Chapter 39
Bullets Fly

It was now about 8:30 and since Maryland does not use daylight saving time, perfectly dark.

The blond young man was not visible in the street outside. There were no taxicabs cruising in this part of town, and Neill regretted that he had not told his driver to wait. However, he saw a taxicab standing at the curb across the street about a hundred yards towards town. Probably the taxi used by the blond young man, Neill crossed over. The back of the cab was empty.

"Will you take me into town?" he asked the driver.

"Sorry, mister, I've got a fare."

"Where is he?"

"Can't tell you that. He paid me to wait."

"I'll pay double fare."

"Can't do it, after taking his money. He's got my name and number."

"He won't say anything," Neill laughed. "He can't afford to."

"So you say. But I ain't gonna risk my job."

Neill returned across the street. There was a trolley line, but no car was in sight. He walked slowly back and forth as if waiting for a car, but in reality trying to spy out where his trailer was hidden.

It was a quiet neighborhood. Across the road where the taxi waited, there was a high bank not yet built upon. On Neill's side the little houses and occasional stores were lighted up, but there was nobody moving on the sidewalk. At the corner a newly-opened street dipped down steeply and was swallowed in the dark.

Neill found his man partly hidden behind a syringa bush at the side of a house on the corner. "Good evening," he said pleasantly.

"Evening," mumbled the man huskily. He was trying to disguise his voice. Neill had a sense that he had heard it before. Perhaps the blond hair, the ashy cheeks, the spectacles, also constituted a disguise. Impossible to tell in the darkness.

"Nice night," said Neill.

No answer.

"How often do these blame trolley cars run?"

"Don't know. I'm a stranger in the neighborhood."

The young man's voice was shaky. He was evidently laboring under a powerful excitement. However, Neill apprehended no special danger to himself. The taxicab was almost directly across the street, and Heinrich's with its beer drinkers not a hundred yards away. Neill aimed to quiet him by adopting a friendly air.

"You know too much?"

"Have a cigarette?" he asked.

"Don't use them."

"Gosh! I didn't think that there was a fellow of your age in the country didn't smoke 'em."

No answer.

"Maybe you prefer a pipe?"

No answer.

"I thought from the way you were standing here that you belonged in the neighborhood."

The young man's voice began to break. "Is it any business of yours?"

Neill looked at him steadily. "Well, yes since you ask me. You've been following me around ever since I arrived in town this afternoon. Also this morning. Naturally I'm curious. What's the idea?"

The young man made an effort to get a grip on himself. "You're mistaken, fellow. I never saw you before until this minute."

"Come off," said Neill good-naturedly. "That's your taxi waiting across the street."

"Wrong again, fellow."

"What's the use of stalling?" said Neill. "I've had my eye on you for five hours past. In the Belvedere I heard you sending the plain-clothes men off on a wildgoose chase. Good comedy."

The young man's voice broke completely. "Damn you! . . ." he cried. "Damn you . . . you know too much!" He whipped out a gun and fired at Neill point-blank.

Neill saw the movement coming, and dropped in time. Bent almost double, he ran down the steep side street into the enveloping darkness. The man fired again, and a third time, but his aim was wild. He came charging after Neill. As in a dream, Neill heard a shout from the taxi driver and the sounds of other people roused by the shots. Then silence. They were afraid to follow.

The street was only half a block long. It ran out on a kind of waste land where the earth from excavations had been dumped, making irregular hummocks all around. Rubbish was heaped everywhere and it was impossible to run. Neill swerved sharply to the left and dropped behind a summock hoping that the man would run by.

But when his pursuer came to the broken ground, he stopped, gun in hand, looking around and listening. He was only half a dozen paces away and Neill could see him perfectly well against the starry sky. Neill softly drew out his own gun, but he was resolved not to shoot the man if it could be avoided. He could hear the murmur of the crowd gathering at the top of the street.

Neill tried to edge a little further away under cover of the dark. The man heard him and fired again. Neill ran for some yards in a zig-zag course and dropped again. The man had him pretty well placed now, and came creeping towards him, close to the ground. Neill figured that he would have either two or four shots left in his magazine.

"Here I am," Neill said, to draw his fire again.

But he only kept creeping closer.

