FDR Asks For Michigan Vote

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

Fake eye specialists and fake specialists of other kinds swindle many thousands of dollars annually from unsuspecting victims...

"In the glimmer racket" there are persons known as "finger men" who travel about the country selling eye glasses...

"These 'finger men' are not satisfied with the enormous profits made on their cheap glasses. They furnish the names and addresses of their victims to the members of the gang known as 'specialists'...

The fake doctor who first goes into the house introduces himself under the name of some nationally or internationally known physician, surgeon or oculist...

"The alleged eye specialist is called in from the door way, and told to bring his kit containing his instruments. They let the victim see clearly that there is no collusion between the two..."

FIRST SPEECH DELIVERED AT GRAND RAPIDS

Landon Says Farmers Play Santa Claus for the New Deal

EN ROUTE WITH PRES. ROOSEVELT, Oct. 15 (AP)—President Roosevelt made his first bid for Michigan's 19 electoral votes today, telling a Grand Rapids audience, on his way to Detroit, "You have a pretty good example in what happened in four years."

"Action has been taken to bring prosperity back," the president said. "The first thing we did in 1933 was stop persons from starving and give them work. After that came measures to enable people to improve their living conditions."

Universal Credit Company in Midst Of Big National Expansion Program

Upon completing its eighth year of exclusive service to the great Ford market, Universal Credit Company has in operation offices in 100 cities from coast to coast, serving in a convenient and courteous manner the many thousands of time buyers of Ford cars and trucks.

More than 60 of these offices have been opened since late summer of 1934. Additional operating offices are planned for the remainder of this year and further expansion will follow where necessary during 1937.

This expansion program has been undertaken to keep pace with the great public acceptance of the Ford V-8. Throughout the country Ford dealers have come to look upon Universal Credit Company as an outstanding sales agent and many outstanding dealers have stated that UCC low cost, flexible plans for the Ford buyer will play an even more important part in future sales than in the past.

When asked regarding the outlook for 1937, Mr. Ernest Kanzler, president of the Universal Credit Company, recently said:

"I consider our expansion program the best expression of our confidence in recovery and in an expanding business future. We are going ahead with our expansion plans without hesitation. We have increased our offices to over 100 located in all sections of the United States to meet the growing demands of the public for Ford cars and for our credit services.

"These are, more than ever, days of building goodwill through efficient service and courtesy in the credit industry. Our company has always served the Ford dealer and Ford time buyer with these factors uppermost in our mind. Throughout all our growth," said Mr. Kanzler, "we have always kept before us our original statement of purpose made several years ago when we were first organized, in which we said: 'In the performance of our many duties, we can remember always that beyond our contribution to the advancement of organized industry, UCC is at the same time contributing substantially to the happiness and contentment of society.'

"By extending credit to every deserving person in the nation, we are enabling him to purchase Ford products at the lowest possible cost and are thereby bringing greater health and happiness to a large group of American people, heads of families as well as their children.

Universal Credit company serves Ford dealers exclusively and UCC plans are available through Nance Motor Company, the local authorized Ford dealer in this community.

This "Bush" Team Wins All Games

CADIZ, Ky., Oct. 15 (AP)—This town has a one-team, one-family "Bush" league. All members of the team are surnamed "Bush," and all are either brothers or cousins, aged 18 to 35.

They started playing baseball in 1932. When softball became popular they went in for that sport, finding a tenth Bush to complete the team. They boast a 4-year all-victorious record.

Sports writers and scorers go into a whirl trying to keep tab of the Bush games.

Must Consign to Drouth Groups to Get Special Rate

Special drouth freight rates can only be secured by purchasers of feed if the shipment is consigned to the drouth committees in the designated drouth counties. Elmo V. Cook, county agricultural agent has announced, following information received from the Texas Extension service headquarters at College Station.

Farmers ordering car lots of feed should be sure to remember this or they will lose the advantage offered by the special rate.

Farmers Urged to Sign

Farmers and farm owners of Eastland county who are interested in terracing or running their rows on water levels between now and spring are urged by the county agent to get their applications into the county agent's office, Eastland as soon as possible. An application card requesting lines for terraces or contours (water levels) can be secured from the office upon request.

The county agent reports that he has on hand applications for terracing lines on 1,200 acres on 25 farms. Lines have already been run on 200 acres on 7 farms and the work is being done as rapidly as possible.

Those who are unable to build terraces this season can run their rows on water levels at no extra expense and reduce water and wind erosion greatly. Contouring or water leveling the rows is no substitute for terracing but serves as a temporary aid until terraces can be built.

Running Terrace Lines

County Agent Cook and Assistant County Agent Barnhart have run terrace lines the last two weeks on the farms of K. F. Kirk and C. F. Poyner of Colony, D. W. Boone of Bullock, Idus S. Echols of Staff, F. M. Williams of Eastland, Abraham P. Key of Reagan, and C. C. McFadden of Dothan.

On Tuesday, October 20, pasture terrace lines will be run on the farm of Bruce Ebberhart of Rising Star.

Expecting N. Y. A. Help

Beginning November 1, two crews of N. Y. A. youths will be put to work in Eastland county running terrace and contour lines and doing other conservation work, according to the county agent. A full-time supervisor who works out of the county agent's office will have supervision over the work. All work done will follow rules and instructions recognized by the extension service as being sound.

Types of conservation work that can be done under the N. Y. A. project are terrace or contour line running and pasture demonstration work such as clearing, deadening timber, listing, contouring, fertilizing, sodding, reseeding, removing cactus, and fencing modified grazing areas. Making and laying of sub-irrigation garden tile also will be done.

