OHIO GOVERNOR CALLS STRIKE PARLEY

Townsite Drilling in Upper Ranger Today

Through the Editor's Spectacles
By GEORGE

Announcements from other cities that extensive plans are being made for Fourth of July Cisco, which has long held such celebrations at Lake Cisco, is going to have to increase the appeal of its programs at that time in order to meet the competition. No place in west Texas is better fitted for July Fourth and similar celebrations than Lake Cisco and the facilities this year are greatly improved.

Not in many months has Cisco had a community event of this character, outside those associated with the public schools, and it is high time that we got down to earnest and ambitious work in order to stimulate a lagging community enterprise. Doing things make people energetic and gives that feel of success which is encouraging. Doing nothing brings on stagnation.

Prospects for better business this fall is reflected from reports of excellent wheat harvests. The crop has practically been saved. Some of the yields reported are high. Mr. Black at the Dean Drug company told me this morning that one threshold at Moran reported one field near there had yielded 35 bushels to the acre. Higher turnouts are rare in this section.

The trend toward wheat farming appears to be gradually gaining emphasis in this area. Particularly north of here beyond the shinnery area where the land is broad and rolling and where mechanized farming is possible, is this trend noted. Seven combines were said to be operating in the Moran section.

Southeast of Cisco much wheat is being grown this year. Most of it is in smaller plots where the use of a combine is not possible. The yield appears spotted, but in many instances it is good.

The effect of the late freezes upon what would be a bumper fruit crop was not as serious as first believed, to judge from the fruit seen upon trees. Many peach orchards are heavy with fruit and there are instances where plum trees show to produce excellent crops.

Berries and grapes and other fruit unaffected by the cold weather are, of course, bearing heavily.

Russia to Sponsor Trans-Polar Flight

WASHINGTON, June 9. (AP)—Diplomatic sources said today that soviet planned shortly to sponsor a new trans-Polar flight by a Russian aviator from Moscow to San Francisco. Recent Moscow dispatches have said the pilot probably would be Sigismund Levanevsky, outstanding flyer.

Weather

EAST TEXAS: Mostly cloudy showers in north-east and north-central, cooler in north-west and north-central tonight; Thursday, partly cloudy.

WEST TEXAS: Generally fair in south and central, probably showers in panhandle tonight and Thursday; cooler in panhandle tonight.

DRILL DOWN TO 3754 FEET EARLY TODAY

Slow Progress Made in Hard Formation of Sandy Texture

The Cisco Townsite No. 1 of J. A. Bearman, et al, was drilling in the top of the upper Ranger early this afternoon at 3754 feet. The drill was expected to be sent to 3760 before being pulled out to run the bailer.

Drilling was hard with eight or nine feet of a sandy formation being penetrated. There was no indication of oil or gas.

It was expected to be late in the afternoon before possibility of pay in the stratum could be determined.

Ciscoans Leave Tuesday Evening For Encampment

Five young people of the Cisco First Presbyterian church left Tuesday evening for Kerrville where they will attend the Presbyterian young people's camp which began yesterday and will continue till June 17. Rev. M. H. Applewhite, pastor of the First Presbyterian church took the group. He will return late today, it was said.

Ciscoans attending the camp were Howard Tableman, J. G. Rupe, Nanella Bible, Martha Joe Pass and Bernice Garrett.

The Cisco Presbyterian camp will be divided into two divisions this year with 150 expected for the eighth annual pioneer camp to begin June 28 and continue until July 3. The second annual senior encampment will last from July 13 to 17. At least 100 are expected for the second encampment.

Baptist Revival Is Being Well-Attended

The revival now in progress at the East Cisco Baptist church is marked with good attendance and interest, it was reported today.

Services are being held twice daily at 10 a. m. and 8 p. m. The subject for tonight's sermon is "Death of Christ and its Importance." Thursday morning's sermon subject will be "What is in Thine Hand," it was said today.

Hubert Christian, twin brother of Herbert Christian, pastor of the church is preaching the sermons and Rev. H. D. Blair is assisting and is in charge of singing.

BAND PLAYS TUESDAY AT CONVENTION

Gives 2 Performances For Lions Meeting at Weatherford

Although hindered at the opening by rough weather the Lions convention in Weatherford opened Tuesday afternoon.

