YANKS WIN FIRST SERIES GAME 8 TO 1

HUBBELL IS FORGED FROM BOX IN SIXTH

CARL HUBBELL

Seven Runs Scored by Victors During One Inning

The New York Yankees behind effective pitching of Lefty Gomez, spotted their World Series opponents, the New York Giants one run in the fifth inning of the first series game here this afternoon, and then opened up in the sixth with their big guns to drive Carl Hubbell, screw-ball artist, from the box. The Yanks swamped the Giants with seven runs in the sixth and Lazzeri's homer in the eighth added another for good measure. Harry Gumbert, relieving Hubbell in the sixth, pitched only one ball before he was himself relieved by Coffman, who finished for the losers.

LEFTY GOMEZ

The victory kept Gomez record of never having lost a world series game intact. The play by innings: First Inning—Giants—Moore was out on grounder to Gehrig at first. Bartlett singled inside third base. Ott flied out to Gehrig in infield. Leiber struck out swinging. One hit, no runs, no errors. Yankees—Crosetti walked. Rolfe struck out. DiMaggio singled to left field. Crosetti was held at second by Moore's alert fielding. Gehrig flied out to Hank Leiber in deep center. Dickey flied out to Leiber deep center. One hit, no runs, no errors. Second Inning—Giants—Ripple smashed out to Hoag in left field. McCarthy lined to Gehrig. Mancuso flied out to Right Fielder Selkirk. No hits, no runs, no errors. Yankees—Hoag out on bounding ball to short. Selkirk was out on bouncer toward second base. Lazzeri was out on hot smash that Pitcher Hubbell dropped, picked up and tossed to McCarthy at first. No runs, no hits, no errors. Third Inning—Giants—Whitehead flied on a bounding ball through the box which Crosetti fielded beautifully. Hubbell was out on a fly which Selkirk caught against the fence in right field. Moore was out on a hot smash to Lefty Gomez. No runs, no hits, no errors. Yankees—Gomez flied out to Ripple in right field. Crosetti flied out to Joe Moore in left field. Rolfe flied out to DiMaggio in center. No runs, no hits, no errors. Fourth Inning—Giants—Bartlett flied out to left fielder Hoag. Toney Lazzeri picks up a sizzling bouncer to throw Ott out at first. Leiber popped flied to Lazzeri. No runs, no hits, no errors. Yankees—DiMaggio was out on short fly to first. Gehrig struck out swinging. Dickey was out on bouncer to McCarthy at first. No runs, no hits, no errors. Fifth Inning—Giants—Ripple lined a single into right field. It was the second Giant hit of the afternoon. McCarthy singled into right field, advancing Ripple to third. Mancuso hit into a double play, Crosetti out at first. (CONTINUED ON PAGE 4)

JAPAN WARNED BY LEAGUE OF WORLD ACTION

Resolutions Condemning Action in China Are Adopted

GENEVA, Oct. 6 (AP)—The possibility of international action against Japan of the League of Nations assembly today warned Japan of the possibility of a peaceful nine-power settlement of the China conflict. Waves of applause broke as Aga Khan, assembly president, announced the adoption of resolutions which condemn Japan, and provide for a conference of the nine-power signatories, including the United States, to the pact guaranteeing the territorial integrity of China.

BRITISH MINISTERS WEIGH MEASURE

LONDON, Oct. 6 (AP)—Great Britain's ministers today weighed emergency measures to curb the growing danger of a world war, with President Roosevelt's call for action against military aggression interpreted as inviting British cooperation in the Far East. Sentiment expressed opposed the possibility of a lone-handed fight, but informed persons believed that the cabinet, with the United States' assistance, might adopt a sterner attitude in the Sino-Japanese war.

CHINESE RESISTANCE HALTS JAPANESE

SHANGHAI, Oct. 6 (AP)—Japanese advances on all China's fronts from Shanghai to far north were reported today to have been halted by stubborn Chinese resistance. The American destroyer squadron moved out of the Chefoo harbor in response to Chinese warning that the breakwater, protecting the port, would be destroyed.