N. Y. A. workers will not build terraces, only running the lines. Pasture work will be done on a limited scale where land owners wish to improve a reasonable acreage for demonstration purposes and are willing to furnish everything but the labor.

Typically Texan is the story of the growth of the Texas ports

In 1836, the whole long Texas coastline was practically unknown to shipping. Now, wherever seamen gather, the ports of Texas are richly praised. The story of the building of the Texas ports is a story of far-sighted men, of projects broadly conceived and faithfully executed; a story of determination and the will to win; in short, a story typically Texan!

AS THE PORTS of Texas receive the praise of mariners, so Humble products are recommended by Texas motorists. Texans know that the Humble sign stands for this fundamental Humble policy: Humble motor fuels and Humble motor oils must be the best you can buy.

So Humble motor fuels and Humble motor oils are continuously improved; slight day-to-day improvements keep them always up to date—always a little ahead of the rest.

Try Humble Motor Fuels and Humble Motor Oils; test them the sure way—in your car. Stop today at a Humble Service Station or at a Humble dealer's; fill your tank with a Humble motor fuel, drain and refill with a Humble motor oil.

At the Centennial Exposition, Dallas-Humble's Hall of Texas History

You are cordially invited to visit the Humble Exhibit at the Central Centennial Exposition in Dallas. Striking dioramas recreate dramatic moments and vivid episodes from Texas History. See the battle of the Alamo, the capture of Santa Anna, the prisoners of the Mier Expedition drawing the black beans, the battle of Sabine Pass, Colonel Goodnight treating with Comanche Quanah Parker. Then see and listen to the story told by the rocks of Texas, and how Texas oil is drawn from many thousands of feet under the ground. On your way to and from Dallas—stop for service where you see the Humble sign.

HUMBLE OIL & REFINING CO. A TEXAS INSTITUTION MANNED BY TEXANS

HUMBLE 997 MOTOR OIL

That quality of a motor oil which makes it a fine oil for one man is a minor consideration for another. Humble 997 Motor Oil is a universal favorite; it gives every user everything he asks for in a motor oil, with a little added. It is a superlatively fine oil that stands alone. It costs a few cents more than ordinary oils, but it gives you value plus for that slight extra cost. Try Humble 997 Motor Oil—you'll use it regularly.

Humble 997 Motor Oil is made from the heart (a very small percentage) of specially selected crude stocks by a special patented process. It is, moreover, a 100 per cent paraffin oil. Like all Humble products, it's continuously improved. Available in bulk or refinery sealed cans as you prefer.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Go up in peace to thine house, for I have heard of thy voice.—2 Sam. xxv. 35.

Think not of tomorrow, Its trials or its tasks, But trust with childlike spirit For present mercies ask.

With each returning morning Cast old things away; Life's journey lies before thee, Let thy prayer be for today.

Duty, be it in a small matter or a great, is duty still; the command of Heaven, the eldest voice of God. And it is only they who are faithful in a few things, who will be faithful over many things.

Fake Specialists

ACTIVITY of post office inspectors has resulted in the breaking up of a nationwide ring of crooks who pose as eye specialists and have robbed the American public of more than a million dollars.

