Loboes Whoop It Up for Scrap at Brownwood

By JAMES JOHNSTON The Cisco Loboes, who will try to prove that Brownwood is not as tough as they have been cracked up to be, pulled out this morning for their enemies' stronghold.

In the eyes of the Oil Belt statistics the Loboes don't stand a chance of taming the Lions, but lately it has been proven more than once that dope doesn't mean a thing when two scrappy teams, such as the Cisco and Brownwood team into each other. One advantage the Loboes will have over the Lions is a strong forward wall, which though not big, has shown that it is capable of withstanding repeated attacks by the enemy without breaking.

The probable starters will be Harrison and Preston at ends, Mosely and Pollard at the tackle posts, Latch and Burnsides at guard and Troy Stewart at the center position. For the backfield, Steyer will be at quarter, Yarbrough and Harrison at half and Curtis Yancey at full.

Miss Helen Crawford left today for a visit in Austin and to attend the football game Saturday.

TEACHERS OF COUNTY MEET AT EASTLAND

State Superintendent Will Address Annual Gathering

Saturday morning at 8:30 the Eastland County Teacher's association will open a half day meeting at the Eastland high school auditorium as H. D. Thomason, Supt. of the Corbin schools leads the group in singing. The devotional will be given by W. T. Walton, superintendent of the Ranger schools. The program includes talks by several of the county educators, sectional meetings for the different groups in their respective fields of teaching, and a business session from 11:30 until 12:00, the close of the meeting.

Two principal speakers will be two officials from the state department, Dr. L. A. Woods, state superintendent who will speak on "Teacher Retirement and Other Problems," and Deputy State Supt. H. E. Robinson who will discuss "Problems Facing the Schools."

A. C. Bradley, principal of the Cisco west ward school will preside over the intermediate section in which meeting two talks, on "Language of Arts," by Mrs. W. E. Hatley of Desdemona, and "Good Housekeeping" by Guy T. Smith of Colony, will be given. In the high school sectional meeting Miss Ida Collins, instructor in the Cisco high school, will discuss the "Practical Benefits of Physical Education." Other sectional meetings include the trustee's section and the primary section.

Music for the assembly will be furnished by the Ranger high school band.

Supt. of Cisco Schools R. N. Cluck, president of the county association, said today the meeting would begin promptly at 8:30 and that the committee in charge believes that one of the most useful programs for any such meeting has been arranged, with such outstanding speakers as the state superintendent, assistant state superintendent and Miss Lillie Martin, noted authority on primary education, from Baylor university, taking top places on the lecture program.

High School Club Elevates Members

The local F. F. A. chapter met today at the high school and after a vote agreed to elevate new members who are just beginning their work along agricultural lines to the rank of "Greenhands." Chapter rules require that new members present satisfactory evidence that they would be able to make a profit of $25 for the year from projects. After one year has expired the "Greenhands" will then become full fledged future farmers, if their projects are successful and other requirements are met.

Caddo Lodge Invites Cisco Lodge to Fete

"Candid American"

This is the title Norman H. Davis, President Roosevelt's ambassador-at-large, has won in the world's conference chambers.

U. S. Delegate Is Pal of Potentate and Plain Folk

By ALEXANDER R. GEORGE AP Feature Service Writer WASHINGTON, Oct. 22—Tennessee's homespun Norman H. Davis hobnobs with potentates, premiers and gold-braided diplomats but he wouldn't look out of character at a gathering of cracker-box philosophers in a crossroads' country store.

An engaging simplicity of speech and manner, a soothing southern drawl and a patient toleration for the other fellow's viewpoint has won for Uncle Sam's ambassador-at-large the good will of statesmen in other countries, politicians at home and plain folk wherever he has gone.

The deliberate, pipe-puffing banker-business man, who enjoys his job as the government's roving envoy, will represent the United States at the Nine-Power conference on Sino-Japanese hostilities in Brussels, October 30.

