policies of the home economics and the diversified occupation departments of the high school had been made to conform with recent changes in state and federal regulations governing administration of funds supplied by the state and federal government for the upkeep of these departments.

Routine matters occupied the remainder of the time.

Coach Shelley announced today that a team picked from the squadmen who did not play against Big Spring last Friday night will play a game against a San Angelo team Friday afternoon in San Angelo.

The conference game will start Friday night at 8 o'clock under the lights at the San Angelo gridiron.

The probable starting lineup will be Wallace and Jones, ends; Stewart and Ivie or Shirley, tackles; Flaherty and D. Yarborough or Burkett, guards; Webster, center; Rainbolt, fullback; Slicker, quarterback; L. M. Yarborough and Steyer or Donohoe, halves.

further revision today. When reported by committee, the proposal called for a raise of only three-fourths cent a barrel the same as in the omnibus proposal.

Reject 6-Cent Amendment

Before adopting the five-cent amendment, the house rejected a six-cent amendment, 58 to 54. Arguments on the oil tax were similar to those during previous legislative sessions.

Proponents of the raises argued that Texas still would have an advantage in the national oil market even though the tax was boosted to five or six cents.

In addition to increasing the levies on natural resources, and public utilities 37 1-2 per cent, the omnibus bill would tax cigars and amusements other than picture shows and inexpensive athletic contests.

Opponents of provisions taxing telephone companies, sulphur, mineral water, statewide mutual aid insurance companies and liquor and wine were the first to appear before the senate committee.

The Wrong Murderer

By HUGH CLEVELY

SUMMARY: Although his activities last night included rescuing the Little and Ruth Fraser from the vicious gang of James Mahony, Inspector Kennedy is not satisfied with the activities of the murderer of Elsie Little. But Ruth shows up just in time to help Inspector Kennedy. The inspector and his partner, Terence, are not satisfied with the activities of the murderer of Elsie Little. taken place. What was the meaning of it all? It simply did not make sense. And who had killed Mr. Little, and why?

He sighed. He had decided, after all, not to detail Mahony for the present.

Lawson also was very perplexed. He could not understand why on earth Ruth should have told that story about staying with a friend. Mahony could not understand it either.

Chapter 16
NOT CONVINCED

"Didn't you find out from the papers that the police were looking for you?" asked the Inspector.

"No," said Ruth. "Anne is a friend with whom you were staying in Anne Dowson. Would you mind giving me her address?" asked Inspector Kennedy.

"The White Cottage, near Harfield, Sussex," replied Ruth with-

"I needn't detail you longer," said Kennedy.

"But you won't find her there today, I'm afraid. She told me she was going away."

She did not mention that Anne had said that she was going to Berlin, she hoped that Anne, with her well-known carelessness, had not told anybody where she was going. Heaven only knew what would happen if Anne were to be questioned severely by the police. She would probably throw tubes of paint at them and end up in prison herself. She was like that.

"Thank you," said Inspector Kennedy. "I don't think I need detain you or Mr. Mahony any longer."

So that's his name, thought Ruth.

Inspector Kennedy made rapid calculations. It was a good two hours' journey by road to Harfield in a fast car. Two hours going, and a half—allowing for a main exaggeration on her part—in repairing a breakdown—meant that Mahony could not have been in London at the time when the murder occurred.

It was her story truthful? It seemed to the Inspector that there was something very queer about nearly everything that had

And she wondered what sort of a Christian name he had. Something really Irish, like Shawn or Padraig, she hoped.

"I'm terribly sorry about your uncle, Elsa," she said. "You will let me know if I can do anything, won't you?"

"Yes. Thank you, Ruth," replied Elsa, and then to Mahony: "I owe you an apology, Mr. Mahony. I'm sorry if I've suspected you unjustly."

Lawson's first action after leaving the Little's house was to ring up Lee-Ramsden. He found Lee-Ramsden in a somewhat irritable mood.

"I've rung you up twice this morning already," said Lee-Ramsden. "I want to know what happened last night. How did my ward manager to turn up her suddenly like that at four in the morning?"

"She spoke a little stiffly, as if she had made the apology with great reluctance.

"That's all right, Miss Little," said Mahony. "Please don't think about it any more."

He and Ruth Fraser left the house. When they had gone there was a short silence. Then Inspector Kennedy shrugged his shoulders slightly.

"I don't care if the whole of Scotland Yard is on its way to interview me," replied Lee-Ramsden. "I've already rung them up and told them that Ruth has been staying with school-friend in Sussex. They can believe it or not, just as they like. That's all the information they'll get from me or Ruth."

"But..." began Lawson. He did not quite know how to go on. "Is Ruth seriously going to try to keep up the story about staying with Anne Dowson?" he asked.

"Have you any reason to think that she was not staying with Miss Dowson?" asked the Inspector keenly.

"Well... yes. The day after Ruth disappeared I had a letter from Anne about a picture I wanted to buy from her. In her letter she asked after Ruth. I don't think that even Anne would have done