From far away Neill heard the sound of a clanging gong, rapidly drawing near. Somebody had phoned for the police. A new anxiety attacked him, for he couldn't afford to face an investigation, even though he was the innocent victim.

The police car stopped at the head of the street. The crowd began to move down slowly. Neill arose and ran again. The man followed without attempting to shoot. Neill could hear his hoarse breathing Neill collided with an invisible wire fence, and was flung back on the ground. The man was almost on him. There was no help for it now. Rolling over, Neill took aim at his legs and fired. The man stumbled forward and falling almost within Neill's reach, lay there groaning. The gun had flown out of his hand.

Barbed Wire Helps

Neill ran on as fast as he could down the hill, parallel with the fence. The police were now spreading over the hummocky ground. They had flashlights. They were moving cautiously. A wild anxiety lent Neill speed and sureness. If he were taken, everything would be wrecked. Just as he was beginning to see light ahead.

The police heard him running and began to spread down hill to cut him off. Neill put his hands on a fence post and, vaulting clear of the wire, ran straight away.

His pursuers were less nimble in getting over the fence. He heard them cursing as their uniforms caught on the barbs, and he gained on them. He then had the notion of doubling and creeping back towards the fence, lower down. He wormed his way down hill close to the fence until he was stopped by a stream at the bottom. Meanwhile the police were searching the open ground above.

He climbed the fence again and, making his way upstream for a short distance, came to a group of dark buildings, a mill of some sort. There was a dam over the stream with a footway. He crossed it, and struck into a road that climbed the hill on the other side. Soon he was among the streets of another poor quarter of the town. Absolutely quiet over here. Across the little valley he could see the flashlights moving back and forth like fireflies.

He kept straight on until he had risen out of the slums into a better quarter. Upon coming to a wide suburban road, he turned into it, heading towards town. Presently a taxicab came bowling along, having delivered a fare in the suburbs. Neill hailed it and, sinking back in the seat, thanked God for his luck.

He changed taxis once on the way into town to baffle possible pursuers. He was still in some anxiety because he could not tell what the wounded man might say to the police. Not the truth, any-

how. To be on the safe side, he kept away from his usual haunts and made no attempt to communicate with Mattingly who was still waiting for him at the midtown garage.

In a drugstore on North avenue, Neill took possession of a booth, and started phoning. From the yellow pages of the phone book it was easy to establish that the only banana importer in Baltimore who ran his own ships was one A. Lanassa. Neill called him up at his home, and an Italian-American voice answered. It was Mr. Lanassa himself.

After giving him an agreeable spiel, Neill asked him who his lawyer was.

The voice turned wary. "What! I got all kinds of lawyers?"

"Well, who are they?"

"No information given over the phone. Come and see me in the morning." He hung up.

This was a setback, but not a fatal one. Neill had other leads to follow. He did more telephoning and a satisfied grin began to spread over his face. The last number he called was that given him by Johnny Tingstrom, the taxi-driver who had once shown himself his friend. He was obliged to wait beside the booth until Johnny came in from a trip and called him.

Ford Expansion Program to Cost Forty Millions

DEARBORN, Mich., Oct. 15. (Sp.)—A new Ford Motor company Rouge Plant expansion program, which will cost upward of $40,000,000 and rivals in extent the company's unprecedented 1934-5 building program, has just been announced.

The new building included in the program is intended to enable the Ford company to maintain in face of increasing production its policy of manufacturing in its own plants a substantial share of all the parts required in the manufacture of Ford V-8 cars and trucks. The buildings to be erected will require the purchase by Ford of 45,000 tons of steel.

Coincident with the announcement of the building program, Ford made public an award of a contract for a giant new 1,000-ton blast furnace, which will cost, with auxiliaries, $4,500,000.

The new furnace will be the first all-welded blast furnace in the world and will complement the two blast furnaces now in production at the Rouge plant.

The new Rouge plant expansion program comes within two years after the completion of the 1934-5 building program. The latter was reputedly the largest undertaken by private industry during the period when the country was emerging from the depression.

The 1934-5 program embraced the construction of the hot strip and cold finishing steel mills, the expansion of the main power house, enlargement of the giant 30-acre foundry for manufacture of cast steel alloy parts, installation of complete new glass-making equipment in the glass plant, and installation throughout the plant of additional new tools and equipment to enable production of 6,000 V-8s in 16 instead of 24 hours.