Loboes Take Last Scrimmage For Big Spring

By JAMES JOHNSON The Loboes will go through their last hard scrimmage session today in preparation for the Big Spring Steers at Chesley field Friday afternoon. They are due to rest Thursday and will take just enough exercise to keep them in shape and ready to go at game time. The first part of this week's training has been taken up with pass defense, practice on ball handling, and the execution of plays. The team will be greatly strengthened over that of last week's when they take the field against the Steers. Some of the boys who have been counted on all along have just reached their eligibility and have been showing their willingness to go by tearing things up in practice. The backfield will be rounded out by the addition of Curtis Yancey, a pile driving full back, and Odell Harrison a slippery-hipped ball carrier who has the knack of getting past enemy tacklers. In the line there is Marcel Harrison, the brother of Odell who showed (CONTINUED ON PAGE 4)

Germany and Japan Warn Against U. S. Offices

(By Associated Press) A world fearful of a widespread war looked today upon president Roosevelt's intimation that the United States was preparing to take steps for peace, both as a menace and a benefaction.

The German foreign office warned him to remember the "shipwreck" of president Wilson when he sought to safeguard peace through the League of Nations.

Japan warned him officially that peace may be "difficult to maintain" if the demands of nations which "have not" colonies and raw material are ignored.

Socialist newspapers at Valencia, seat of the Spanish government, praised the "mighty opinion" of a Nanking spokesman declared the speech was "gratifying to China as evidence that America was emerging from isolationism and neutrality."

Equipment Is Arriving for New Overpass

Equipment and machinery has started arriving here for use in the construction of the new overpass, a part of the plans for the rerouting of the State Highway One through Cisco, prior to the issuance of the work order necessary to start construction. A giant crane has already arrived and other materials are due to be here soon.

The unit of the highway commission which is now stationed in Cisco and which is looking out for the state's interest as well as doing preliminary work toward the actual beginning of construction, disclosed today that the work order will probably be issued by October 10 following a scheduled meeting of the officials of the Texas state highway commission on the 8th. The commission is to approve new plans which are a slight change from the original plans.

Freak Calf Only 7 Inches High

A Hereford calf in miniature was a bovine freak that was shown here Tuesday from the Flack ranch, near Ranger. The freak was a well-formed and perfectly developed calf, born Sept. 1, that measured only 7 1/2 inches in height and 12 inches in length. Mr. Flack said the freak gave promise of growing into maturity, and was thriving the three days of its brief existence, but its life was cut short when its mother stepped on it.

Mr. Flack had the freak mounted, and all of its members showed to be well-formed, even to its hoofs, which were natural and fully matured. The freak was not weighed, but probably would tip the scales at five or six pounds.

HYDE PARK, N. Y., Oct. 6 (AP)—President Roosevelt strongly indicated today that he would call a special session of congress to convene between November 8 and 16, but would reserve his decision until after conferences in Washington this week. Placed at the top of the program was regulation of wages and hours, surplus crop control, government reorganization and regional planning.

TEXAS HOUSE URGES SPECIAL SESSION AUSTIN, Oct. 6 (AP)—The Texas house appealed today to President Roosevelt to call a special session of congress before November 1 to relieve the "serious and vexing" problems of the farmers due to low prices of cotton. The dark ships

HULBERT FOOTNER

HOWARD W. AP Science, finds his beloved Janet, and Prescott Fanning's not body locked in a Fanning's yacht at Harbor. Neill hides her a disused liner, then a Bonnier, local investor when Neill learns Janet's queer little Eyster, Fanning. Also on hand, a Baltimore lawyer, Ira Buckless, a tough Neill. While Bonnier's search of the dark ships, he says, gets Janet and the searchers. Neill angrier.

Chapter 31

On the Yacht

and when I meet with a trifling setback I'm not going to let it cast me down. This case is a fascinating problem. I have all the lines in my hand. I shan't fail to land my fish."

The Beer Isn't Drunk

"Do you still think there is somebody on the ships?" asked Neill offhandedly.

"If there is, it's a good place for them to be," said Bonnier with a dry smile. "I can put my hands on them easily."

This had the effect of a challenge to Neill. Oh, I don't know, he thought. He said nothing.

Bonnier looked at him full. "You seem pretty well tucked out," he said. "You shouldn't take all this so hard."

