The influence of fertilizer, properly selected and applied, on the productivity of soil here is well demonstrated in a field in the western edge of the city where H. H. Tompkins, of the Tompkins Broom factory is growing broom corn. Mr. Tompkins has produced a visual demonstration of the difference between fertilized and unfertilized ground by treating one section of a field and leaving another untreated.

The contrast in the size and quality of the foliage is so marked that the limits of the fertilized portions are instantly detected. By weight the broom corn stalks grown on the treated land are six times as good as those grown on untreated land.

The plot on which this demonstration exists is located on the extension of Eighth street beyond the point where the new highway curves off to continue west.

Glen Rose is making a strong campaign in behalf of its really excellent resort and health facilities. A representative of its chamber of commerce was in town today inviting Cisco people to go to Glen Rose to smif, fish and relax. This little town of 900 people, he said, is mobilizing its entire community behind the program. Every business man or woman, no matter how small the business, is contributing to the chamber of commerce fund for advertising Glen Rose.

That is the sort of spirit that counts. Many of us get the idea that we must be associated with bigness in order to make our efforts worth while. It is quality that counts, and quality is not essentially associated with size.

Glen Rose with obvious natural advantages of the character it seeks to capitalize upon, can cultivate its opportunities with profit whether or not it has 900 or 9,000 people. The same is true of Cisco.

The thing most needed here is a planned community program and a sense of obligation to our own interests and institutions. We seem to have lost something of that essential conscience lately.

Sand Being Spread on Football Field

Metal framework for the south stands of the WPA football stadium project is already up and sand is being placed over the entire field today as work continues.

Work on the project was resumed Thursday after a two day shutdown for payroll shift. Director Wilson said that turling-backing of the gridiron will be begun just as soon as the sand is spread over the entire field.

Meanwhile work on the foundation of press box to be built atop the north stands was being constructed today.

MARTIN STOPS MOVEMENT ON MONROE, MICH.

Strike at Bethlehem Steel Plant Is Set for Tonight

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, June 11 (AP)—The CIO workers' mass movement on Monroe, Michigan, was stopped today when Homer Martin, UAWA head, intervened and the Republic Steel company plant resumed operation, protected by armed citizens.

Strike principals gathered at Columbus, Ohio, for an afternoon peace conference with Governor Davey, but Johnstown, Pa., looked for trouble from the strike set for tonight at the Bethlehem steel mill.

UAWA workers ending their motor caravan at Monroe from Pontiac, where a sympathy labor holiday was declared because authorities broke the steel picket line as the Monroe plant reopened, left 34 persons in jail after a clash with officers.

Randolph Status Should Continue as Now, Suggests

In a letter to the editor of the Cisco Daily Press from Lamesa, Texas, where he is holding a revival meeting, Dr. J. T. McKissick, president of Randolph college, said that if Randolph college can "have a fair year and the show window does not improve, then we should vacate."

He suggested that the school should continue as it is now with the addition of Dr. Lee Clark as dean and two or three other members of the faculty, with improved courses and with a determined effort to regain affiliation with larger institutions of learning. Randolph only this spring was dropped from the list of schools accredited to the state association of colleges.

He deplored a "whispering campaign" to the effect that the school would not open, saying that such a condition took place every year about this time.

Meanwhile sentiment for placing the college under the jurisdiction of the public school system was developing in many quarters locally.

Dr. McKissick wrote:

"Since the status of Randolph college has been discussed much of late, we set forth the following facts:

"First, Last year the executive committee closed a contract for using the buildings two years. This expires June 15, 1938. The rentals have been promptly paid.

The novelty soft ball game scheduled between Nick Miller's Haberdashers and W. R. Miller's Prune Peddlers will begin tonight at 8:15 at the Cisco park.

The game will be different from the usual contests held at the park this season. This tilt is supposed to be comedy and only men over 45 will be eligible to play and only those who do not play in the city league will be allowed to participate.

Sing, Brother, Sing -- It's a Marathon

By The (AP) Feature Service

SNELLVILLE, Ga., June 11.—Baiters are ringing as country vocalists get in shape for "all day singing and dinner on the ground"—a season that has highlighted life in the rural south since before the Revolutionary war. Families with picnic dinners gather early at church or courthouse—and from then on it's a marathon of singing and eating.

