Britain Protests Spain's Attack on Shipping

Through the Editor's Spectacles

By GEORGE

It was my privilege to stand Sunday afternoon on the sun-drenched western slope of old Tehuacana hill from where the grave of the founder of the little college I attended overlooks through an opening in the grape-garlanded trees a long western vista of many hazy miles. The scene is a beautiful one, and as impressive as it is beautiful. Rich acres of farm land, checkered with new crops, stretch into the purplish mystery of the early summer haze. The height from which the scene is viewed gives prospect without that sense of personal detachment one feels in standing upon the lip of a sheer canyon wall or cliff. The long hill slopes away between the natural proscenium of the trees, and you and the grave and the inspiration of that grave are part of it. You feel that very remarkably.

I never knew the man. He was dead almost before I was born. They told me he was humble and great, one of those selfless souls who left comfort and prosperity in an older part of the country and came west to labor with new opportunities in new soil, a missionary of the mind and the soul. Outside of the institution he founded he is not well known. But he is known there, and the inspiration of his works is gaining year by year a quiet, broadening, positive influence, like the ripple from a pebble dropped into a sea. A person cannot stand beside that venerable marble and hear the simple eulogy that I heard Sunday afternoon and look between the trees out over the appeal of that charming landscape without being strangely moved.

The tribute that was paid there is a tribute due many a sincere and humble soul whose life has been one of service and whose monument an influence that remains quietly and positively at work long after he has gone. The acid test of a man is the reaction of those nearest him. About that grave Sunday afternoon during those simple memorial services were men and women who had worked elbow to elbow with this man, students in the first classes he had taught. There were tears in many eyes, tears of consecration and gratitude, when the three gentle taps of the wooden gavel fell upon the mossy marble, and the words of General Pershing at the tomb of Lafayette were so appropriately paraphrased: "James Lisbon Lawlis, we are here."

It means nothing to the dead to say that. But it means a tremendous lot to the living. John D. Rockefeller was a great man in his sphere. But the sincerest tributes that were paid him at death were inspired, not by what he did during the first part of his life but by the generosity and service to humanity which marked the latter part of it. Shakespeare said truthfully that the good that men do lives

SPAIN ANGRY OVER ATTACK ON ALMERIA

Spanish Ambassador Says "Principles" Violated

BULLETIN
ROME, June 1. (AP)—Authoritative sources disclosed today that Italian warships had been ordered to prevent Russian vessels from supplying war materials to the Spanish government.

LONDON, June 1 (AP)—Britain joined Germany and Italy today in protesting to the Spanish government for violence against neutral shipping. The British protest was based on an attack on a British warship on May 26 when it was almost hit by aerial bombs. Authoritative sources said that Britain might face the task of proposing to the non-intervention committee a guarantee by force that Spaniards keep their hands off foreign shipping.

From the Spanish government after the protest the British received apparent assurance of readiness to establish a "safety zone" for neutral warships. Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden urged foreign envoys to regard the need for restraint in the new Spanish-European crisis. Informed quarters said that while the British government deplored such attacks as the Spanish government's bombing of the Deutschland, it had no thought of condoning the Reich's retaliatory bombardment of Almeria. Meanwhile fears were expressed that the Spanish government's anger over the incident would lead to precipitate action endangering the peace of Europe.

PROTESTS TO SECRETARY HULL

WASHINGTON, June 1. (AP)—Spanish Ambassador Fernando Delorscos protested to Secretary of State Hull today that the German bombardment of Almeria was a "direct violation of the principles of international law." Secretary Hull conveyed his personal hope informally to the German ambassador that the Reich would find some peaceable way to adjust the Spanish incident.

Farm Income For First of Year Is Largest Since '30

WASHINGTON, June 1. (AP)—Government experts today predicted a possible new peak in agricultural recovery this year. They said that income for the first part of the year was the largest since 1930; that the ratio of prices received to those paid were the best since 1925; and that the demand for farm products was keeping up with the advancing business recovery.

REPUBLIC TO CONTINUE ITS STEEL PLANTS

Inquest Ordered Held After Five Die In Rioting Monday

(By Associated Press)
The Republic Steel company, defying strikers, stated today that the company would continue to operate its plants at Warren, Canton, and Niles, Ohio; and Chicago and Buffalo because 1000 men want to continue their jobs.

