U.S. EMBASSY WILL LEAVE NANKING

In an area of beautiful, benevolent climate, at ideal altitude, blessed with an abundance of the purest, soft lake water, possessing the best in recreational facilities, situated on the Bankhead, all weather transcontinental route, with two railroads and many highways, Cisco is the best place in Texas to live and to work.

The Lake Cisco Amusement company is bringing another big attraction to Cisco with the engagement of Jackie Coogan, famous young movie star, and his "Hollywood Hit Parade" for Tuesday evening, October 5. Included in the roster of famous names who will be here at that time are Lila Lee and Princess Luana. Manager J. T. Berry was fortunate in securing this attraction which will play at only three other places in the state—Dallas, Austin and Houston, jumping from Houston to Cisco en route to Oklahoma City.

Almost every movie goer above 21 years of age remembers Jackie Coogan who started his phenomenal career as "The Kid" in a picture with Charles Chaplin. His fame as a child player rated with that of the current juvenile star, Shirley Temple.

The program calls for a dance of four hours and a floor show of 45 minutes. Many who do not care to dance will be eager to see these movie stars perform in the flesh, a privilege which is rarely afforded to persons outside of Hollywood or the larger amusement centers where movie folk make frequent appearances.

The attraction will no doubt bring many hundreds of visitors from towns and communities about Cisco for what will probably be the biggest event of the kind that has ever occurred at Lake Cisco.

The WPA project for construction of a retaining wall and straightening of the Sandy creek channel to prevent erosion on the north side of the state fish hatchery is well under way. The dangerous erosive action of flowing water is well illustrated in the condition which the project now seeks to curb. Water flowing from the swimming pools has so eaten into the steep banks which rise to the hatchery pools that within a very short time those along the course of the stream would have been undermined and gone out, posing the fish they hold as well as doing great damage to the state investment there.

Water is an indispensable need but a terrible enemy under certain circumstances.

Its beneficial influences are revealed in the manner in which rees, grass and shrubbery are grown at the hatchery and along the creek, blending into a very beautiful pastoral scene. A flock of sheep under the trailing foliage of a great willow tree adds an artistic touch to the vista. The sheep are kept to keep the grass clipped smooth, saving a great deal of mowing.

Men's Fellowship Banquet Tuesday

The board of stewards and the missionary committee of the First Methodist church will sponsor a men's fellowship supper Tuesday night, Sept. 21, at 7:30 p. m., it is announced today. This is a church affair and every man of the Methodist church was urged to be there. A good program of music and fellowship has been provided for, said the sponsors, and everyone attending is assured of good time.

The Rev. Joe I. Patterson said at the sale of at least 100 tickets would be the goal of those on the supper.

Mrs. A. V. Clark and son, Blair, left Sunday in Fort Worth.

EAST TEXAS: Generally fair.

GAS PRESSURE IN EXTEX OIL FIELD LOWER

See Comm'n Move to Cut Allowable Now at 175,000

AUSTIN, Sept. 20 (AP)—Another big drop in the gas pressure of the east Texas oil field was disclosed at the railroad commission's monthly hearing today. W. E. Cottingham, chief engineer, said that the average bottom hole pressure had declined 12.89 pounds per square inch during the month ending September 11. It was the third consecutive month he had reported a decrease. Some feel that the commission will attempt to cut the area's production, now more than 175,000 barrels daily.

Tucker Would Expand State Hatchery Here

William Tucker, executive secretary of the Texas State Game, Fish and Oyster commission, here Sunday to inspect the improvements being made in the state fish hatchery, revealed that he is much interested in expanding the production of the hatchery to its fullest possibilities. Present capacity of the hatchery is about 500,000 fish annually, and Tucker, according to Supt. D. C. Harper, will undertake a study of the possibilities of expanding this to one million or more.

Accompanying Tucker was Fred Thompson, young newspaperman who has been employed by the commission as director of publicity. Thompson, with several years experience on Wichita Falls and Austin papers, went with the commission about six weeks ago.

Tucker expressed himself as well pleased with the condition of the local plant, where a $25,000 WPA project to curb the erosive effect of waters in Sandy creek below the Lake Cisco Amusement company's swimming pools, is now under way under the direction of W. F. Wilson, who was in charge of the project for the construction of the new football stadium.