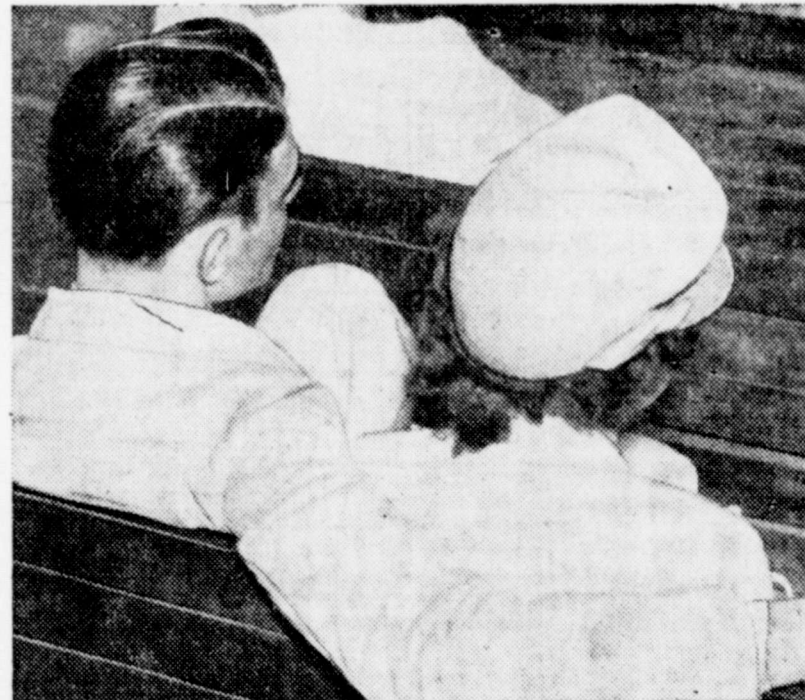

LEADERS, working in relays, "fight" a vocal duet with the congregation, old hymns with a hopping tempo being favored.

VIGOROUS MENFOLK attack the tunes fortissimo.

OLDSTERS fumble for the place, carry on gamely.

AMOROUS YOUNG FOLK sit on the back benches—more intent on "sparking" than singing.

DINNER is a welcome interlude. Once over, the harmonizing takes up again till dusk ends it for another year.

BRECKENRIDGE JURIST WILL DECIDE ISSUE

May Be Taken Under Advisement After Arguments Today

BULLETIN

Judge Bryan H. Atchison, of 90th district court, Breckenridge, sitting in 91st district court at Eastland, this afternoon took under advisement the Eastland county beer election contest, promising a ruling during the latter part of next week. He said a number of jury cases required his immediate attention and he could not give the case much consideration until they were out of the way.

Courtroom opinion in 91st district court this afternoon was to the effect there would be no immediate decision on the Eastland county "beer vote contest" case. It was believed Judge B. H. Atchison, Breckenridge, judge of the 90th district court assigned to the 91st to hear the case in which Judge Geo. L. Davenport had disqualified himself, would take it under advisement, handing down a decision later.

Judge Davenport disqualified himself because of a first cousin relationship to Henry Davenport, member of the commissioners' court and named as one of the respondents in the case, styled G. Connally, et al, vs. W. S. Adamson, County Judge, et al.

'Twice Born' Revival Subject for Tonight

The subject of the sermon at the East Cisco Baptist church tonight is "Twice Born." "It is just as imperative to be born again to enter the kingdom of God as it is necessary to be born into the world," said Rev. Hubert Christian, evangelist, who is holding services twice a day at the church. "A new kingdom, a new man, a new sight, these are christianity's fundamentals. God provides the new kingdom, the new kingdom the new man and the new man has the sight to behold the things in the new kingdom," said Rev. Christian in his sermon for tonight.

MURDER ON THE BLUFF

SYNOPSIS: Our wild, stormy weekend at Farrington Bluff, home of Michael's aunt, opens with the mysterious shooting to death of attractive Jude Blinshop. A series of strange attacks is apparently explained when we find the body of Michael's mad father below the bluff. Then Aunt Martha is shot in the shoulder by an unseen hand, and the Skipper, Mike's tall, tweedy younger aunt, disappears. Sleeping powder is nearly finished. Aunt Martha. An appalling dinner leads to the discovery that Cook is "doped to the gills."