The Cisco Lobo band left Cisco about 11:30 Tuesday morning and went to the convention city where it played a 30-minute concert at 3:45 in the Weatherford high school auditorium. At 7 last night the musicians gave another 30-minute program preceding the banquet which was served at the American Legion hall.

Attendance at the opening of the convention was lowered by the near cyclone that hit near Weatherford yesterday. Rain, hail, and wind did some damage around the city and several cars were dented by the hail.

Two cars and a school bus transferred Bandmaster Maddox and his musicians to the convention and their return was delayed about 10 miles west of Weatherford when they had to wait for water which was running across the highway and halting traffic.

The Cisco Lions club paid expenses of the bands trip, including transportation and meals.

Germany Now One of Strongest Sea Powers

AP Feature Service Writer

At 10 a. m. June 21, 1919, the German high fleet, "interned" on the waters of Scapa Flow, south of the Orkney islands, plunged under the waves with battle flags flying.

The ships, surrendered at the close of the world war, had been scuttled by their crews to prevent them from falling into allied hands.

This and the treaty of Versailles marked the end, seemingly, of Germany's seapower, which had threatened Britain's mastery of the seas.

A Power Once Again

Yet on May 31 this year the bombardment of the Spanish port of Almeria by five German warships drove home to a startled world that the third Reich had once more launched itself as a seapower to be reckoned with.

How was this possible? By a combination of bold diplomacy and bold technical innovations.

The peace treaty doomed any new German navy to a minor role by fixing the maximum strength of the German fleet at six small battleships, six cruisers, 12 destroyers, 12 torpedo boats and no submarines. Submarines, from 1914 to 1918, had almost turned the tide of warfare in favor of Germany and her allies.

Pocket Battleships

But Hitler's rise to power brought with it the scrapping of arms limitations imposed upon Germany. The start of the 1937 world naval race found Germany with 59 warships, aggregating 128,382 tons, and building, or having appropriated for, 38 ships of 195,366 tons, including two 35,000 ton battleships, two aircraft carriers, three cruisers, four destroyers, 12 torpedo boats and 14 submarines.

But even before the advent of the nazis, Germany had sought, and found, a method of circumventing the restrictions of the peace treaties as regards naval armament. In 1932 was launched the first powerful "vest-pocket" battleship, the "Deutschland," with 10,000 ton displacement and six 11-inch guns. It was a swift, floating fortress commanding respect.

Two sister ships followed, the "Admiral Scheer" and the "Graf Spee." Their launching created a profound effect in European naval circles, particularly French. Barred from laying down the keels of heavier vessels, Germany had designed and built ships of the line that potentially could hold their own against men o'war three times their weight.

This she did by using every possible weight-saving device. For instance, by welding instead of riveting the parts, she cut 500 tons from a pocket cruiser's weight.

Signs With Britain

In 1935 first reports that the Reich was constructing submarines, in defiance of treaty restrictions, inspired hope in France that Hitler's naval rearmament policy would "awaken" Britain to the new German sea threat.

French naval experts pointed out, as well, that France's mobilization in case of war would be "seriously menaced" if German demands for naval parity with France were met.

The British answer was an Anglo-German naval limitations pact, concluded in June, 1935. The agreement permits Germany to maintain a navy at 35 per cent of the British sea strength, the ratio applying in general to each category of sea armament.

Orchestra From Crazy Hotel Will Play for Dance

The Crazy Hotel orchestra has eight pieces and two vocalists.

POPE ASKED TODAY TO GO TO GERMANY

Schwarzkops Wants Him to Find Out Facts of Breach

BERLIN, June 9. (AP)—The Schwarzkops, official organ of Hitler's picked Schutz Staffeln guards, today called on Pope Pius to come to Germany and find out for himself facts of the breach between the Catholic church and the Nazi government.

A paper's injection of personal element followed the official press demand that Germans choose between Hitler and the Vatican.

In Rome, the pope told a group of Bavarian Pilgrims that conditions of Germany were "so grave, menacing, and dolorous" for Catholicism that they would "cause one to weep."

Rebels Blamed for Almeria Incident

LONDON, June 9. (AP)—Britain today sent a protest to General Francisco Franco, blaming Spanish insurgents for the mine hit by the British Destroyer Hunter off the coast of Almeria May 13, when eight were killed and 24 wounded.

