POLICE DRIVE STRIKERS FROM BRIDGE

Trial of Beer Case Scheduled for Monday

Through the Editor's Spectacles
By GEORGE

"I shall be in my pulpit Sunday morning and make a desperate effort to preach," said the Rev. E. S. James, pastor of the First Baptist church and a very conscientious and honorably-intentioned man. "You say it just like that."

You gather from the tone and manner of speaking that the pastor, who has just returned from a statewide gathering of Baptist ministers in Fort Worth, is an extremely modest, if earnest, man. Perhaps his association with hundreds of other Baptist ministers in what he termed the most inspirational meeting he had ever attended, served to reduce the ego of the Cisco pastor, who, honestly enough, is noted as one of the outstanding pulpits of this section. The tendency of youthful persons, even of exceptional attainments, is to become more meek in the presence of many others who do the same thing they do, many of them with pronounced proficiency and success.

The associations from which James comes, thus modified in opinion of himself, launched a three-month campaign aimed at increasing the Christian register of this state by 100,000 souls. The ambitious effort of that program is a tribute to the Baptist will-to-do and confidence.

The conclusion is that James will really get desperate Sunday morning, viewing the magnitude of that goal as a distinct obligation upon himself, so that all you Baptists who haven't been going to church should take opportunity to renew your acquaintanceship with the church pews in the prospect of a rare sermon.

The advice doesn't apply to Methodists who have "backslidden" to the last seat and are about ready to step out the church door, of course. We are mighty good on giving advice, but short on taking it.

Dick Bearman has lost all respect in an confidence for Dr. Ghormley. According to the ragged version of the affair that I gained on the derrick floor at the "Pa-Bac" well between the thumping of the tools, Ghormley is mighty nimble for his heft. Some misunderstanding relative to a supply of coffee for which neither Dick nor Ghormley were responsible caused the trouble. The misunderstanding developed sudden dimensions when somebody picked up a dolly bar or an axe handle. Ghormley concluded it was safer to run and talk afterwards, leaving Dick totally without support in the misunderstanding.

Ghormley admitted that he had no idea the welder of the club had any intention of doing violence with it, but that he was merely playing safe, because he could think just as well running as he could standing still.

GAS CORP. TO SPONSOR TEAM

All - Stars Will Meet Breck Tuesday

The Cisco Gas corporation will sponsor the Cisco all-star soft ball team, it was announced Saturday by Director Bill Cooper. He also stated that new complete suits will be bought for the all-star squad.

Ranger withdrew from the Oil Belt League when their team decided that the "company was too fast" and the two games scheduled between them and Cisco last week were forfeited.

All oil-belt league games will go nine innings unless the score is very one-sided, it was decided at the meeting of the committee last week.

Cisco will play its first game in the newly-formed league Tuesday night at the local park when they meet the strong Hanlon Oilers from Breckenridge.

Cisco will find the going tough in the new league with all the teams composed of excellent players. The winner of the league will be sent to the state soft ball tournament, "probably in Fort Worth late in the summer and will also be given a large trophy by the Halson Oil company.

MAY ELECTION IMPROPER, SAY COUNTY WETS

Judge G. L. Davenport Revoked Injunction on May 24

Trial of the case in which Eastland county retail beer dealers seek to have set aside the verdict of the May 1 election, outlawing sale of 14 per cent beer and wines in Eastland county, is scheduled to come up in 91st district court at Eastland tomorrow. The case will be tried on its merits following decision of Judge George L. Davenport recently dissolving a temporary injunction which restrained the commissioners court from canvassing and declaring the election results.

The vote gave the dries a majority of 267.

The beer dealers contend that the election was improperly ordered and held, and argue that it should have been called upon the special issue of 14 per cent beer and wine instead of on "all liquors," maintaining that since no intoxicants of above 14 per cent alcoholic strength were legal in the county and the election as called was improper under the governing statute. This statute sets up three steps by which liquor may be legalized in local option elections. The plaintiffs argue that the steps followed in legalizing intoxicants should be followed conversely in outlawing sale, the theory being that per-

Allred to Veto Appropriation For Commission

AUSTIN, June 5. (AP)—Governor Allred will veto the $22,600 annual appropriation for the state racing commission, saying today that he "saw no reason" why the commission should continue after August 31, the end of the fiscal year. Legalized race wagering will end 90 days after the termination of the extraordinary session of legislature which repealed betting. The governor was "undecided" what to recommend for disposal of state-owned stallions and jacks bought with a portion of the track revenues.