Chapter 36 To Fool the Killer

The whole question of M. Farrington's accident was thrown into a hopeless jumble. Higgins' extraordinary behavior with regard to the fingerprints on the revolver might be explained as nervousness. Cook might have used that gun from M. Farrington's doorway, left it in the hall, walked a few paces toward the servants' corridor, and turned, giving the appearance of having rushed out at the sound of the shot.

The fact that both the Skipper and Higgins offered the same alibi rather tended to substantiate this theory. Could the Skipper, later on, have left M. Farrington alone with Cook, and might Cook have augmented the sleeping powder with a preparation of her own? Had Cook in some mysterious way lured the Skipper to whatever fate she had encountered?

It seemed rather senseless. Cook had been at the Bluff for several years without any such outbreak. What possible motive could she have for embarking on a career of wholesale slaughter? It was doubtful that she had even heard of Jude Blinshop before that weekend. She had certainly not recognized her assailant in the kitchen. To the best of our knowledge, she did not even know of the poor lunatic's presence in the house. How, then, would she have known that there was anyone concealed in Jude's room? And why would she bother to annihilate him, even if she had?

"Has William had any dinner, Annie?" said Michael suddenly. "No, sir."

"Go tell him to get some now. Would you find staying with Miss Farrington for a little while until one of us comes up?"

The alacrity with which Annie leapt at the suggestion was amazing. Whatever terror the house held for her was seemingly not increased by being left alone on the upper floor with the sick woman. She rushed up the stairs eagerly.

"It stands to reason," said Mike heavily, "that the house can't be full of homicidal maniacs."

Gay giggled. "If it comes to that, it stands to reason that all this can't have happened in your own house. Try again, Mike."

Michael sat up. "We have enough evidence to hang almost anyone in this house. That shows pretty good planning on someone's part. And offhand, I'd say on the part of the person against whom there's been no evidence."

"But there's been no evidence against me—" began Gay indignantly.

Michael eyed her coolly. "Precisely. And you have been the person who's so hot to have almost anybody confess. Does that suggest anything to anyone's mind?"

"Why—" Gay stared at him in blank amazement. "Why—Are you suggesting that I—"

The upward swing in her voice brought me to my feet.

"Of course he isn't!" I said loudly. "Now, I'm suggesting that we get down to business. William will be down in a minute. Why don't the three of us start now and go inch by inch over every bedroom in this house? We might find something—helpful."

The Radio as a Blind

I think we would have been in for a spirited debate, but the sound of William's footsteps on the back stairs brought them to a quick decision.

"Let's," said Gay, simultaneously with Mike's grunted assent. Silently we herded into the hall, taking care that the kitchen door was not left swinging after us. One thing that none of us relished was the idea of William prowling through the deserted house on our trail—William, Higgins, or anyone else. At the foot of the main stairs Michael, finger to lips, beckoned us into the living room. We followed him on tip-toe and he closed the door softly after us.

"The radio," he whispered. "Turn it on for a blind."

I had forgotten that there was a radio at the Bluff. Why the dickens hadn't he thought of it during those unspeakable hours of waiting? Mike is not usually a person for details. I watched him in startled silence as he turned on the radio and most of the lights in the room with it.

"Wait," Gay whispered. "Help me move this davenport, Jim. Now the chair. That's it!" Working rapidly, she completed the setting of our little stage. The davenport was turned before the fire and a heavy chair drawn up beside it, so that both were turned from the hall and game-room doors. With the aid of a couple of steamer rugs and many pillows, Gay swiftly constructed an amazing semblance of three people dozing before the fire.

I suppose we had all done that very thing a dozen times, but we watched it now with no anticipatory glee. We were in deadly earnest. I for one was thinking, "She's clever. She keeps her head and thinks of details. And she's the only one above suspicion. The only one!"

"There!" said Gay with finality. "Mike, throw some logs on the fire. I think that will do."

Michael moved to obey her. "The only trouble is," he said, "that this will be a pretty obvious gag if anyone happens to look through the windows. And it would sound damned fishy in front of a jury."

I reflected that practically anything we could do in the way of fooling the murderer would be twisted against us later, if his cunning succeeded in involving us.

"We'll have to take some risks," said Gay; but she went back over her handiwork, creating a fair illusion of three people given to sleeping with their heads under blankets.

"Let's get going," said Michael. At the door an unexpected problem presented itself. We no sooner stepped into the hall than a loud blast of swing music echoed through the entire house. William or anyone else would have to be deaf not to know that a door had been opened. I took a wild shot.