The unaffected candor of this plain, little man, with whitened hair and quizzical blue eyes, masks what his associates in the foreign service describe as a "photographic knowledge" of the intricate interrelations of all the principal countries.

Wilson's Adviser

Patient and conciliatory, he has been rated highly effective in preventing international friction at parleys from reaching the explosive stage. But back of his easy-going manner is a stubborn perseverance and a zest for work which keeps him plodding toward an objective when others have long since abandoned hope of its attainment.

During the peace negotiations, Davis was financial adviser to President Wilson. He vigorously opposed the heavy reparations which were being imposed upon Germany and predicted they would sow the seeds of future discord in Europe.

Measure Proposes to Raise 4 Millions More Yearly

AUSTIN, Oct. 22 (AP)—The senate began considering today the general tax bill estimated to yield four million dollars annually after voting to suspend certain rules in order to take up the measure without delay. On the ruling of Lieut. Gov. Walter Woodul the highly controversial provision for legalization and taxation of hard liquor sales by the drink remained in the bill.

Woodul overruled points of order that the provision did not come within the governor's call of the session, change the purpose of the bill and transgressed the constitutional inhibition against the open saloon.

Later the senate knocked out the proposal for taxing and legalizing the sale of liquor by drink where authorized by local option. The vote was seventeen to thirteen.

The house passed a bill authorizing the old age pension organization to borrow $1,400,000 to meet any emergency until new revenue was provided.

Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Bruce left today for Pawnee Rock, Kan., home town of Dr. Bruce, where the Randolph professor will deliver a week's series of Bible lectures. From Pawnee Rock, they will go to Ashton, Kan., for another week's series.

While away they will visit their sons, Darcy and Bruce, now at Phillips university at Enid, Okla.

McPherson Will Head Legion Post in Cisco

The election took place at a meeting in the office of Doc Cabaness, and the following subordinate officers were chosen at the same time.

The post is planning a year of aggressive activities in matters of interest to ex-service men in Cisco and surrounding area, it was announced. Increase in the membership of the post will be sought and particular effort will be made in behalf of disabled veterans in need of relief.

BIBLE TAUGHT FOR TODAY

Speak ye every man the truth to his neighbor; execute the judgment of truth and peace in your gates.—Zech. viii. 16.

Remember: A trusting heart, a yearning eye, Can win their way above. If mountains can be moved by faith, Is there less power in love? —Faber

Until we learn the only way to serve God is to serve our neighbor, we may have knocked at the wicket gate, but I doubt if we have got our feet across the threshold.—George Macdonald.

A Lamentable Lack

THE speech of Ali Landon, if it was intended as an appeal to the 26,000,000 voters who voted for President Roosevelt in the last election, didn't get over so well, to judge from democratic newspaper comment.

THE fundamental weakness in the address was that Landon endorsed the major objectives of the new deal, criticized the manner in which they were sought to be attained and failed to suggest workable remedies.

THE fact of a program gives the basis for national action. Our quarrel with the administration concerns the methods undertaken to put a policy into effect.

Best Seat For End Of World: Another Planet

of harmony. On the contrary it is an issue of contest, of contrary views and vigorous opposition. Probably the most valid reason for the condition of national affairs at this time is the fact that the republican leadership has been incapable of practical and effective opposition.

OTHER OPINIONS

Beyond the Election of a Senator

THE result of the election for United States senator goes beyond the naming of Representative John E. Miller over Governor Carl E. Bailey. It virtually determines for the future the form and functioning of political processes.

Such nominations have always been opposed by the Gazette and we could not uphold or defend the nomination of Governor Bailey. We said on July 16 last that no candidate for United States senator or governor should be nominated by the democratic state committee.

Governor Bailey was running against the formidable situation created by a state committee nomination. That nomination armed his foes against him. It created conditions that generated the movements for organized opposition.

For the future the conventions of the people of this state should be formally expressed and made basic law by the adoption of the constitutional amendment to which Abe Collins of De Queen is giving unselfish civic labor.