The new Ford expansion program currently scheduled calls for the following:

1. New 1,000-ton blast furnace and auxiliaries, including a new battery of 61 coke ovens now under construction, plus additional ore storage and handling equipment.

2. A new cast alloy steel foundry building, which will cover approximately eight acres and will increase the floor area of the giant Ford foundry, now the largest in the world, to 38 acres. The new building will house equipment for casting alloy steel parts, the use of which in motor cars was pioneered by Ford four years ago with the introduction of the cast steel alloy crankshaft for the V18 engine. Numerous other parts, formerly forged, are now cast of special steel alloy developed by Ford. In connection with this development the present Electric Furnace building will be converted to supply molten steel alloy for use in the casting processes in the new foundry addition.

3. Reconstruction of the present open hearth steel furnace facilities and reorganization of manufacturing methods. Nine 100-ton furnaces will be rebuilt. The reconstruction program is to be carried out under the progressive schedule which will permit operation of a majority of the furnaces at all times. Two furnaces will be torn down and rebuilt at one time, while the balance will be kept in production.

Two performances will be given, at 2 and 8 p.m.

Contracts for reconstruction of four of the furnaces already have been let.

4. A new addition to the open hearth building, to house new Bessemer converter. The new equipment will be used in preliminary processing operations in the open hearth mill and will enable these operations to be speeded up substantially by reducing time consumed in completing heats in the furnaces.

5. Installation of new equipment in the new steel rolling finishing mills, completed two years ago. The hot strip mills will be equipped to roll a 60-inch sheet, instead of a 48-inch sheet as at present. Two new slab reheating furnaces and a new finishing stand will also be added.

6. Installation of additional new equipment in the new cold finishing mill, including a 78-inch continuous pickler and 12 sets of three Bell-type bright anneal electric furnaces. Contracts for-this new work have been let.

The capacity of the main power house is also being increased again by installation of a third 110,000-kilowatt turbo-generator.

When the new blast furnace is put in production, ore requirements will rise to 1,500,000 tons yearly, instead of 850,000 tons as at present, and closed season storage capacity will be stepped up to 650,000 tons. Present storage capacity is 450,000 tons. Most of the ore used at the Rouge comes from Ford mines in upper Michigan and is carried to Dearborn in Ford lake freighters.

The company now has under construction a new battery of 61 coke ovens, supplementing the two other batteries now in service. The increased coke output will serve requirements of the new blast furnace. Two giant gas storage holders also are under construction. One, of 10,000,000 cubic feet capacity, will be the largest all-welded steel structure in the world. It will be ready for service shortly and will be used to store fuel gas produced in the coke ovens. The other, of 2,500,000 cubic feet capacity, is also nearing completion. It will store blast furnace gas.

Baylor Bears Point to Gents This Week-end

WACO, Oct. 15. (Sp.)—Never before in the long history of the clash have the Baylor university Golden Bears had the heartfelt desire to defeat the Centenary college gentlemen.

But they are going to Shreveport, La., this week-end to bring home another slab of bacon.

Carl Brazell, hard-plugging line plunger in the Baylor backfield and captain of the team, said this week that the Bears are going to win. They are aiming for an undefeated season.

Since the Arkansas fracas last week-end, the Baylor Bears are now figured in the southwest conference race. They are given a good chance to win, in spite of the fact that they were figured an even chance to defeat the Hogs from Arkansas before the game. Their play against the champions of last year was the best demonstration of generalship and team co-ordination that a Bruin club has shown in many years.

Last year at the Rose festival in Tyler, the Jenningsmen showed poorest form imaginable in their loss to the ungentlemanly gentlemen from Shreveport. They lost by a 10-0 count and have been chided for their poor play since. Captain Brazell and the Germand boys—Bubba and Julie—are particularly anxious to get at the tough Gents, but perhaps no more than Bullet Bill Patterson. Patterson, a much sought after man when he was in Hillsboro high school, was given a chance to go to Centenary, but he turned down all the institutions in favor of Baylor.