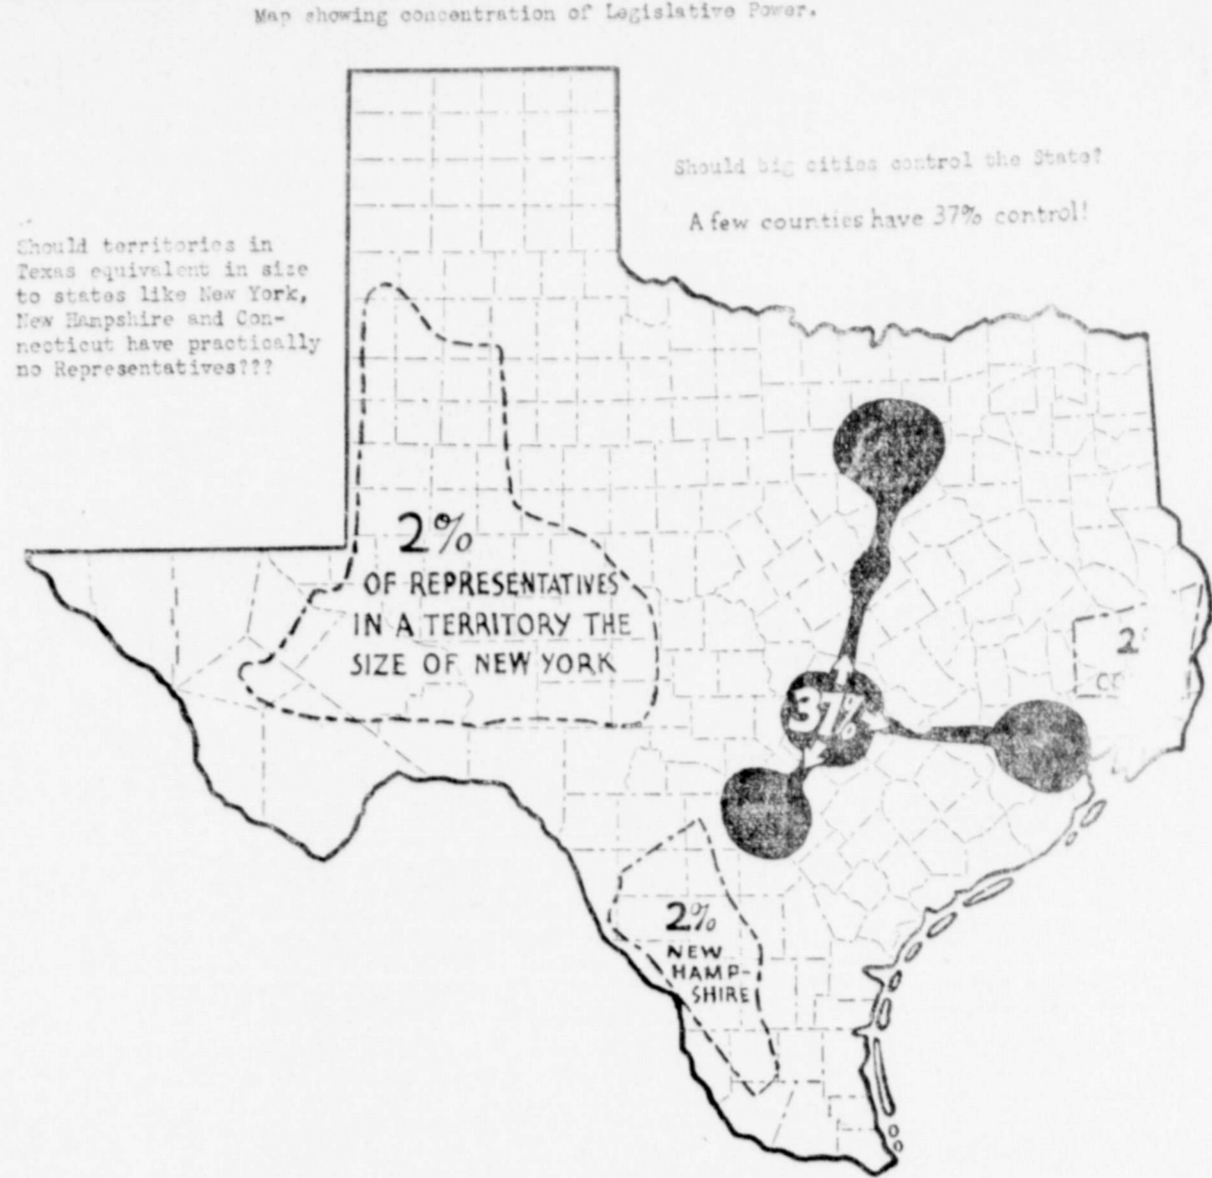

BUT the racket is the most obvious. Why it is that a person, suffering with a malady for which he seeks relief, will often ignore his home doctor, and, without even so much as asking his advice, fall for the glib assurances of a strange "specialist," is a question in human nature that is as unfortunate, often, as it is curious.

man nature that is as unfortunate, often, as it is curious. The home doctor or specialist is willing to pit his skill and knowledge against the inevitable percentage of human error and average of accomplishment by establishing himself in one place and building his practice by honest endeavor.

The Moffett Amendment (No. 6) will prevent undue concentration of power in a few of the very largest Counties of Texas. "Vote for amendment" in November

Moffett Amendment Aims at Equal Legislative Representation With Geography Used for Basis

AUSTIN, Oct. 15.—George Moffett, member of the Texas legislature from Chillicothe, made these statements today:

"Texas is the largest and most important agricultural state in the union, and this should be the most potent fact in the minds of legislators as they enact the laws under which the people of Texas live."

"But the state's population trend is not toward the 1920-1930 decade the population increased 1,162,000, and almost exactly one-third of the increase occurred in the three most populous counties. By actual census figures 69 rural counties showed decreases in population between 1920 and 1930. Power farming probably accounted for most of the decrease."

"If Texas were given legislative redistricting today under our present constitution, Dallas county would have ten members and Harris county (Houston) eleven. In 20 or 30 years more this would be doubled."

"Unless our present constitution is amended, population will continue to be the only yardstick by which representatives in the legislature are allotted of the various counties, and the big cities will completely control the legislature."

Amendment No. 6

Moffett's statement was made in support of one of six proposed constitutional amendments upon which the people of Texas will vote on Tuesday, November 3. It is amendment No. 6 providing for equalization of legislative representation on a basis of geography as well as population in laying out districts. As chairman of the legislative committee on constitutional amendments Moffett was the author of amendment No. 6. He is for all the amendments, but believes this one is by far the most needful "to keep the government in the hands of all the people and not the few who have moved to the cities and whose interests are more industrial than agricultural."

Moffett said further: "Thirty states take geography as well as population into consideration in laying out legislative districts—why should not Texas? In Oklahoma the limit for a county is seven members; in Georgia and Florida, three members; in Iowa, two members; and other states that are predominantly agricultural have similar restrictions based on geographic and territorial considerations."

"Our forefathers wrote it into the federal constitution that the president and vice-president of the United States should not come from the same state. They opposed concentration of powers—and amendment No. 6 proposes to do the same thing in Texas.

"The United States supreme court in 1932 held in a clear-cut decision that congressional districts need not even be approximately equal in population. County commissioners precincts, city commissioners precincts, judicial districts, school districts and many other subdivisions created for legislative purposes, are not laid out on a population only basis, but usually with an eye to giving each section or community fair representation. Geographic and territorial considerations play an important part in shaping the aforementioned districts, and should likewise be considered in laying out representative districts instead of using population alone.

What Amendment Proposes Amendment No. 6—last on the November ballot—was passed for submission by the 44th legislature. It provides that no county may have more than seven members in the lower house, and if adopted, a redistricting under any law—present or future—would have to conform to it.