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 22.—New York is probably one of the very few cities in the world where political speeches are punctuated by steamboat whistles.

A fine oration by Mayor La Guardia during dedication of a link in a new high speed thoroughfare was split right between the subject and the predicate by a tug wallowing up the Hudson.

There could be no profit in carrying into the public business the contentions engendered by a political campaign in which lines were closely drawn and hard blows exchanged.

Impartial to Candidates

"They always go nuts about that piece," said a policeman. He named it, but the title has slipped me. It was an impartial crowd as far as candidates were concerned.

A Washington Daybook

This is another article in which Preston Grover, Washington columnist, analyzes the New York majority campaign as an important segment in the national political picture.

Yet the general tone of the campaign is about the same as out in Rocky Mountain Boise, Idaho. The candidates nag each other about the same issues, some puffing some important, and rival leaders in each party kiss and make up in a pretentious show of organization harmony.

Two's Company

By MARGARET CUION HERZOG

Nina, a nice girl with flaxen hair, meets a young man at a party. David drives her home, confessing he crashed the party and is an automobile salesman. He has copper hair and a dog. Honey, Nina's plump, youthful mother, brings home a new husband unannounced. Richard, Nina's stepfather. Cordelia, Nina's closest friend.

Chapter Three
A Drink To the Bride
"It's true all right, I'm happy to say," Richard drew Honey to him in a very sweet way.

Something that had felt all taut and constricted—her heart maybe—relaxed in Nina's breast.

Honey was saying: "And I have the heavenliest last name."

"What is it, darling?"

"Challoner."

"Oh, my, yes. It's very, very something, isn't it? 'Richard Challoner,' I like it; and 'Honey Challoner,' too."

They were still standing in a little huddle in the upstairs hall.

"Would you two grinning things mind coming in and giving me a little data?"

But when the three of them were settled in a row, with Nina in the middle, on Honey's sinky, pillow strewn couch, it appeared that there was very little data to give out.

They had met at a dinner party given for Honey, in Chicago, by Ellen Surtees, her hostess.

They had fallen in love, immediately, and had been unable to figure out any reason why they should wait to do something about it.

"Just one of those things," murmured Nina, smiling.

But she thought: "Oh, no. No reason at all . . . only me; and the question of whether they're really suited to each other; and the difference in their ages (he must be at least 10 years younger than Honey); and a few thousand other little items to be considered."

Richard's 'Nervousness'

"You do think it's fun, our having done it and surprised you, don't you, darling?" Was there a pleading look in Honey's blue eyes? Did she know she had been bad?

"I do," answered Nina, promptly. "When did it happen?" It hurt her terribly to think of her mother standing somewhere, saying: "I do," without her . . . giving away the whole rest of her life to a stranger.

"Day before yesterday."

"And you'll be going away now for a while, I suppose." Suddenly, a terrible thought struck her. "Look here, you two aren't going to live in Chicago, are you?"

Richard Challoner said, quickly: "No, my dear. I should have told you that right off. I'm not going to take your mother away from you . . . only for a few weeks."

"Whew!" Nina breathed again. "I feel better. Let's have a drink on this." She crossed over to a table, lifted the glass top and began to do things to the bottles and glasses.

Richard came to help her.

"Of course I know that I don't intend to beat Honey, or make her miserable, but you have no way of knowing it. You're being a marvelous sport, and I certainly appreciate it . . . I may as well confess that I was terribly nervous."

That was his first speech. He hadn't been nervous at all; eager to make a good impression, certainly . . . a little amused perhaps, but never nervous.

Nina felt inclined to dislike him for the insincerity, and as he bent over Honey with her glass, she looked at him, critically, for the first time. Sleek, dark hair and eyes, and a thin line of moustache on his upper lip. . . . A deep chest and broad shoulders, covered by an almost too-well-tailored blue suit. . . . Custom made shoes. Nina thought she had never seen anybody more sure of himself; who looked more as though he would know the right thing to do in any conceivable situation. . . . And then she smiled, because he had said the right thing after all. He had put on a little show for Honey just as she, Nina, had been doing.