Neill wished that he wouldn't sound the friendly note. He was getting to like the man too much. "Oh, it isn't the case," he said lightly. "That's a welcome distraction. . . I've got private troubles."

Neill offhandedly. "Woman trouble, I reckon. Always is at your age."

"Well . . . yes," said Neill with a wry smile.

"Lord! I have known what that was in my time," said Bonnier smiling. "I'm thankful it's over. Really a man gets the best out of women after he has passed 45. It may not be flattering, but they have confidence in you then; they open their dear little hearts to you. I have three nieces up the county who keep me young. You must come up and meet them when this is over."

"Thanks," said Neill, "but my hands are pretty full in that line."

"Well, anyhow let's order up some beer and drink to them."

"That would be fine."

However, the beer was not destined to be drunk.

Forsythe had just been sent off to the yacht to relieve Constable Mattingly who had been on guard since six. Suddenly through the window they heard Forsythe's deep voice hailing the shore.

"Ho! Sergeant Wilson!"

Wilson answered from the store next door. "Hello?"

"Come out here, sir, and bring Mr. Bonnier."

"All right."

The Yacht Guard Gone

Instantly Bonnier was the stern public officer again. He snatched up his coat and he and Neill ran downstairs. They met

Wilson coming from the store. Some of the villagers had been aroused by the constable's hail, and heads were sticking out of the bedroom windows here and there. As they went out on the wharf, Virgil Longeope came running down the hill behind the store, slipping his suspenders over his shoulders. He called to them to wait for him.

Virgil's clerk, young Trueman, was no the wharf. "Gosh! I hope there ain't nothing wrong out there," he said. "If there is, reckon it's my fault."

"What do you mean?" asked Bonnier. "Come along with us."

Trueman explained while Wilson plied the oars. "About nine o'clock fellow called up and asked for Sergeant Wilson. I said he wouldn't be back until late. So the fellow he said he was Constable Pennorth stationed at King's Green, 20 miles up the road."

"Was it Pennorth's voice?"

"I don't know the man."

"Go ahead."

"Well, this fellow said he was Pennorth, he said a man driving up the county from Cove Point had stopped by to say that as he come around a turn in the Cove Point road he seen a couple jump out of the road into the bushes. And the girl had a pink dress and a black wrap on. Pennorth he said that Wilson had ordered him not on any account to leave the King's Green section, and he wanted to know what to do. Well, I tried a dozen times to get Wilson on the phone . . ."

"The phone is in Captain Bickel's cabin and we were searching the ships," put in Wilson.

"So I think I'll go out to the yacht and tell Mattingly. Mattingly and me, we talked it over and he said he'd better lock up the yacht and go up to the Cove road on his motor-bike. He was all excited at the thought of nabbing that pair singlehandedly."

"I dare say!" said Wilson dryly.

"So I came ashore and at 10 o'clock I shut up the store and went home," Trueman went on. "I called up to tell you, but there was no answer, and then . . . well, I reckon I fell asleep."

As they drew near the yacht,

IN AND ABOUT MORAN

(By Bob Taylor)

An inspired bunch of Moran Bulldogs flew all over an overconfident Albany eleven early in the second quarter of their non-conference football tilt at Albany Friday night, to draw first blood by a sensational march to the Lions goal line. With a series of showy Plummer-to-Weber passes, and a short run by Overby, the under- (Bull) dog team pulled the surprise of many seasons of grudge football by smoothly crossing the supposedly impregnable goal line of the touted Albany club before the surprised Lions could rally and stop the magical march.

The stronger team, however, brought to their senses, soon settled down to business and retaliated with enough hard won touchdowns to make the final score 38 to 6 in their favor. The determined Bulldogs approached another score when an alert Overby took an Albany pass and raced 40 yards before being overtaken and downed by fleet Hammond of Albany. Never was the game a

Sunday school picnic for the fast moving Lions. With every man of the inexperienced Moran team playing like a rugged veteran, tackling with a heretofore unexhibited furor, the Lion ball carriers were sorely pressed and hard driven to push over their six touchdowns. It was only by their expert use of off-tackle reverse plays that they were able to gain ground over their stripping opponents who fought with a dogged determination that left the red suited team wide-eyed with surprise.

