In an area of beautiful, benevolent climate, at ideal altitude, blessed with an abundance of the purest, soft lake water, possessing the best in recreational facilities, situated on the Bankhead, all-weather transcontinental route, with two railroads and many highways, Cisco is the best place in Texas to live and to work.

THE WINTRY WAVE BLOW TO FARM CROPS

CISCO SECTION BLANKETED IN FALL OF SNOW

Fruit and Vegetable Crops Menaced in Freezing Weather

April, traditionally noted for caprice, out-did even herself today as a sudden norther blanketed this section, in common with most of north and west Texas, with driving snow and sleet and sent temperatures tumbling from summer heat to sub-freezing. Old-timers had difficulty in recalling a similar spell of weather in this month of Easter and lilies.

Fruit-growers looked dolefully to their shattered prospects of a bumper crop and hoped for the protecting influences of the wet, soft snow to save them a portion of the yield that appeared so certain a few hours before. Live-stock growers, with lambing flocks of sheep to protect, were badly worried, fearing worse effects from the threatened hard freeze tonight.

Vegetable crops, well advanced, were feared to have been badly damaged.

Norther Strikes

The advance guard of the cold wave, sweeping along a smattering of dust, arrived here shortly after 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Temperatures, soaring at 87 degrees, dropped to 72 at 6. Residents, certain that the winter season was safely over, were little impressed by the cool wind, dismissing weather forecasts of severe weather in the belief that the norther would be merely a mild variation. But from 8 p. m., when the reading at the Cisco Gas Corp. offices showed 53 degrees, the mercury tobogganed, hitting 43 at 10, 40 at midnight and 35 at 2 a. m. Lowest point of the cold was reached at 10 o'clock this morning when the temperature reached 27 degrees. It remained at this point through most of the afternoon.

WINTER STRIKES LATE BLOW AT STATE

By Associated Press
Snow, sleet, and sub-freezing temperatures, preceded by hail and high winds, today struck the blow which Texas farmers and fruit growers had feared.

Over the plains country stretched a blanket of snow, driven in by a norther which sent temperature to 22 degrees in some spots.

One of the finest fruit crops in south plains history was believed to have been lost after a night of sleet, rain, dust, and 25-degree temperature. Two inches fell in San Angelo. Some hail damage was reported in Fort Worth-Dallas areas.

Tomatoes suffered in east Texas as the temperatures dropped below 44 degrees.

San Antonio suffered thousands of dollars hail damage.

Heavy rain did great damage to crops and highways around Italy. Three hundred feet of interurban track was washed out near Milford.

Apprehension was felt for the fruit crops of south Texas as the norther traveled southward.

The storm covered considerable territory between the eastern seaboard and the Rockies.

Ten inches of rain fell in Italy and officials estimated the damage at more than $100,000. Five steel bridges were wrecked.

Cisco Boy to Play Baseball With Wink

Novel Barnhill has returned to Wink, where he will play baseball this summer. He has been spending the past week with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Barnhill.

Quincey Lee is transacting business in Dallas.

Holland Has New Queen--of Her Merchant Fleet

Speeding along at 21½ knots on her first trial in the English channel is the new queen of the Netherlands' merchant fleet, the S. S. Nieuw Amsterdam. Built at Rotterdam for the Holland-American line, the new liner is completely modern, with streamlined superstructure. It is 751½ feet long, 88 feet wide, 55 feet deep, accommodates 1250 passengers, and weighs 33,000 tons, nearly 5000 more than the S. S. Rotterdam, present flagship. A unique feature is her aluminum lifeboats, which, though very light, will each carry 99 persons.

House Refuses To Kill Reorganization Measure

Thompson Outlines His Platform

AUSTIN, April 7 (AP)—Ernest O. Thompson, candidate for governor, Wednesday announced a platform calling for economies in government without crippling efficiency and declaring additional taxes would not be needed.

He said, however, the program of teachers retirement and aid to needy blind and dependent children should be financed even though an additional tax on natural resources or a tax on luxuries should be necessary.

Other planks opposed the sale of liquor by the drink and gambling in all forms, "whether it be horse racing, dog racing or slot machines."

Favor was expressed for continuing the present $22 per capita school apportionment, a liberal old age pension program based on need, state regulation of child labor, state regulation of all utility rates and decentralization of government.

Thompson, a member of the railroad commission, will deliver his opening campaign address at Waco, April 12.