"Nervous! Isn't he ridiculous. Nina? How could you help adoring him?"

"I do believe your mother is prejudiced."

And Honey beamed.

"Well, don't be too sure of me, young fella!" said Nina. "I'm only taking you under advisement, understand, and the first black and blue mark on Honey . . . ph! you go out on your ear!" She raised her brandy. "Here's to the bride."

Her glass tinkled in the open fireplace, and a second after, Richard's.

Honey looked so radiant and young, that it was absurd to have her for a mother.

She drank to her new husband, missed the fireplace with her glass and knocked the ear off a china cat on the sea-green taffeta cushion by the hearth. After Richard had found it and had assured her that it could be glued on again . . . Nina suggested bed.

Nina's Room

"It's after five, Honey. You don't look it, but you must be dead, darling. There's all tomorrow to talk in. . . . You two run along. I'll lock up."

"She's right, sweetheart," said Richard. "You've had a big day," and he took his wife's two little white hands and pulled her up off the low couch. . . . Honey never could get up alone.

Nina kissed her mother and whispered a "God bless you," as her father used to do, and as she had done ever since he died; and then she felt her hand in Richard's firm clasp, for a minute.

"Goodnight . . . my dears," and she ran out and down the stairs partly because she had to put out the lights on the first floor, but mostly because she couldn't bear to see her mother and Richard go down the hall and into the big double room that Honey had shared with daddy.

But when she had touched all the switches, and bolted the front door, she had to come up again. Her own room was on the third floor; and as she passed her mother's, she heard Honey saying: "Do you, Richard?" and then his low laugh.

Ten minutes later Nina lay in her own bed.

She had the large front room over the library. Two windows faced north on 74th street; the hangings were of heavy satin. At one window they were all draped over to the left side and caught up rather high; at the other, they were swirled to the right. One was peach and one was brown. The walls were the delicate color of the inside of a cockle shell. There was not too much furniture; some of it was satinwood, and some of it was painted—quite beautifully, the same shade as the wall, with designs of deeper peach, and brown, and touches of soft green.

In a way, it was a decorator's room—but not really, for Nina had done it herself.

Nina dreams of her father and his charge to her, tomorrow.

Two-State Meet on Agricultural Issues Called

A two-state agricultural meeting called to discuss recommendations to make to the special session of congress in regard to farm legislation will be held in Dallas, October 25, at 7 p. m. in the Jefferson hotel. Farmers and businessmen interested in farming and allied industries are invited to attend the meeting and join in the discussion, George I. Lane, county supervisor, Farm Security Administration, said today.

C. M. Evans, general chairman of this Texas-Oklahoma farm security dinner, said today that he had received assurance that practically all of the congressional delegates from both states would be present. Evans said the dinner will give opportunity for discussing recommendations to make to a senate sub-committee which will hold a meeting in Dallas the following day. This sub-committee is headed by Senator Elmer Thomas.

The object of the meeting is to lay the foundation for general farm legislation which is to be considered during this special session of congress, and any person interested in it is invited to attend the dinner. Those who are unable to attend are invited to send their suggestions to the Dallas Agricultural club, or to C. M. Evans, regional director, Farm Security Administration, Dallas.

Mr. Evans said he is "especially anxious to have farmers from every county and their suggestions," and they will be passed on to the sub-committee for further study.

WOMEN WHO HOLD THEIR MEN NEVER LET THEM KNOW

No matter how much your back aches and your nerves scream, your husband, because he is only a man, can never understand why you are so hard to live with one week in every month.

Too often the honeymoon express is wrecked by the nagging tongue of a three-quarter wife. The wise woman never lets her husband know by outward signs that she is a victim of periodic pain.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three orials of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

Don't be a three-quarter wife, take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and Go "Smiling Through."