"Since the total membership of the house is fixed in the constitution at 150," said Moffett, "it certainly is proper and fair that no one county out of the 254 counties in Texas should have a disproportionate representation, and a maximum of seven should be enough. In a state as large as Texas it would never be for the best interests of the state to permit the bunching of its lawmakers in a very few counties. It is more justifiable for Texas to recognize geography, as well as population, than any other state, because it is the largest state with the farthest-flung boundaries and has the greatest diversity of conditions and interests.

"Unless Amendment No. 6 is adopted by the people next month and written into our constitution, four or five of our larger counties will, within a few years, have a population preponderance enabling them to control and dictate the laws under which the people of all the other counties must live. Amendment No. 6 seeks to put a reasonable and necessary balance wheel in our governmental machinery, and it should be adopted."

Examples At the present time representation in the legislature is fixed by

Unemployment Compensation

Who Benefits?

By L. E. HARWOOD

The preceding article attempted to define unemployment compensation and account for its inclusion in a national security program for the United States.

The next logical question is: Who benefits and how much?

Officials of the national social security board have said the unemployment features of the Act will cover a total of approximately 21,000,000 persons. Texas is one of the more densely populated states, but such a law in Texas doubtlessly would cover 500,000 persons or more.

Speculating on what would have happened if an unemployment insurance scheme for the entire United States had been in effect since 1922, R. Gordon Wagenet, director of the social security board's bureau of unemployment compensation, said recently:

"If we assume the same tax and coverage limitations now provided in the social security act, at the beginning of the depression in 1930 when unemployment became severe, the amount contributed would have totaled $6,972,000,000, of which $4,838,000,000 would have been paid in benefits from 1922 through 1930, leaving a reserve of more than two billion dollars for future payments.

Relieve Strain

"This is calculated on the basis of paying benefits at 50 per cent of full-time weekly wages for 12 weeks a year to all eligible unemployed during the previous years. Undoubtedly these expenditures during the depression years would have greatly alleviated the burden of unemployment upon the individual, and at the same time decreased the drain upon the resources of the federal treasury."

Although coverage provisions are not uniform in unemployment compensation laws passed by the states, many laws exclude from coverage agricultural work, domestic service in private homes, work for the federal government, work for state or local governments and work done for non-profit organizations formed and operated exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, literary, or educational purposes.

Aside from excluded employments, the tendency appears to be to exclude the smaller employers but to allow them to come under the law if they so elect. Some state laws exclude employers of less than eight workers; other laws exclude employers of less than four; yet one law includes employers of one or more. In states where small employers are excluded, their employees will not be entitled to unemployment compensation unless these employers elect to become subject to the law.

Most state laws also provide that only those firms employing the specified number of workers for a given number of weeks in the year are covered by the law. The number of weeks ranges from 13 in some laws to 20 in others.

Weekly Rate

Now comes the all-important question of how much per week in unemployment compensation may an unemployed worker receive. In most laws the rate of compensation is 50 per cent of wages regularly earned with a maximum of $15 per week and minimum of $5 per week.

To illustrate, let us take the case of Sam Jones, a clerk in a department store. Business has declined, and Jones, after being employed steadily for a year, is discharged. If he has been earning $25 per week, his unemployment compensation would be $12.50 per week, but if he has been earning $35 per week, he would not receive more than $15 per week in unemployment compensation. On the other hand, workers who earn less than $10 per week would receive not less than $5 per week in unemployment compensation, or three-fourths of their full-time weekly wage, whichever amount is less. This provision is, of course, to keep benefit payments always below wages sufficiently to encourage workers to accept employment, if it is possible to obtain it, in preference to unemployment compensation.

Most state laws include provisions for partial unemployment. Some of those laws specify that a worker's total income for such weeks shall equal two dollars more than the compensation for total unemployment.

State unemployment compensation laws prescribe a waiting period of unemployment after a claim is filed for benefits before the unemployed worker may receive compensation. The duration of the waiting period varies with state laws but most of them provide a waiting period of two to four weeks within the year. These weeks do not have to fall consecutively to establish eligibility of the worker. Any two, three or four weeks of unemployment over a period of months will serve to establish the waiting period and, if at the end of this time the worker, through no fault of his own, is not employed, he is entitled to receive benefits. Unemployment due to sickness or the fact that a person is not able to work can not form the basis either of the waiting period or a claim for unemployment compensation.

Duration

Duration of unemployment benefits depends on the type of law adopted by the state. In states where employees contribute to the plan on the basis of one-half of the contribution by employers, the estimated maximum duration of benefits is sixteen weeks in any one year. Employer contributions alone usually finance only a maximum of twelve weeks of benefits within the year.

This should not be interpreted to mean that the individual may draw 12 to 16 weeks of unemployment compensation regardless of the length of his previous employment. In all plans, the weeks of benefits are limited in ratio to the weeks of previous employment. In most laws, the ratio is one week of benefits to four weeks of employment within a given length of time, usually within the last 104 weeks of employment.

For instance, if Sam Jones loses his department store job after being employed for a total of 40 weeks, he may draw unemployment compensation for ten weeks only, even though he remains unemployed beyond that period. The ratio of benefits, it should be noted, is based upon all previous employments covered by the state law which had not figured in the payment of unemployment compensation.

After unemployed workers the law, some laws provide for additional benefits based on a higher ratio than used to figure the so-called "normal" benefits. It should be explained here that restriction of compensation to a maximum number of weeks in the year and to a per cent of the worker's earnings is a protective measure for maintaining solvency of the fund from which benefits are paid and assuring coverage of the maximum number of workers.