TOWNSITE IS NEAR PAY AT 8 LAST NIGHT

Hopes for Production Based on Showing in Marble Falls

The Cisco Townsite well of J. A. Bearman, et al, was drilling at 3,554 shortly after 8 o'clock last night in formation that had hardened. The Marble Falls stratum in which there was hope for production, was expected about 3,570 feet, J. A. Bearman estimated.

Plug was drilled out Friday night after water had been bailed down. The second cementing effectively shut off water which broke through the original setting and required a second run of cement.

Pay had first been anticipated in the Lake sand, the stratum from which it had popularly been supposed the Luse well, just south of the city limits, was producing. However, water was encountered on top of this formation, and it developed that much uncertainty existed regarding the actual source of the Luse production, most oil operators familiar with that well maintaining that the Marble Falls is its pay horizon.

Hardening of the formation in the Townsite was viewed with satisfaction, since such a drilling condition is customarily found to exist above the soft stratum in which oil is found.

Search Is Made For 2 Reported on Bus

REDDING, Calif., June 5. (AP)—Authorities today renewed the search for a woman and child reported aboard the passenger bus in which at least seven persons were burned to death yesterday. The possible death toll was set at nine after R. C. Bennett, driver of another bus, said he saw the woman and child aboard.

Oil Belt Traffic Council Formed at Meeting Wed.

At a meeting held in the Petroleum club room of the Burch hotel in Breckenridge Wednesday night, June 2 an Oil Belt Traffic Safety council was organized.

Chairman B. A. Peacock of Ranger opened the meeting with a brief discussion of the purposes for which the council should be organized. "We live in a highly mechanized and fast age," he stated, "and there are serious doubts as to whether present day high speed will be materially curbed. Our problem will be to properly control and direct our modern day traffic in such a manner that the lives of men and women, and boys and girls may be protected."

Mr. Peacock is chairman of the industrial education sub-committee of the Governor's Traffic Safety committee.

B. A. Butler of Cisco was called upon by the chairman to discuss in further detail the purposes and functions of the organization.

He explained that the primary function of an oil belt council would be to promote the organization of local traffic safety councils in oil belt cities and to coordinate the work of these councils in fostering a greater traffic safety consciousness on the part of the public. The Oil Belt, he explained, lies across one of the most important transcontinental routes of the nation. It has peculiar and serious problems of traffic.

Now Leading Normal Life

Two years ago Alyce Jane McHenry was thin and helpless as she hurried by rail from Omaha to Fall River, Mass., for an operation on her "upside down" stomach. Today she's playing parts in school plays and otherwise leading the life of a normal girl.

Girl Now Leading Life of Healthy, Normal Youngster

OMAHA, Neb., June 6. (AP)—Alyce Jane McHenry, the "upside down" stomach girl of 1935 who lived on a diet of ice cream, today is enjoying life as a normal, healthy youngster of 13 years.

Two year ago she was carried on a stretcher to an east bound train for a fast trip to Fall River, Mass. There the skill of Dr. Philemon Truesdale triumphed over her ailment and opened up a new life.

Pain then could not dull the flashing smile that won for her the hospital nickname "Sunshine." The smile is still there—wider and brighter.

Rides Bike, Now

The spotlight that held her in its glare at Fall River has passed on to others, but Alyce Jane doesn't care. She's having too much fun to think much of that period of fame—and pain.

In the two years since she left the hospital she has learned to ride a bicycle—her most frequently expressed hope at the time of the operation—and to roller skate, dance and swim.

She has become quite an amateur actress, too, and played the title role in a recent play staged by her school drama club.

"I'm having fun being like other girls of my age," Alyce Jane says.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

The Lord thy God shall bless thee in all the works of thine hands, and therefore shalt thou surely rejoice. Consecrate yourself today to the Lord, that He may bestow upon you a blessing this day.—Deut. xvi. 15; Ex. xxxii. 29.

O child of God, For nothing careful be! But cast thou all thy care on Him Who always cares for thee.

