MADRID DRAFTS WORKERS FOR DEFENSE

Through the Editor's Spectacles

I took the better half to the SMU-Vanderbilt football game in the Cotton Bowl at the Dallas centennial Saturday, the SMU athletic department having generously favored us with two good seats as a usual press courtesy. Now the better part of this household isn't so keen about football games of any kind, and she isn't at all keen about sitting on the sunny side of a breezeway about 2 o'clock in the afternoon. It was pretty hot, all right, for the first three-quarters of the game. But we had a good time in spite of the discomfort. Watching the Mustangs and the Commodores sweat and choke in the dust down on the gridiron gave us a comparison that made our own discomfort because of the heat seem puny.

The gridiron was first class evidence of what a rodeo can do to football fields. There was a ring of turf around the edges of the field but practically none on the whole rectangle of play. It was covered with dust and sand, making the footing bad for the players and streaking them with sweaty dirt. The TCU Frogs and their Mississippi State rivals who play there next Saturday are going to have a dusty time of it unless it rains and makes the field muddy. Then it might be worse than ever.

As for the game itself, there was a little too much sentiment mixed up with it to make it entertaining. I don't blame Mitty Bell, for most of us would probably have expressed gratitude in the same way. But the Mustangs so badly outclassed the Commodores that the score could have been much bigger had Bell chosen to play his first string all the time and really open up. I do not know whether the Mustangs have a powerful outfit—it looks it, indeed—or whether the Commodores were weaker than usual. They looked poorly in the game. But that might have been the result of the charging play of the Texas boys. The big red line smothered every attempt of the Tennesseans to go anywhere.

The most beautiful and interesting thing on the Texas centennial grounds to my way of thinking, is the Texas Hall of State. It is a magnificent piece of architecture, so simply and beautifully done that it is an inspiration to pass into its vast and classical porticoes and under its majestic arches and ceilings. The beautiful rooms were constantly crowded with people, who viewed the museum of Texas historical exhibits—a place where one can spend many hours profitably—or stood silent and awed in the great main room where the great seal of the state of Texas, containing the coats of arms of every nation under which Texas has at one time or the other existed, is done in relief against the wall at the rear.

A Texan cannot resist a feeling of great pride in his state and its history when going through this splendid and beautiful structure. It is a permanent one, built at a great, but well-invested cost. The federal building which flanks the Hall of State is another remarkable structure. Also permanent, it is notable not for its architecture, but for the interesting and

THEFT PROBE MAY INVOLVE MANY PEOPLE

Cisco Man Charged in Taking of R. N. Cluck Machine

With the prospect that between 30 and 40 people may eventually be involved in charges, officers of the state automobile theft bureau, the state department of the public safety and local officers throughout the state today continued their work of smashing what they described as one of the biggest, if not the biggest, automobile theft syndicate in the southwest.

Tentacles of the underworld institution, whose nerve center was found on a farm near Bowie, Texas, last week, have been found to reach into almost every part of the state, and officers were certain that they would cross state lines into adjoining states.

State theft bureau officers—whose department in state institution maintained by insurance companies—and state rangers made a swift arrest Thursday afternoon at Bowie and quickly seized a farm 10 miles from Bowie, near Alvord, where the ring maintained a "cooling pasture."

The man charged with being the "brains" of the syndicate operated a paint and body plant in Bowie and the farm upon which the stolen cars were disassembled, disguised and rebuilt into salable vehicles, was understood to be that of a relative.

Utilities Lose Effort Before Supreme Court

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19. (AP)—The Texas Utilities company (not West Texas Utilities Co.) and the Alabama Power company lost today in their effort to obtain a supreme court decision, before the court of appeals acted, on the validity of government loans and grants for municipally-owned electric systems in Texas and Alabama.

Former Ciscoan Is Killed in Accident

Roy Youell, 46, formerly of Cisco and a member of the chapter, commandery and blue lodge of the Masonic fraternity here, was killed in an automobile accident at Driscoll, south Texas, Saturday afternoon. Youell, dispatcher for the Missouri Pacific railroad at Kingsville, was dispatcher for the Cisco and Northeastern railroad here from 1920 to 1924.

The funeral was held at Kingsville yesterday afternoon with Masonic honors at the grave. Youell's death is reported to have occurred when he lost control of the car in which he and another man were riding and it turned over in the path of an approaching machine. Both men were killed when the second machine ploughed into the overturned vehicle. A wife and two small daughters survive Youell.

