DELIBERALIZING PENSION IS URGED

BITTER FIGHT EXPECTED ON AID FOR AGED

Must Decrease Number Of Pensioners To Only the Needy

AUSTIN, Oct. 26 (AP) — A conference committee recommended drastic deliberation of the old-age assistance law in a report to the legislature today. The report, expected to be one of the bitterest controversies in years over legislation, was made today as the body met for the final two days of the special session.

It said that the number receiving pensions must be decreased, more revenues provided and that pensions should be paid only to those in necessitous circumstances. The administration would be transferred from the present commission to the board of control. Seven million dollars would be appropriated for the fiscal year ending August 31, 1937.

Senate First
The senate will be first to consider the report. Senator John Redditt of Lufkin said the bill would yield over $7,000,000 annually.

A committee report on the unemployment insurance bill had priority in the house. Rep. Taylor Russell of Mt. Pleasant, urged rejection of the report, saying there would be no limit to the number of employees administering the act.

Pension Prober Is Transferred To This County

W. W. Kelly, old-age pension investigator, has been transferred from Abilene to Eastland for duty in this county.

Investigation of old-age pension applications is stressing the need of the applicants and endeavoring to serve those most in need first, he said today. He is interviewing the various relief agencies of the county for first hand information regarding the most needy aged.

Robbery Trial Of White Set Nov. 23

EASTLAND, Oct. 26.—Trial of Chester White on a charge of robbery with firearms has been set for Nov. 23 in 88th district court, District Attorney Grady Owen announced Saturday.

Deputy Sheriff D. J. Jobe stated White was returned last week from the state penitentiary and had posted $2,000 bond on the robbery with firearms charge. White was on parole at the time of filing the robbery with firearms charge, Jobe said. He finished a sentence at the penitentiary this month.

White is charged with Cora Vire Woods and Jack Gilliland, District Attorney Owen said, in connection with a transaction in which Steve Spicer was relieved of a small sum of money.

Rebels Blast New Path Toward Madrid

BLAME SOVIET IN CIVIL WAR

Portugal Says Russia Is Responsible

(By Associated Press)
Spanish insurgents blasted a new path in their drive on Madrid today as Portugal charged Russia was responsible for the civil war.

The fascists overwhelmed government defenders north of Aranjuez, a strategic point south of the capital. The allegation against the soviet was made in a Portuguese reply to Russian charges that Lisbon is sending the fascists military aid. It charged that soviet agitators created the situation in Spain which resulted in the fascist rebellion.

Norther Brings Freeze to Texas

(By Associated Press)
A new norther, sweeping in from the northwest, sent temperatures in the Texas panhandle below freezing today and gradually moved toward the gulf. Amarillo and Borger reported 30 degrees.

The norther put an end to drizzling rains which fell over a great part of the state last week. The chilly wind had sent the mercury sliding down to 42 degrees in Cisco this afternoon.

Give a Tree For School Grounds

Give a tree for the high school ground, is the appeal of the Cisco Garden club. Between 15 and 20 trees are needed to replace some that have died, the club explained. It is anxious to make these replacements at once not only to eliminate "gaps" in the landscape theme, but to assure uniformity of growth between the new ones and the old. Those who will make contributions of this character are asked to get in touch with Mrs. Wm. Reagan, Mrs. C. H. Fee, Mrs. G. B. Kelly, or other members.

Romans Had a Board For Balloting Machine

By JOHN SELBY
NEW YORK, Oct. 26. (AP)—Interview with the Columbia Encyclopedia, not precisely in encyclopedia verbiage:

"What was the earliest substitute for the modern and somewhat frightening voting machine?"

"Those wooden ballots the Romans used in 139 B.C.," said the Encyclopedia, turning a leaf and adjusting its margins neatly. "These were provided according to the Gambinian law, so that all a Roman noble had to do was to of crockery. Naturally." "Thanks. And perhaps you could say something about the secret ballot were supposed to have in November? You know, just any little thing."

"The Encyclopedia opened itself with a bang. 'Yes, I suppose you think the secret ballot's something new. Well, it's as old as the hills. Some hills.

"It was used in India before 300 B.C. Even some of our American Indians used it, and the College of Cardinals has used a secret ballot in papal elections since 1562.

"Massachusetts stopped voting out loud in 1634, when the general court elected a governor with paper ballots. And the American English colonies were the first to elect representatives that way.

"And, if you want to know, they authorized the voting machine first in 1892. In New York. That was all—get his toga out of the draft and drop a slab of wood into a box."

"And do you remember what they were voting for in 139 B.C.?"

"Certainly, I'm quite sure. It was called the Assembly of Centuries."