Although it is like a lull before a terrible storm, the Bears are determined as they prepare for tough Centenary. Heretofore they have taken the tilt none too seriously, but it is different this year. They realize that the Texas A. & M. game is only a week ahead, but they are not yet pointing to the Aggies.

Undeclared for the year—that's what the Baylor Bears, who came out of the Hog game with few serious injuries, are now setting up as their shining star. They have adopted the old Baylor slogan—"take them as they come"—and they intend to stick to it.

BACK IN 1890 the Honorable George Clark, of Waco, and the Honorable James S. Hogg, of Tyler, were candidates for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in Texas.

In those days, the Republican party in Texas was even more of a minority party than it is today. Its leaders mainly were white men, but the rank and file overwhelmingly was black; so that when the Republican state convention met at Fort Worth the delegates nearly all were negroes. Both Clark and Hogg sought this Republican support.

The Clark people controlled the preliminary organization. The temporary chairman called upon the Reverend Sin Killer Griffin to open the proceedings with prayer. Sin Killer was a famous negro revivalist fat and black and had a mighty voice. In thunderous tones he invoked the blessing of the Almighty upon the assemblage. And just before he concluded, he roared out these words:

"An' finally, Oh Lawd, bless Thy servant, George Clark, an' mek 'im gov'ner of the great state of Texas." Instantly a roar of mingled protest and approbation arose. The tumult continued for several minutes. Finally down in the body of the hall a builvicious black politician obtained recognition from the presiding officer.

"Mista Cheerman!" he shouted, "I teks de floor to mek a motion: I moves dat de name of George Clarke be expunged frum dat all prayer an' dat de name of de Honorable Jeemes Stephens Hogg be substituted therefur."

The Sin Killer was still upon his feet. Instantly he rose to the emergency.

"Mista Cheerman," he proclaimed, "I speaks to a pint of order."

"State the point of order."

"De genelman's motion is pintedy out of awder fur de reason dat de prayer in question done went to Heaven more'n five minutes ago!"

Just A Mud Hen's Heaven, This Place

ZANESVILLE, O., Oct. 15 (AP)—Folks stayed close in their own bailiwick in this section along in the 1850's, to judge from a copy of an old Zanesville paper discovered here by Mrs. Samuel M. Wince. The paper, dated March 26, 1856, relates that spring weather had produced mud up to five feet deep in the principal streets. The editor recommended plank sidewalks. Another item concerned a proposal for carrying mail to Marietta, O., a distance of 64 miles, in the "short" time of two days. News from far places consisted of squibs on Jenny Lind singing in New York and troop movements in the Crimean war.

Radios May Be Used To Direct Future Schools

By LYDIA GRAY SHAW
AP Feature Service Writer

IT'S 1947. Forty children are in a classroom, scribbling busily on arithmetic problems. The teacher is scribbling too. Now and then all pause, listen, then scribble some more.

Twenty blocks away, 40 more children are working on the same problems. In a suburb of the city, still more children are busy at the same work.

And it's all because of radio. The arithmetic lesson is being dictated over the air to all schools at the same time.

Chicago Sets Example

Maybe it won't even take ten years for this to come about, asserts Frank Ernest Hill, of the Adult Education association, who has just completed a study of radio in education.

In fact, some schools, mainly those in Rochester, New York, and Cleveland already have introduced—tentatively—the broadcasting of classroom problems by radio. And alert Chicago school principals, during the recent infantile paralysis outbreak, arranged for stay-at-home children to keep up with their work with daily broadcasts.

So far, however, radio classroom work has been a novelty. Children have heard all kinds of supplemental work over the air, mainly orchestral programs and speakers.

'Packed With Dynamite'

But, says Mr. Hill, the 1947 air curriculum will include fundamental instruction as well as supplemental work.

"Education by radio is just packed with dynamite," he exclaimed enthusiastically upon his return from a national tour of broadcasting stations. "Cleveland has already petitioned the federal communications commission to set aside certain frequencies for their schools' use."

School programs of the future will be broadcast over short wave frequencies from a central point, he says, because commercial stations cannot give enough time to schools.

May Displace Books

The new field will not reduce the number of teachers by any means, Mr. Hill hastens to add. Even more may be needed, since radio requires teachers who have pleasing voices as well as specialized knowledge.