The American Girl And The King Of England

Wallis Counted Pennies Despite Her Blue Blood

Wherever Britain's King Edward travels these days, he is usually accompanied by a former Baltimore girl—Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson. She was his guest on a vacation in Southern Europe, at a house party in Balmoral Castle, Scotland, and they are seen together frequently in London.

The following is the first of four articles on the "Life and Loves" of the American girl who caught the eye of a king.

By SIGRID ARNE
BALTIMORE, Oct. 19. (AP)—This city's best families, buzzing over their silver tea-sets about "Miss Alice's" amazing daughter, Wallis, remember the days before the war when they were poor yet proud and popular.

Wallis is now frequently in the company of Britain's young King Edward. She is the wife of Ernest Simpson, a Londoner, and her apartment is in an exclusive section of the English capital. But back in the old days she and her mother, a widow, had to count the pennies. They were born to an unquenchable place in Baltimore's exclusive society, "Miss Alice," however, seemed to have been under an unlucky star.

The two lived at 212 East Biddeford street on the edge of that little section of Baltimore which centers around Mt. Vernon Place, Negro servants appear on the front stoops there each morning to polish the brass door knockers.

The Warfield knocker was as bright as the rest. But Wallis's mother had to take in roomers to turn the trick. Some of them ate their dinners there, and one of them became Mrs. Warfield's second husband years later.

Aristocratic Ancestors
"Miss Alice," who came from the witty Montague family of Virginia, was much in love when she was first married to Wallis Warfield, of an old and rich Baltimore family. Warfield descended from the Emory family which had an original land grant from George III of England in colonial days. And Wallis's mother traced from the Love family, which also had an original grant. Such blood is an unquestioned card of admittance to Baltimore society.

But Wallis was only an infant when her father died suddenly. The struggle which followed for the young widow and her child is remembered by Dr. Freddie

TO ROYALTY
Today Mrs. Wallis Simpson, twice married, is a constant companion of King Edward of England—a far cry from the penny-counting days of her early Baltimore existence. The couple is shown sight-seeing in Vienna.

Taylor, Baltimore blueblood and a retired society editor.

"After Warfield's death the widow lived here and there," says Dr. Taylor. "She managed to keep Wallis in school. Sometimes they lived together. Sometimes not. There was one period when Mrs. Warfield acted as a sort of housekeeper at the Chevy Chase country club in Washington, supervising menus for special parties.

Always Well-Dressed
"Even so, both mother and daughter looked like the last word in fashion whenever they went out, and that was often, because their comparative poverty had nothing to do with their social standing.

"Wallis's mother was the best company in the world, and Wallis has inherited her wit. All the Montagues were like that.

"Twelve years passed before Mrs. Warfield married again, and then it was to I. Freeman Rasin, also from a good family. But two years later they were vacationing at Atlantic City and Wallis's mother woke up one morning to find

Paving '89' Will Start December 1

Assurance that paving of Highway 89, known as the Strawn Mountain-Weatherford cut-off on Highway No. 1 would begin on the whole 45-mile project December 1 was given Eastland county representatives a week ago by State Highway Engineer Gib Gilchrist, J. E. Spencer, chamber of commerce secretary here, said today. Mayor C. W. Hoffman of Eastland gave out a newspaper statement at Eastland Saturday afternoon to the effect that such assurance had been given.

JAYCEES MEET THIS EVENING

Buffet Supper Will Be Served

With officers of the organization urging a full attendance of members for the first meeting since the series of community trips, the Cisco junior chamber of commerce tonight will hold a buffet supper at the Cisco Country club at 8:30. "We want every member to be present if at all possible," said President A. D. Starling.

INDICTMENTS RETURNED IN WENDEL CASE

"Kept Secret" Until District Attorney Is Ready

NEWARK, N. J., Oct. 19. (AP)—A federal grand jury returned indictments in the Paul H. Wendel kidnaping case today but the court announced they would be "kept secret" until the United States attorney is "ready to release them."

The jury was reported last summer to have ordered indictments drawn against six persons in a sequel to the Lindbergh-Hauptmann case but since has held several sessions. Wendel charged he was tortured into making a false confession in the Lindbergh baby kidnaping.

