POSTMASTER SAYS MAIL REFUSAL LEGAL Attorney Reduced 1932 Tax $53,000, Says

Through the Editor's Spectacles
By GEORGE

Tonight's the night of the big fight, when the fans will get a chance to see whether Max Schmelling's decisive victory over Joe Louis was a fluke or not. Despite his defeat at the hands of the German scrapper, Louis gained a shot at the world championship title in a match that made Schmelling sore and sent him back to naziland in a right good huff. And he has a right to be, considering that he made a wonderful comeback from an earlier fiasco and did what no man had ever done and few thought could be done—decisively smashed the Louis myth. But the manner in which he was passed up for the Jimmy Braddock-Louis match shows that the old box office is the thing, and there is little of the element called sportsmanship in the conference rooms where the prospects are figured and the matches are made. Those who are in the fight game are in it to make money, and the promoters were smart enough to see that a match between Louis, whom many still are firmly convinced is a better man than Schmelling, and Braddock would draw more attention and hence, more money, than a match between Schmelling and Braddock. The fact that Schmelling earned the right to the match didn't cut any figure.

So Schmelling and the New York boxing commission—minus Mr. Farley, perhaps unfortunately can fume and banish all they please, and not curl a single hair on the necks of the promoters or principals. Chicago's sponsorship of the two man war is just as good as New York's, both from the standpoint of the gate and the popular acceptance of the verdict of the ring.

Meanwhile, it is strange we hear so little about the legislature's anti-gambling mania right now. Probably most of the members have declared an armistice with the sin long enough to take part in some of the half million or so pools that are being formed on the outcome. Half a score or more of these have sprung up around here, with the boys tossing in half dollars for the pot and drawing the number of a round with which, should a knockout or a decision come in that round, they would draw down the whole pot.

Most of those taking part in these "pots" figure on drawing an early round if they favor Louis and on a late round if their opinion runs to the champion.

Methodist Revival Crowds Increasing
Subject for tonight's sermon at the Twelfth Street Methodist church revival which began Sunday will be "What Is It to Be Lost? What Is It to Be Saved? and What Must I Do to Be Saved?"

The only way to escape hell is by repentance, Rev. G. C. Williams of Scranton, who is conducting the revival, believes.

Attendance is increasing with each service, it was reported today. To date four persons have given their names for membership, with many prospects in view.

Mr. and Mrs. Sentell Caffrey left today for their home in McCamey.

Fleming Says Evaders Pay Big Premiums, Borrow on Policies

WASHINGTON, June 22 (AP)—Mason B. Fleming, treasury attorney, told the congressional tax inquiry committee today that Richard Dwight, New York attorney, reduced his 1932 income tax payment over $53,000 through insurance purchased from a Bahamas company.

Fleming, discussing methods for creating foreign insurance companies, said the evaders paid large single premiums, then borrowed on policies, making possible deductions on tax returns for interest on loans.

Fight to Be Heard At Soft Ball Game

A radio will be hooked up so that patrons may hear the world championship James Braddock-Joe Louis heavyweight fight tonight at the soft ball park, it was announced this afternoon. With this arrangement spectators will be able to see the game and also hear the fight.

Jaycees Lose to Smitty Huestis by 11-10 Count

For the second time within a week Smitty Huestis and his soft ballers scored a one-point victory over the Jaycees and dropped the losers near the bottom with the winners moving closer to Red Front. The final score last night was 11 to 10.

At the end of five innings things were looking bad for the Jaycees. They were knocking pop flies all over the park, unable to do anything with Bivins' hurling. He allowed only three hits the first five innings and then with a 9 to 2 lead Smitty decided to save Bivins for future warfare and sent Reize to the mound. Immediately things changed. Boyett, who had relieved Carmichael for the losers, singled, Donohoe came through with a single and Garrett made first on an error after Aycock had filed out. Below hit safely and Stamey was safe at first on an error. Blackburn

P. P. SHEPARD RITES AT 10 WEDNESDAY

Veteran West Texas Utilities Official Dies Suddenly

Pinkney P. Shepard, 62, veteran West Texas Utilities company official and one of its original employes, died suddenly at 9:30 at his home, 705 W. 7th St., here this morning of an apoplectic attack which struck him just after he had finished his breakfast.

Funeral services will be held at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning at the First Baptist church after which the body will be taken overland in a Green Funeral home hearse for interment in Confederate cemetery. Active pall bearers were chosen from among employees of the Cisco district of the utilities company, of which Mr. Shepard was superintendent since March, 1928. There will be a Masonic escort.

Immediate survivors include Mrs. Shepard, the former Miss Janie Ripley of San Antonio whom he married in 1905; a son, Charles; a daughter by a previous marriage, Mrs. F. N. Rushing of Groveton, Texas, and Mrs. Rushing's two daughters. Charles and his wife, whom he married last year, make their home in Cisco.

Born in Ohio

Mr. Shepard was born at Byars Station, Ohio, November 19, 1874. He entered public utility service with a traction company as a young man after teaching school for a few years, and in 1898 came to San Antonio, Texas, where he was associated with a street car company, and, for a time, with a railroad system in Old Mexico. He went to LaPorte, Ind., for two or three years to supervise construction of a street railway system and it was during that period of intense rivalry between expanding transportation systems that many of the incidents he often described took place.

After his LaPorte experience he returned to San Antonio where his first wife, nee Miss Daisy Larrimore, whom he married in Ohio in 1894, died in 1903. He married Miss Ripley on June 14, 1905.