Teachers still will be needed in classrooms to check up on students' work, since the pupil can't talk back to the radio.

Books may be displaced to some extent, Mr. Hill thinks. But he says that is not a serious matter. Spelling is spelling, whether you learn it from a book or from the air waves. And reference books are always needed.

Will this new educational method make teachers lazy? No, answers Mr. Hill, they will have to work harder. They will have to DENVER, Oct. 15 (AP)—To make deer hunters poor targets, R. G. Parvin, state game commissioner, suggests they wear red capes and hats.

"Last year we had only three fatalities among 16,000 deer hunters but this year we would like to get by without accidents," says Parvin.

"And if hunters must drink strong liquor, they should do so moderately," he added. "Liquor and bullets do not mix successfully."

First Aid Station Stops Accidents

AMARILLO, Tex., Oct. 15 (AP)—Red Cross safety experts are beginning to wonder if psychology might not have something to do with automobile accidents.

There had been many serious accidents on a stretch of the Denver-Amarillo highway north of here.

A Red Cross first aid station was established, with markers on the highway.

For a year now, since the Red Cross signs have been beside the pavement, there have been no accidents of consequence.

"We have observed that a majority of drivers slow down when they see the Red Cross signs," says F. E. Greenwood, safety director in charge of the station.

In 1934, the census showed 32,641 foreign residents living in Japan.

COUNTED BEFORE HATCHED

LAMAR, Colo., Oct. 15 (AP)—Grasshopper experts have discovered there will be 200 grasshoppers hatched on each square foot of soil in a farm field near here next spring. How extensive infestation may be in other southeastern Colorado fields has not been determined.

The climatic temperature of Alaska varies from 60 degrees below zero in the winter to 90 degrees above zero in summer.

ETIQUETTE A Model Maid Is a Sign of a Model Mistress

By JOAN DURHAM
AP Feature Service Writer
There are three times when the behavior of the maid-of-all-work reflects on her mistress: When the maid is serving at tables, answering the door and answering the telephone. When you engage a maid you take on definite responsibilities. If you don't set her a good example—give her regular hours and definite duties—the chances are very good she will be slipshod and inefficient.

Training for Table
The maid must be taught to speak pleasantly and courteously and to be neat in appearance when answering the door. She should be instructed to be polite and take messages carefully when she answers the phone. Training her for service at table means thinking the whole meal through with her—until she gets accustomed to the routine.

In fact, it's best to have a new maid serve the family several times before company is invited in. Have her set the table while you supervise. Show her that the crease in the cloth must go down the middle of the table; that the glasses go above the knife on the right; that the napkins should be laid either on the plates or to the left of the forks.

Instruct her to have the water glasses filled and butter placed on the bread and butter plates—above the forks on the left—just before the guests are seated.

Thinks to Check On
Let her check for salt and peppers—one to each two people at the table; jelly spoons, pickle forks and similar pieces; serving spoons—one for each vegetable to be passed—and one carving knife and fork.

The maid should be as quick as possible and as unobtrusive as she can when serving.

She should know that service should be from the left of the guest when things are passed and from the right when dishes are removed, that the guest of honor should be served first and the hostess last, with the other guests served as they are seated; that all used dishes from one course must be removed before another course is served; that the gravy boat needs a tray under it; that in passing vegetables she must approach one guest at a time and be sure she's making it easy for him to help himself, and that stacking wishes is not permissible. Make a point of conferring with your maid occasionally. Don't lose patience if she doesn't remember everything all at once. Give her time to think it over. If necessary write things out for her to refer to.

AFL Sends New Peace Proposal To Lewis Unions

ATLANTIC CITY, Oct. 15 (AP)—The Committee for Industrial Organization proposed to the American Federation of Labor today that the committees from both meet to consider the further the possibility of peace conferences.

The CIO in conference here advised the federation convention at Denver of its decision in a telegram which suggested a preliminary meeting to be held in Washington on the week of October 25.

DENVER, Colo., Oct. 15 (AP)—The American Federation of Labor sent a new peace proposal to the C. I. O. Thursday in response to the offer John L. Lewis sent here Tuesday.

The federation's proposal was new in that the federation agreed to enlarge to a reasonable size the executive council's three-man standing peace committee.