Rotary Box Supper Will Begin at 6:45

The box supper which the Rotary club will have tonight, in lieu of its regular luncheon at noon, will begin at 6:45 on the roof garden of the Laguna hotel.

An evening of fun with an old-fashioned and happy custom is assured as the committee in charge of arrangements announced its program. J. J. Collins is program chairman. Bidding on the boxes will be the chief item on the program.

Music will be furnished by the Schaefer-Hittson orchestra.

Each Rotary couple is asked to bring a guest couple, providing a box for their guests in order to increase the attendance and make bidding more spirited by reason of greater numbers. At noon the committee was assured of at least 45 people, and it was expected the number would be considerably larger than this, insuring a crowd sufficiently large to make the evening a big success.

YOUNG PEOPLE TO MEET

The Methodist District Young People's Union will meet at the local church tonight at 7:30.

OFFICERS TRY TO RECREATE CRIME SCENE

"Revenge or Hate" Theory Maintained by Probers

EL PASO, April 7 (AP)—Southwestern officers tried today, despite the scarcity of clues, to recreate a true picture of the torture-slashing of Mrs. Weston Frome and her daughter, Nancy.

Turning to the theory that the killings were motivated by "revenge or hate," officers eliminated half a dozen suspects which were questioned in four states.

Sheriff Chris Fox, El Paso, reiterated, "revenge or hate, only, could have prompted such a brutal crime."

On this theory, Fox has instructed authorities in Berkeley to investigate friends and acquaintances of the Fromes in an effort to turn up any information.

District Attorney Roy D. Jackson said in a telephone conversation from Van Horn the stories of two Van Horn residents lent strength today to information given officers by Jim Milam, El Paso truck driver, regarding the occupants of a dark colored mystery car believed seen following the Frome machine the day the women disappeared.

Milam said he had seen a man and a woman in the dark auto, which he believed was a coach.

Baptist Revival Gains In Spirit, and Attendance

Pastor-Evangelist Judson Prince today said, "The revival in progress at the First Baptist church continues to grow in spirit, attendance, and interest. Those present have been delighted with the manner Thomas Harrison is directing the chorus. The 'Booster Band' will meet every evening at 7:30 o'clock, and Mr. Harrison assures those present that we will have some more singing from this fine group of boys and girls."

"The morning services are well attended and some very high spiritual hours have been experienced. Attend these services. You are welcome. The auditorium will be well warmed for the service this evening. Give God a chance. Where will you spend eternity? Think on these things."

The topic for tonight's sermon will be, "The Meanest Man in Cisco."

To Hold Meeting

W. M. McFARLAND

Ten-Day Meeting at Church of Christ

W. M. McFarland, pastor of the Church of Christ, today announced he will begin tonight a 10-day series of services to last through April 17. Services will be held each evening at 7:30. Mr. McFarland, although a young man, has served churches in a number of Texas towns, his chief work being done in the South Plains, near Lubbock, where he attended Texas Technological college. He has studied Baptist theology under Dr. William Francis Fry, formerly head of the Bible department of Hardin-Simmons university, and for a short time also studied under the late Dr. John L. Power, rector-emeritus of the St. John's Episcopal church of Brownwood. He is continuing his studies in a Presbyterian school.

Subject for his sermon tonight will be: "Shall We Know Our Loved Ones in Heaven?"

OIL BRIEFS

The Gilgaher and Lawson deep test drilling near Desdemona today was drilling ahead, still in Ellenberger lime, after picking up a slight show of gas in water at 4,955 feet. The well was making five gallons of sulphur and salt water every 30 seconds.

Wittmer Oil and Gas Properties No. 1 Williams, two miles north of Putnam, today was drilling at 2,065 feet in Strawn sand, topped at 2,060 feet, with a small odor of oil. The well was logging 70 feet higher than the Lorenzen well drilled on the Clark south of Putnam several years ago, further confirming belief that a large structure exists in the area.

BIRTH ANNOUNCEMENT
Rev. and Mrs. Judson Prince are the parents of a son born Wednesday afternoon, April 6.

Miss Martha Rue Dawkins has returned to her home in Dublin after spending a few days with friends here.

FD WILL SEEK HUGE FUND TO AID RECOVERY

Billion and Half For Public Works May Be Requested

WASHINGTON, April 7 (AP)—A high administration official said today that President Roosevelt contemplates recommending to congress a $1,500,000,000 public works program in a new recovery drive to end the present recession, to restore employment and revitalize nation's business.