Bell's Pessimism Warranted Against Hogs Saturday

DALLAS, Oct. 22 (Sp)—Coach Matty Bell's pessimism is well-warranted today as he surveys the prospects of his Southern Methodist Mustangs beating out the powerful Arkansas aggregation at Ft. Smith Saturday. The Mustangs enter the game with a long list of injuries and not too impressive performances.

Picked by leading dopsters to finish on top in the Conference race, Arkansas will be in no mood to let up on the Ponies, even though in crippled condition.

John L. Sullivan, plucky Amarillo center, suffered torn ligaments in one leg and a fracture of the other during the S. M. U.-Vanderbilt game here last Saturday.

Big Billy Lewell, all-Conference end, is nursing an injured knee. Charlie Sprague, tackle, and Chelsea Crouch, back, are recovering from minor hurts.

Wilburn Echols, 192-pound youngster from Greenville, is being switched from tackle to center, replacing Sullivan. Echols will play center on offense, but will switch with Sprague on defense, the latter playing in the line-backer's position.

Having little success with aerials against Vandy, Coach Bell is likely to remain satisfied with scrimmage plays for yardage. Coach Fred Thomson of Arkansas leads his gridsters into their third Conference game, having won one, lost one, and tied one; however, Bell opens his Conference season in this tilt.

In 12 previous games S. M. U. has won 5, lost 5, and tied two.

Visiting cards come in two types: formal and informal. The latter is a card to which is attached a flap especially useful in writing notes.

It Takes Precise Teamwork To Score A Bull's-Eye

AP Feature Service Writer—There's more to bombing a railroad station than flying over the city and cutting loose your bombs.

A medium-sized bombing plane carries a crew of three or four—pilot, bomber and one or two machine gunners.

Their job calls for precise teamwork.

Bombing usually is done by a squadron against hostile aircraft as well as to lay down a "pattern" of bombs on the area or structure that is the target of attack.

The pilot, therefore, must be an expert formation flyer.

Having gained the proper altitude and determined the direction of the wind the pilot makes a long approach for the dropping of the first bomb.

During the approach the bomber checks and sets his bomb sight, a telescopic instrument which today is rated five times as accurate as the best sight used during the World War. As the image of the target appears in just the right place in the bomb sight, the bomber pulls a hand lever or an electrical mechanism is started which releases the bomb. Air speed, altitude and drift are accounted for mathematically.

The personnel bomb used by planes against ground troops is similar to a hand grenade, bursting into death- and injury-dealing fragments.

Bomb Drifts Forward
A bomb released at 180 miles an hour from 15,000 feet requires 32 seconds to reach the earth. In that time it will have traveled forward about a mile and a half.

Thus a plane flying at 15,000 or 20,000 feet will release the bomb at a point considerably distant from the area directly above the target.

The bomb will leave the ship in an horizontal position with the same forward velocity as the plane. In falling the nose gradually drops as the tail fin catches the air.

There are four major types of bombs—demolition, incendiary, gas and personnel.

Demonition bombs, containing high explosives like TNT, are used when a powerful blasting effect is desired, such as the destruction of a railway station, water mains, a power house or transmission lines.

Two Types of Fuses

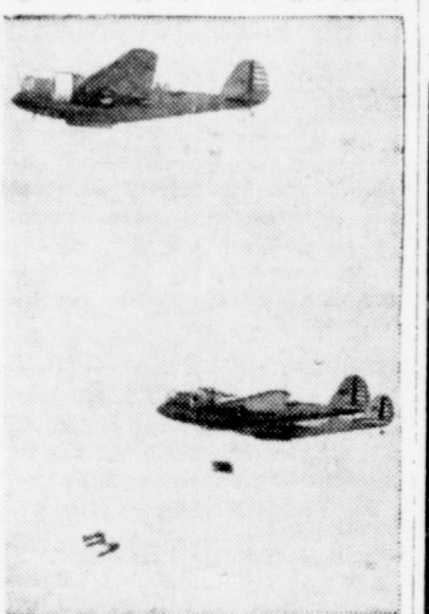

The incendiary bomb contains fire-starting materials, such as walled container has buried its nose deep in some solid structure, such as reinforced concrete.