Lift your eyes to your Leader for heart-cheer, His face will be your light; His hand your strength; His grace your food; His loving kindness your never failing strength.—Anon.

Seizing Opportunity

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT is not an opportunist in the opportunist sense of the word, at all. But he is quick to seize the opportunities of the moment to further his program. That is just what he has done so adroitly in his criticism of the supreme court for beginning its summer vacations without announcing decisions upon several cases in which legality of government institutions is an issue.

gram. Unfortunately, it casts reflections that are unfair, particularly in view of the recent favorable actions of the supreme court upon issues in which the administration is deeply interested.

THE suggestion reminds that there is said to be growing sentiment among proponents of the president's court reform measure to delay its disposition until the next regular term on the theory that its value as a threat is so great that it can be held over the heads of the vacationing supreme court during the fall term with good effect. It is claimed that the measure was largely responsible for the recent trend toward a more liberal interpretation of new deal laws. If that object was and is in the background of the administration's reform campaign, the statements of Mr. Roosevelt may be attributed to a motive more subtle than the creation of public favor for the reform measure itself.

Swift Action

THE Texas legislature reversed its regular session record on legal horse race betting in the special session to give a demonstration of the speed with which it can act on measures whenever it wishes. The measure repealing the race betting law was on its way to the governor's desk with the blessings of both houses of the legislature almost before the special session for which it was called got under way. This demonstration of legislative purpose is surprising when one considers the stalemate that occurred in the senate to block enactment of a similar bill in the regular session. There was no greater demand for repeal in the special session than then. The experience reminds quite distinctly how parliamentary procedure can be employed to obstruct and often defeat popular measures quite contrary to its function of expediting legislative action. It has been explained that the over-eagerness of youngsters in the senate to carry the repeal bill through was responsible for faulty procedure which gave the anti-repealists their opportunity to block enactment. In the special session, with no other topic save that of race betting law repeal submitted, there was no opportunity for the anti to interpose obstacles. Hence, the speed with which the measure went through.

SENTIMENT in the state at large was preponderantly in favor of repeal. Only in those small areas where the "sport of kings" flourished at expensive race tracks was sentiment largely against repeal. Thus, no particular praise attaches to the fact that a lawmaker, representing a "repealist" sector stood for repeal. But the work of Sen. Wilbourne Collie in behalf of the repeal measure in spite of the heavy pressure brought against passage of this measure in the senate deserves commendation.

Human and Other Nature

By W. F. BRUCE

Here was one man that could be counted on. Trustworthiness is surely a comforting quality to find in some one upon whom we are depending for certain tasks. As a lad Joseph was sent on an errand of some importance to his brothers. He stayed with it through a difficult journey until he found them. That his father waited in vain till he might bring him word again, was not any fault of the boy.

We remember Joseph's experience in the home of the captain of the guard in Egypt, who his master committed things so unreservedly to him that he knew not aught that was with him save the bread that he ate. This trust of his master became his greatest bulkark against the temptation that confronted him. "He has put all that he has in my hand; how then can I do this great wickedness?" Only unusual circumstantial evidence committed this faithful slave to prison. Then his trustworthiness saved him again. Complete charge of the prison was committed to him. An unusual opportunity prompted him again into the presence of Pharaoh.

Here his trustworthiness was put to the severest test. He stood true and soon he rose to almost the highest position in the land, an office that especially involved responsibility for a whole land and its people. Some one was needed at this critical time and no one else was found "so discreet and wise." Finally God Himself relied upon Joseph for the success of certain stages of His plan for a chosen people, and lastly for a world. Joseph is a good example of success through possession of a pronounced trait and through faithful use of that trait.

Desdemona and a test spudded in the contract calling for a well 3200 feet. The location is about 1500 feet west-southwest of the former Clayton well, southwest of Desdemona. The block is of 1,000 acres and the north line is the Desdemona and Stephenville highway.

The well is being drilled by J.
H. Hickey, Arlington man and the Carpenter Oil corporation of Fort Worth. The contract calls for operation by June 14, but the machinery had been moved and was rigging up Wednesday, according to information reaching the Free Press. The test is expected to be completed in 40 or 50 days.