From Cisco, Mr. Tucker and Mr. Thompson went to the Dundee hatchery for a similar inspection and from there they will go to Wichita Falls for a meeting of members of the wild life conservation society Tuesday night. Tucker will speak.

Ideal Sandwich Shop Will Be Improved

Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Kimmel, operators of the Ideal Sandwich shop, announced today that the shop would be closed until probably Thursday afternoon while improvements were being made to accommodate an increased patronage.

New equipment is to be installed and a complete job of re-decorating will take place.

Wallace Describes New Farm Program as Better

WASHINGTON, Sept. 20 (AP)—Secretary Wallace, outlining broad provisions for next year's five hundred million dollar farm benefit program, described it today as an improvement over earlier plans.

The new program, worked out under the soil conservation act, classes most of the major crops, such as corn, wheat, cotton, tobacco and other grains, fruits and vegetables, as "soil depleting," and attempts to hold down

How's How Warships Sink a Submarine

This is a Y-gun—the cannon which shoots depth bombs over the side of a sub chasing destroyer. Powered with gun powder and mounted astern, it tosses two bombs at a time—one from each barrel. Two bombs are shown now in position. A bomb-dropping destroyer travels at top speed, because where a bomb is dropped...

This Is What Happens

This is an "ash can"—The navy's name for a depth bomb. A steel barrel filled with TNT, it can be adjusted so that water pressure will set it off at any desired depth. A direct hit is almost sure to sink a submarine.

Destroyers Toss "Ash Cans" Over Side With Y-Gun

By The AP Feature Service
Warships on anti-piracy patrol in the Mediterranean are much better equipped to detect the combat submarines than allied destroyers were during the World war. But the modern sub, likewise, is much better prepared to protect itself.

On the side of the pirate chasers, naval experts here point out these developments since 1918:

1. Improvements of high-frequency sound detectors and direction finders by which surface craft can detect and locate submarines.

2. Improvement in the accuracy of depth bomb setting.

Depth bombs—sailors call them "ash cans"—are, in fact, the one effective weapon against a submerged submarine.

Timing Device a Secret

Cylindrical metal cases, they look much like five-gallon paint drums but are loaded with 300 to 400 pounds of TNT or other high explosive.

The can be set to go off at any desired depth of water. The United States navy keeps secret the exact nature of its bomb-timing device, but water pressure is most commonly used to set off the explosive.

Depth bombs can be either rolled overboard off the stern of a destroyer or shot from Y-guns. These are slingshot-shaped, double-barreled cannons mounted astern on the deck of the sub-chasing destroyer. They shoot two bombs at a time over opposite sides.

Checking the sub's location every 10 to 15 seconds by sounder devices, the destroyer plows the water directly overhead, laying a barrage of depth bombs in her wake.

A direct hit by a depth bomb is almost certain to sink a sub—

Allred Begins Work on Message Tonight

AUSTIN, Sept. 20 (AP)—Governor Allred will start work tonight on his message to the tax-raising session of the legislature opening Monday.

The state's general fund deficit today passed the 12 million dollar mark, rising $310,000 since September 4.

Spain Refused Seat on League Council

GENEVA, Sept. 20 (AP)—The League of Nations assembly refused to grant the government of Spain a seat on the council for the next three years, to the jubilation of nations sympathetic with the insurgent regime.

FUNERAL FOR EXECUTIVE

GLEN COVE, N. Y., Sept. 20 (AP)—Funeral will be held Tuesday for William Loeb, 70, executive who died yesterday of pneumonia.

J. O. Sellers of Fort Worth visited friends in Cisco Saturday.

Edwin Curry Goes to Dallas School

Edwin Curry, the son of Rev. and Mrs. James B. Curry, announced today that he will leave Tuesday for Dallas where he will enter Southern Methodist university in the junior class. Edwin was a 1935 graduate of Cisco high and has spent his last two years of schooling at McMurry college in Abilene.

He will continue his studies in the field of commercial art and other subjects closely connected with this line of endeavor.

Edwin will be the third Cisco student to enter that school this year. The other two are Meryll Goldberg, who is entered as a sophomore and Cecil Edwards, who enters for his first college year.