Otherwise it was no different from the offer the federation has stood by since it suspended ten leading C. I. O. unions for insurrection more than a year ago.

It called for committees from the two camps to meet without conditions or stipulations to work out a settlement.

Lewis' offer stipulated that the A. F. of L. recognize the principle of the industrial form of labor organization for mass production industries.

It also proposed that each side send 100 men to the peace conference.

Houston was chosen for the 1938 convention after bids of Birmingham, Chicago, San Francisco, St. Louis and New York had been withdrawn. Rivalry developed among delegates from San Francisco, Chicago and New York for the 1939 convention.

Green Re-elected
While a telegraph operator was tapping out the peace plan to the C. I. O. meeting in Atlantic City, N. J., the A. F. of L. convention unanimously elected Green to his thirteenth term as president.

In accepting the post Green adopted the most conciliatory tone he has used for weeks in discussing the C. I. O. issue.

"I hope and trust and pray we may become united," he said. "United we are invincible."

Green interpreted the C. I. O. peace bid as an indication that "even these to whom we have appealed in the last twelve months admit we are right—they are willing to meet us in some kind of a conference."

"No epithet hurled at me can swerve me from this purpose of presenting to the world a solidified labor movement," he concluded.

"That patient, dignified policy is winning in America. Public opinion is with us."

SEES PEACE "POSSIBILITIES"

DENVER, Oct. 15 (AP)—George Harrison, chairman of the American Federation of Labor's peace committee, said today that the Committee on Industrial Organization's latest peace proposal "looked like it has possibilities."

REA Extension Of Territory Is Proposed

COLEMAN, Oct. 15 (SpI)—Possibility that the Coleman county Rural Electrification administration will take in additional territory in its plan to serve rural families with electricity was seen Friday by A. W. Luckett, Coleman, manager of the local unit.

People of the town of May, in the northern part of Brown county, are anxious for the Coleman county line to be extended to that place, and Mr. Luckett.

Should the line be extended the towns of Thrifty, Byrd's Store, Grosvenor, May and Sidney, the latter in Comanche county, would be served. An Humble Oil Refining company pump plant located on the proposed line also would be served as would other projects.

In order to accommodate the people of May it would be necessary to build about 100 miles of electric lines. However, it is anticipated that the line would serve approximately 500 farm families.

In the meantime, local REA officials are awaiting the action of the Washington officials in regard to a rate proposal on electricity made by the city of Coleman.

Word was received here Friday of the letting of bids for the construction of 100 miles of lines by the McCulloch County Electric Coop. Inc. The organization will furnish electricity to 300 customers in McCulloch, San Saba, Mason, Coleman and Brown counties.

Loboes---

San Angelo was downed by a score of 8-0 in the mud by the surprising Jackets who monopolized on a Bobcat fumble and an intercepted pass to earn all their scores. Sweetwater played the same team on a dry field and marked up a count of 20 to swamp the cats. Sweetwater blanked the Bucks 14-0 while the Jackets eked out a 13-6 win. Both these teams are undefeated.

Another interesting thing about this week's play in this district is that four teams remain undefeated among the very few undefeated and untied teams in the entire state. The law of averages will see only two come out of Friday's games with clear records, however, with these four teams at each other's throats. A tie, which is unlikely, would be the only factor that would keep a team on the undefeated list. Brownwood and Abilene are the other two undefeated teams of the district.

Federal Court Grants Citizenship to Nine

Among the nine persons granted citizenship papers by Judge T. Whitfield Davidson at Abilene Thursday, three were from Eastland county. These were Fredrick Fauth, Eastland county, farmer and native German; Tom Scown, Nimrod, retired farmer and native Englishman; Anna Lenz, Cisco, native German. Others granted citizenship papers were Joseph Smith, Haskell, farmer and native Englishman; and one of these are sure to fall when they meet Friday.

Breckenridge will tackle Big Spring and the Mavericks will take on Ranger in the other two games scheduled for Friday.

Amone Babia Hassen, native Syrian; Lars Nilson, retired farmer and native German; Lena Augustine Clyde, native German; Ejem, Haskell, born in Otto Oehme, route 1, Abilene, native German. The court also, by decree, changed Nilson's name to Larse Nelson.