In Berlin, official quarters expressed confidence that Germany and Italy would resume participation in the non-intervention patrol before the week's end. German Ambassador Von Ribbentrop and British Foreign Secretary Eden are to confer tomorrow.

All-Stars Drop Opening Contest to Oilers 6 to 3

The Oil Belt soft ball championship race opened last night with the Cisco all-stars losing a 6 to 3 decision to the strong Hnalton Oilers of Breckenridge.

Errors by several of the Cisco players was the main cause of the defeat. This accounted for at least half of the six runs scored by the visitors.

Goodwin, Hanlon pitcher, was complete master of the Ciscoans after the first inning in which White, short stop placed a hit through second base and Belev got to first on an error. Both scored before the inning was over, but the Breckenridge pitcher did not allow another hit until the ninth inning when St. John and White both hit. This rally was cut short after St. John was caught at the plate on White's double and White's run was all Cisco was able to get.

Henson Williamson Lions Club Speaker

Henson Williamson, brother of Chapman Williamson of Cisco spoke at the Lions club meeting today. His talk was on soil erosion work that is being done in Tom Green and Coke counties by the soil erosion experimental station there.

The program was short today because several of the members were gone to Weatherford for the convention.

AGREEMENT IN STEEL STRIKE BEING SOUGHT

CIO Will Attempt to Prevent Reopening of Plant

YOUNGSTOWN, June 9. (AP)—Ohio's Governor Davey today called a conference of company and union representatives in the seven-state steel strike as unionists at Monroe, Michigan, announced that from 8,000 to 10,000 Detroit CIO members would aid in an attempt to keep shut the Republic subsidiary plant, reopening of which is reset for tomorrow.

The Wagner act was invoked in Chicago. CIO attorneys were drafting a complaint about Inland Steel's unfair labor. More than 300,000 residents of Michigan's Saginaw valley are without electric service despite the announcement by John L. Lewis in Washington that the power workers strike was settled.

Mayor Daniel Knaggs, of Monroe asked civilians of military experience to enlist as deputies to protect the steel plant reopening.

Funeral Services For M. L. Dennis Are Held at 2:30

Funeral services were held at 2:30 today in Moran for M. L. Dennis, about 30, of Sedwick, who was victim of an accidental gun shot Monday afternoon about 5 o'clock at his home. He died in a Cisco hospital Monday night about 8:30.

Dennis was killed when he went the living room of his home to take down a small rifle which he kept over the mantle piece with which to take a shot at a rabbit. No one was in the room when the accident occurred. The gun discharged and the 22 calibre bullet struck him in the right temple, ranging downward.

Survivors include his wife, the former Evelyn Jones; a daughter, 7; three brothers, Jack, J. S. and Robert Dennis of Moran; three sisters, Mrs. Steve Drake of Brownwood, Mrs. N. E. Padgett of Waco, Mrs. H. H. Tidmore, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Dennis.

Mr. Dennis was born at Altus, Okla., and moved to Moran with his parents at the age of two years.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Duff and daughter, Ruth El, close friends of the Dennis family, attended the funeral.

MURDER ON THE BLUFF

SYNOPSIS: Our wild, stormy weekend at Farrington Bluff, home of Michael's aunts, opens with the mysterious shooting to death of attractive Jude Blinshop. A series of strange attacks is apparently explained when we find the body of Michael's mad father below the bluff. Then Aunt Martha is shot in the shoulder by an unseen hand, and the Skipper, Mike's tall, tweedy younger aunt, disappears. Sleeping powder nearly finish Aunt Martha. Leaving Gay Palmer, Mike's fiancée, with her, Mike and I search the cellar, desperately hunting the Skipper.

Chapter 34 Locked In

A tried the next closet and the next and the next. Splintered wood, broken glass, and a mess of fruits and vegetables. Mike took the ax from me and I stood hanging on to the light while he bashed in two more doors. Then I took another turn and he took another. Before the last closet we paused, looking at each other. I went at it quietly. Perhaps found it, and started down the passage, our light flashing ahead of us. Mike's hand closed on my arm suddenly.

"Jim," he whispered, "wasn't there a light over the stairs?" I stared into the blackness ahead, and my heart did a flip-flop.