Eward Lee Back From Jaycee Meet

Edward "Red" Lee, president of the Cisco J. C. of C. and delegate to the state convention of the Jaycees at Wichita Falls, held last Friday and Saturday, returned here Sunday after a very enjoyable trip.

Loboes Resume Practice for Game With Steers

The Cisco Lobo football squad will resume training this afternoon in preparation for their game with their first conference rival, week after next, when they meet the Big Spring Steers. The Loboes are none the worse for their game with the Lubbock Westerners in a bruising battle last week except for the usual amount of minor injuries that are bound to crop up in any game of football.

There seems little chance of "Cotton" Harrison being back in the line-up again this year. "Cotton" was one of the brightest prospects for this year's team and his loss is greatly felt. His two brothers, the twins, however, will be ready to go just as soon as they reach their eligibility in the early part of October along with several others. Coach Petty expects a much better team when he is able to throw this added power against his Oil Belt rivals.

The Lubbock game proved at least two things—that the Lobo football team has a fighting spirit, and that, somehow, the line must be strengthened in order to compete with the heavy lines that feature most Oil Belt teams this year. Most of the returning veterans of last year's team are backfield men with only two or three experienced linemen.

If nothing in the near future happens to delay the development of the Lobo squad, they should be in the peak of condition for their game with the Steers.

Chamber of Commerce Board Meets Tuesday

The Cisco chamber of commerce board of directors will meet in regular session at the chamber of commerce offices on Tuesday evening.

MOVE TO BIG SPRING

Mr. and Mrs. Kyle Shelton have moved to Big Spring where Mr. Shelton is employed with the Texas Electric Service company.

TONSILS REMOVED

20,000 Attend Legion Convention at New York

NEW YORK, Sept. 20 (AP)—Twenty thousand packed Madison Square Garden for the opening session of the American Legion convention today and heard Gov. Herbert Lehman urge a continuation of the fight for "our great principles of democracy and liberty."

TO TRANSFER LOCATION 30 MILES AWAY

Action Taken Following Jap Threat of Bombarding

SHANGHAI, Sept. 20 (AP)—The American embassy decided tonight to leave Nanking after a Japanese threat to lay waste to the Chinese capital was emphasized by a morning aerial raid in which 40 civilians were killed and 40 homes destroyed.

Ambassador Nelson Johnson, with his aids, will board an American boat, the Luzon, and move to Wuhu, 30 miles up the Yangtze river. The Japanese navy warned foreigners they would face the danger of death from the air beginning at noon Tuesday.

The ambassador said: "I am too unhappy to speak. This is the first time in 30 years of service that I am forced to leave my post."

British, Russian, German and Italian embassies decided to remain for the moment. British and French naval commanders warned the Japanese they would be held responsible for any loss of life or damage to property. The embassy withdrawal paved the way for the withdrawal of American warships as the Japanese had requested.

Chinese fliers launched new air raids tonight, swooping over the Japanese airfield in the Yangtze-poo sector.

More Interest in High School Music Is Being Sought

Decision on whether or not the course now offered in public school music will be withdrawn from that school and efforts concentrated on the instruction in other schools of the system will be made following the response of the students to an appeal that more of them undertake the course, Supt. R. N. Cluck, said today.

Miss Elizabeth Deaton, who majored in public school music at Texas State College for Women (formerly CIA) is the instructor. A full credit is offered for a year's work in the course in the high school. Purpose of the course, Miss Deaton explained, is not to teach students to be professional musicians but to offer them a cultural appreciation of music and to acquaint them with its principles. To that end two main projects have been designed: "A Musical Map of Europe," in which study of musical history and technique in Europe will be made, and "American Music." There will be a little creative work, not to teach its composition so much as to teach the student appreciation of its fundamentals.

"This course," said Supt. Cluck, "is being offered toward the end of providing a balanced high school curricula. No study is more cultural in its influence than

Gray Is Recovering From Recent Stroke

The friends of Norton Gray were pleased to greet him down town Saturday, after confinement to his home for the past several months, where he has been recovering from a paralytic stroke.

Gray declared with his usual optimism, that he "was snapping out of it," and hoped to soon be able to resume his work.