He understood that the president would ask congress to authorize the raising of the fund by sale of bonds.

The money would be loaned to the states and cities without interest for periods as long as 50 years, and would be payable in small annual amounts.

Young Loses His Move for Control of Chesapeake

NEW YORK, April 7 (AP)—Federal Judge Albert Cox today denied the petition of Robert Young for an injunction restraining the Guaranty Trust company from voting a controlling stock in the Chesapeake corporation, which it holds as trustee, at a stockholders meeting tomorrow.

The decision was a set-back in Young's fight with Wall Street banking interests for control of the Chesapeake and Ohio railway. This road is the most profitable remnant of the former Van Sweringen rail empire.

Community Program Friday Evening

The annual school "community program" will be presented at the high school auditorium Friday evening at 8 o'clock. The theme of the program will be "A Magic Carpet to Bookland," and each school will participate. East ward will depict "Little Black Sambo," west ward will enact "Mother Goose Rhymes," grammar school will present "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow" and high school will give a short play on "Travels in Mexico." Musical numbers suggestive of these topics will be given throughout the program.

There will be no admission charges and the public is cordially invited to attend.

Loboes Exhibit Makings of Title Bound Eleven in Spring Practise

Yesterday afternoon on Chesley field, Coaches J. T. Petty and "Pop" Garrett industriously applied oil to those wheels which are expected to propel Cisco's powerful Lobo grid machine next fall. These same wheels are expected to click with reasonable precision in the game which will be staged Wednesday, April 13, between two teams from the squad dubbed "Hardin-Simmons" and "Baylor."

After 45 minutes of arm-ups and blocking and tackling practice, the boys settled down to dummy scrimmage. Petty and Garrett diagramed plays on a blackboard, and then explained them to the boys. The team then practiced the plays, striving to get the proper timing and coordination.

The Lobo mentors believe that the first team is a blood-and-thunder combination, and all witnesses at the puff-and-heave scene yesterday concurred. The line is heavy and the backs exhibit plenty of ability. But, naturally, there is still a long road to be traveled. But the boys "hustle" and "spirit" should do a lot of good—and it looks mighty fine in spring training.

It can't be said that the Loboes look polished as yet. They don't. But, they present better possibilities than any aggregation which has represented Cisco high school in several years. Provided the boys retain their "fire" and determination and provided they continue to try, they are certain to develop into a game-winning combination.

Harrison and Tipton carried the ball in many plays, with Warren and Walls blocking. On a few plays Warren handled the leather. Let the boys get their timing and they will look good. Red Walls has the weight and, with practice and hard work, he should develop into one of the best blockers in the district. Coy Warren's newly-found speed should fool a great number of flat-footed opponents in the coming season. Odell Harrison and Thurman Tipton seem to have all the drive and power needed to get through the line, around the ends, and on down the field.

The forward wall should be able to hold a Mississippi flood. They're all heavy and rough. They should

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Verily, verily, I say unto you that ye shall weep and lament, but the world shall rejoice, and ye shall be sorrowful, but your sorrow shall be turned into joy.—John xvi. 16.

I placed thee in a hand of light Where the Gospel round thee shone; Where is the heavenly-mindedness I find in all mine own? And last I sent thee to the chastisement That thou might'st be my son; Where is the trusting faith which says "Father! Thy will be done?"

After a season of tears, a sober and softened joy may return to us.—Amiel's Journal.

A New Direction

ADMONITORY, indeed, was the address of Chairman Hatton W. Summers, Dem.-Tex., of the house judiciary committee yesterday when he demanded drastic alterations in the government reorganization bill to curb powers it would confer upon the chief executive and, falling in this, outright death of the measure. The people, said Summers, are willing to grant emergency powers in emergency periods, but that they are now moving instinctively in the opposite direction. It ought to be apparent to more than a few members of congress that this is very true. The reason is obvious. Emergency powers have not solved the depression. Rather they seemed to have aggravated it. The people are not concerned with theories and ideals; they are concerned with results. The idea of reform may have its lure, the bright prospect of a Utopia community in which all work and share alike and poverty is a thing unknown has its appeal. But the appeal lasts no longer than the hope of it. In the early days of the Hoover administration the country was told that poverty had been conquered. But the sudden depression blasted this beautiful fancy and he public turned in resentment to the hypothesis of the new deal with its doctrine of reform and its promise of chopping off the heads of the scoundrels and making the virtues of the system supreme. Unfortunately, virtue cannot be created by law. Faith in our system must be founded not upon the ability of a congress to define and enforce what is right, but upon the eternal fact that evil creates its own destruction and that right, though violated and often crushed, will rise inevitably of its own essential virtue.