"I suppose you know of other curious election machinery, too?"

"Oh, indeed. The Greeks as I'm sure you know, used black and white balls just like college fraternities. Sometimes they used shells, marked and unmarked. Sometimes even potsherd."

"And what's a potsherd?"

"My, my. How long the standard of journalism is nowadays. Why a potsherd is a broken piece

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

Come on sun! That is the plea that is being heard all over the southwest as the football season swings into its second and most important lap. The games of last week-end were uniformly disappointing and indecisive, except in an instance or two, and the result of the flock of ties and upsets that occurred is a general epidemic of blaming it on the weather. The disappointed fan who saw dear old Sikosk go down in defeat after a gallant battle because a slippery ball was fumbled on the one-yard line, recalls the outcome with a shudder of "it might have been." Football was made to be played on a dry field, and the saving argument that a muddy terrain is as much to one team's disadvantage as another, is simply salt in the wounds of the disgruntled.

So the universal cry is for dry and sunny weather with a snap in the air. There'll be no alibis then.

The Cisco Garden club needs trees to replace a number on the high school grounds that have died. The club asks Cisco people who have the interest of the schools in mind and are able to do so to donate trees for the purpose. Mrs. William Reagan called me Saturday and asked me to make an appeal for these contributions and I have an apology to make to her for neglecting. But I have real justification for overlooking the promise. Shortly afterward, I received a telegram that my mother had been taken to a Memphis, Tenn., hospital for a serious operation. After a shock like that one is apt to forget to do lots of things one should do.

I am making the appeal today, however. It seems to me that everybody in the community ought to be interested in the attractiveness of the school grounds. And from a selfish and economic standpoint, those who live in the vicinity of the school should have even more interest than those who live at a distance for the very reason that beautiful public buildings and grounds reflect more value upon their homes.

Red Cross Gave Disaster Relief In 39 States Last Year, Says Spencer

The American Red Cross was called on for assistance to 131,000 families as a result of disasters in 39 states during the past year, J. E. Spencer, chairman of the Eastland chapter of the Red Cross, declared yesterday in a resume of the year's work of that organization.

Aided 105 Communities
"On 105 occasions the Red Cross was called upon during the year to render aid in stricken communities," Spencer said. "This involved assistance as a result of floods, shipwrecks, earthquakes, fires, tornadoes, hurricanes, typhoons, forest fires, epidemics, explosions, bombings, landslides, and other types of disasters." Spencer revealed that $5,232,052.48 was spent by the Red Cross for this disaster relief, although at the close of the fiscal year relief work in the spring flood and tornado zones was not completed. Only nine states in the country escaped some type of catastrophe during the year, he said. Assistance also was given in disasters in insular territories.

"Since the Red Cross first began carrying out disaster relief 55 years ago," Mr. Spencer said, "as-

Let us follow after the things that make for peace. . . . For he that in these things serveth Christ, is acceptable to God, and approved of men.—Rom. xiv. 18, 19.

Clayton Spoke With Authority

THE about-face which William Clayton, biggest cotton merchant in the world, has done in eschewing his former views and announcing that he will vote for President Roosevelt in the election next Tuesday is a telling blow at republican criticism of the democratic foreign trade policies and the republican proposed policy, as well as a vindication of the program of the present administration. For of all commodities produced in the United States cotton is the most directly affected by the tariff and foreign trade conditions. Mr. Clayton, therefore, speaks with the authority of intimate knowledge and great experience in the premises.

HIS high praise of Sec'y Hull and Mr. Hull's reciprocal trade pacts which he describes as contributing much to restoration of world trade, and, incidentally, the cause of world peace, is well deserved. Here, in one of several points, is there recognition of the aggressive and soundly planned policies of the national administration in action as compared to the hodge-podge of republican "aginism" and promises designed to achieve office by negation rather than the assurance of a rational and solid program for accomplishment.

SAYS MR. CLAYTON:

"The biggest question in the world today is the question of peace and how to maintain it. And that question is closely linked to the question of international trade and how to restore it. . . .

"The United States under the post-war leadership of Governor Landon's party, with three major tariff revisions upward, making impossible the payment of war debts or the purchase of our goods by foreigners, except with gold, was head and front of this mad nationalistic parade.

"The collapse of our foreign markets, especially for our surplus agricultural products, was the inevitable result. The policy of reciprocal trade agreements inaugurated by the present administration is at least a step taken to correct this situation.

"Governor Landon condemns this policy and promises, if elected, to scrap it. His position in this matter is an expression of such narrow, unenlightened nationalism and provincialism that I am convinced his leadership would not greatly differ from that which his party inflicted on the country from 1920 to 1933. . . .