Qualifications

In establishing qualifications for benefits, most state laws consider a worker unemployed and eligible for compensation if he

1. Is available for work
2. Is capable of working (not physically or mentally incapacitated)
3. Has not refused employment for which he is reasonably fitted, including employments not covered by unemployment compensation
4. Is not self-employed
5. Is not out of work because he is participating in a strike or lockout still in progress
6. Has served his required waiting period.

All state laws require that a person, to be eligible for unemployment compensation, must have been employed for a given length of time in an employment covered by the law. The law of the District of Columbia specifies a qualification period of 13 weeks of employment within a period of 52 weeks. Other laws require 20 weeks. These weeks need not be consecutive but may be spread throughout the 52-week period. Employment under the same employer is not necessary. It must be borne in mind, however, that work performed in an employment not covered by the unemployment compensation law is not considered in determining benefits. Some laws make provisions for workers regularly employed on a part-time basis while other laws exclude them.

Upon becoming unemployed, Sam Jones will apply for unemployment compensation to a public employment office established by the state, through which he will receive payments. The time when unemployment compensation payments will begin is determined by the date upon which the state law provides that contributions to the state fund are payable. The social security act itself provides that under laws approved by the social security board, unemployment compensation payments may not begin until two years after contributions are payable under the state law. Thus, in Texas, payments from an unemployment compensation fund may not possibly commence before 1938.

Ask NYA Work For Soil Conservation

EASTLAND, Oct. 15.—An application for employment of 40 Eastland county youths on national youth administration soil conservation projects has been made, according to an announcement from Abilene Tuesday.

Farmers Urged To Sign Up For Terracing Work

EASTLAND, Oct. 15.—Farmers and farm owners of Eastland county who are interested in terracing or running their rows on water levels between now and spring are urged by the county agent to get their applications into the county agent's office at Eastland as soon as possible. An application card requesting lines for terraces or contours (water levels) can be secured from the office upon request.

The county agent reports that he has on hand applications for terrace lines on 1200 acres on 25 farms. Lines have already been run on 200 acres on 7 farms and the work is being done as rapidly as possible.

Those who are unable to build terraces this season, can run their rows on water levels at no extra expense and reduce water and wind erosion greatly. Contouring or water leveling the rows is no substitute for terracing but serves as a temporary aid until terraces can be built.

County Agent Cook and assistant county agent Barnhart have run terrace lines the last two weeks on the farms of K. F. Kirk and C. F. Poyner of Colony, D. W. Boone of Bullock Idus S. Echols of Staff, F. M. Williams of Eastland, Abraham P. Key of Reagan, and C. C. McFadden of Dothan.

On Tuesday, October 20th, pasture terrace lines will be run on the farm of Bruce Ebberhart at Rising Star.

County Budget for Year Is Adopted By Court After Careful Estimates

In preparing the county budget for adoption for 1937 the commissioners court, assisted by the auditor and county clerk, estimated the expenses of the county administration upon a practically accurate basis, as there is little change in the disbursement from one year to another. However, it is different when figuring the probable revenues that will be collected from the taxes due the county. This too, must be based largely upon the taxes collected the previous year.

Recapitulation of Receipts

Following is a recapitulation of the receipts from the several departments of the county:

County Clerk 1936, $6,902; 1937, $7,151.
County Judge 1936, $469.64; 1937, $500.
District Clerk 1936, $2,547; 1937, $2,000.
District Attorney 1936, $490; 1937, $505.
Sheriff, 1936, $1,125; 1937, $1,422.79.

The Wrong Murderer

By HUGH CLEVELY

SYNOPSIS: To clear Terence Mahony of suspicion as the murderer of Vincent Little, Ruth Fraser has told the police that Terence was fetching her back to London from the home of a school friend in the country, at the time of the Little affair. It is not true, although it is true that Terence was rescuing Ruth from kidnapers. Now, so that Terence may see what kind of man Ruth's guardian, Lee-Ramsden, is, Ruth is taking Terence home to lunch—and this pleases Lee-Ramsden enormously, for it was he who had paid Ambrose Lawson to kidnap his ward.

Chapter 18
LEE-RAMSDEN SCORES
"What kind of a man is your guardian?" asked Mahony. "Do you get on well with him?"

"Oh, yes," she answered. "He's a bit cynical and... and inhuman, but he's very good company and easy to get on with. I think you'll like him."

"I wonder whether he'll like me?" said Mahony rather gloomily. "I don't seem frightfully popular this morning."

After this remark there was a brief silence between them.

"You're rather in love with Elsa, aren't you?" Ruth finally asked.

"What's that?" said Mahony in a startled tone, and he flushed.

"You had a sort of yearning look," she explained.

She rose abruptly from the table.

"I'll go and ring up Uncle Gerald," she went on. "That is, if they've got a telephone in this horrible place. I do think it's a horrible place, don't you? I wonder why we came here? And such beastly coffee."

She departed in search of a telephone. Mahony remained at the table, frowning fiercely and taking occasional sips at his bad coffee. Ruth's remark that he was rather in love with Elsa had disturbed him.

"Still yearning," said Ruth's voice by the table. "I've phoned Mullins, the butler, and told him to expect a guest."

"Oh! Right. Then I suppose we'd better be moving," said Mahony.

He paid the bill and they left the cafe. Twenty minutes later they arrived at Ruth's home.

Lee-Ramsden welcomed Mahony with accustomed pleasant geniality.