"It was an old bulb," I said. "Probably burned out." But the echo of my voice wasn't reassuring. I breathed a sigh of relief as we gained the top of those rickety steps and my hand found the door knob.

Crashing in the Door
"What the devil's the matter?" demanded Michael.

I had to swallow before I could answer.

"The door's locked on the outside—bolted." The reflected light from the kitchen shown clearly through the keyhole when I extinguished our torch.

I handed Mike the flashlight appeared down the passage, my imagination had me on the run. I imagined that the killer had come down into the blackness of the cellar to finish his work. I imagined that I had sent Mike down to his death while I stood at a door. I saw the glint of light on the steel ax, and swallowed hard.

"Here you are. Hurry!" Mike's voice was urgent.

It didn't take me 10 seconds to crash in that door.

With a screech of tearing wood, we tumbled pell-mell into the entry and threw open the kitchen door upon an empty room.

The picture in my mind sent me tearing up the back stairs. On the landing, Mike nearly knocked me down, attempting to pass me. I flung open M. Farrington's door, but Mike was into the room ahead of me.

M. Farrington was sleeping. Gay was sitting beside her, and in a far corner of the room William and Annie were whispering together. They all turned sharply toward us.

"All right, I think," Gay answered our unspoken question. "Mike what under the sun—"

I interrupted her. It seemed to me that this was no place for telling the story.

"My fault, kid," I said. "I thought I'd had a revelation or something."

"But—"

"Not here. Mike will tell you about it. You two go on down and start Higgins rustling up some food. I'll stay with Aunt Martha." I shoved them both into the hall, still protesting. Why had William bolted that cellar door? I was almost positive that he had, and I was equally positive that there would be no use in asking him. He had certainly saved M. Farrington's life, but— At any rate I sent both him and Annie down to help Cook. Alone, I sat down beside M. Farrington.

She looked better, but not enough better for much rejoicing. The Skipper's words, "Her heart is bad," were drumming in my head. Well, as long as she was sleeping there was nothing more we could do. Sitting there with anxious eyes glued to the old lady's face, I went through a bad half hour.

A Conviction Gnaws Me

One terrible conviction was gnawing at me persistently—the conviction that the Skipper alone was responsible for our weekend of horrors. Her peculiar actions had been the direct cause of our presence at the Bluff. We had only her unsubstantiated story to explain her invitation, and that story was bizarre, to put it mildly.

It was possible, of course, but it was difficult to believe that Norman Farrington had lived all these years unknown to his own son. Was it plausible that Martha Farrington, who possessed above all things a generous amount of common sense, would have insisted upon harboring a dangerous lunatic in that deserted spot?

Another stumbling block was the presence of Jude Blinshop. Surely a person of the Skipper's determination could have found a dozen pretexts for revoking a commonplace invitation when she realized the very real danger involved. And why the unusual attitude of both Michael flaunting Gay under M. Farrington's nose, the old lady had almost ignored Jude. And the Skipper's "Keep Michael away from Jude!" still rang in my ears—unexplained.

Step by step I once more reconstructed the events of the case. We had come there because of the Skipper. Her attitude had been strange, particularly in regard to Jude. She had been out of doors for an indefinite space of time on the night of the girl's death, and her actions were none too satisfactory.

factually accounted for. She would have known more about the whereabouts of firearms at the Bluff than anyone else in the house. And Jude would have followed the Skipper into the storm without a moment's hesitation.

She had been in my own sight during the episodes of Cook, Annie and Christopher, and she had been in the sight of all the others when William and I met our assailant. But again, we had Norman Farrington to reckon with. (Copyright, 1937, Esther Tyler)

We find Cook "doped to the gills," tomorrow.

Look in the Classified First.

Mike took the ax and bashed in two more doors.

we were lucky that it was to be in the last one. I shuddered to think of the effect our wild smashing would have had on a person inside any of the others. It took more time this way. The wood gave way slowly with a dull, tearing sound. I seized a loose board and ripped it away—then another and another. Mike's face was turned away, his shoulders hunched. Snatching the light from his hand, I flashed it upon—six orderly rows of canned lima beans.

"I suppose," poor Mike's voice was hollow, "we'd better get back to the others. They'll be—wondering."