House Passes Bill to Hike Oil Levy

AUSTIN, Oct. 19. (AP)—The house today passed and sent to the senate a bill to raise the production tax on oil from 2 to 3 1/4 cents per barrel. Stripper wells producing 10 barrels or less per day were exempted.

ROOSEVELT AT WHITE HOUSE

Landon Heads Into Los Angeles

(By Associated Press)
President Roosevelt returned to the White House today for 40-hour stay between campaign travels while Gov. Landon headed toward Los Angeles.

Landon challenged the president to say whether he intends to perpetuate the national recovery administration, referring to a speech made by James Roosevelt.

Bible Conference at Methodist Church

Dr. Wesley C. Davis, teacher of New Testament in Southern Methodist university, is delivering a series of addresses on the Bible at the First Methodist church. He lectures this afternoon at 3 o'clock and tonight at 7:30 and tomorrow at the same hours. The subjects of his lectures for the two days are as follows: "How We Got Our Bible," "How to Study the Bible," "The Gospels," and "The Letters of St. Paul."

Dr. Davis is a graduate of Emory university, Atlanta, and has done post-graduate work at Yale. He was a successful pastor for several years in Missouri. He is a very pleasing speaker and knows his subject extra well. The pastor, Rev. Wm. H. Cole, invites every one to attend these lectures.

19 Persons Drowned When Boat Capsized

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 19. (AP)—The waters of Lake Erie today held the bodies of 18 men and one woman, victims of a 50-mile gale which overturned and sunk a ship loaded with sand. Only seven remained to tell how their benumbed companions dropped off two capsized lifeboats to which they had clung throughout the night. William Gifford, crane operator, who suffered least from the 10 hours of exposure, said the woman on the boat was Mrs. Bernie Drinkwater of Fort Stanley, Ont., wife of the first mate. She had boarded the boat at Windsor for a short trip. Gifford said most of the crew were thrown into the lake as the boat rolled over, they swam to the life boats which capsized immediately. At dawn when the two freighters hove into sight only the seven were left. The storm broke shortly after 4 p. m. yesterday. The Sand Merchant had picked up a load of sand at Point Pelee, Ont., for Cleveland. The ship left Point Pelee shortly after 2 p. m.

SIEGE ORDERS ARE IMPOSED ON POPULACE

Insurgents Predict Capture "Within a Few Days"

(By Associated Press)
Madrid imposed virtual siege orders today on the population as insurgent forces pushed their lines within 20 miles of the capital.

The government massed a large force at Torrejon, south of Madrid. Laborers and office workers were drafted to rush to the capital's exterior defenses. Fascists predicted they would enter the city "within a few days." Thousands of government workers were killed when the insurgents routed socialist miners to seize Oviedo.

Funeral Services Held Sunday for Mrs. A. J. Houston

Funeral services for Mrs. A. J. Houston, 91-year-old mother of Mrs. J. C. Mayhew who died at the Mayhew home, 1101 West Seventh at 7:10 p. m. Saturday, were held at the First Presbyterian church Sunday at 3 o'clock. Burial was in Oakwood with Lane's Funeral home in charge of arrangements. Rev. M. H. Applewhite, pastor, conducted the services.

Mrs. Houston was born December 18, 1845, in LaFayette county, Miss., and came to Texas 46 years ago with her husband, a Confederate veteran. The couple settled in Coryell county where they lived until 1918. After the death of her husband, she came to Cisco to make her home with her daughter here. She lived here 15 years.

She is survived by three daughters and two sons. They are Mrs. A. J. McCoy of El Campo, Texas; Mrs. I. H. Brasher of Amarillo, Texas, and Mrs. Mayhew of Cisco, daughters who were here at the time of her death; and Edwin Houston of Oxford, Miss., and Dudley Houston of Tucuman, N. M., who were unable to be here when she died. Nineteen grandchildren, 40 great-grandchildren and 5 great-great-grandchildren also survive.

Communist Granted Review of His Case

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19. (AP)—Dirk de Jonge, communist, was granted a supreme court review today of his effort to escape a 7-year term in Oregon for violation of the state's criminal syndicalism law, relating to a movement to overthrow the government. The man contended the law was unconstitutional.

Mrs. Abbie C. Daniel is attending the Gypsy Smith meeting in Abilene.

Vote!

