ABOUT EIGHTY FROSH SIGNED BY 11 O'CLOCK

Schedules Worked out, Courses Are Chosen By Freshmen

First preparations for the 1937-38 school term were made this morning when freshmen, answering the call for registration, came to the high school and signed up.

Principal O. L. Stamey said today that by 11 o'clock approximately 80 had enrolled and that more were expected this afternoon.

No freshmen will be signed up Wednesday, senior registration day, or Thursday, junior registration day, the principal said. Sophomores will begin Friday.

The youngsters, to form Cisco high's eighth grade this year, came this morning, beginning at 8.30, many of them with their parents, to select their courses and to have schedules worked out for the coming term.

Teachers have already been assigned courses and work will begin Monday, Sept. 13 when all pupils of high school come for classes.

Four-hundred eighty-one pupils were the maximum number of students enrolled in high school last year and Mr. Stamey said today he did not expect any more than this for this year.

Beginners classes in Latin and Spanish will be offered this year along with Physics.

Only Ten Days Till Lobo Team Tackles Lubbock

With only 10 days remaining before the Cisco Lobos meet the powerful Lubbock Westerners, Coach Petty has his group of boys working hard in their training grind. Due to the resignation of Walter Roach of the Lobos and the time needed to elect a new coach, training was thrown a week late and necessitates grueling practice in order for the team to be in shape for the first and one of the toughest games on the schedule of the Lobos.

The first few days of training which was devoted to calisthenics and dummy scrimmage, has passed into the rougher work of actual combat featuring tackling, blocking, and other fundamentals of the game. The boys have not complained about the hard work and have shown by their actions that they are well pleased with their new coach and are willing to cooperate with him.

Twenty-three boys were out for the practice session this morning with several of those going out for the team being required to register today for entrance into high school.

The 3 coaches of the Lobos this year, Petty, Cooper and Garrett have been working twice a day in preparation for the Westerners and this morning with Petty working with the backs, Cooper with the line, and Garrett with the boys who will do good kicking as if they would be in shape for their opening game.

Avoca Area Seene of New Oil Strike

Above is a map of the immediate area about the recent Avoca strike of the Iron Mountain and Humble on the Carl Olander tract in Section 196 of the BBB&CRR survey in eastern Jones county about three miles west of Avoca. The discovery well is indicated by a circle. It was completed on July 4, and tested 1457 barrels in 12 hours from line topped at 3239 and drilled to 3250. It was treated with 3,000 gallons of acid.

East of the discovery well, the Maracaibo Exploration company brought in its Carl Olander No. 1, testing 1,000 barrels through a three-quarter inch choke in seven hours and 40 minutes. The lime was topped at 3276 feet and drilled to 3,284.

In the northeast quarter of section 196, a north offset to the Maracaibo well, Iron Mountain and Humble completed their No. 1 Hatteries for an estimated 200 barrels per hour. Tubing is now being run for a test.

Iron Mountain and Humble on Jones, Stasney and Bowden was drilling at 2,740. Maracaibo No. 2 C. Olander is a shallow well next to the No. 1, drilling for the shallow Frye sand, encountered at 1438 in the No. 1. This well was at 730 feet.

To Swim in Lake Cisco, Camp There Tonight; Plans Already Made

Seven hundred soldiers, one of the largest groups to ever enjoy the camping and other facilities offered by the Lake Cisco area, were expected to arrive here about 5:30 this afternoon, it was reported today.

The Third Battalion, 29th Infantry from Fort Sill, Oklahoma, being transferred to Fort Sam Houston in San Antonio, will take a swim in the lake and camp overnight, resuming their journey early Wednesday, Lake Cisco Manager P. G. Berry said.

A letter was received today written by D. D. McCaskey, captain of the infantry and supply officer, making arrangements for disposal of garbage left by the soldiers and also making arrangements for ice.

One of the officers of the company was here last month to make arrangements for the group to stop off and the plans were practically all completed at that time.