"I've heard of you," he said. "You're back from China, aren't you? You must tell me all about it; I lived there myself twenty years ago. But I didn't know you knew Ruth."

"Oh, yes, we're quite old friends," said Ruth. "Mr. Mahony brought me home last night."

Lee-Ramsden did not comment on that remark.

"Shall we go into the study? you'll take a glass of sherry before lunch, I hope," he suggested.

They went into the study and Lee-Ramsden poured out the sherry. After he had handed Mahony a glass, he indicated the midday edition of the evening paper, which was lying on the table. In big letters across the top was the headline:

Film Star's Uncle Murdered
"Shocking affair that," he observed. "Have you seen the evening paper yet? Poor Little's been killed."

friend?" asked Lee-Ramsden ironically.

He sipped his sherry, looked from Ruth to Mahony, and continued in the same tone of mild irony.

"I don't profess to know what's happened, and perhaps I'm too old and stupid to be told, but I can't help feeling that somehow you two young people have got yourselves into a devil of a mess. It may interest you to know that Inspector Kennedy was making enquiries about both of you. I have an idea that he rather doubts your old school friend story."

"It wasn't my story; it was your story; you told me to tell it," protested Ruth heartily. "I told you what really happened—that I was kidnapped, but you wouldn't believe me."

"Yes, that's true," admitted Lee-Ramsden. "But you couldn't tell me who kidnapped you, or where you were taken, or who rescued you, and during your absence I received none of the demands for ransom or other sensational consequences of a genuine kidnapping—well, my dear, your story didn't sound very convincing, did it? If you'd only brought Mr. Mahony in with you, or told me his name—"

"But he wouldn't come in, and he wouldn't tell me his name," interrupted Ruth. "I didn't know his name till I met him at Elsa's this morning."

"These heroes are very modest, aren't they?" said Lee-Ramsden blandly.

He paused and looked at Mahony, and the expression of good-natured irony had quite left his face; his glance was keen and piercing.

"Or perhaps you had some other reason for wishing to conceal your nocturnal activities," he went on in a harder tone. "Did the Inspector question you at any length about them? I'd like you to tell me exactly what took place at this interview at the Littles' house."

Mahony told him. When Mahony had finished, Lee-Ramsden made a slight gesture as if marvelling at human foolishness.

"You began by telling the Inspector that you'd been walking about London till a late hour," he commented. "Then Ruth came in and said that you hadn't been walking about London, you'd been motoring with her. Naturally he doesn't believe either of your stories. And if we tell him now that Ruth was kidnapped and you rescued her, he won't believe that either. Unless you can produce proof that she was kidnapped and you rescued her. Can you?"

"No," answered Mahony.

"No," echoed Lee-Ramsden. "And at the inquest on Little the chances are that you'll both be questioned about your movements. By that time Inspector Kennedy will probably have obtained proof that Ruth was not staying with Anne Dawson during her absence. May I ask what you propose to say?"

Mahony made no answer. It was obvious that Lee-Ramsden was right; they would be questioned at the inquest. And he did not see what the devil they could say.

"Your first story of walking about will be brought up and contrasted with Ruth's story that you were motoring back from the country. People will say that you lied in order to save Ruth from scandalous talk, and that she lied in order to save you from being arrested, and that, anyway, you're both no better than you should be. Nothing you say now, either of you, is going to be believed without indisputable proof. And if you're not arrested, you're both going to be the objects of a lot of unpleasant gossip."

This, as Mahony realized with blank dismay, was also perfectly true. For himself he did not mind. But Ruth's name would be coupled with his; he could imagine the kinds of things people would be saying about them.

The butler entered and announced that lunch was served. Lee-Ramsden rose.

"Even if we are going to be talked about, we needn't starve," he said. "Come down and have some lunch."

Lunch was a silent meal. Mahony was perplexed and worried, and he did not in the least know what to make of his host. Judging by his manner the things he had learned before lunch had not disturbed him at all. Mahony understood what Ruth had meant when she said her guardian was a little unhuman.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE: It is the year 1757. General Montcalm is besieging Fort William Henry, defended by British troops and Colonial Irregulars. Some Colonials desert to defend their homes against the ravages of the French Indian allies. For helping them slip out, Hawkeye, a Colonial scout, and his Mohican friends, Uncas and Chingachgook, are put in prison, although previously they had saved the Colonel's daughters, Cora and Alice, from the Indians. Munro is forced to surrender the Fort. The Hurons begin to massacre the conquered.

Chapter X CAPTIVES
Gallantly, but vainly, several unarmed British officers sought to buy the way of the infuriated Indians. They were cut down with tomahawks; scalping knives flashed in the air, as the Hurons began their grisly work of scalping the dead and wounded. In the barracks, the women, panic-stricken, huddled together, like sheep under attack by wolves.