Mr. Gray suffered a slight stroke several months ago, since which he has been confined to his home, and is only able to be out in his car at this time.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

I said, I will take heed to my ways, that I sin not with my tongue; I will keep my mouth with a bridle while the wicked is before me. I was dumb with silence; I held my peace.—Ps. xxxix. 1, 2.

Love thyself least, cherish hearts that hate thee. In thy right hand carry gentle peace To silence envious tongues.—Shakespeare.

An Important Meeting

THE meeting of the directors and other members of the West Central Texas Oil and Gas association here Wednesday afternoon is of much more significance to the average Cisco citizen than he possibly thinks. It concerns in a very vital manner the prosperity of an industry upon which the present economic status of this section in no small measure depends.

THERE is too much foreshortened thinking on the part of the lay citizen about the business of taxing natural resources. His first thought that because he does not pay any of the levies directly he therefore escapes them is a more egregious fallacy because, to speak colloquially, it "slips up on the blind side of the victim."

and income and in the loss of resources which those forced to retrenchment because of too heavy costs, might have developed. Some practical and long-range thinking on this subject is obligatory upon the average citizen if a legislative program of fairness and encouragement to industry and general prosperity is to result.

THE meeting of the oil association directors here Wednesday is a meeting in the interest, not merely of the oil industry, but of the entire section.

OTHER OPINIONS

Keeping Out of War Trade

IN WITHDRAWING one of his feet from China and sticking it well down into his storm cellar, Uncle Sam nevertheless can leave his best foot forward in the Far Eastern crisis. It is merely the war-trade foot he has moved. He can still throw his moral weight onto the other, which is the policy of working toward consultation among interested powers to discourage treaty-breaking and aggression on the Asiatic mainland.

In forbidding carrying of arms and ammunition to the Far East in government-owned ships, and by announcing a trade-at-your-own-risk policy for privately owned vessels engaging in such traffic, President Roosevelt has taken a step in time to prevent some "incident" from threatening American peace. That the move harmonizes with so-called "isolationist" opinion as reflected in the demands of several peace societies does not, as this newspaper has pointed out before, preclude its harmonizing also with a broader program which should include the exertion of American influence toward account of the struggle in China.

If the United States must risk involvement in Far Eastern troubles, the risk should be undertaken for a cause more worthy of support than war trade. It is worth noting that of the two causes which, until the president's partial embargo, were being served by American policy in the Pacific it was the less worthy one that incurred the greatest risk. Loss of American lives in ships which supposedly were under the protection of the American flag would have warmed war sentiment in the United States to a more intense heat than will possible diplomatic fractions developed by efforts to salvage treaty rights and human rights.

Objections to the embargo give less than deserved weight to the fact that while it may operate to China's disadvantage, that disadvantage will not be the decisive factor in the outcome of the Sino-Japanese conflict. For even if the embargo were not declared, Japan has a navy strong enough to blockade Chinese ports at any time Japanese authorities wish to do so. If the struggle comes to a point where a decisive blow is to be struck, the supplies which China might procure in the United States would hardly offset the impact of that blow.

As a matter of sentiment it may appear illogical to oppose Japanese aggression against China but deny China the means of opposing that aggression. As a matter of fact, it is illogical to supply arms to both sides in a quarrel in which sentiment can agree only with one side. And what is worse, it is unsafe for the supplier's own peace.

It is for the protection of that peace that Mr. Roosevelt has imposed restrictions on American shipping in Far Eastern waters. The United States' Pacific policy need not stop there. But that is not a bad place for it to begin.—Christian Science Monitor.

Yet when the stop order landed in New England there was a cry of indignation. The company had spent much cash already making machinery, and to stop would mean loss of a nice profit.

Moreover, other manufacturers began looking askance at such activities and wondered if this business of selling to belligerents was such a fat oyster as it first appeared. It was a critical moment, as documentary evidence found by the senate committee disclosed, England finally came across with full payment for the order as proof of her desire to do right by the outfits from which she expected to buy her shot and shell.