HUMAN nature is a peculiar alloy, made up of what is both bad and good. Every political philosophy of reform has erred in some premise upon this point. A fact of practice may be corrected and to the extent that certain definite practices are condemned or regulated, political control can be effective. But when legal reform is carried to the extreme of dealing with principles and tendencies in the abstract, concrete definitions are impossible and uncertainty and confusion are the result. For every son and daughter of us instinctively realizes the evils inherent in our own selfishness and whether or not we condemn them of our own volition we dread the influences which may operate against the realization of the aims of this selfishness.

Human and Other Nature

By W. F. BRUCE

"When'er a task is set for you don't idly sit and view it; nor be content to wish it done. Begin at once and do it." Those are the lines from an old moral-maxim poem in one of my school readers that hang around in the margin of memory today. Do you ever come back

And in that degree does legal reform—which is after all nothing more nor less than some man's or some groups idea of what is right—impinge upon the operation of those instincts which make for progress. Virtues, curiously trapped in the complexities of human nature, are bound by instinctive fears of what might happen. For, although it may sound like heresy of a type, it is positively true that in giving play to the good, tolerance must also be given to the evil, with trust in the ultimate emergency of right, because man has not yet arrived at a sound moral definition of all that is evil and all that is good, and he cannot, therefore, separate all the evil from the good in his own nature and create his own heaven. Experience is his only means of advancement on this course. After all, if what is right has no quality for triumph, it has no value at all.

THIS may seem a circuitous way of getting around to the point that our dominant national political philosophy has erred on the side of reform. In condemning the evil in business it has condemned the abstract and has cast asperation not on the evil, but on the body in which the evil is inherent. It is the same thing as if we had condemned an apple tree because a few worms are hidden in some of the apples. Until this burden of aspersions is lifted from the business community, which is the foundation of our national economic and political life, we cannot hope for the reactivity of those forces which make for recovery. The public, which once turned in resentment against business as the source of its woes, is discovering that it had turned against itself. The tendency is now in the other direction. We believe the experience has been healthful, if costly. But we also know that the evil now to be met is not misuse of economic powers, but fear and uncertainty. These depressing influences must be removed, the bogey-man must be taken from the door. This is more important for the little man than the large, for prosperity begins and ends with the little man.

OTHER OPINIONS

He Also Serves

ONCE in a lifetime a town selects for the highest honor it can bestow a man holding a nonspectacular position in the community's affairs, and lacking the background of large business or professional interests to attract attention to his activities. It was so over in Palestine recently, when the most popular citizen was selected and publicly honored. The Denton Record-Chronicle tells about it:

"Palestine honored its best-liked citizen the other day. He wasn't the town's leading merchant, the wealthiest banker or a preacher. He was Frank Sawyer, an express company deliveryman who wears the conventional striped overalls of his calling. While he has been offered promotions with his company because of his friendliness and ability, he preferred to continue as a deliveryman because he's rather stay in overalls and serve his friends than to wear a white collar and remain in an office.

"But while his job requires most of his efforts, he still has all kinds of civic jobs. At local functions he is the No. 1 ticket taker, is a member of the volunteer fire department and always is around when the time comes to wash the dishes after a church or lodge dinner.

"Every town has men like Frank Sawyer, but seldom is their real worth to the community recognized by all the citizens. They may have menial jobs when ranked by salary and class of work, but when they put as much into their jobs as does Frank Sawyer, they are measured by what they are and what they do, rather than for whom they work and what they earn."

A man's worth in his community is not measured by his wealth, or his authority in the direction of great business or industrial enterprises. The Frank Sawyers often contribute more to the sum total of human happiness and contentment than do the great business barons whose pictures are often in the newspapers and whose incomes are matters for congressional investigations. It is refreshing to find one town that recognizes this fact.—Brownwood Bulletin.