The Massacre at the Fort
One woman sought safety in flight, rushing out of the barracks across the courtyard. She was seized upon by a giant Huron and seized her by the hair, and began dragging her across the ground. Her shrieks brought French soldiers to the rescue, and a general melee ensued—the shrieking Indians no longer making any distinction between pale-face friend or foe.
Cora and Alice had barred the door to their room, and swung tight the heavy shutters. Alice had armed herself with a large horse pistol. Colonel Munro, with two other officers fully armed, was rushing to her rescue when Magua entered. The treacherous Huron smiled grimly and fired. Munro fell, mortally wounded. Others in his hand shot down the two girls. None now barred the way. The Hurons threw their weight against the barred door; it gave way. Alice fired, and the foremost Indian dropped. But the others swept into the room.
Heyward reached the scene in time to see the girls being carried off by the Hurons. Recklessly, he set out in pursuit. The Hurons scaled the barricade and disappeared into the woods. Montcalm, too, belatedly arrived and with his officers managed to put a stop to the massacre which had now become general. The ground was strewn with the bodies of men and women, indiscriminately slaughtered. Near the barracks Montcalm came upon the body of the dying Colonel Munro. He knelt to the ground and begged forgiveness.
Hawkeye and the Mohicans, too, were on the trail of Magua. When they came upon Heyward, the officer was wandering about aimlessly in the forest, his once faultless uniform in rags and tatters. Heyward's first impulse was to treat them as enemies; reassured by Hawkeye he consented ungraciously to join their party.
"However," he said, "I want you to understand that I still consider you a mutineer, and if we're ever under British jurisdiction again, I shall enjoy pressing charges against you."
Cora and Alice, captives at the Huron village, were surrounded by Indian warriors, met to decide their fate. Magua claimed Cora as his squaw.
"And what of this one?" the Sachem asked, pointing to Alice.
"This one like warrior," Magua said, scornfully. "She die in our fire."
"We'll die together," Cora said defiantly.
Magua approached her and laid his arm on her shoulder.
"I treat you well. You are daughter of little chief. I make you squaw of big chief."
"Why does such a big chief run from his enemies?" Cora asked calmly.
Magua patted her arm. "Good spirit—chief's squaw." And turning to the Sachem, he again made his demand. "This one my squaw."
"My son," the Sachem said gravely, "she is unwilling."
"But I have taken this woman," Magua argued heatedly. "It is for me to say."
"The Manitou has given us a law. It is for the law to say. She has a right to choose between you and fire."
Magua scowled. "Until the sun rises Magua wait for answer." And he stalked away. The girls, dragged back to the bark tepee where they were being kept prisoners, had to run a gauntlet of snarling crows, who clawed at their

Father of Davis Fields Buried at Eastland Sunday

Funeral services for J. L. Fields, 75, who died at his Eastland home Saturday morning after an illness of almost a week, were held Sunday afternoon at the First Methodist church, Eastland, with burial in the Eastland cemetery. The services took place at 2 o'clock with the Rev. E. R. Stanford, pastor, officiating. Mr. Fields, father of Davis Fields of the Cisco Daily Press, had lived in Eastland 28 years. For a short time, during that period, he operated a confectionery in Ranger. By profession he was a blacksmith and was also engaged in construction business in Eastland.

He was born May 18, 1861, in Georgia. His wife and nine children survive. The children are Mrs. W. T. Young of Eastland, C. L. Fields of Eastland, Mrs. L. B. Lippard of Odessa, George Fields of Monahan, Mrs. Noble Harkrider of Eastland, Davis Fields of Cisco, Edith Fields of Eastland, Doris Fields of Eastland and James Fields of Eastland.

A half-brother, Ed Brawner of Brownwood, and a half-sister, Mrs. Mary Hathaway of Arkansas, also survive, besides 11 grand children and five great-grandchildren.

Girl Is Buried At Cleburne Tues.

Funeral services for Frances Merle Taylor, 16-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Taylor, who died Monday at 2 p. m. at the family residence on West Sixth street, were held at Cleburne Tuesday afternoon at 3. The body left the home this morning in a Cleburne funeral coach.

Death terminated a long invalidism. The family came to Cisco from Cleburne a number of years ago.

HE IS A BUSY BUG!

The cold germ is a constant threat to your health during winter because leading doctors tell us that fifty per cent of all disabling diseases start with a "common cold." And the invisible but dangerous cold germ finds one of his best opportunities in homes where occupants are most liable to sudden changes of temperature. Therefore, it is a wise precaution to avoid the possibility of sudden changes of temperature in your home this coming winter by providing a constant circulation of pure warm air throughout the house.

the big city or famous institution. The first man tells the fake doctor his troubles; how the whole matter has baffled him, and asks if he will make an examination without charge. This he agrees to do.

"The fake doctor then makes his examination. He says little or nothing. He shakes his head as the examination progresses, indicating the discovery of some serious trouble. He finally announces, 'It is no wonder you cannot fit glasses to this eye. It is in a very bad condition. There is a cancer-ette' on it. Unless it is removed very shortly it will either go to the brain and result in death, or paralysis will follow. There are only a few hospitals in the country where such cases can be safely and successfully operated on."

"His confederate asks, 'What would be the cost of such an operation, doctor?' The fake 'specialist' then says, 'The cost would range anywhere from $2,500 up to $5,000 or more, dependent upon the clinic or hospital to which the patient is taken.' The confederate asks, 'Is it very dangerous and difficult to perform and is it very painful?' The fake doctor: 'No, it is not at all painful. It is neither dangerous nor difficult for one who has the skill to perform it.'

"Doctor, why don't you just operate here?" the confederate asks. "These people can not afford to go to a hospital. Why couldn't you just go right ahead and perform it here and now, or couldn't you do it here?" The fake doctor replies, "Oh, yes. I could perform it here just as well as anywhere but I may not do so. It would be unethical to perform it anywhere except in my office or some clinic or hospital." The confederate: "Well, this patient might have a stroke tonight or any any time if not operated on." The fake doctor: "I'm very sorry but it would not do at all to perform it here. I'll run out to the car and get one of the leaflets showing just where this type of operation can be readily performed and approximate charges."