To praise any member of the courageous few who fought for Moran's Purple and Gold without mention of every member of the team would be rank injustice, for every man, little or big, gave his best and all. Let us, now standing pay homage to the unaccustomed toe of the diminutive young Pinnell which consistently kicked the Lions back into their own territory, to the smashing tackles of Captain Weber, and to the accurate passes of Quarterback Plummer. Add to that glory list the names of every member of the team, which delivered the goods as no one, even their most loyal backers, thought they would.

Never has the ancient athletic grudge between the two Shackelford county towns been so nearly erased, never has the feeling of petty antagonism been so near the ideal in sportsmanship as at the closing gun, when nearly half of a tired Albany team rushed across the dusty gridiron to pay earnest and tearful respect to their rival

Forsythe said from the deck: "Mattingly is gone."

"We know it," answered Wilson. "What then?"

"The yacht has been ransacked from stem to stern, sir."

"Hal," said Bonnier. "You seem to be pleased about it," said Wilson sardoniously.

"I suspected our man was not far away, and now I know it."

(Copyright, 1937, by Hulbert Footner)

Neill finds himself in a tight place, tomorrow.

captain, Buddy Weber, who was removed from play as the result of injuries in the fourth period. The sobbing captain was carried to the showers by members of what may have been heretofore considered a stiff-necked ball team, in their respect for a game team who had fought a good fight, a demonstration unprecedented in the annals of the Moran-Albany football feud.

State Highway 23, traversing Moran's business district, has, of late, born upon it's moving tide, an unusually large crowd of representatives of the dark race, people rare within the confines of our race-prejudiced city. Depict automobiles of varied nameplates and rare vintage, loaded almost to the straw that broke the camel's back, struggle from one city limit to the other, with dark faces peering furtively from high piled tonneaus, none of the cars' drivers daring to slacken their pace and each with the hope that their puffing vehicles will hold out until they have tucked away this awful town behind them.

These are laborers en route to the cotton fields of counties to the north of Moran, and they go with fear in their eyes and dread in their hearts as they spur their puffing jellappies through the few blocks of Moran that line their route. And for good reason, for, if for nothing else, Moran is noted, at least among our dark brethren of this state, as a town of extreme intolerance to any and all members of the negroid race.

It is nothing less than pitiful to see fellow human beings wide-eyed with terror at the mere thought of passing within range of our community—a place made terrifying by our own antagonistic expression of an inhumane unkindness toward fellow dwellers of the earth.

May the years bring a broader, more humane attitude to residents of our community, and if the town's industries cannot support members of both races, may we at least be white enough to let the dusky optimists go their way in peace safety and confidence of their security.

Water Running Low In Many Farm Homes

Rev. E. Steyer, pastor of Christ church, in the Lutheran community south of Cisco, was here Tuesday making arrangements for water to fill his cistern at the parsonage of his church. He said the continued dry weather was causing a serious shortage of water for domestic use, as well as for stock water.

He was inquiring for some person with a tank truck to haul water from Cisco to fill his cistern. He thought some owner of a tank truck could do a nice business in the rural communities if he will contact those whose cisterns are dry.

Germany and Japan Warn Against U. S. Offices

(By Associated Press)

A world fearful of a widespread war looked today upon president Roosevelt's intimation that the United States was preparing to take steps for peace, both as a menace and a benefaction.

The German foreign office warned him to remember the "shipwreck" of president Wilson when he sought to safeguard peace through the League of Nations.

Japan warned him officially that peace may be "difficult to main- tain" if the demands of nations which "have not" colonies and raw material are ignored.

Socialist newspapers at Valen- cia, seat of the Spanish govern- ment, praised the "mighty opin- ion."

A Nanking spokesman declared the speech was "gratifying to Chi- na as evidence that America was emerging from isolationism and neutrality."

Equipment Is Arriving for New Overpass

A giant crane has already arrived and other materials are due to be here soon.

The unit of the highway com- mission which is now stationed in Cisco and which is looking out for the state's interest as well as doing preliminary work toward the actual beginning of construction, disclosed today that the work or- der will probably be issued by October 10 following a scheduled meeting of the officials of the Texas state highway commission on the 8th. The commission is to approve new plans which are a slight change from the original plans.