At Chicago an inquest was ordered held for the deaths of five killed in a clash between police and a crowd which surged outside Republic's plant. Sixty-seven men were held by police, accused of participation in the rioting.

Prosecutor Duncan McCrea of Wayne county demanded at Detroit that the Ford Motor company and Dearborn city officials cooperate with him in seeking the identity of the men who assaulted AUWA representatives recently.

April Government Expenditures for County are Given

The various governmental agencies in April spent $56,598.55 for "relief" in Eastland county, according to figures compiled and have been released by the Texas Relief commission.

The Works Progress Administration meant expenditure of the largest amount. A total of 1,031 workers, men and women, were paid $36,000. Seventy-five youths at work for the National Youth Administration meant expenditure of $636.70.

Pay of the Texas Relief commission employees amounted to $200. Seventy-five boys in Civilian Conservation Corps camps brought $1,875, each drawing $25 a month. Food and clothing commodities were issued to 312 family groups, representing 1,297 persons. The food and clothing items amounted to $4,729.85. Included in the commodities were beef, 882 one and one-half pound cans, $205.50; 4,445 pounds of grapefruit, $117.80; 954 fourteen and one-half ounce cans of milk, $66.78; 1,858 cans of vegetables, $242.96; 3,972 garments, $3,892.56; and 817 household items, $204.25.

Grants were issued by the Texas Old Age Assistance commission to 889 persons, totaling $13,157.

Jewell Reeves, the Texas Relief commission worker announcing the figures, states: "The federal government demands that certain rules and regulations be strictly adhered to and that the supervision be done by the Texas Relief commission. The duties of your county workers are to keep accurate and up-to-date reports on all persons receiving assistance, to take applications from boys for CCC camps, to take applications from youths for their program, to accept applications where eligible for all persons for WPA work. They should also keep in close touch with all government agencies to the end that all your citizens may derive the benefits of any and all programs."

German Fighting Ships

Red Front Soft Ball Team Bows to Jaycees 6-5

The Red Front soft ball team, favored by many to win the city championship, last night lost to the Jaycees by a score of 6 to 5 with the winners scoring the needed one run in the last half of the seventh and final inning.

The game was close all the way and after a three run rally in the first inning the Red Front boys were able to do little with Carmichael's pitching.

The defeat throws the city soft ball title race into a scramble with several teams now tied for the leadership. Until last night's defeat Red Front held undisputed lead in the race.

The Jaycees made seven hits last night off Boyett and five were all the losers could get off Carmichael. Boyett fanned seven and the winning pitcher fanned three.

The lineups for Monday night's game is as follows:
Jaycees—Donohoe, short stop; Aycock, catcher; Garrett, right field; Belew, third base; Stamey, first base; Harper, second base; Allen, left field; Blackburn, center field; Carmichael, pitcher.

Leach will meet Huestis tonight at 8:15, and the Cisco all-star game with Ranger in that city scheduled to open the Oil Belt race tonight has been postponed until Wednesday evening so that it will not interfere with the city race.

Friday night the Cisco girls will play Eastland at the local park and on the following night Ranger will play a return match with the Cisco all-stars at the Cisco field.

The change in the schedule of the city loop will not take effect until next week, it was said today. The change is that all Tuesday night games will be shifted to Wednesday night to avoid conflict with the all-star games.

DEAN BOGER TO SPEAK ON 'LEADERSHIP'

68 Seniors Complete School Careers at Exercises

"Leadership" will be the subject for the commencement address to be delivered this evening by Dean K. G. Boger of McMurry college when he speaks as a part of the program that will ring down the curtain on the high school careers of 68 seniors. The theme of "ships" will be carried out in tonight's exercises.

Tonight's program not only will bring to a close the high school days of the class but it will end one of the greatest years in the history of high school for the seniors. They have probably won more honors than any preceding graduating group.

It was stated today that everything is in readiness for the occasion this evening. The program has already been arranged. It will be similar to the one last year, including one principal speaker who will talk briefly, and three other short speeches from members of the senior class.

The valedictorian, salutatorian, and most valuable boy, already chosen, will be announced tonight, and the awards will be made by Principal O. L. Stamey.

The officers of the senior class are Joe Slicker, president; Mack McGowen, vice president; and Luther Ponsler, secretary-treasurer. Joe will be presiding senior for the commencement program tonight.