Pioneer of Cisco Country, Adolph Reich, Succumbs

A long and useful life was closed last Sunday, Sept. 5, 1937, when death culminating an illness of several months, ended the life of Adolph Reich, one of the pioneers of the Cisco country, and one of the first of the colony of German emigrants to locate in what is now termed the Lutheran community, so named from the Christ Lutheran church.

Adolph Reich was born in Baranovo, Germany, June 13, 1857, confirmed in the Lutheran church April 2, 1875, and was married June 15, 1882, to Miss Matilda Reich, a cousin. This marriage was consummated in the same church and by the same minister who officiated at the baptism and confirmation services of this couple.

His death was not unexpected, as he had begun to decline early last fall, and continued to grow weaker as the days passed by. His one expressed wish was that he would live to see his 80th anniversary, and this wish was granted by his Maker, who extended his days two months and 23 days beyond his cherished wished-for longevity.

Funeral services were held at the home, which was followed by a brief service at the grave, where his body was placed to rest in the cemetery of Christ's Lutheran church, in the community bearing that name. There were two services, one in German and the other in English, both conducted by Rev. E. Steyer, pastor of Christ's Lutheran church, at 4:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon, of which Mr. Reich was a charter member. The text of the German service was selected from Philippians 1:21: "For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain."

No Third Party For Lewis

OF COURSE, he is not going to organize a new political party," asserts Peter Molyneux in a radio address reprinted in the Texas Weekly and dealing with the ambitions of Labor Leader John L. Lewis.

MR. Molyneux is correct in his definition of the Lewis strategy except that Mr. Lewis does not intend to take over the democratic party so much as he desires to control a sort of insoluble inter-party minority which can be swung from one side to the other, depending upon the political trades he can make toward CIO objectives. It is quite plain that Mr. Lewis would lose a dominant political position should he attempt to compete with the larger parties. In the national two-party system under his present program he stands to hold a balance of power which would, in effect, make the CIO at all times the dominant political element.

OTHER OPINIONS

Mediterranean Pirate Hunt

STEPHEN DECATUR, commanding a squadron of American gunboats, in 1804 smashed the pirates of Tripoli to make the Mediterranean safe for commerce. The chastisement of the Tripolitans is supposed to have ended piracy, except for an occasional foray in some out of the way quarter of the globe.

Time turns backward, and the Mediterranean is the scene of another pirate hunt. British naval vessels are searching the western part of that sea for a pirate submarine. The undersea craft Tuesday fired a torpedo at the British naval destroyer Havock.

It was the audacious attack on H. M. S. Havock which caused London to order the pirate hunt. Commanders of searching vessels have been ordered to sink the raider after taking off the crew. But unless the sub be overtaken in an act of piracy, how are the hunters going to recognize it if they find it?

For that matter, several submarines may be preying on Mediterranean shipping. The Tripolitan pirates were the old-fashioned kind. Piracy was a business with them, and for many years European nations bought immunity for their merchant vessels. Current attacks are a phase of the war in Spain, and the nationality of the victims establishes beyond any reasonable doubt that the piratical craft are acting in behalf of the insurgents.

The situation is typical of the lawless attitude which is pushing the world toward war. In London the suspicion is openly expressed that Italy, whose troops are fighting for Franco in Spain, is helping the insurgents at sea by interfering with the shipping of nations suspected of helping the insurgents. Great Britain has been patient but is being forced into a position where she will be forced to call for a showdown or admit that she is unable to compel respect for the British flag.

er dropping the first set in the match the local boys came back to win a hard fought decision of 7-5 for the next set and then getting things well under control, trounced the Waco team 6-1 to capture their second round match.

The semi-finals with Cisco playing Burk Burnett in their bracket was a breeze for the Cisco boys as they won two straight, including one set. The score of the two sets were 6-0, 6-4.

The victory over Burk Burnett gave the Ciscoans the right to meet Malaise and Hackney, crack doubles team from Fort Worth, in the finals of the tournament.

The first set of the finals saw the Cisco boys turned back by a 6-2 score, but they rallied to defeat the Fort Worth team 6-4 in the second set of their match.