Easter Cruise

CHAPTER I

JOYCE moved one of the suitcases aside and sat down on the narrow berth to read the letter from Aunt Martha. She glanced at the envelope a second time, just to assure herself that it belonged to her. There was no doubt that it came from Aunt Martha; one could never mistake that fine, precise handwriting, even were there no Fall River postmark. The surprising fact was that it should be addressed to her, in such a way. The words danced before her eyes:

Miss Joyce Milner S. S. EMPRESS Pier 82 North River New York City

And then, down in the lower left-hand corner: "Sailing Saturday, April 9."

It was altogether true. She was here on the Empress, in her own cabin; the steward had already picked up her ticket, and in about 15 minutes she would be on her way. To the magical islands of the south on her Easter cruise!

She turned the envelope over and tore it open.

A blue slip fell to the floor. It was a money order for $25.

She put the money order and the letter back into the envelope and slipped it into her pocketbook. For just one fleeting instant, she was sorry that she was going. She might have spent a few weeks up in Fall River with her aunt and uncle, the only two relatives she had in the world, instead of embarking on this wild adventure.

But it was more than that. If the blood of two centuries of seafaring ancestors runs in your veins, if you're a stenographer in a tiny little office overlooking the river, where you can see galling, majestic ships sail out to sea every ten minutes of the day, and if you've never been on anything bigger than a ferryboat in the entire 25 years of your life—well, then it's time to go.

She stood at the rail, watching last-minute passengers clamor aboard.

Now a man was picking his way up the gangplank, slowly and steadily, and close behind him a woman followed, glaring angrily at his broad back, and prodding him on. The man was round and pudgy, and his face gleamed like a summer sunset. He had difficulty in placing his feet in the proper grooves, and for every one step forward he stumbled back two.

Repeatedly the woman shoved him on, but with little success. Now her face was white in anger, and Joyce wondered curiously what she'd say to him when she got him alone. She was an attractive, imperious woman, wrapped up luxuriously in a dark mink cloak, with a corsage of orchids on her shoulder and the glimmer of jewels at her throat.

Now the ship's final whistle sounded, and as the moment of sailing drew near, two husky sailors proceeded cautiously down the gangplank to aid the gentleman. One on each side of him, they eased him aboard, guided his steps toward the pilot. As they passed in front of Joyce, the exuberant gentleman looked up and met her eyes. He straightened momentarily. "Lo, Beautiful!" he offered with faltering but genuine enthusiasm.

Joyce turned aside, but not before she felt the woman's cold eyes glaring at her.

SLOWLY but surely the big ship backed out of her dock, and the last farewells from the shore grew a little more shrill, a little more tense.

"Goodby, mother. . . Goodby, Joe. . . goodby. . . goodby. . ."

And shortly those on shore melted into no more than a waving mass of white handkerchiefs and faint voices, and the river moved the two little worlds farther and farther apart. Midstream the ship hesitated, turned her bow slowly toward the lower bay, and headed out into the open, endless Atlantic.

The late afternoon air was cool, and as they left the shelter of the harbor a stiff wind came up, whistling around the decks and sweeping before it all evidence of the gay moments before sailing. Confetti streamers and corsage wrappings were whipped into tangled snarls and lifted high over the railings; doors were slammed swiftly shut and deck chairs were slid about before the busy stewards could fold and tie them down for the night. As soon as the skyline of Manhattan began to fade on the horizon, passengers took quick refuge in their staterooms.

But Joyce remained on deck, fascinated. Not one moment of this would she miss. Alone, she stood at the rail, staring toward the sea, challenging the wind. There would be plenty of time to enjoy her cabin.

A steward, fastening the last deck chair securely, looked over at Joyce.

"Better get below, Miss," he advised. "It's blowing up pretty hard."

She pushed herself back from the rail. "I'm going right in," she promised. "Just one walk around the deck." She pulled her hat down, buttoned her coat closer.

UP she went with the bow of the ship, hesitating with it for an instant as they rode the crest of a wave, then she stepped forward to turn a corner.

She stepped forward, but she did not turn the corner. In that split second, another lone passenger, speeded by the force of the wind, came toward her, and as the next wave struck, they collided. Joyce, being the less heavy of the two, slipped backward, and the young man put out a quick hand to catch her.

Whatever happened, it was instantaneous. Perhaps the young man was over-eager in his helpfulness; perhaps another lurch of the ship pushed his arm. At any rate, in his attempt to steady her, he caught her elbow instead, and shoved it, violently.