Miss Elizabeth Daniel, Ralph Barton and G. M. Grasty are sponsors of the graduating class. The program for tonight's exercises as previously announced is as follows:

Presiding senior, Joe Slicker.
Processional, Mrs. S. E. Hittson.
Invocation, Rev. M. H. Applewhite.
Speech, "Friendship," Evatt Horne.

MURDER ON THE BLUFF

SYNOPSIS: First it is the mysterious shooting of death of attractive Jude Blinshop which makes us all jittery on this wild, stormy weekend at Farrington Bluff, home of Michael's aunts. Then a series of strange attacks occurs. Present are: Mike; the Skipper, his tall, tweedy younger aunt; Aunt Martha, stout and prudish; Gay Palmer, Mike's red-headed sweetheart; myself and the four servants. It is a relief to find the body of Michael's insane father, supposedly long since dead, below the bluff. It explains so much that has happened.

Chapter 27 "The Danger's Not Over"

"What's the matter, Higgins?" He was still white.

"I'd like to talk to you a minute, sir. Somewhere where we can't be heard."

I stared at him. "What about? There's no one to hear us, Higgins. What's on your mind?"

"Would you come into the living room, sir?"

Reflecting that the poor old boy probably wanted to relieve his mind by telling me his version of the story, I followed him into the living room.

"Well, what is it, Higgins?"

"Mr. Jimmie, the Farringtons have always been almost like my own family, as you might say. The old gentleman was very good to me when I was just a boy, sir, and alone in this country, if you see what I mean."

I smiled at him reassuringly. "I see what you mean. They've been pretty swell to me, too." What the deuce ailed him? If he trusted me enough to tell me the story, why all the preliminaries?

"This affair has been most unfortunate, sir."

My patience was getting a bit thin. I had many things to say to Michael, and I wanted to say them before he had soaked himself into a complete stupor. I frowned.

I said sharply, "What's on your mind?"

"Mr. Jimmie, he stepped closer to me and spoke in a hoarse whisper, 'the danger's not over. There's—'"

He stopped suddenly, and an amazing thing happened. His eyes, fixed on the window behind me, seemed about to pop from his head and under my very nose the man seemed to shrivel up. I wheeled toward that window. There was no one there, and my patience snapped.

"Higgins, what the devil are you looking at? What are you talking about?"

He passed a trembling hand over his eyes. "I—I don't know. Possibly, sir, I—I have been imagining things. Please forget it, sir." With a certain dignity he straightened himself.

Exasperated beyond all endurance, I fairly roared at him to speak his piece.

"Nothing, sir. I have been forgetting myself. Please excuse me."

I made a wild lunge, but he got to the door before I did. Crossing to the window, I leaned against it, staring out at the dismal lawn, my brain in an uproar.

Footprint on the Tile

"The danger's not over!" What did that remark have to do with the depressing secret of Farrington Bluff? What—? My eyes had fallen to the tiling on the porch floor just outside the window. There, clearly defined in rapidly hardening mud, was the imprint of a rubber boot. Higgins had seen someone at that window—someone who might or might not have heard what he was starting to say! The wild thought crossed my mind that maybe he was right—that there was more trouble to come, but I rejected it impatiently. What a hair-trigger state we had all gotten into! I went off in search of Michael.

He was not in his room. A disorderly confusion of clothes, books and papers gave mute testimony to his state of mind, and a nearly empty decanter of brandy told me that the Skipper's fears for him were justified. I thought first of the bootprint outside the living room window and then of Norman Farrington lying halfway down the bluff. Farrington Bluff was no place for a drunken man—particularly a drunken man in Michael's frame of mind.

In a vain hope of finding him, I rushed through the bathroom into my own room. He wasn't there. And I was reasonably certain that he wasn't downstairs. There were only two possibilities. Either he must be in talking to the Skipper or he must be outside. I rushed into the hall and raced with all my might to the Skipper's door. Without waiting to knock, I flung it open. The Skipper's oilskins lay on the bed and her boots on the floor beside them, but there was no one in the room. I had barely time to realize that fact, when a deafening report of a gun shook the entire house. For a second I was too petrified to move. The sound had seemed to come from the direction of the next room—M. Farrington's. I dove through the joining bathroom and pulled up with a bang.

M. Farrington lay face downward on the floor beside the dressing table, one arm thrown out at her side. As I dazedly knelt to turn her over, the hall door flew open to disclose Michael, his eyes red and bleary, blinking at me in amazement. We stared at each other.