I said very loudly, "All the hall lights are on. Shall I douse them?"

Mike stepped back into the room. "No," he shouted, "leave them on!"

I closed the door after him with a careful bang. There was of course a very good chance that William had been watching us through the keyhole of either the library or the dining room door—or even through the crack of the door to the servants' hall. He could command a good two-thirds of the first floor from the kitchen without once coming into the hall. But there was no help for it, and none of the doors had moved.

Gay's Room First

At the foot of the stairs, we were confronted with another danger. Higgins and Annie, both supposedly upstairs, might have been watching the entire performance from the landing, and even if they had not, we were now apt to be detected. If they were both where they should have been, they were both very near the head of that staircase, Annie in M. Farrington's room, its doors not six feet from us—Higgins in his own room, its wall right beside us. If he were sitting in a chair, separated from us by a few inches of mere plaster, the slightest sound would ruin the whole show.

There were a few things in our favor—such as the sturdiness of the old stairs, with never a creak in them, and the thickness of the carpet.

Facing the west end of the house, we were confronted by M. Farrington's room on the left with the Skipper's beyond it. On the right were Gay's room and Jude's. To the east my room and Mike's both faced the door to the servants' corridor. We didn't dare whisper. By some tacit agreement, we seemed to have decided that the person we sought was one of the four servants, and that observation by any one of them must be avoided above all things.

Michael pointed to Gay's door, and without hesitation I unlocked it. We crept in. Gay switched on the small light on the bed-stand. Her face was rather flushed, but for once she went through an ordeal without fireworks. She even waved us toward the suitcase, lying open on a stand.

Aside from clothes and the usual odds and ends, it contained three letters which, at a nod from Gay, I opened. They were from friends and in no way startling. We went through the dressing table, desk and bedstand, removing drawers and turning them upside down. Nothing.

We tore the bed apart and even felt under the mattress. Nothing. We went through her closet, Mike even looking through her shoes. I investigated coat linings and pockets. We lifted the rug. We leafed through all the books in the room. To save me, I couldn't think of anything else.

"Jude's room," I suggested reluctantly, the very thought of my latest experience in there turning me a little sick.

That business of rifling the possessions of a dead friend in sight of her lifeless body still remains one of the most unpleasant jobs of my life. I couldn't seem to shake off the idea that the person who had killed her might be one of the persons now rattling among her things. I couldn't drown the memory of that ghastly sight on the closet shelf and the still, sheeted figure that had not been Jude Blinshop.

I would have given anything to have thrown Gay and Mike bodily out of that room—and myself after them. But I went through with it.

Record-Breaking Co-ed Looking to Olympics in 1940

By W. C. PETERSON
 OXFORD, O., June 11 (AP)—Patty Flanagan, 18, jewelry and pretty fast on her feet, is making long-range plans for the U. S. Olympic team.

She has won every race but one of the many she has entered. Like her fellow Miami University co-eds, she wears out her stockings in an afternoon. She's afraid of spiders but not of mice.

She has liked to run as long as she can remember. Her first race was a county school affair. She won first in the running broad jump and in the 50 and 75-yard dashes.

Shatters Four Marks
 As a Miami freshman, she recently broke four records at the annual inter-class meet. She probably would have shattered some others but for a rule limiting her to the four events. Besides, she ran in better shoes on a slow track.

In that meet, Patty ran the 60-yard dash in 12.5 seconds, the 100 yards in 28.5, the 200 in 58.5 and the 400 in 1:52.5. She is a member of the national women's athletic association.

Inherits Talent
 Healthy and weighing about 120 pounds although she doesn't look it, Patty gets her speed in the track by inheritance.

Her father, August A. Flanagan, employment manager for a Cleveland industrial firm, was a star in track as a youth. He once won race finals in a county fair meet.

Her brother, Walter, is the leading broad jumper at Western Reserve university in Cleveland. The 11 Party came to Miami, sister Elizabeth, a senior, carried off the high point jump at the university track meets for women. Their mother teaches school at Willoughby, Cleveland suburb.

USCC Opposed to Gov't Financed Tenancy Program

WASHINGTON, June 11. (AP)—A committee of the chamber of commerce of the United States came out for private financing of farm tenancy aid yesterday shortly after the senate agriculture committee had approved direct federal outlays in this field.

The chamber committee recommended that loans to help tenants acquire farms be made by local financial institutions, with the government guaranteeing a liberal percentage of the advances.