I couldn't look at him. "I'm sorry, Mike," I said. "I—I'm damned sorry."

"Forget it!" His laugh was a pretty weak attempt. "Boy! Will Aunt Martha be wild when she sees this!"

It struck me that M. Farrington might never see it.

"Let's get back upstairs."

We left the ax where we had and without a word he went back for the ax. I put my shoulder to the door. It was useless. On that narrow top step there was barely room for steady footing, let alone for bracing yourself for a push. The steepness of the stairs made a running leap out of the question.

I was obliged to stand there waiting for Mike, my ears cocked for sounds from the kitchen beyond—sounds that never came. By the time an advancing ray of light

Miss Marie Kennedy of Cisco returned from Abilene Christian college the last week of May at the close of the 31st session of the college having completed the freshman class course.

"The best year in the history of the college was marked by highest total student attendance, important improvements in facilities, and the finest student-teacher cooperation for many years, said president James F. Cox at the close of the session.

Registration records show the largest total student attendance in the history of the school. The total enrollment of 643 resident college students for the session is "twelve less than the 1935-36 main session, but fewer withdrawals of enrolled students made a record total attendance.

At the beginning of the fall session the library was moved to Chambers hall and a new dining hall was built in the basement of the hall, which was made possible by a gift for the improvements by F. D. Chambers of Glenn, Texas.

A steel stadium is taking form on the new athletic field east of the main campus, since successful culmination of a campaign by an athletic committee, members of the board of trustees, and business men of Abilene. The stadium will be completed in a few weeks, officials say.

A movement to have another record enrollment for the thirty-second session, beginning September 15, is under way by combined efforts of the Student's association, the Ex-Students association, and the Mothers and Dads club, which have pledged themselves to advance Christian education and promote the growth of A.C.C.

Church Members Honor Dr. Mrs. Tyndall Tuesday

Dr. David Tyndall and Mrs. Tyndall, whose birthdays come on the same day, were commemorated by the members of the First Christian church with a surprise buffet supper Tuesday evening at the church. The banquet room was decorated throughout with large baskets of summer flowers in pastel shades. A blue, pink and white theme predominated in the table decorations. The banquet table, laid with white lace over pink satin, was centered with a large white birthday cake decorated in pink and blue. Tall candles in crystal holders burned beside the cake. Following the banquet which was served to 150 people, the girls of the church brought in a shower of miscellaneous gifts and presented to the honorees.

then to third. A long fly scored him.

The last Oiler runs came in the eighth inning when with one down St. John, Cisco short stop, made two successive errors and Dunning, holding down the first base position dropped a toss that would have meant an easy put-out. A triple by Williams unloaded the bases and the Oilers came out victors when the Cisco ninth-inning rally fell short.

Bivins kept the Hanlon batters worried all during the game although they touched him for several hits. He hurled a low, twisting ball which the Oilers were unable to.

Although they lost, the Ciscoans surprised the large crowd that turned out to see them play their opening game. The Breckenridge men were older, more experienced but they found much trouble in the local team. From last night's contest it appears that Cisco needs more improvement at the plate and if this is acquired the locals will have a good chance to win the title.

The lineups were:

Hanlon Oilers—Weeks, second base; Cochrane, first base; Simon, short field; Goodwin, pitcher; Turner, short stop; Hart, left field; Teddlie, center field; Williams, third base; McCurdy, catcher; Chapman Williams and Smitty Huestis, umpires.

The two teams will meet in Breckenridge Saturday night.

Chinese Begin War on 'Chastity Halls'

NANKING, China, June 9. (AP)—China's traditional glorification of widowhood is blamed by Madame Chiang Kai-shek's "New Life Movement" for turning "halls for encouragement of chastity" into "hells on earth."

In the old days widows who lived out their lives without remarrying were honored by the erection of stone arches at the emperor's expense or with his sanction. The "face" gained by the deceased's family because of this lasting mark of imperial favor was so coveted that families made every effort to prevent the re-marriage of their widowed women folk.

Sometimes they even went to the extreme of placing such unfortunate relicts in "halls of chastity" whose barred windows and bolted doors prevented contact with the outside world.