This evened matters up and the next set was the deciding factor of the match as the Ciscoans dropped the set and the match, 6-1, as a large crowd looked on.

Washington Daybook

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—It may not be news to the watching Japanese, but this government is indirectly financing the Philippine government in its armament program.

Here's how: In 1934 congress imposed an excise tax of 3 cents a pound on imports of Philippine coconut oil. That was part of the plan to keep out oil competing with American sources.

Revenue from the tax amounting to about $1,500,000 a month, and congress provided it should be paid to the Philippine government. Suit was brought by sugar manufacturers, users of most of the coconut oil, to annul the tax but it was upheld by the supreme court last spring.

But that is not all. Congress provided in the new sugar act that the tax of 50 cents a hundred pounds on Philippine sugar imported into this country be returned to the Philippine government. That will amount to $12,000,000 or $15,000,000 a year.

It May Not Last No one would go so far as to say the United States government was deliberately subsidizing the island defense system.

Also as independence nears, it is likely the benefits the Philippines get will dwindle from year to year. They enjoy preferential trade status at present; but American farmers don't like the low tariff on Philippine sugar and vegetable oil, so the pressure will be on increasingly to shut the islands out.

But the fact remains that during the costly job of setting up the defense system and organizing the government, a steady flow of money from the United States is helping the islands.

BY HULBERT FOOTNER

SYNOPSIS: When Neill, a young federal agent, gets to Baltimore for a week's vacation with Janet, he finds she won't break a dinner date with Prescott Fanning. From what Janet says, Neill distrusts Fanning, dubs him a crook. They quarrel and part. To check on Fanning, Neill finds him at his hotel and gets acquainted in the bar. Fanning invites him to join his party, but Neill passes out in the taxi. Next noon he awakens to find Janet, Fanning and Fanning's yacht gone. The taxi-driver of the night before tells him of trailing them and another couple, then losing them.

Chapter Six
"She's In Bad Trouble"
 The cab-driver ruefully exhibited a pink card. "I'm on my way now to the traffic court."
 "How much will they soak you?" asked Neill.
 "A fiver, I reckon."
 Neill gave him the money.
 "That's white of you, boss."
 "Not at all. It's only fair. When you come up before the judge, say nothing about my passing out, or that you were trailing another car. That won't help us any."
 "Just as you say, boss."
 "Give me a phone number where I can call you if I should want you later."

Tingstrom went away still grinning, and Neill began pacing his room again, hoping against hope that Janet would call him up. Even though they had quarreled, he could not believe that she would sail away out of his life without a word. The strain of waiting soon became more than he could bear. He had to be doing something. He bathed and shaved and set out for the Maryland institute. By asking from class to class, he finally found Percita Wales, Janet's friend.
 "Where's Janet?" he demanded.
 Percita looked at him queerly and bit her lip before replying. She was a quiet, placid sort of girl. "Janet's gone away," she said.
 "Where?"
 "I don't know."
 "You're lying!"
 Percita flushed. "If you're going to talk to me that way . . ."
 "Sorry," said Neill. "I'm near out of my mind. A sudden thought came to him. "Did you get a telegram?"
 "Why, yes. How did you know?"
 "Let me see it."
 She fished it out of her handbag. Neill read:
 Going to Canada for a few days. Don't tell anybody and don't worry. Writing.
 Janet.
 Neill groaned. "Janet never sent this! It's not her style."
 Percita's eyes widened. "Oh! What do you think has happened? Do you know anything?"
 "Keep your mouth shut about this until I can find out something," said Neill. He ran out. The telegram was a night message which had been filed in the main office on Baltimore street at nine o'clock the previous evening. Neill took a taxi to the office, and asked to be shown the original.
 "Sorry, we can't do that without proper authorization."
 "How can I get authorization?"
 "If it's a police matter, go to the police."
 Neill went out without answering. He couldn't go to the police for after all Janet might have gone with Fanning willingly, and he could not expose her to publicity. He himself was partly responsible. Their quarrel might have spurred her on to do something reckless. Girls were like that. Meanwhile she was swallowed up. Not for a moment did he believe she had gone to Canada.