Freak Calf Only 7 Inches High

A Hereford calf in miniature was shown here Tuesday from the Flack ranch, near Ranger. The freak was a well-formed and perfectly developed calf, born Sept. 1, that measured only 7 1-2 inches in height and 12 inches in length. Mr. Flack said the freak gave promise of growing into maturity, and was thriving the three days of its brief existence, but its life was cut short when its moth- er stepped on it.

Mr. Flack had the freak mount- ed, and all of its members showed to be well-formed, even to its hoofs, which were natural and fully matured. The freak was not weighed, but probably would tip the scales at five or six pounds.

GENEVA, Oct. 6 (AP)—The possibility of international ac- tion against Japan of the League of Nations assembly today warned Japan of the tion unless she agrees to a peaceful nine-power settle- ment of the China conflict.

BRITISH MINISTERS WEIGH MEASURE

LONDON, Oct. 6 (AP)—Great Britain's ministers today weighed emergency measures to curb the growing danger of a world war, with President Roosevelt's call for action against military aggression interpreted as inviting British co- operation in the Far East. Loboes Take Last Scrimmage For Big Spring

By JAMES JOHNSON

The Loboes will go through their last hard scrimmage session today in preparation for the Big Spring Steers at Chesley field Friday afternoon. They are due to rest Thursday and will take just enough exercise to keep them in shape and ready to go at game time. The first part of this week's training has been taken up with pass defense, practice on ball handling, and the execution of plays.

The team will be greatly strengthened over that of last week's when they take the field against the Steers. Some of the boys who have been counted on all along have just reached their eligibility and have been showing their willingness to go by tearing things up in practice.

The backfield will be rounded out by the addition of Curtis Yan- ceey, a pile driving full back, and Odell Harrison a slippery-bipped ball carrier who has the knack of getting past enemy tacklers. In the line there is Marcel Harrison, the brother of Odell who showed

The Reverend C. S. Moad, pas- tor of the Church of God, was the guest speaker at the high school chapel program this morning. His talk was one of a series of talks given by one of the town's minis- ters every two weeks.

Rev. Moad presented a very in- teresting review of some of his boyhood experiences on a ranch in the western part of Texas. His program was further added to by his original wit and the dry way in which he presented some of his jokes which kept the entire stu- dent body chuckling all during his discussion. The latter part of his talk was directed along more se- rious lines and was based on some of the things that he had already given in a humorous way at the beginning of his speech.

Seven Runs Scored by Victors During One Inning

The New York Yankees be- hind effective pitching of Lefty Gomez, spotted their World Series opponents, the New York Giants one run in the fifth inning of the first series game here this afternoon, and then opened up in the sixth with their big guns to drive Carl Hubbell, screw-ball artist, from the box. The Yanks swamped the Giants with seven runs in the sixth and Lazzari's homer in the eighth added another for good measure. President Roosevelt Hints at Special Session of Congress; Court Reform Program Uncertain

HYDE PARK, N. Y., Oct. 6 (AP)—President Roosevelt strongly indicated today that he would call a special session of congress to convene between November 8 and 16, but would reserve his decision until after conferences in Washington this week. He said it was a little premature to say that supreme court reorganization would be included in the program. He said it was neither in nor out. Placed at the top of the program was regulation of wages and hours, surplus crop control, gov- ernment reorganization and regional planning.

Wilson coming from the store. Some of the villagers had been aroused by the constable's hail, and heads were sticking out of the bedroom windows here and there. As they went out on the wharf, Virgil Longcope came running down the hill behind the store, slipping his suspenders over his shoulders. He called to them to wait for him.

Virgil's clerk, young Trueman, was no the wharf. "Gosh! I hope there ain't nothing wrong out there," he said. "If there is, reckon it's my fault."

"What do you mean?" asked Bonniger. "Come along with us."

Trueman explained while Wilson plied the oars. "About nine o'clock fellow called up and asked for Srgeant Wilson. I said he wouldn't be back until late. So the fellow he said he was Constable Pennorth stationed at King's Green, 20 miles up the road."

"Was it Pennorth's voice?"

"I don't know the man."

"Go ahead."