Chamber officials said the proposed federal guarantee would be similar to the present government insurance on home mortgages.

Earlier in the day, the senate agriculture committee sent to the senate floor a bill for federal financing of tenant farm purchases along lines agreeable to President Roosevelt.

Under this measure, a proposed farmer's home corporation would receive a $10,000,000 appropriation for the fiscal year beginning July 1, $25,000,000 in the following year, and $5,000,000 annually thereafter. The corporation would retain title to farms sold tenants until full payment had been made.

A different tenancy bill is pending in the house. It would appropriate $50,000,000 annually for five years for long-term loans to selected tenants. Tenant purchasers would obtain title to their farms at once, subject only to mortgages held by the government.

In its report, the chamber com-

Fiesta Mascot

Cute little Mary Hope Behnke mascot of the Fort Worth Frontier Fiesta which opens June 26, is shown displaying a double handful of souvenir ticket books, which now are being sold throughout the State by church and civic organizations.

Farmers in Cheyenne county, Nebraska, have formed precinct organizations — not for political purposes but to fight grasshoppers. Crews will scatter poison bait over the entire county.

Texas Press Is Given Praise by Chairman Bobbitt

BROWNWOOD, June 11 (AC)—The press of Texas was praised by Chairman Bobbitt of the Texas highway commission Thursday as "accurate, courageous, intellectual and independent," in his address before the 58th annual convention of the Texas Press association which opened here this morning.

Other speakers on Thursday's program were Frank Watson, assistant director of the Greater Texas and Pan-American exposition, Dallas; Louis P. Merrill, regional conservation, soil conservation service, Ft. Worth; State Senator J. Manley Head, Stephenville; James C. White, editor of the Brownwood Bulletin; Joe B. Cowan, San Saba, and Will H. Mayes, Austin.

Watson told detailed plans for this year's exposition in Dallas, saying it will be bigger and better than last year's program. He invited the press to attend press day at the exposition Sunday, June 13.

Mayes, past president of the association, urged the Texas press to raise its standards. "I believe the press should take more leadership than ever before. Let's see what we can do in the next few years to try to increase the intellectual and moral standards of our people. I believe the people will like it," he said.

The convention voted to wire Governor Allred urging him to veto a bill passed recently by the legislature prohibiting advertising by dentists.

ed because of delay and uncertainty in reaching an agreement with the Temple Trust company, but 75 were enrolled, including 35 boarders. This does not count several who stayed a short time and 15 who enrolled in the summer school.

"Third, All local bills have been paid or may be at any time. Only four members of the faculty are yet unpaid, and these have been paid about 75 per cent. Available funds will increase this materially. All but one or two of the faculty were asked to return.

"Fourth, Dr. Lee Clark is ready to assume his work as dean within a week. He is one of the most efficient and widely known school men in Texas, and his return will release the writer to get the sinews of war in the field, to provide funds and students.

"Fifth, The income of the college this year has been about $8,000 from all sources. A strict account has been kept of the receipts and disbursements and the trustees are asked to appoint an auditing committee to inspect the books. The only reason the president looked after so many things this year was for purposes of economy. We hope a business manager will be appointed next year. Collections have been fine and with goodwill, a fact we much appreciate.

Sixth, The program we would suggest is that the school continue as now with the addition of Dr. Clark and two or three others to the faculty; that improved courses be offered; that efforts be made to regain affiliation with the larger institutions which means more library and laboratory equipment;

Seventh, About this time each year since we have known the school, a whispering campaign starts to the effect that the school will not reopen, and if it does, it will not continue. We hope this talk will be in the reverse—that everyone will talk well of the school and do all possible to help it. With all this help the task will be hard, but if the people of Cisco will heartily cooperate there is no reason why Randolph may not attain the exalted goal in the mind of its founders. It has the best location of which we know; Cisco is the best little city in which we have ever lived; its recreational opportunities and accessibility are unexcelled, and, above all, its citizenship is of the first rank. "J. T. McKISSICK"

District WTUC Meeting Is Held Here Last Night

Thirty-six Cisco district employees of the West Texas Utilities company were here last night for the regular safety and educational meeting of the district personnel. Purpose of these gatherings is to promote safety practices not only for employees but for the public.

Charles Walton presided at presentation of a safety program at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

E. L. Jackson, recently transferred to the Cisco district office from the Albany local office, discussed general distribution and service policies. This was followed by a general discussion of hazards detected by employees and methods of eliminating these.