J. M. Hickey is taking for the Southwestern Production Co., Fort Worth, a second block of approximately 1,000 acres with the village of Victor in the south central portion. The block extends about half a mile south of Victor.

The location has been made on the Aunt Mel Smith tract. The new well will be drilled probably 1,000 feet from the well which produced 8 years on her place.
The well will also be near the well on the Harve Smith tract which flowed 40 barrels per day until shot and ruined. Also there are two shallow gas wells on the tract which are about 500 feet deep and which produce about two million feet of gas, which will be used for fuel in drilling the test. The Mel Smith test will be spudded within 60 days, the Free Press was advised.

The third block is being taken about three miles northeast of Victor, with 2,000 acres under a six-months contract. J. M. Hickey and the Carpenter Oil Corporation will drill this block which was inspected and approved by the Carpenter officials during the present week.

8 Seek Old-Age Benefits From Security Board

AUSTIN, June 5.—Eight claims for lump-sum payments under old-age benefits provisions of the Social Security act have been filed with the Austin field office of the Social Security Board, M. D.
Dewberry, field representative, announced today.

"Although inquiries about claims procedure are coming into our offices in increasing volume and it is anticipated that development of claims soon will become one of our major functions, we are still far behind in the number of cases expected to be handled by this office during the year.

"The Social Security board has estimated that approximately 1, 530 claims should be filed in the Austin area this year. On that basis, this office should have received about 635 claims by now," Dewberry declared.

Six of the claims entering the Austin office have been filed by estates of workers who have died, while two have come from workers who have reached the age of 65. Throughout the tenth Social Security Board region, which includes Louisiana, New Mexico and Texas, 227 claims had been filed up to May 29, of which 158 have been death claims, 69 age 65 claims. These figures bear out the Social Security Board expectation of two "death" claims for each "alive" claim.

"Old-age benefits should not be confused with old-age assistance," Dewberry pointed out. "Lump-sum payments are now being made only to persons in covered employments who attain age 65 and to the estates of those who die before reaching that age. Lump-sums amount to 3½ per cent of the total wages received by an individual in commercial and industrial employment after December 31, 1936, and prior to death or attainment of age 65."

Small cars of low gas consumption can be rented in Europe now advised to obtain international driving licenses in New York before going abroad.

Start Leon Flood Control Area Survey

EASTLAND, June 5. (Spc).—
A topographical survey on the Leon river flood control district was begun Thursday by engineers and rod carriers from the state reclamation department, Frank Sparks, chairman of the Maps of the terrain in the dis-following completion of the survey, made possible by authorization recently of the legislature, said Sparks.

The survey is forwarding the plan of the district directors that the project be submitted to the federal government for inclusion in their list of water conservation and irrigation plans.

Plans of the district directors propose construction of a dam

MURDER ON THE BLUFF

SYNOPSIS: Our wild, stormy weekend at Farrington Bluff, home of Michael's aunts, opens with the mysterious shooting to death of attractive Jude Blinshop. A series of strange attacks is apparently explained when we find below the bluff the body of Michael's mad father, supposedly long since dead. Then Aunt Martha is shot in the shoulder by an unseen hand and the Skipper, Mike's tall and tweedy younger aunt, disappears. I leave Mike with his fiancée, Gay Palmer, and start out to get William, the chauffeur, and hunt for the Skipper. But first I search the body of Norman Farrington and find a key.

Chapter 31
The Unfed Dogs
Replacing the cover, I stepped to the door and tried the key in its lock. It worked immediately. I turned out the lights and moved through the hall to the dining room door. It worked in that lock too. A skeleton key!

Then someone had certainly entered Norman Farrington to his death. Only a person without a key would have broken the lock to get into or out of Jude's room. And mad as he was, Norman Farrington had left that locked room at least once.

With the weight of evidence already against me, I dared not be found with that key. I polished it hurriedly with my handkerchief and returned it to its original resting place. There was only one consolation. The murderer either did not know of or had overlooked the key's existence. I switched off the game room lights a second time. There was no help for it. I must take the risk of his remembering and finding that key.