"Well, this fellow said he was Pennorth, he said a man driving up the county from Cove Point had stopped by to say that as he come around a turn in the Cove Point road he seen a couple jump out of the road into the bushes. And the girl had a pink dress and a black wrap on. Pennorth he said that Wilson had ordered him not on any account to leave the King's Green section, and he wanted to know what to do. Well, I tried a dozen times to get Wilson on the phone . . ."

"The phone is in Captain Bickel's cabin and we were searching the ships," put in Wilson.

"So I think I'll go out to the yacht and tell Mattingly. Mattingly and me, we talked it over and he said he'd better lock up the yacht and go up to the Cove road on his motor-bike. He was all excited at the thought of nabbing that pair singlehanded."

"I dare say!" said Wilson dryly. "So I came ashore and at 10 o'clock I shut up the store and went home." Trueman went on. "I called up the ships every little while to tell you, but there was no answer, and then . . . well, I reckon I fell asleep."

As they drew near the yacht.

and when I meet with a trifling setback I'm not going to let it cast me down. This case is a fascinating problem. I have all the lines in my hand. I shan't fail to land my fish."

The Beer Isn't Drunk

"Do you still think there is somebody on the ships?" asked Neill offhandedly.

"If there is, it's a good place for them to be," said Bonniger with a dry smile. "I can put my hands on them easily."

This had the effect of a challenge to Neill. Oh, I don't know! he thought. He said nothing.

Bonniger looked at him full. "You seem pretty well tuckered out," he said. "You shouldn't take all this so hard."

Neill wished that he wouldn't sound the friendly note. He was getting to like the man too much. "Oh, it isn't the case," he said lightly. "That's a welcome distraction. . . I've got private troubles."

Neill offhandedly.

"Woman trouble, I reckon. Always is at your age."

"Well . . . yes," said Neill with a wry smile.

"Lord! I have known what that was in my time," said Bonniger smiling. "I'm thankful it's over. Really a man gets the best out of women after he has passed 45. It may not be flattering, but they have confidence in you then; they open their dear little hearts to you. I have three nieces up the county who keep me young. You must come up and meet them when this is over."

"Thanks," said Neill, "but my hands are pretty full in that line."

"Well, anyhow let's order up some beer and drink to them."

"That would be fine."

However, the beer was not destined to be drunk.

Forsythe had just been sent off to the yacht to relieve Constable Mattingly who had been on guard since six. Suddenly through the window they heard Forsythe's deep voice hailing the shore.

"Ho! Sergeant Wilson!"

Wilson answered from the store next door. "Hello?"

"Come out here, sir, and bring Mr. Bonniger."

"All right."

The Yacht Guard Gone

Instantly Bonniger was the stern public officer again. He snatched up his coat and he and Neill ran downstairs. They met

Wilson coming from the store. Some of the villagers had been aroused by the constable's hail, and heads were sticking out of the bedroom windows here and there. As they went out on the wharf, Virgil Longcope came running down the hill behind the store, slipping his suspenders over his shoulders. He called to them to wait for him.

Virgil's clerk, young Trueman, was no the wharf. "Gosh! I hope there ain't nothing wrong out there," he said. "If there is, reckon it's my fault."

"What do you mean?" asked Bonniger. "Come along with us."

Trueman explained while Wilson plied the oars. "About nine o'clock fellow called up and asked for Srgeant Wilson. I said he wouldn't be back until late. So the fellow he said he was Constable Pennorth stationed at King's Green, 20 miles up the road."

"Was it Pennorth's voice?"

"I don't know the man."

"Go ahead."

"Well, this fellow said he was Pennorth, he said a man driving up the county from Cove Point had stopped by to say that as he come around a turn in the Cove Point road he seen a couple jump out of the road into the bushes. And the girl had a pink dress and a black wrap on. Pennorth he said that Wilson had ordered him not on any account to leave the King's Green section, and he wanted to know what to do. Well, I tried a dozen times to get Wilson on the phone . . ."

"The phone is in Captain Bickel's cabin and we were searching the ships," put in Wilson.

"So I think I'll go out to the yacht and tell Mattingly. Mattingly and me, we talked it over and he said he'd better lock up the yacht and go up to the Cove road on his motor-bike. He was all excited at the thought of nabbing that pair singlehanded."