Eyster's Checked Out
 He went on to the Lord Baltimore, not that he expected to learn anything there, but just to be doing something. He asked for Fanning at the desk.
 "Haven't seen Mr. Fanning this morning," said the clerk. He called up 1410. "No answer," he said, after waiting awhile.
 "Has he checked out?"
 "Checked out?" echoed the clerk, staring. "Certainly not! Mr. Fanning is a permanent guest."

Neill thought: Fanning is just fooling them. He's left a few things in his room for a stall.
 "Have you got a guest here called David Eyster?" he asked.
 "Mr. Eyster has checked out."
 Neill suspected that Eyster had better information than he had.
 "Say where he was going?"
 "No information."
 Inquiries of the bellboys and the doormen turned up nothing.

He called up the office of the lawyer, Kettering, but again failed to find him. Mr. Kettering had gone to Washington for the day and would not be in.
 Neill taxied back to the Stafford because he had no place else to go. At the desk he was told that his room number had been called up twice while he was out. His heart leaped up and then sank again, fearing that he had missed an important clue. "The man left no message," the clerk told him, "but he said he would call again."

Neill ascended to his room and paced the floor half crazy with the suspense of waiting. Three times he telephoned downstairs to make sure that the operator had not forgotten that he was in. When the bell finally rang, he flung himself on the instrument.
 A man's voice asked: "Is this room 704?" It was a strange voice—tenor with a Scot's burr.
 "Yes."
 "Are you the guy that rents that room?"
 "Yes. Who are you?"
 "Never mind that. I have a message for you from a certain girl. I don't know her name. Here's what she looks like: brown hair; brown eyes with a kind of surprised look. Was wearing a pink silk dress and a black wrap."

"Sure! Sure!" said Neill shakily. "What's her message?"
 "She's on the yacht Nadji in

Neill goes to Absalom's Harbor by bus, tomorrow

Absalom's Harbor, and she's in bad trouble."
 "Where's Absalom's?"
 "Southern Maryland. Eighty miles south of Baltimore."
 "What are the circumstances? What kind of trouble . . . ?"
 Neill heard a click as the receiver went up. The line was dead.

An Unknown Enemy, Too
 As Neill went through the lobby, a well-meaning clerk said: "Is anything wrong, Mr. Patton?"
 Neill had no notion of confiding in him. "Why no," he said easily. "What makes you ask?"
 "There was a man came to the desk at 8 this morning asking for you. When I said you weren't up, he wouldn't let me call you."
 "What sort of man?"
 "Big fellow; roughly dressed; stoop-shouldered. I went off duty at nine or I would have told you. When I left the building he was waiting outside. The other boys told me he was waiting there all morning. Did he find you?"
 "Nobody found me," said Neill. "I think you're seeing things."
 The clerk laughed.

This added to his uneasiness. The stoop-shouldered man again! It looked as if he had a friend and an enemy both unknown to him. It was certainly not the stoop-shouldered man who had called him on the phone. That was a high-pitched voice, whereas the big fellow's voice as he had heard it the night before had a subterranean rumble. Neill suspected that he had been followed all around town, and in his excitement had failed to notice it.

In the street he looked sharply up and down but the big man was not visible then.

The decision was disclosed after Russia protested Italy and had been rebuffed angrily to charges that Italian pirate submarines were responsible for sinking two soviet freighters off Spain.

Beer Retailers Fight Permit Revocations

EASTLAND, Sept. 7. (Sp)—Threatened with revocation of their beer permits by the attorney general's department and county officials, five retailers in Justice of peace precincts 7 and 8 Saturday had filed suit in 91st district court to prevent that action.

B. H. Atchison, Breckenridge jurist, issued an order granting an injunction to restrain the revocation of permits to Attorney Milton Lawrence of Eastland, representative of the beer dealers.

To make the order final was the necessity of posting of bond by the beer dealers before issuance of the writ of injunction by District Clerk P. L. Crossley. No bond had been posted Saturday morning.