Coming in for special condemnation by the "New Life Movement" is one such chastity hall in Hankow, where 680 widows are deprived of their freedom as completely as if they were criminals serving life sentences. One elderly inmate of this hall has neither seen nor heard from her family for 30 years.

Dog Tries to Keep Money With Family

ARKANSAS CITY, Kas., June 9. (AP)—Oscar Cummins has a bulldog that believes one's money should stay in the family.

Cummins had his dog along when he handed City Clerk James F. Clough a $1 bill to pay his annual dog license fee. As Clough held the bill the dog jumped up, retrieved it and carried it back to his master.

This happened a second time, and not until Clough put the bill away in the city till did the dog give up his efforts to regain possession.

Both Husband, Job Are Seen For Graduates

By LYDIA GRAY SHAW

NEW YORK — America's sweet girl graduates won't have to tussle so fiercely this year with that old dilemma—marriage or career. For with any kind of luck, says Virginia C. Gildersleeve, Barnard college's famous dean, they are very apt to have both.

Once more jobs are opening up, and industry is more eager to make places for the girls than in any other year since 1930 and 1931.

"Opportunities are somewhat greater than last year," Dean Gildersleeve asserts, "and many times greater than in depression years."

Majority Will Marry

With the wisdom that comes from guiding college girls towards employment during many a June, gray-haired Dean Gildersleeve figures that 72 per cent of the class of 1937 will marry within 10 years. But fewer will marry immediately after graduation than did a decade ago. Most will work a few years, and they're likely to continue working, part time at least, after marriage.

Not so many of the girls plan to be teachers this year, says the dean, because only those who really want to teach will have to do so.

As a result, more women graduates are turning to business and the professions. More Barnard girls are planning to study medicine than are going into nursing, she says.

Advanced Study Popular

Law isn't as attractive as medicine but social service attracts an increasing number of girls. And more and more, college graduates will pursue advanced study before going to work.

But even if the world looks bright to the class of 1937, it isn't so rosy as it was in the 20's. No longer do representatives of leading concerns throng college halls on the lookout for promising material.

The 1937 graduate will make her way in her chosen field. But says Dean Gildersleeve, she will have to fight her way.

First Trailer Baby In Iowa Delivered

NASHUA, Ia., June 9. (AP)—Six-foot Dr. P. E. Stuart bumped his head in the process, but he delivered the first "trailer baby" born in Iowa.

Dr. Stuart, crouched in the narrow, low-ceilinged trailer home of Mr. and Mrs. Burton White, found that the gas stove wouldn't work and had to procure an oil stove to heat water. Every time he raised his head, it bumped against the ceiling.

But Dr. Stuart conquered these obstacles and brought Darla Frances White into the world in the 7 by 16 foot traveling home.

"I asked them afterwards why they didn't drive the trailer up to my office and use it as a maternity hospital," Dr. Stuart said, "it would have been a lot easier."

These Firemen Had an Exciting Week

WEATHERFORD, Okla., June 9. (AP)—Weatherford's volunteer firemen had an exciting week even though they didn't fight any flames.

First, a false alarm sent them hunting over town for a blaze. Then they made a run to the other side of town, only to find the wrath of a citizen who saw a crowd of fire-followers storm after the firemen over his fresh flower beds and shrubbery just because an over-nervous neighbor had misjudged his control over a trash fire.

The third time the alarm sounded there really was a fire—a bird's nest, built too close to an electric wire.

IT'S ODD But It's Science

DUST ONCE CHASED ANIMALS FROM NEBRASKA

By HOWARD BLAKESLEE

LINCOLN, Neb.—Present-day Americans "ain't seen nothing yet of the dust storms of what the southwest was once capable. Around 20,000 years ago the even chased the animals out of western Nebraska.

The evidence is reported by Dr. A. L. Lugin of the University of Nebraska department of geology. Because of what the dust storms buried, and the peculiar conditions of the dust formations of long ago in that area, Dr. Lugin feels that western Nebraska probably will be the richest spot in the United States for revealing convincing evidence of the antiquity of man in North America.

The Nebraska geologists have found three layers of "horizons" in the western Nebraska dust-made lands. The top is the all known to present-day man. Below is a great depth showing buried evidences of human habitation. Below that is a third layer containing man's stone tools. Still lower, it is predicted, one or two further "horizons" may be found.