THE ROOSEVELT lead in the Institute of Public Opinion poll continues to grow with the president receiving 54 per cent of the popular vote as forecast by the institute. How accurate the poll is, no one knows. The danger of such an assurance of unknown authority is that it may serve to abate the energy and concern of many Roosevelt supporters who would otherwise go to the polls and cast votes for their candidate.

EVERY Texas democrat should vote in the election. Many may think their votes of no consequence since Texas is so rock-ribbed a democratic stronghold that the Roosevelt-Garner ticket will get the state's electoral vote, anyway. While that may be true, the possibility always exists that a national administration can be elected without a majority of the popular vote.

THE concern of Texas democrats ought to be to give the Roosevelt-Garner ticket the fullest vote possible on Nov. 3, in order that the democratic ticket may achieve the clear-cut victory to which it is entitled.

Theft Probe--

and other parts were found in the same barn under a pile of shucks. The motor was not found. It was believed to have been installed in another car. Scratches on the radiator, an odd bolt in the fender, a scrap of cloth from a pattern which Mrs. Cluck had used in a dress, and most damaging of all, a portion of a school census blank filled out on a Cisco family, were among the evidence by which the Cluck car was quickly identified. The car was known to have been "hot" for some time, which was the reason for its having been buried under the hay, the investigators said. Friday night Cisco police officers arrested L. M. Weed of Cisco and lodged him in Eastland county jail on charges of automobile theft in connection with the disappearance of the Cluck car. Weed, under a suspended sentence, denied the charge, admitting that he had known he was under suspicion for several months.

In Unknown Jail

The "brains" of the syndicate has been lodged in an unnamed jail. Thursday and Friday efforts of his wife to locate him and obtain his release on a writ of habeas corpus were unavailing. He was said to have paid a sum of money for any car of the years 1934 to 1936 inclusive, delivered on the lot near Bowie, the man who delivered the stolen vehicle taking no further responsibility for the concealment and disposition of the car.

At the time of the raid, officers reported, there were eight cars—Chevrolets and Fords—in rebuilt and running condition on the farm. Five others had been dismantled. Seven truckloads of parts and bodies were hauled away by the officers.

The farm in a somewhat remote section from Bowie, was the scene of much excitement Friday as townspeople and farmers gathered to watch the officers and witnesses in the investigation.

The syndicate had been in operation for a number of years, it was believed. One officer said he had been endeavoring to "get the goods" on it for seven.

Human and Other Nature

By W. F. BRUCE

We are not willing to let truth have its way. We reach out to steady the ark lest it fall; or to help the truth lest some one not understand it—as we do. We are apt to rise in defense of the truth, as we think, but in reality of our view of the truth. We ought to have more faith in the Author of truth, and more confidence in its power to make its way into the understanding of men. Let us not fear investigation; whatever will not stand honest investigation can hardly be defended.

We have the example of those noble minded Bereans who examined the Scriptures daily. No better provision could be made on our daily schedule than for a period of that kind of investigation. One who arrives at a conviction through research will not be easily shaken. Our approach to the Bible ought to be with the open mind; as a Bible scholar said, "Read the Bible each time you open it as if you had never read it before," recipient to its teaching. These Bereans searched, not to see that these things were so, but to see whether they were so. "Therefore a great number of them believed;" good evidence that the truth will have its way if we let it. We ought to lead the minds of young people to the Bible and through it, as we would lead them to a fountain of water, not to pour water down their thirsty throats, but to let them eagerly take it up for themselves. A teacher can have no greater joy than to keep in the background and see one of his pupils discover a truth, through his guidance. That was the method of the Great Teacher. He seemed to assume that His teaching would do the work if the mind of man would let it. But He did not impose it upon unwilling hearers.

The Wrong Murderer

By HUGH CLEVELY

SYNOPSIS: In the determined effort to bring Andrew Lawson and his gang of kidnapers and other rascals to justice, Terence Mahony has walked deliberately into one of Lawson's traps. He has gone to a quiet house in an unassuming neighborhood, and he suits up for a mysterious Mr. Brown. He breaks into the place. He arrests Terence of being Mr. Brown, and threatens to take fifty quid out of his hide.

Chapter 21
DEATH STRUGGLE
With that it seemed the man's fist came to an end. His fists clenched; he took half a step forward; and at that moment his pistol came out of his pocket and he pointed it at the man's head.