"She's hurt. Get some water!" I managed finally through stiff lips.

He hesitated, and I sensed more distrust in that pause than I could see on his incredulous face. His eyes fell and he moved unsteadily toward the bathroom. I wrenched my attention from my own appalling predicament to the old lady.

She was alive. A bullet had torn through her left shoulder. Mechanically I noted that she had been shot from the rear at close range. There were powder marks on the back of her lavender robe, and the profuse bleeding in front seemed to indicate that the bullet had torn straight through. So Higgins had been right! We were still in danger!

Clumsily Mike deposited a basin of water beside me. He seemed hypnotized, incapable of speech. And I was glad of it.

"Find the Skipper!" I said hoarsely, starting to bathe the wound with my handkerchief.

"Hurry, Mike! Her heart's bad and—"

The Skipper was there beside me before he could seem to move. Her face was grim and set.

"Give me that, Jim," she said sternly, kneeling beside me. "There's a first-aid kit in the bathroom. Get it, please."

Higgins at the Keyhole

I got up with difficulty. I couldn't seem to get my mind away from the fact that I would be suspected of this shooting. It took me at least three minutes to find the first-aid kit in the cabinet over the basin. While I was fumbling around in the process, I could hear Gay's high excited voice. The thing must have been heard all over the house. In another minute the servants would be tumbling in on us. Vaguely I wondered, as I crossed the few steps to the Skipper's side, what had kept them off so long.

Mike and I were of about as much use as an oil burner in the Sahara. But the Skipper worked quickly and carefully. Between us, we lifted M. Farrington to the bed and stood waiting while the Skipper applied restoratives. Slowly, in a series of unpleasant groans, the old lady came out of it and was immediately acutely ill. I made for the door as fast as I could go, only to bump smack into Higgins, straightening himself from an obvious keyhole attitude in the hall.

"What has happened, sir?" he said without a trace of embarrassment.

I closed the door behind me with a jerk. "What are you doing, Higgins?" I countered.

"Miss Barbara was giving me some instructions in the lower hall. We heard what sounded like a shot and hurried up here. I stayed in the hall at her request to keep the servants out of the way, sir."

"Very pat, Higgins." Glaring at him, I noticed suddenly that he was holding something in his hand—something wrapped up in a handkerchief. And he saw my look.

"I found this on the stand here just now. I thought perhaps you had better take care of it until the police arrive."

Deliberately he unwrapped from the handkerchief his own revolver, to my knowledge the only one on the Bluff. I reached for it involuntarily, and to this day I don't know what stopped me. Perhaps it was the sudden realization that even as he offered it to me, Higgins was carefully avoiding direct contact with the gun. I managed to take it, handkerchief and all, without touching the metal. Furiously I hurled questions at him. No results that meant anything.

Cook was in the kitchen. He was sure of it because she had been there when he answered Miss Barbara's ring and both William and Annie were certain that she had not come up the back stairs. They had just left him. They claimed to have been in their rooms when they heard the shot, and he believed that they were because they had not been in the kitchen when the Skipper rang. They appeared immediately after the shot was heard. It was all very upsetting, just when we had been sure that the trouble was all over. He would very much like to know what had happened.

"Someone shot and painfully wounded Miss Farrington," I said bluntly.

He staggered back against the wall. "Painfully wounded," he repeated in a thin whisper, "Painfully—"

A thought was dawning in my head. "Merely a flesh wound," I said deliberately, with my eyes on his face. "She's quite conscious and there's no danger."

It didn't work. His eyes were on the floor, his face expressionless.

We realize that the killer is still at large in the house, tomorrow.

The true measure of a cigarette is the pleasure it gives you...
Measure Chesterfields for mildness...for taste...and for the way they're made...and this is what you'll find...
Chesterfields are MILD and BETTER-TASTING...because they are made of mild ripe aromatic home-grown and Turkish tobaccos...aged two years or more.
You notice the pleasant agreeable taste just as soon as you light a Chesterfield...because Chesterfield paper is PURE and has no taste or odor.
Chesterfields are FIRMLY ROLLED and made full cigarette size for the best smoking... 2-3/4" long and 1-1/16" around... the Chesterfield standard.
Chesterfields will give you MORE PLEASURE...
They Satisfy