No date has been set for a hearing of the case upon its merits, when the wet or dry status of the justice precincts will be determined.

Criminal District Attorney Earl Conner, Jr., previously had announced the attorney general's department would file suit for revocation of permits in the precincts, basing the proposed action upon the theory that the areas were dry at the time of the enactment of the 18th amendment in 1919.

Judge Atchison issued the injunction order restraining interference with the beer dealers until the status of the precincts are determined because both Eastland jurists—George Davenport of 91st district court, in which trial the case was filed; and B. W. Patterson of 88th district court—were not available.

Criminal District Attorney Conner Friday night communicated with Sam Lane at Austin, an assistant in the attorney general's department, who stated an attorney assigned to the liquor control board would be on hand this week to discuss opposition to the suit.

The case was styled "T. A. Minton et al vs. Bert Ford, administrator of the Liquor Control Board, et al."

There are three dealers in precinct 7 and two in precinct 8. Precinct 7 includes Rising Star and the other political subdivision Desdemona.

Conner stated the case is the first of its kind under the new liquor control act which was effective Sept. 1.

County Judge W. S. Adamson, like Conner, also is a nominal defendant in the case.

to die is gain." The text of the English service was from John 14:6: "Jesus saith unto him, I am the way, and the truth, and the life; no one cometh unto the Father, but by me."

During the services the choir sang one of his favorite hymns, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," a hymn he often sang alone, especially during his last illness. The services were attended by a large concourse of relatives, friends and neighbors, whose floral offerings were profuse and of rarest foliage.

Those chosen as pall bearers were some of his closest friends, and were John Hilscher, Herman Stephen, Carl Weiser, Willie Ziehr, Henry Stroebel and Lee Lieske.

Mr. and Mrs. Reich and their eldest son, Charles, who died in 1936, came to America Nov. 4, 1884, locating near where the last 53 years of his life was spent. A few months after his arrival he purchased the land which constituted his home, embracing several hundred acres of the most fertile area in the entire Cisco country. There he builded his home, a most ideal location, consisting of large acres of fertile valleys, surrounded by prominent elevations, ideally formed for building sites. It was on one of these promontories that he builded the home for his family, and it was on this spot 12 of the 13 children were born, 11 of whom are living, and all were with their father when he end came. His eldest child, Charles, now deceased, was born in Germany, and another son, Adolph, passed away in 1925. A remarkable incident of this large family was that the 13 children lived to reach their majority. Though the parents were born in the Fatherland, this family were loyal American citizens, one of the sons, Ewald, served overseas with Pershing's American expeditionary forces.

Two other families accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Reich from Germany, and settled in the community where he died—Mr. and Mrs. Dan Wende, and another family, who only remained a few years and moved away, whose name could not be learned. Mrs. Wende, a half sister, who is still living, is the mother of several children now living in and near Cisco, including Dan, Otto, Charley, Emil J., and others.

These were the first of the emigrants from Germany who formed the nucleus of that splendid citizenry that now constitutes what is known as the German-American settlement south and southwest of Cisco.

Besides his half-sister, Mrs. Wende, who resides about two miles from the Reich homestead, the widow, born November, 1862, is now nearing her 75th year, after having lived a wedded life of 55 years with the man whom she married in Germany June 15, 20 years before they came to America.

Besides the widow and sister, the surviving children are Miss

The life of this venerable pioneer was fraught with many vicissitudes and frugality, for it was by the hard work and the strict economy that he and his family paid for one of the best farms in Eastland county, and thus came home from what was then a veritable wilderness. Mr. Reich related some of his trials to achieve this end to the writer, telling he labored on the construction of the Texas & Pacific road so that railway was building its continental line, walking from home five miles south of Cisco, receiving $1 per day and board himself. Later, he said, when the line was graded to as far west as Dathan, he went to his job as one of the two mules that he purchased.

But the results of his labor of privation have been richly rewarded in the accumulation of a splendid home, and sufficient lands for each of his children, who are numbered among the most honorable and industrious citizens of Eastland county.