Now this isn't an exact parallel, but fresh in the news is the offer of the Spanish Loyalist government to begin paying at once the defaulted claims of Spanish companies which owed $30,000,000 to $50,000,000 to American merchants on pre-revolutionary business. Genial Miles M. Sherover, representative of the Spanish government in settling the claims, didn't mince matters. He said the negotiations were undertaken now to convince the world that the Loyalist government didn't share

WHAT IT MEANS: Counting America's Unemployed

By MORGAN M. BEATTY AP Feature Service Writer WASHINGTON, Sept. 20.—You'll soon be hearing a lot about the forthcoming "census" of the unemployed, but you'll need a compass to work your way through the maze of technical pros and cons.

Here are three big points to keep in mind: 1. The count will not be a census in the commonly accepted meaning of that word. It will be rather an official registration of the citizens who want, or are willing, to classify themselves as unemployed.

2. The poll will mark the first experiment by the United States government in this kind of census-taking. 3. The so-called census is an excellent example of how the voice of the American public can make itself heard between national elections.

For it was a recurring public outcry that brought both parties into the open on the question of an unemployment census. So widely varying were the estimates of unemployment that people began to wonder, and ask, why the federal government didn't find out how many people actually were unemployed. Newspaper editors on this subject were appearing at the rate of five or six a week last January. By the time the leaves were budding, the rate was 50 a week.

A Blank Check Last spring young Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., republican senator from Massachusetts, slipped an amendment into the annual relief bill providing for a complete census of the unemployed by the census bureau. Without warning, he called for a vote and got it.

Bells, sergeants-at-arms and senatorial secretaries startled the Potomac countryside immediately with an emergency call to the democratic faithful. Breathless senators reached their seats in time to turn aside Mr. Lodge and his amendment, 48 to 30. After all, a democratic administration shouldn't let republicans get the popular end of public questions.

The democratic leadership then got busy and framed a bill giving the president a blank check and unlimited power to take almost any kind of unemployment count that appealed to him. The measure slid through like greased lightning. The President's Problem The president had to keep in mind the fact that a complete census by trained census bureau men would cost $25,000,000—a sum that would put a big dent in his budget for 1938. Moreover, the regular census will answer all employment questions within a scant two years, in 1940. A compromise was Mr. Roosevelt's obvious one. First, he decided to limit the cost so far as the federal government is concerned to $4,000,000. Then he figured out a tentative plan to have the states, counties, and towns set up election machinery for an "employment census day" late this year and presumably bear the cost themselves. (Election machinery usually costs about a dollar a vote.) That little trick will leave the federal government free to spend $4,000,000 for: 1—A poll by extra rural mail carriers in country districts. 2—A recheck of the 5,000,000 persons listed with the federal employment service. 3—Elimination in the returns of 1,500,000 persons now receiving relief, and their relatives; and 4—The huge accounting job required to keep the totals from getting diluted or clipped off by bookkeeping accidents.

Then the president promptly put political critics at a disadvantage by inviting a Toledo, O., republican to administer the "census." He is John Biggers, a successful business executive. To avoid other

Monday, September 20, 1938. The Literary Guidepost... By JOHN SELBY. Some Reprints Out of a Season. Annually, from the June to approximately the end of August, publishing is conventionally described as "ebb." Publishers lie in their gardens reviewing their plans for the fall season. It is full of malice and possibly scandalous in its though the scandal is general. What is important about this is first that Galante eliminated most of the trash the brothers Edmond and megrims, and second that it is a perfect history of the sum of the period from 1870. Next most amusing (things!) is Dr. Logan Galtore's "The Human Body" ($3.75), which has sold at a first publication 10 years ago which now has been freshly renewed up and made irresistible and fascinating for anybody who is confused by all the medical about health. BY HULBERT FOOTNER

SYNOPSIS: Wealthy, flashy Prescott Fanning kidnaps Janet, a Baltimore girl, aboard his yacht. She gets word to Neil, a young federal agent who loves her. Rushing to Absalom's Harbor, he boards the yacht and finds, in a locked cabin, Fanning shot dead and Janet in a faint, a gun beside her. Neil hides her in the disused liners up the river. Back at the village he resumes his fisherman role to watch developments. Mark Bonniger, a keen local man, is called in to lead the murder investigation. Kettering, a Baltimore lawyer there to fish, offers to introduce Neil.