The servants' hall was empty and rapidly darkening in the gloom of the February twilight. I passed through it quickly into the kitchen, where I found all the servants. Higgins, Cook and Annie were at the table drinking coffee. William in his boots and oilskins was coming down the stairs, a sou'wester in his hand. It didn't take a Sherlock Holmes to deduce what they had been talking about. There was a dead silence. Annie began to blush furiously. So either William or Higgins had talked after all.

"I'm going with you instead of Mr. Michael, William," I said. "My arm is bothering him. I don't think he should go outside."

To say that this information was not well received would be to put it mildly. William favored me with a sullen stare. Annie started to say something and was heavily shushed by Cook. Higgins' face held a positively malignant leer. "I think that's a good idea, sir," his voice was silky. "While you're in charge, it's only right that you should do all the searching."

I tried to ignore him. "Have you a good flashlight, William?" It may be dark in the stable."

William's answer might best be described as a sort of grunt. But he dragged a flashlight from his pocket and handed it to me. At the door I paused with one more question.

"Have any of you seen Miss Barbara at all this afternoon—or heard anyone leaving the house?"

"No," said Cook and Annie in the same breath.

"Not that I recall, sir," from Higgins.

Watched by William William followed me out into the late afternoon. It had cleared miraculously. The wind, if not altogether dead, was rapidly dying, and there was a crisp snap in the air, infinitely refreshing after the caged atmosphere indoors. Gratefully I filled my lungs with the salty tang. A single star glowed

I peered into one loft after the other. Where was she? In the red-rimmed west and beyond it to the south, the gray-and-white tumble of the Sound stretched before us. William allowed scant time for observing it. "Are you in a hurry, Mr. Wells?" I was in a hurry. I turned on my heel and led the way down the rapidly freezing drive toward the stable. William stalking sullenly behind me. Halfway down the drive, I stopped short.

"We shall have to go back, William."

The man was watching me like a hawk. "Why?" curly.

"I'm pretty sure the stable's locked, and I forgot to get a key."

"I've got a key here."

His laugh grated on my nerves. We went on in silence. I reflected that if the stable were locked, the chances of the Skipper's being inside were very slight. I could, however, check up very easily on whether the dogs had been fed. If they had, it would be a simple matter to check back and find out whether someone other than the Skipper had fed them.

"Who usually feeds the dogs, William?" I inquired.

"Miss Barbara. Always."

"Always? Even the last few days?"

"Once or twice I've fed them for her—but not lately."

Of course not. I might have known that William would say just that. "Then who did feed them these last few days?" I demanded bluntly.

"I don't know," and William plodded on.

The stable and garage doors were both securely padlocked. William opened the former without a word, and we stepped inside.

"Skipper!" I shouted at the top of my lungs.

There was no answer, except for the yowling of the dogs. I looked into every one of those stalls. Some of them had a little water, but there was no food in any of them. The animals were ravenous. The collie bitch sprang at me viciously, subsiding with a whimper when I spoke to her. The others were tugging wildly at their chains and yelping mournfully. So the Skipper had forgotten to feed her dogs—from the looks of them had forgotten it two days in a row.

"William," I said, "the minute we get back to the house, see that these dogs are fed."

"Yes, sir." The Skipper's forgetting her dogs was equivalent to Napoleon's forgetting his army. "It's—funny, sir."

The Only Earthly Reason
I agreed that it certainly was. With poor old Farrington stretched out on the game room table, these dogs were the only earthly reason for the Skipper's leaving the house. And she had not been near them. Where the blazes was she then? I mounted the ladders and peered into one loft after the other, shining the light all around them. One disclosed the few dusty footprints that I myself had left there yesterday. On the other, the undisturbed film of a decade still rested. I came down slowly.

"We may as well look in the garage," I said.

William's grunt might have meant almost anything. We locked the stable door behind us, and entered the garage. The dry smears of clay hopelessly blurred under our impatient feet. The place smelled stuffy and dead. I called again and again, but there was no answer.

"Upstairs?" suggested William.