"The fake doctor leaves for the car. The confederate immediately says, 'That is one of the best oculists in the country today. He's very wealthy and does not need money. I've known him since his boyhood. The size of his heart is not even limited to the size of his body. I know the only thing he is afraid of is that you folks might talk about the matter. If you can convince him that you'll not talk about it, I'm sure he'll do the operation for you and can save you several thousand dollars.'

"The fake doctor returns about this time announcing that he must have packed the 'leaflets' in the luggage which he expressed back home, but says, 'You can get the work done at Tulane University Clinic, New Orleans; John Hopkins, Baltimore; Miles Institute, Elkhart, Ind.; University of Pennsylvania Hospital, Philadelphia, etc., for certain amounts, plus the expense incident to the trip.'

"The confederate then says, 'Doctor, these old folks can not afford to pay such sums. The fake doctor: If they will come to our clinic, I'll be very happy to perform the operation without cost, just as I would here, if it was not for the chance of having the fact become known.'

"Confederate: 'Doctor, these people are truthful and honest. They would not make you a promise they would not keep. I'm sure they would be willing to show their gratitude to you by keeping the fact of the operation absolutely quiet.'

"By this time, if the old folks have not voluntarily assisted in urging the fake doctor to operate, the confederate turns to them for assurance, and the old folks willingly agree to a pledge of secrecy. The fake doctor will then bind them as with the sanctity of an oath, as they shake hands all around in solemn token of the agreement entered into.

"The fake doctor has the patient lean back. The head is dropped farther backward. An eye-dropper is inserted into a green opaque glass bottle, heavily corked, and a very few drops of the precious liquid, represented to be radium but actually some patent eye liquid, are withdrawn. After these drops are put into the eye, a blunt medical tweezer are used to rub the medicine around in the eye as an occasional drop is added. The fake doctor will request the mate of the victim, if present, to procure some hot water.

"During the few intervening moments of absence, this faker will remove from his mouth a piece of rubberoid material which he had placed there at the time he ostensibly went to the car for the 'leaflet' and spreads it over the patient's eye. He continues to stimulate the rubbing of the eye with the tweezers, and after this tissue rubber has been spread over the entire eye to the fake doctor's satisfaction, he will call any one present and point to the wonderful effect of his so-called 'liquid radium' in drawing this cancerous growth to the surface, explaining it is coming out by its very roots. Very shortly, he utilizes the tweezers to catch hold of the rubber, which is then slowly withdrawn from the eye.

"This so-called cancerous growth is immediately thrown into a fire, or in some other manner destroyed by burning. If the credulous folks desire either to preserve it or inspect it closely, they are impressively told: 'This is a most virulent poison. It is so deadly that it must be destroyed by burning. If I were to throw it into the yard and one of your chickens ate it, it would not injure or kill the chicken any more than the other filthy chickens eat, but if you should later kill that particular hen, then all who ate of it would get cancer of the stomach.'

"The operation complete and the victim satisfied as to its success, the fake doctor asks for a blank check, and tells the victim to sign it. This formality needed, the fake doctor makes a rapid computation, and states: 'The radium used amounts to $857.50. I'll not charge you a penny for the operation, and we'll make the check for $850.00 even money. I must have this in cash, as I'm catching a late night train, so I'll have to ask you to go to the bank with us and get this check cashed as I must account for the radium on my return to the hospital.'

"The check is made payable to the fake doctor 'or bearer.' The 'doctor' indorses it, and has the maker do likewise. They then take the maker to the local bank. One of the conspirators remains in the car. The other follows the unsuspecting victim to the bank to observe whether he cashes it or enters into conversation with the cashier, vice-president, or president of the bank."

Is Circle Hostess

Group Three of the First Christian church met Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Ralph Garrett on avenue I. Roses and lilacs were used in profusion in decorating the rooms where the guests were entertained.

The meeting opened with the song "Sweet Hour of Prayer" which was followed by a prayer led by the hostess. Mrs. Ira Guffey was in charge of the devotional which was taken from the book of Ruth. After a brief business session presided over by Mrs. J. B. Cate, group chairman, the hostess assisted by Mrs. E. B. Isaack, served a salad course to the following members: Meses. J. T. Scott, J. B. Cate, C. R. West, R. Q. Bills, Billy Huestis, H. Woodridge, C. B. Powell, A. S. Nabors, Dunn, Rex Moore and W. R. Cabaness of Memphis and dividing the total population of the state by 150 (the number of representatives in the house) and allotting representatives to each county, or counties, in accordance with the resulting population quotient. Here is an example of how that works:

Dallas county, with six members, has a representation exceeding the combined representation of the following 32 west Texas counties: Dallam, Sherman, Hansford, Oehltree, Lipscomb, Hartley, Moore, Hutchinson, Roberts, Hemphill, Oldam, Potter, Carson, Gray, Wheeler, Deaf Smith, Randall, Armstrong, Donley, Collingsworth, Farmer, Castro, Swisher, Briscoe, Hall, Childress, Bailey, Lamb, Hale, Floyd, Motley and Cottle.

Another example: An area in west Texas reaching from Fann down to Sanderson and to Balmorhea across to Paint— an area as large as the state of New York—has only three members in the lower house, no more than the representation allotted Beaumont and Port Arthur in county, Jefferson.

Moffett sounded this warning: "It was a stern and hard to get the legislature to pass this amendment. Opposition submission, centering in the populous counties that profit most under the present law, was overcome with the greatest difficulty. If the people vote against amendment next month, I am afraid they will never get another opportunity to pass on the question, and that the state will be distracted under the present law. And that would give two counties (Dallas and Harris) 44 percent of the entire lower house membership."