Chapter 17 Eyster Beckons

Bonniger, Wilson and Virgil were now on the store porch. Kettering hailed Bonniger with his customary heartiness, and brought up Neil to be introduced. Bonniger shook hands with Neil courteously, but let it be seen that he had other things on his mind. "I reckon this will spoil the fishing," said Kettering humorously, "but of course we've got to hold up the law's hands at such a time. If there's anything I can do, Bonniger, call on me."

"Thank you," said Bonniger dryly. "I may be glad of a little legal advice."
"Always at your service," said Kettering.
A thought struck Bonniger. "Look, Kettering—the dead man was known to his crew as John Barrett of New York. But he boarded his yacht in Baltimore night before last, and I've an idea he may belong there. You have a wide acquaintance in Baltimore. Come have a look at him."

They crossed the road and entered the shed. Neil managed to slip in before the door was closed. Fanning's body lay on a trestle with a sheet pulled over it. Already there was a smell of death in the place. Virgil took the edge of the sheet between thumb and finger and gingerly pulled it down. The dead man's face was composed now. A lock of hair concealed the hole in his forehead.
"Good God! It's Prescott Fanning!" cried Kettering. "I didn't know he had a yacht!"
"What do you know about him?"
"Only what everybody knows," said Kettering. He related it.
"From New York?" said Bonniger. "We must put out lines there. The rest is only Baltimore gossip. Can't you give me something particular about the man?"
Kettering shook his head. "I didn't know him at all. I saw him everywhere, but I haven't spoken to him above three times, and then only to pass the time of day."
"Well, we have established his name. That's a beginning," said Bonniger. "I'll have inquiries made in Baltimore and New York."

They returned to the store with Neil tagging along. Bonniger disappeared into the back office to telephone, and Virgil went behind the counter to wait on Kettering. Neil hung about at the back of the store until Bonniger appeared again. He had decided to make a bold play.
"Can I speak to you for a moment?" he asked.
Bonniger gave him a keen look. He was not a man that you could fool with. "Have you information to give me about this case?"
Neil faced him out grinning.

"Yes and no," he said. "I want to offer you my services."
"In what capacity?"
"I was introduced to you just now as Ford Wheatley. My right name is Neil Tryon and I'm a member of the department's narcotic squad." He produced his credentials.

Bonniger read them and handed them back. "It's a good work you people are doing," he said in his grave way.

"This is in confidence," said Neil. "I'm supposed to be lying low for a few days."
"Surely... What brought you to this out-of-the-way spot?"
"Fishing," said Neil. "I never anticipated anything like this, but here I am if I can help you. I reckon you'll need help. These people mean well, but Lord, they're dumb!"

Bonniger's stern face broke up in an attractive smile. "You're right, they're pretty dumb," he said. "I have to admit it, though they're my own people." He searched Neil's face with his steady eyes. The examination was satisfactory, and he offered his hand. "Very decent of you to offer to help, Tryon. You must be 10 times the detective, I am. I shall be glad to consult with you."

Neil's conscience reproached him because he had to play a double game with this man. He was drawn to Bonniger. He felt that they could have been friends.
Queer Little Customer
Sergeant Wilson came up to consult with Bonniger, and Neil strolled out on the porch. Kettering had gone with his purchases. Virgil was leaning against a porch post watching the crowd. The police were still keeping them moving up and down the road between store and wharf. The shed was the great object of the people's curiosity.
"Looks like a regular metropolis, don't it?" remarked Virgil.
Suddenly among those approaching from the right, Neil picked out a familiar figure. It was David Eyster, Fanning's half-crazy little trailer. There was no mistaking the gray figure ceaselessly turning his head from side to side. Eyster saw Neil, too, and it was too late to slip in the store.

There was a new quality in Eyster's grin which reminded Neil of devil's laughter. Yet the tragic look showed in his eyes unchanged. As Neil put it to himself, the devil was still in hell, but something had pleased him. Neil said to Virgil:
"That's a queer little customer yonder in the gray suit."
"Quare is the word, mister. Last night when I seen him first it give me the creeps."
"Last night?" Neil echoed.
"Sure he first come around last night after the movies. I don't know where he's from. Won't speak."