Private Aid For Families in Dire Need Is Sought

Miss Elsie Glenn, social worker with the Eastland County Family Welfare Association, issued the following appeal today to the citizens of Cisco and all clubs, organizations, churches, etc.: "Due to the fact that there is no more actual direct relief in the State of Texas, and Eastland county charity funds of the Commissioners court are incapable of caring for the load thrust upon it over a year ago, The Eastland County Family Welfare Association in Cisco is asking all churches, clubs, organizations, Lions club, Rotarians, etc., to consider the possible plan of private charity to certain desperate cases known only to the social worker. The county will continue to assist the cases they are already carrying, but are too financially embarrassed as to charity funds to care properly for these families. This organization assists only those persons or families where there is no employable person, no member old enough for the old age grant, no other pension of any kind, and who absolutely have no form of subsistence, no relatives who can assist, and no possible source of income. The Texas Relief commission will continue to furnish clothing to eligible families and persons and commodities will continue to be disbursed in certain necessary cases." Miss Glenn, as representative of The Eastland County Family Welfare Association, in this third of Eastland county, offers her services to any interested individual or organization to come before their board or club in an effort to explain the situation. Miss Glenn will be more than glad to call to mind certain cases, case name not mentioned for ethical purposes, and suggest a possible plan for that family or person, she said. She can be reached at her office on the second floor of the city hall any Monday, Friday, or on Saturday morning, phone 111, or after 5:30 p. m. at phone 206.

Judge Patterson to Bedside of Brother

In response to a message Friday morning announcing the serious illness of his brother, Ernest Patterson, Judge and Mrs. B. W. Patterson left immediately for the bedside near Esperro, Ariz. Seriousness of the illness was not determined at the time Judge Patterson left Eastland, as the message came from Ernest Gude at Springerville, who simply advised "if he wanted to see Ernest alive better come at once." Ernest Patterson was reared in Cisco and is a brother of Judge Patterson and Mrs. C. S. Karkalits. Miss Louise Karkalits said Saturday afternoon that no other report had reached them since Friday.

Townsend, leader of the old age pension movement. J. W. Brinton, vice president and general manager, said the mass resignations addressed to Townsend and effective today, had been accepted "verbally."

Administration and installation of the new curriculum is stressed in the department of education. A large number of physical education, music, and general liberal arts courses are in demand among the students. A. C. Wounded Roscoe Mayor Relative of Cisco Woman

A. J. Parker, mayor of Roscoe, allegedly shot by a discharged employe of the city Friday afternoon, is a brother-in-law of Mrs. Asa Skiles of Cisco, having married her sister.

Charges of assault with intent to murder were filed Friday night against Bill Dawson, 59, in connection with the shooting. Immediately upon receiving the message about 6 o'clock Friday afternoon, Mr. and Mrs. Skiles left for Roscoe. Mr. Skiles returned early Saturday to attend to his grocery business here and then went back to Roscoe Saturday night.

According to Mr. Skiles, Mayor Parker had written Dawson a letter of discharge from the police force. Friday afternoon about 4 o'clock Dawson encountered the mayor on the street and said, "Come here I want to see you." As Parker drew closer there was a shot. Without means of defense Parker turned to run and as he did he was shot twice more in the back.

At first the victim's condition was considered very critical, Mr. Skiles said, with the physician giving the injured man little chance to live. However, he underwent an operation Friday night and passed the night satisfactorily. Saturday morning the attending doctor gave him a fair chance to recover.

Two of the bullets were removed by the operation Friday night.

Parker has been mayor of Roscoe for 17 years. Sheriff Tom Wade said the Roscoe city council had been dissatisfied with Dawson's services as watchman and gave notice the first of the year, but Dawson refused to quit. Wade said the council cut his salary $10 a month but Dawson stayed on. He had been a nightwatchman two years. A bond of $5,000 was set by Justice of Peace S. H. Shook.

Beer Trial--

sons who might wish beer legal would not do so at the expense of legalizing stronger drinks. Therefore, they contend, many who would have voted for legal beer in the last election were impelled to vote against it because the language of the ballot led them to fear they would vote to legalize whiskey in voting for legal beer.

The dregs, however, maintain that the statute does not require that the three steps be followed in voting to make the sale of liquors illegal in a county or precinct and that the wording of the ballot was therefore within the purview and intention of the statute.

In dissolving the injunction, Judge Davenport held that elections are essentially an exercise of the political power of the people and beyond the authority of the courts to interfere in the counting of ballots for determining the results.

The trial due tomorrow will involve the merits of the contention advanced by the beer dealers.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Stroebel, of the Lutheran community, were shopping here Saturday.