"No student of the question can have much doubt that the maintenance of world peace is a race between narrow nationalism and frank recognition of the economic interdependence of nations; between hunger, arising from the destruction of normal processes of distribution, and plenty; between democracy and dictatorship.

"The best insurance against war is the return to the ways of economic peace, through the resumption of international exchange of goods and services.

"This does not mean free trade; it does not mean a precipitate slashing of tariffs. It does mean an intelligent survey of the whole program with the purpose of retracing some of the tragic steps of the past.

"Secretary Hull has patiently and unswervingly stuck to his principles. He is a great Tennessean, a great American and a great statesman.

"A vote for President Roosevelt is a vote to keep Secretary Hull in office, where his work, just beginning to bear fruit, may go forward with infinite benefit to the nation and to the world."

Many Farmers to Use Trench Silo to Save Late Feed

Many farmers in Eastland county plan to save their late feedstuff by putting it in trench silos, according to Elmo V. Cook, county agent. All feed standing now or left standing when frost comes can be saved in trenches, regardless of the weather, according to Cook. The more it rains the better this feed will keep as water is added to make silage, anyhow. Frost does not damage feed for silage, as it can be put into the trench 4 to 7 days after frost and make good silage. Sweet potato vines make a good grade of silage. C. P. Houston of Eastland is filling a small trench silo with them. Marvin Hood of Eastland is putting 6 tons of feed into a trench and B. B. Duncan of Reagan community is filling a 12 ton silo. Dan Childress is planning to put 35 acres of negari, about 100 tons, into a trench on his ranch near Reagan community. John Thurman of Terrell ranch and Dr. Chas. Jones of Cisco are waiting for frost, when they will fill their trench silos. A. D. McGinnis of Romney and Tom Grasham of Grandview will fill small trench silos. There are several complicated problems to planning and filling a trench silo. The county agent's office will supply a bulletin covering the subject on request and will assist in planning dimensions and locations for anyone interested. During the year 256,988 ex-service men came to the Red Cross for some form of assistance, Spencer reported. Through the same period 222,603 persons were given instruction in first aid, bringing the total number of first aiders who have been trained by the Red Cross since 1919 to 1,173,494 persons. The life saving service also enrolled 80,961 persons as life savers after their completion of regular courses of instruction, while 10,339 persons were reappointed after additional instruction and examination. Health Program "The Red Cross carried out an extensive program for the improvement of health conditions throughout the United States," Spencer said. He reported that Red Cross public health nurses have care to 233,616 persons and made 1,069,061 visits to or on behalf of the sick. In their school and pre-school work the nurses cooperated with doctors in examining 671,057 children. Of this number, he said, they found 342,861 with physical defects and arranged for curative treatment in 209,080 cases. Through courses in the care of the sick and home sanitation, 53,126 persons, including men and women, girls and boys, were awarded certificates upon completing the course prescribed and taught by the Red Cross. "Maternity and infant care was given by our nurses on islands off our coast, in isolated mountain communities, and in drought stricken areas," Mr. Spencer revealed. "Red Cross nurses were also sent into a number of epi-

The Wrong Murderer

By HUGH CLEVELY

Chapter 27
THE SLY ELSA

Terence Mahony was not a part of the plan of "getting" Lawson, the racketeer. But Terence has a plan of his own. Elsa Little is the girl who stabbed her uncle, Miss Fraser, intending to help him in return for his rescuing her from Lawson's clutches. She is a girl who has given up her life for him, and she believes Lawson is her true father and friend. She is waiting for him to help her against the law.

Chapter 27
THE SLY ELSA

Terence's impatience was increasing to get off the line; he thought what he was saying could get him away from the right, my dear Elsa, if you would only listen to me.

"I think he's more interested in you than in me. If you could make a move she might turn against me."

"I don't suppose you want to see me, but I had to come," she said falteringly. "I want to say how sorry I am for the things I said yesterday morning. I—I was upset; I hardly knew what I was saying."

"You mean you don't suspect me of killing your uncle?" said Mahony in a delighted tone.

Mahony's heart beat faster with excitement as he waited for her answer.

"Well . . . I did think I recognized your voice in the room," she admitted hesitatingly. "But I couldn't have if you were with Ruth when it happened. It must have been somebody with a voice something like yours."

That made Mahony feel rather awkward. He had a momentary impulse to tell her the whole truth—that it had been his voice, but that all the same he had not killed her uncle. Better not, though, he thought—not yet.

"I can't tell you how glad I am you don't suspect me any more," he said. "I hated your thinking that it was I who had killed your uncle."