This gave Neil fresh food for thought. If the yacht had been driven into Absalom's by accident, how could Eyster have learned of her presence there so soon?
When Eyster came abreast of Neil he gave him a look of meaning and jerked his head slightly in the direction of up the road. It was clearly a summons to follow and Neil became a little hot. To come to heel at the beck of this repellent little man went against the grain, yet it was wiser not to disobey until he found out how much Eyster knew.
So Neil left Virgil and strolled up the road with a wooden face. Just beyond the store the road took a turn to the left and, crossing the narrow neck, turned sharp to the right and followed the river bank. The shanty which served as a post office stood on the river corner, and Eyster waited for Neil in its shadow. All the other promenaders turned back before they came to the river.

Neil Bluffs It Out
"Well, what do you want?" asked Neil grimly.
"Just to shake your hand," said Eyster with his crazy grin. "You must give me that satisfaction. You're a fine fellow, and I'm your friend."

Neil gave him his hand. He couldn't trust his offers of friendship. And he didn't want him for a friend anyhow. But he couldn't quarrel with the man.
"I see you've washed your pants," said Eyster.
"So it was you who sent me that note?"
"Sure, I been keeping my eye on you."
"Since you rowed out to the yacht last night,"
A chill struck through Neil. He bluffed it out. "You're crazy! I haven't been on the yacht."
"Friends shouldn't lie to each other," said Eyster.
"How did you know the yacht was here?" asked Neil.
"I told you I had made my arrangements."
"When did you get here?"
Eyster looked out over the river. Like a child, he made out to be deaf when he didn't want to answer a question.
"Did you come alone?" asked Neil.
"I am always alone."
"I reckon you were out rowing yourself last night."
"I have never been in a row-boat," said Eyster. "I wouldn't know how to swing an oar."
This somehow had the ring of truth. If it was true, Neil figured, ed, there was another unknown factor in the case.

Meanwhile Eyster's strange, tragic eyes were fixed on his face. "I wish I had a son like you," he said unexpectedly. "You are my idea of what a young fellow ought to be—cool, hard and able. I would do anything for you. You can depend on me to the death."
This put Neil's teeth on edge. Too melodramatic. Even if sincere, which he doubted, the "friendship" of this crazy little man would be terribly dangerous to him now.
"If you want to do me a service, keep away from me, see? We must never be seen together. Nobody must know that we are acquainted."
"Right!" said Eyster. "My idea exactly. Just this one meeting to cement the friendship. Then pass as strangers. I'll go around by the beach and you return by the road. Rely on me!"
He went down the bank with a crazy wave of his hand, and Neil turned back down the road scowling. The secret which he had supposed to be all his own was shared by another it seemed—and perhaps by two. It complicated the situation damnably.

First Showing of Southwest Grid Styles This Week

FORT WORTH, Sept. 20. (Sp)—First showings of the new fall styles in Southwest conference football will be made this week at Waco, Dallas and Austin, Texas; Fayetteville, Ark., and Columbus, O.

Advance information has it that the Razorbacks will set the pace in gridiron fashions, but they probably won't disclose too much at their initial showing. The Mountain eleven is scheduled to go up against the Bronchos of the Oklahoma Central Teachers—a good bunch of boys but not good enough to push Coach Fred Thomson's men very hard.

Eyes of the football world will be upon Coach Dutch Meyer and his Horned Frogs, who will display their 1937 style of gridiron play against Coach Francis Schmidt's Ohio State Buckeyes in Columbus. Schmitt's eleven is favored to take the Texas visitors in the nation's ace intersectional tilt, but those fighting Frogs have upset stronger dope than this.

The question that the Southwest particularly wants an answer to is: "How do the Christians look without Singin' Sam Baugh and that quartet of stellar ends that caught his passes last year?"

Dana X Bible's first fall showing will be made against Pete Cawthon's Matadors of Texas Tech. The plains eleven has managed to make things mighty interesting for Southwest opponents in recent years and it may take quite a lot of dazzle for the Longhorns to convince the Tech boys.