The destructiveness of a demolition bomb is contingent upon where and how it hits a target. A 2,000-pound bomb, which is the largest standard size, probably would wreck the building and kill hundreds of people if it made a direct hit on the union station rotunda in Washington.

Such a bomb, however, might hit the structure a glancing blow, and persons 100 yards away might walk off unscratched.

In bombing practice, these 2,000-pounders have torn a hole in granite 12 feet wide and 30 feet across.

Rain crow really is a cuckoo.

4.—What a bomb does when it hits (this one hit a wharf at Shanghai) depends on what kind of bomb it is. Incendiary bombs spread fire. Gas bombs release poisonous fumes. Personnel bombs (designed to kill and maim) burst into flying shrapnel.

5.—Still another kind is the demolition bomb, which wrecked this Shanghai street. Huge steeled loads of TNT designed to level buildings, they may be timed to explode on striking or after they have buried themselves deep in some solid structure.

Suggests Building Cal. Devil Island

SANTA BARBARA, Calif., Oct. 22 (AP)—Following the riot at Folsom prison in which the warden was fatally stabbed, Edward I. Abbott, state prison director, has proposed an escape-proof Devil's Island for life-termers and habitual prisoners. He declares that "plotting of escapes is virtually continuous among hardened criminals."

California has 550 liters in its two prisons.

Alcatraz prison in San Francisco is often referred to as a Devil's Island, and is considered escape-proof. It holds only federal prisoners.

Colorful Aerial Display Staged at Austin Today

FORT SAM HOUSTON, Oct. 22.—In one of the most colorful military aerial displays ever staged in the southwest 18 airplanes of the Third wing of the army's general headquarters Air Force roared out of one of the Wing's temporary bases at Austin, Tex., this morning in an attack on the proposed new infantry division at the Leon Springs Military reservation, 20 miles northwest of San Antonio, Tex.

The aerial attack is a part of the fall maneuvers of the Third wing in which 111 officers and 454 enlisted men are operating 100 planes in a campaign against a mythical enemy threatening to invade the southwest from the Gulf of Mexico.

Field headquarters for the six squadrons have been set up at the Municipal Airport, Houston, Tex., where Brig. General Frederick L. Martin directs the maneuvers. The force has been divided and stationed at four temporary bases at Houston, Fort Crockett, (Galveston, Tex.) Austin and Waco. The Wing's home base is at Barksdale Field, Shreveport, La.

Attack planes zoomed down on the Ninth Infantry regiment of the proposed division today as that unit made a complete encircling movement of 30 miles from the "battlefront" to the rear of the "Red" opposing division. Catching the "enemy" between front and rear fire.

The single G.H.Q. air force squadron opened up on the column of motor vehicles simulat- ing machine gun fire and bomb attack. In a simulated gas attack lime water was sprayed on the troops.

The attack, led by Lt. Col. Ira A. Rader, commander of the 3rd attack group of the wing, was arranged to test the proficiency of the new "streamlined" infantry division to combat air attack and to test the Wing's capabilities in attack on ground troops.

Similar attacks will be made

EASY WHEN SIGHTLESS

WASHINGTON COURT HOUSE, O., Oct. 22 (AP)—Courthouse employes here watched breathlessly a man they knew to be blind clamber out onto the third-story ledge of a building across the street, inch his way to a distant window, and let himself inside.
To amazed questioners, the climber, James Knisley, sightless violinist, said he had forgotten the key to his room, so he had to go out a hall window and around the ledge to gain entrance. He's done it often at night, he said.