His voice and manner gave the impression of absolute sincerity, and for a moment Elsa was puzzled. If this was acting, it was very good acting. And then she decided that it was acting. But she smiled charmingly.

"I didn't like suspecting you," she said. "You see, I—I rather liked you when I met you before, and it was an awful shock to me to think that—that you'd done that."

"I'm just as anxious to bring the murderer to justice as you are," said Mahony.

He hesitated. "Now that you don't think I did it, may I see you again some time?" he asked awkwardly.

"Oh, yes, I'd like to see you again. Come to dinner at my house tonight. That will show everyone I don't suspect you," she answered promptly.

"Thank you very much," said Mahony gratefully.

There came a knock on the door; the landlady announced a gentleman to see Mr. Mahony. The gentleman was Inspector Kennedy, accompanied by another plain-clothed man; they entered in an abrupt, business-like manner, but stopped short in surprise on seeing Mahony and Elsa together in the room, apparently engaged in friendly conversation.

"Good morning, Inspector," said Elsa. "I've just been telling Mr. Mahony how sorry I am for all the silly things I said about him yesterday."

Inspector Kennedy did not know what to make of this at all. Actually, he had come to the house in order to arrest Mahony. But now he thought he would wait a bit.

"You mean you've withdrawn the accusations you made yesterday," he said. "I expect Mr. Mahony is pleased."

"I am very pleased," answered Mahony. And he looked pleased. The fact that Elsa said she no longer suspected him was a great weight off his mind.

"I must be going now," said Elsa. "I'll see you this evening, Mr. Mahony."

"I'll walk with you to your car, Miss Little," put in Inspector Kennedy quickly.

He escorted her to the car, and held the door open for her to enter. Then he stood for a moment with one foot on the running-board, eyeing her keenly.

"Am I really to understand that you have abandoned your suspicions of Mahony, Miss Little?" he asked.

Elsa shook her head. Her face was pale; the interview with Mahony had been a strain on her.

"No," she answered in a low voice. "I haven't abandoned any of my suspicions. But I want him to think I have."

Inspector Kennedy said nothing; he merely looked at her enquiringly. It seemed she felt that some further explanation was called for.

"I—I think he likes me," she went on in an embarrassed manner. "I want to get him away from Ruth—to save her from him, and to—try to make him feel quite confident, and relax his guard, and say more than he means to."

"I see. You mean to vamp him, get him where you want him, and then hand him over to me?" suggested the Inspector.

Put like that it did not sound very nice. Elsa flushed.

"Do you think I care what I do, if I can convict my uncle's murderer?" she asked passionately.

"Besides, what's going to happen to Ruth if—if things go on as they are? She's much too nice to ruin her reputation and get herself into all kinds of dreadful scandals for the sake of a man like him. Somebody's got to interfere between her and him."

"You think she's completely under his influence at present, do you?" said the Inspector.

"Yes, completely," answered Elsa. "Though how he obtained such an influence over her in one meeting I don't know. But he's clever, horribly clever; he seems so honest and decent, and he's such a rotter underneath it all."

Inspector Kennedy's quick mind pounced immediately on one sentence in her last speech.

"You say he obtained his influence over Miss Fraser in one meeting—I certainly had no such impression—in fact, I had a very different one. What do you mean by that?" he asked.

"Ruth told me that before they met yesterday at my house, she'd only seen him once," replied Elsa. "At least, she didn't exactly tell me. It sort of slipped out."

The young Inspector's keen face was alight with interest. Evidently he regarded what Elsa had just said as very important indeed.

Two Held After Man Is Killed by Train

FORT WORTH, Oct. 26 (AP)—Police last night attempted to uncover a murder plot in the death early Sunday of Arthur Lee Wilkins, whose body was found in the wreckage of his automobile after a Rock Island train struck it here.

A man and a woman were questioned as officers from the district attorney's office, the police department, and the railroad attempted to establish a theory that Wilkins was stupefied with drink, driven on the tracks, and left there to await death before the onrushing train.

PURE...and of finer texture than most anything that touches your lips...

We all agree on this . . . cigarette paper is important. For Chesterfield we use the best paper that we can buy. It is called Champagne Cigarette Paper. It is made from the soft, silky fibre of the flax plant. It is washed over and over in clear, sparkling water.

A lot of the pleasure you get in smoking Chesterfields is due to our using the right kind of cigarette paper. Chesterfield paper is pure, and it burns without taste or odor.

Chesterfield

They're Milder and They Satisfy

Remember this . . . two things make the smoking quality of a cigarette—the tobaccos and the paper. The Champagne cigarette paper on Chesterfields is tested over and over for purity, for the right burning quality. Another reason why Chesterfield wins.