The Methodists are not expected to have too much trouble with the Eagles of Denton Teachers. Likewise, the Baylor Bears should take the Pirates of Southwestern University. But Southwest football followers will be interested to see just how much power and pep Coaches Natty Bell and Morley Jennings put on to the field. S. M. U. won from the Teachers 6 to 0 last year. None of the other elevens met in 1936.

No Star Longer in Public Than Jackie Coogan

There is no star who has lived as long in the hearts of the public as Jackie Coogan, who comes to Lake Cisco on Tuesday, Oct. 5, with his Movieland dance orchestra and the "Hollywood Hit Parade Revue," combining an evening of dancing and entertainment, through arrangements with Consolidated Radio Artists, Inc. Coogan's fame started at the age of 4 when he appeared with Charlie Chaplin in "The Kid." Now at the age of 21 Jackie is the possessor of a fortune estimated at over $2,000,000 and is still one of the most popular stars in the picture world. He has never grown up to his public and his appearance with the "Hollywood Hit Parade" will bring to the stage a new Coogan, a more mature Coogan, but one who still retains that roguish smile and winning personality that has stayed with him all these years. His talents have improved, his knowledge of acting has broadened, he has developed into an excellent vocalist and a dancer who needs take a back seat from nobody. "The Jackie Coogan who used to make people cry, cheer, laugh and thrill can still do it and hordes of Coogan fans are glad to get the chance to meet him face to face and Jackie is glad to meet them. Let us look at the Jackie that we or snipers, the president insisted the tally must be voluntary and therefore possessed of no powers to "brand" citizens. (That voluntary provision makes the tally resemble a straw vote).

It Has Its Faults
A critic would find himself in possession of a lot of arguing material by charging that any census of the unemployed is a negative, and therefore, relatively pointless thing.

For instance, if the medical profession wanted information about teeth-bruishing, it would not ask how many people do not brush their teeth. The question would be, "Do you wash your teeth?" Similarly, in a normal census the question would be, "Are you employed?"

And the question would be put to every citizen, not merely to those persons who actually are, or may be, or think they are unemployed.

Admittedly the scheme is not perfect, but it is quite possible that the states, cities, and the federal government will get a good $4,000,000 worth of information about unemployment.

Keats asked that the following inscription be placed on his grave: "Here lies one whose name was writ in water."

music. Joined with English and other cultural subjects, music will prevent the high school curricula from becoming topheavy, maintaining a balance which will give equal opportunity to each of a variety of interests.

Several reasons why students have not adopted the course in high school were seen, principal among which is the fact that the schedules are not yet definitely established. Another is that the course is new and students hesitate to undertake it.

The people of the community, said the superintendent, will be able to receive some direct benefits from such a course in the way of securing better trained talent for church choirs, for community choruses and so forth. Likewise they will receive direct results from the course in orchestra which is being offered, carrying opportunity of securing one-half a credit for one year's work. A high school orchestra would be a valuable asset to a community, he explained, by furnishing music for women's organization meetings, church socials, public entertainments and so forth.

The musical courses offered in the school this year provide, he said, a wide latitude of choice for the individual student, enabling each to fit his studies to his inclinations.

Odessa Woman Is Dead in Accident

SAN ANGELO, Sept. 20. (AP)—Mrs. G. T. Hamm, 30, of Odessa, injured in an auto accident near Eden Thursday, died in a hospital here today. Funeral services will be held Monday afternoon at the home of her mother, Mrs. C. F. Wilkerson, Temple.

A blowout of a rear tire caused the auto Mrs. Hamm was driving to turn over several times. Her two sons, Jackie, 3, and Tommy, 7, also injured are still in the hospital. Hamm was released today, having been treated for a broken collar bone. The two boys, both seriously hurt, were reported slightly improved this afternoon.

marine, navy men say, a bomb exploding within 100 feet will probably put the sub in control.

But submarine improvement since the war have about kept pace with the advances in fighting weapons.

Submarines today are a faster than the German U-boats which almost succeeded in sinking England. And they can go under more quickly, go up and stay under longer.

Sub's Big Disadvantage
A modern sub can stay underwater 72 hours, compared with hours in 1917, and can go to 300 feet below the surface while the World War U-boats did not dive below 200 feet. The sub's big disadvantage is that in clear water her shadow shows on the surface from 100 feet below.