Let's Talk About Pictures

PICTURES "tell the story" in a manner unapproached by any other methods. But, first, let us ask you: How do you like the photo engraved pictures and other illustrations presented daily in the columns of the Cisco Daily Press? Don't you think they are just dandy? Oh, yes; The Daily Press operates its own photo engraving plant. This department was installed a few weeks ago and affords Cisco a regular metropolitan service in modern journalism. The Daily Press is one of the few small city daily papers, in towns of Cisco's size in America that maintains an engraving department of its own.

Now, what was the incentive prompting the management of the Daily Press to establish this splendid new feature? That incentive was the same aspiring urge that has prompted the promoters and builders of the Daily Press to give its patrons the best and newest home-owned and home operated, small city daily paper in America. Cisco has a glorious past, Cisco has a brilliant present. Cisco has promise of a wonderful future.

THE DAILY PRESS is proud to be a part of this master work shop. With every resource at command, every facility it may control, it comes to the great tasks with clean hands and warm heart, to take its place in the scheme of things, and "carry on" in achieving the highest ideals in its chosen field.

THE DAILY PRESS Engraving Department is improving day by day. It will continue to improve and expand. The management and every department of the Daily Press organization are ever keenly alert and eager to do anything that will enhance its service.

"Hold everything!" They are here—the new 1938 Chevrolets. Tomorrow, Saturday, Oct. 23, the new models will be on display at the A-G Motor company's show rooms, 515 D avenue. Presentation of the new models is the outstanding event in motor-dom locally this month, and President A. D. Anderson of the company has extended a hearty invitation to everybody in Cisco and this entire section to see the new masterpieces in Chevrolet achievement.

No matter who you are or whether or not you intend to buy an automobile, you are invited to witness this 1938 showing. It will prove a treat. The new Chevrolet embodies many striking advancements in automobile design and construction. The new models combine greater comfort with greater durability, better performance and better looks. Larger appearing, more attractively styled than ever they represent the acme in the low price field of automobile building.

Watch for the big balloons flying over the A-G Motor company building tomorrow. They will mark the spot. Hundreds of little balloons for school children have been obtained by the company and these will be distributed Saturday during the showing.

IT'S ODD But It's Science

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
AP Science Editor
NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—The elephant of Bethlehem is creating a stir in science.

The bones of this elephant were discovered three years ago by the owner of a garden. He was digging for water on the highest point in Bethlehem. They rested 15 feet below the surface.

In studies since then scientists have come to some conclusions. This elephant was of the Asiatic, not the African type. He was somewhat primitive, not as well developed as the two present day species.

The time when he lived in Bethlehem was Pleistocene, and probably less than a million years ago. That is not too early for the first known bones of man which have been found in various parts of the world.

No human bones that old have been found in Bethlehem nor anywhere in Palestine. But when the Elephant of Bethlehem lived, the climate there was warmer than now, and the country was not so dry. Bethlehem was then apparently a fair sort of earthly paradise.

Accused in his own time of nature faking because of the dramatic poses in which he portrayed birds, John James Audubon, early American naturalist, has been vindicated by the studies of more recent scientists.

Ethiopian warfare was raging, Ambassador Davis said: "We cannot remain at peace just by hoping to do so."

This statement, scarcely noticed then, becomes significant now in view of President Roosevelt's recent declaration that peace "cannot just be wished for or waited for, it must affirmatively be reached for. Therefore, America actively engages in the search for peace."

Title Unofficial
The ambassador-at-large title which so well describes his activities is unofficial. His real title is chairman of the American delegation to the disarmament conference, a permanent organization. He has an ambassador's commission, however, being appointed by President Roosevelt who also made him head of the disarmament delegation.

During the World war he visited Spain, France and England as a special adviser on financial affairs and at the end of the war became United States finance commissioner in Europe. The supreme council of the Allies named the "candid American" chairman of its financial section. President Wilson successively appointed him assistant secretary of the treasury and under-secretary of state. At the conclusion of the Wilson administration he returned to private business but in 1927 was appointed a member of the International Economic conference. His appointment to the disarmament delegation and other economic missions followed.