"I dare say!" said Wilson dryly. "So I came ashore and at 10 o'clock I shut up the store and went home." Trueman went on. "I called up the ships every little while to tell you, but there was no answer, and then . . . well, I reckon I fell asleep."

As they drew near the yacht.

IN AND ABOUT MORAN

(By Bob Taylor)

An inspired bunch of Moran Bulldogs flew all over an overconfident Albany eleven early in the second quarter of their non-conference football tilt at Albany Friday night, to draw first blood by a sensational march to the Lions goal line. With a series of showy Plummer-to-Weber passes, and a short run by Overby, the under-(Bull) dog team pulled the surprise of many seasons of grudge football by smoothly crossing the supposedly impregnable goal line of the touted Albany club before the surprised Lions could rally and stop the magical march.

The stronger team, however, brought to their senses, soon settled down to business and retaliated with enough hard won touchdowns to make the final score 38 to 6 in their favor. The determined Bulldogs approached another score when an alert Overby took an Albany pass and raced 40 yards before being overtaken and downed by fleet Hammond of Albany. Never was the game a

Sunday school picnic for the fast moving Lions. With every man of the inexperienced Moran team playing like a rugged veteran, tackling with a heretofore unexhibited furor, the Lion ball carriers were sorely pressed and hard driven to push over their six touchdowns. It was only by their expert use of off-tackle reverse plays that they were able to gain ground over their stripling opponents who fought with a dogged determination that left the red suited team wide-eyed with surprise.

To praise any member of the courageous few who fought for Moran's Purple and Gold without mention of every member of the team would be rank injustice, for every man, little or big, gave his best and all. Let us, now standing pay homage to the unaccustomed toe of the diminutive young Pinnell which consistently kicked the Lions back into their own territory, to the smashing tackles of Captain Weber, and to the accurate passes of Quarterback Plummer. Add to that glory list the names of every member of the team, which delivered the goods as no one, even their most loyal backers, thought they would.

Never has the ancient athletic grudge between the two Shackelford county towns been so nearly erased, never has the feeling of petty antagonism been so near the ideal in sportsmanship as at the closing gun, when nearly half of a tired Albany team rushed across the dusty gridiron to pay earnest and tearful respect to their rival

"We know it," answered Wilson. "What then?"

"The yacht has been ransacked from stem to stern, sir."

"Ha!" said Bonniger. "You seem to be pleased about it," said Wilson sorely.

"I suspected our man was not far away, and now I know it." (Copyright, 1937, by Hulbert Footner)

Never has the ancient athletic grudge between the two Shackelford county towns been so nearly erased, never has the feeling of petty antagonism been so near the ideal in sportsmanship as at the closing gun, when nearly half of a tired Albany team rushed across the dusty gridiron to pay earnest and tearful respect to their rival

captain, Buddy Weber, who was removed from play as the result of injuries in the fourth period. The sobbing captain was carried to the showers by members of what may have been heretofore considered a stiff-necked ball team, in their respect for a game team who had fought a good fight, a demonstration unprecedented in the annals of the Moran-Albany football feud.

State Highway 23, traversing Moran's business district, has, of late, born upon it's moving tide, an unusually large crowd of representatives of the dark race, people rare within the confines of our race-prejudiced city. Depict automobiles of varied nameplates and rare vintage, loaded almost to the straw that broke the camel's back, struggle from one city limit to the other, with dark faces peering furtively from high piled tonneau, none of the cars' drivers daring to slacken their pace and each with the hope that their puffing vehicles will hold out until they have tucked away this awful town behind them. These are laborers en route to the cotton fields of counties to the north of Moran, and they go with fear in their eyes and dread in their hearts as they spur their puffing jelaopies through the few blocks of Moran that line their route. And for good reason, for, if for nothing else, Moran is noted, at least among our dark brethren of this state, as a town of extreme intolerance to any and all members of the negroid race.

It is nothing less than pitiful to see fellow human beings wide-eyed with terror at the mere thought of passing within range of our community—a place made terrifying by our own antagonistic expression of an inhuman unkindness toward fellow dwellers of the earth.

May the years bring a broader, more humane attitude to residents of our community, and if the town's industries cannot support members of both races, may we at least be white enough to let the dusky optimists go their way in peace safety and confidence of their security.