MURDER ON THE BLUFF

SYNOPSIS: A mysterious shot kills Jude Hinship, my old flame, at the start of our stormy weekend at Farrington Bluff, home of Michael's aunts. A series of strange attacks occurs. Then we find the body of Michael's mad father below the bluff. Aunt Martha, stout and Victorian, is shot in the shoulder, and nearly finished with sleeping powders. The Skipper, Mike's tall, tweedy younger aunt, disappears. Cook, William, the chauffeur, and Annie, the maid, suspect Higgins, the old butler. I lock him in his room, half believing him the killer. Then I find Mike arguing with his fiancée, Guy Palmer.

the skeleton key from Norman Farrington's pocket, staring at it and wishing violently that I had never seen the damned thing. "How did you know it was there?" "Guilt!" Michael's voice was hurt, not bitter. And Mike was no actor—or was he? The radio stunt—

Chapter 45
'Look For The Loft'
Closing the door behind me, I leaned against it. The person who had forced the door of Jude's room to lure or to force Norman Farrington out toward the bluff must have known that the old man was here and that he had used a key to get there. No one else should have known of the existence of that key. And Norman Farrington's son had gone in search of it and found it!

He was standing there gazing at me as a man might gaze at a snake which had sprung at him in the middle of Fifth avenue. "You heard that, I suppose?" Michael's voice was bleak. "Yes." Suddenly, unreasonably thought, "We are three characters in a play. Nothing has happened. Nothing will happen until we remember the lines."

truded itself into the picture. If I tried to come to any conclusion about the Millers, I immediately thought of Higgins. And so it went. Out of the long silence came Michael's voice. "They had trouble with Cook after you went out. Hysterics with all the trimmings."

"I'm doing very well, sir." With a start I realized that he had been crying. "Higgins," I said. "I don't for a minute believe that you are guilty and I'm trying my best to prove that you're not. Do you believe that?"

"I can't sir. It ain't that I don't trust you. I'd trust you like I would Mr. Michael himself. It ain't that at all, sir." "Then what is it, Higgins?" "I was wrong. And you might not believe that I was, and—that would be awful. Awful! I found out how wrong I was. I can't tell you nothing, sir!"

The old man had been sitting on the bed, head in hands and fully dressed. His face was haggard. "It's only I, Higgins," I said, sitting down beside him. "Don't be frightened. I came to see how you were."

"I can't sir. It ain't that I don't trust you. I'd trust you like I would Mr. Michael himself. It ain't that at all, sir." "Then what is it, Higgins?" "I was wrong. And you might not believe that I was, and—that would be awful. Awful! I found out how wrong I was. I can't tell you nothing, sir!"

"No!" The fierceness of his answer made me jump. One Last Desperate Try Lighting a cigarette, I got to my feet and began to pace the small room. His head in his hands, the old man seemed to forget my existence. He was not guilty. But he knew who was—or thought he did. He was withholding evidence—evidence that I had to have right then. I looked at my watch. It was 4:30. I made one last desperate try. "Miss Barbara is alive." All the conviction I could muster rang in my voice. "We know that for a fact, Higgins. But unless she is found within the next hour, she may not be."

"Are you sure of that?" he whispered hoarsely. The pressure of my clinched fists was driving my fingernails into flesh. "Positive!" "Then—then—" for one awful moment I thought he was going to strangle before he got the words out. "Don't—don't tell no one I said so. I ain't sure it's right. Look for the old loft."

"The loft!" I shouted. "The loft! The Skipper may be there." I had Michael by the arm and was tugging him in the direction of the door, but he held back. "The loft?" he echoed. "You're crazy There isn't any." Higgins' last words were ringing in my ears. Take Mr. Michael. He should be able to find it.

"Another of your sudden inspirations, Jim?" came Gay's voice sweetly. I seized Michael. "Don't lie to me!" I howled. "You're taking me there or I'll break your lousy neck." Michael threw me off easily. "Don't be a fool," he said quietly. "You're not going to tell me whether or not there's a loft in my own—" His voice trailed off and his eyes suddenly widened. "Good Lord!" he said hoarsely. "There is a— Come on!" (Copyright, 1937, Esther Tyler)

Callahan Reaps One of Best Wheat Crops

BAIRD, June 22 (Sp.)—Callahan county farmers are busy harvesting one of the best grain crops made in the county in a number of years.

Cutting and combining the grain crop will be completed this week-end and thrashing crews will be in the field next week. Some ten or twelve thrashing crews being ready to begin work.

B. L. Boydston, local grain dealer says the grain is of good grade, most all wheat testing around 60 pounds to the bushel. Mr. Boydston, who is buying grain at Baird, Clyde, Cross Plains, Putnam and Lawn estimates that 150 car loads of grain will be shipped from Callahan county.

Mr. Boydston has shipped 7 car loads of wheat from Baird, 5 car loads from Cross Plains and 9 car loads from Lawn, paying 86 to 90 cents per bushel. Very little oats and barley is being sold.

Good rains the past week have been of great benefit to feed and cotton crops, garden and grass and did not materially damage the grain.

Wheat has averaged 15 to 20 bushels per acre.

single and Harper and Preston both went out to end the scoring but six runs had crossed the plate during the uprising.

The Sinclairs pounded Carmichael freely all his five innings, touching him for nine bingles including a home run by Benny in the fourth inning. The ball sailed over the right field fence. The winners made 10 of their 11 scores off Carmichael.

The Huestis team scored three times in their half of the first inning after the Jaycees had started things off with two scores. Smitty's boys added two more in the second and sent four more across home base in the third and Benny's home run in the fourth added another. The final run came in the sixth on two walks and a hit.

Meanwhile the junior chamber of commerce lads were scoreless except for the first inning until the sixth when they hopped on Reize for six of their 10 tallies. They scored two more in the final round when Boyett, who had done a fine job of relief hurling the last two innings, smashed a home run over the right fielders head after Lucas, batting for Allen, had singled. However, Claud Wilson came to the rescue and set the Jaycees down without another run.