P. W. Campbell, traffic manager for the West Texas Utilities company, Abilene, and Dick Giles, chief clerk of the Cisco district, spoke.

Two education meetings were held during the day, one at 3 p. m. and another at 8. The programs followed were similar, purpose of the divided meeting being to give all employees an opportunity to attend one or the other of the sessions.

Two films were shown, demonstrating methods of presenting facts to customers without arguing, and showing the employee how to become a better citizen and a better employee.

After showing of each film general discussions were led by A. M. Reynolds, O. J. Russell, J. E. Proctor, Mr. Giles, Mr. Campbell and Mrs. Jackson.

committee that Assistant Postmaster Niles of Ohio refused to deliver packages to strike-bound workers because union pickets "will not allow it." Niles said the strike situation was "rapidly approaching a state of warfare."

Townsite Well to Be Plugged; Fails to Show

The last prospect of production above the ordivician series explored without result, the first Cisco townsite well was being plugged today.

Conferences to determine whether or not the hole would be carried to the Ellenberger yesterday resulted in a decision adverse to that course, and this morning a collar-buster was run into the hole to break pipe lose and pulling was started. The well will be plugged as it stands at 3,810 feet.

The fact that the hole has been reduced to 6 inches was primarily responsible for the decision to abandon and plug. It was regarded unwise to take the well to the top of the ordivician without drilling through it, and the size of the hole was such that should another string of casing be necessary to shut off water, it would require five inch which would not be a satisfactory pipe for the test.

Beer Case...

In its presentation, Attorney Milton Lawrence argued for the plaintiffs that the notice of election issued by the commissioners court and the county clerk was insufficient and that the ballot was insufficient under the 1934 local option laws, because they called for an election to outlaw sale of a commodity not already legal in the county. He based his argument on the fact that the law sets up three distinct steps for legalization of the sale of liquor in local option territory and said that the process of voting out the sale of liquors should conform to the steps for voting it in. Thus, he declared, the May 1 election which resulted in a majority for the drys was not valid because it called for a vote on "all liquors" when only the sale of 14 per cent beer and wines was legal in the county and subject to an election for outlawing it.

Defendant Argument

Dist. Att'y. Earl Conner, Jr., was expected to begin his argument on behalf of the defendants at 1:30 this afternoon. The case is non-jury litigation and Judge Atchison was expected to receive it for decision at 2:30 or 3 o'clock.

In certifying his disqualification, Judge Davenport made the following statement: "After a careful study of the pleadings of the parties to this suit, the decisions of the courts of this and other states, I am convinced of my disqualification as above announced."

"When this suit was originally filed and I was called upon to act upon an application for an injunction it did not occur to me that my relation to County Commissioner Henry Davenport, who was named defendant in his official capacity only, would disqualify me from trying the litigation and, as none of the parties to the suit raised the question in connection with temporary injunction previously granted, concerning which the public has been advised, but realizing the importance of the litigation and the far-reaching effect of the disposition of the same upon the people of this county, I was prompted to investigate most thoroughly the question of my qualification and after doing so arrived at the conclusion as stated above.

"There appears some conflict of decisions among the courts of the state, but the weight of authorities justifies the course I have adopted.

"In one of the leading cases of the this state the following language is used:

"It may be doubted whether the absence of pecuniary interest in the controversy will prevent the disqualification declared by the constitution and the statute to arise from the relationship to one who is in effect a party. The constitution does not say 'party interest,' but simply 'party.' It may be argued with reason that the mere fact that the relative of the judge was identified with the controversy as a party to the record was deemed sufficient to work disqualification whether his pecuniary interests are involved or not. The language used supports such a view.

"The principals announced in the opinion cited above is adopted in the more recent case of Campbell vs. Moore reported in the 12th Southwestern, Second, at page 806.

"In view of the absence of Judge Patterson, who is in Arizona with a sick brother and therefore not available, the attorneys represented the parties in interest have agreed upon the Honorable E. Atchison of the 90th district court of Breckenridge to preside in the trial of the above suit. Judge Atchison has kindly consented and will be present on Friday morning. I feel that selection is a wise one and Judge Atchison will preside in such a way as to merit the confidence and approval of the parties to the controversy."

Drive Against Rabies Begins, 2 Dogs Shot

Chief Perdue said that strays were shot Thursday.