"Better not," he said curtly. "The sight of the pistol pointed at him the Irishman paused, only for a moment. "That's the game—twist me with me money end threaten me with a gun," he exclaimed in a tone of outraged astonishment. "Now, me fine gentleman, you've the pluck, and if you kill me you swing for it."

As he fell, the Irishman had instinctively released his grip and fung out one arm to try to retain his balance. Mahony gave a desperate wriggle and got clear. The two men rose to their feet almost simultaneously. Mahony's back was against a corner of the wall; his breath was coming painfully in sobbing gasps; and the Irishman barred his exit from the corner. In another moment that terrible grip would close on Mahony's throat again.

Mahony had neither the energy nor the breath remaining to dodge. There was only one thing to do, and he did it. As the Irishman sprang in again to the attack, he marshalled all his strength in one supreme effort and sprang to meet him. And this time, either from sheer carelessness, or because he thought that his opponent was exhausted, the Irishman left a vital spot unguarded. Mahony's fist, with all the skill and timing learned during many hours of boxing, and with every bit of bone and muscle in his body, and all the strength of desperation behind the blow, crashed fairly on to the angle of the big man's jaw.

The Irishman, coming forward at full speed, was knocked clean over in his tracks, landing on the flat of his back with a crash that seemed to shake the building. Mahony, panting and exhausted, leaned back against the wall. His right hand felt as though every bone in it was broken. The Irishman lay still. From outside in the street came a sound of voices and a car drawing up. The big Irishman stirred. Slowly and feebly he raised himself into a sitting position. Mahony stepped forward from the wall. In case of any more trouble he meant to use the butt of his pistol.

The big man, sitting on the floor, stared up at him in a bewildered manner, his eyes wide with wonder. A hideous smile twisted his battered lips.

"That was a foine punch, Mister," he said in a tone of awed admiration. "I don't know that anybody ever hit me as hard as that before."

"I'll hit you a damned sight harder, with the butt of this pistol, if you try to get us," said Mahony bluntly.

The Irishman raised a protesting hand. "Be aisy," he said. "You can keep the money. I know—"

He was interrupted by a knocking on the front door below. Mahony turned swiftly to the window and looked out. A car was drawn up in front of the house, and by it was standing a uniformed policeman; another was standing a few yards away down the street. Both of them were looking at the house.

"Hell! The Police!" exclaimed Mahony.

"What's that?" exclaimed the Irishman.

With an effort he staggered to his feet, and looked around him. The smile had left his lips; his expression was that of a hunted man.

"It will be me they're after," he went on. "Some dirty traitor must have seen me come here and given them the wire. Get me out of this, mister—you will get me out of it, won't you? Sure, a man like you, a fightin' man, wouldn't see a poor devil of a fellow sent to jail without stirring a finger."

"I don't know the blasted way out myself; I don't want to be caught here any more than you do," replied Mahony. "From what I can see, the place is surrounded."

From down below came a sound of loud thudding on the front door. The police were no longer content with knocking; they were breaking in.

At the top of the stairs was a small landing. And in the middle of it a narrow wooden ladder leading up to a trapdoor in the flat roof of the house. Mahony ran up the ladder. To his dismay the trapdoor was securely locked with a padlock.

From down below came a loud crash as the front door burst open. Mahony seized the padlock and gave it a wrench. But it was a good strong lock and securely fixed; it did not move.

85,270 Pensions Are Mailed for October

AUSTIN, Oct. 19. — As state money in the Texas pension fund neared exhaustion, the entire picture was changed this week by the legislature's enabling act authorizing transfer of the $475,450 permanent fund to that available for paying assistance. Orville S. Carpenter, executive director of the Old Age Assistance commission, explained this week.

The commission sent out 83,270 October checks ($1,301,787) Tuesday and then Friday mailed 2,000 more warrants ($28,844) bringing the total number of October recipients to 85,270.

This transfer will enable the addition of more names to the rolls during October. Funds transferred will not be sufficient for the State's share of the November payments, Carpenter explained.

Recent proposals to divert highway funds for old age assistance was opposed in messages from supporters of the cutoff project.

Previously it had been reported the highway commission had entered orders providing for start of work on the "89" by Dec. 31. The "airline" route cuts off about 15 miles from the regular road to Fort Worth.

Prentiss Wells, halfback, is keyman of the University of San Francisco grid team's offense. Wells' safety work and open-field running is superb.