Too late Joyce cried out. She stood there, wide-eyed and dumbfounded, and watched her pocketbook, forced out of her arm by the sudden contact, fly over the rail of the ship and down into the sea. . . .

When she could get her breath, she turned on the equally dumfounded young man.

"You clumsy clown!" she accused through tight lips. But she did not look at him; she was at the rail, staring at the spot where the bag was disappearing.

"I'm sorry. I'm terribly sorry, truly I am." His words rang with sincerity. "I had no idea anybody'd be coming round this corner. . . ."

"But my pocketbook! It's gone!" Her voice rose tragically.

"The young man looked at the black, surging water. "It's gone, all right," he conceded. "I hope there was nothing in it. . . ."

"Nothing in it?" she cried wildly. "Everything was in it! My lipstick, my compact—" Woman-like, she enumerated the least important things first. ". . . and all my money!"

"All your money? I hope it wasn't much."

"It was more than a hundred dollars!" A hundred and twenty, she reminded herself. And Aunt Martha's money order. And all her shore excursion tickets. Her eyes were glued on the spot where all her worldly wealth had sunk.

"Oh." The young man seemed to breathe more easily. "Just a hundred dollars."

Joyce spun around to face him. Her eyes darkened.

"Yes, Mr. Rockefeller, that's all," she retorted, with sour contempt for his grand nonchalance. "Just a hundred dollars. But hundred-dollar bills don't grow on trees, nor where I come from."

WASHINGTON NEWS

FROM CONGRESSMAN CLYDE L. GARRETT

Trade Agreements — Both old line and new deal economists seem agreed on one thing. In order for this country and other countries to enjoy normal recovery and keep a period of prosperity, it is necessary that surplus capital and surplus goods must be permitted to flow from the surplus nations to industrially backward nations and to those nations that have raw material shortages. In an effort to revive this flow of capital and trade, the trade agreement program is being worked on by Cordell Hull, secretary of state.

Air Policing — Under the new program to check fulfillment of AAA crop control, farmers will be checked from the air. Contracts have been let so far for the photographing of 108,854 square miles by air. An additional 300,000 to 400,000 square miles will be photographed in this same manner if suitable bids are obtainable.

Aid For Those Over 45 — The labor department is supervising a program to solve the problem of aiding men and women over 45 to get jobs. Massachusetts, as well as present, is the only state that has taken steps to prevent discrimination against older workers.

Adult Education — In congress, a bill authorizing that the president spend federal money on a matching basis with funds put up by states and local governmental bodies for adult education in evening colleges and evening high schools, has been introduced.

Petroleum — Fifty per cent more petroleum was imported by Japan from this country last year than in 1936. Expanded exports to Canada and France, as well as to other nations, put American petroleum exports at a new high, one-third greater than in 1936.

Weight Standards — Anyone interested in standards of weights and measures, or date affecting such standards, may secure complete reports of the recent national conference on weights and measures from my office. The report gives details of a bill now pending to fix weights and measures, and of another standardizing sizes of cans for food products, discussion and approval of code amendments covering specifications and tolerances for weighing and measuring apparatus, including vehicle scales. The request should be for "Miscellaneous Publication, M 159."

Federal Housing — The amount of mortgage which will be insured was achieved as a result of a series of experiments which began in 1931.

Washington Daybook

WASHINGTON, April 7 —Days before the TVA investigation could take shape, nimble-witted congressional investigators began to digest the possibilities for making it into headlines.

Back of every congressional investigation that amounts to pin-weight proportions is the crew of investigators. They are keener than hacksaws and like no other type of investigator. They are a breed unto themselves.

They blow in from some unexpected quarter, operate for the most part without more than casual publicity, then filter off into some other work.

An investigator with three years' experience is a veteran. Five years' experience makes an old master. And all this happens usually while the man is in his late twenties or in his thirties.

Noted in the recent crop are Ferdinand Pecora, whose flashing investigation of big financial names put across the securities and exchange legislation. Now he is on the New York state supreme court. Stephen Raushenbush headed the senate munitions committee investigation. Out of it grew the bill, ballyhoo for the neutrality bill, public ownership of munitions factories, and war-profits legislation. Now he is a motive cog in the National Peace conference machinery.

Alger Hiss, one of Harvard's

by the Federal Housing administration on any home small or large depends on the degree of excellence of the property in question. To warrant the insurance of a full 80 per cent mortgage, the property must be a sound mortgage risk, constructed of good materials, of good functional planning and in a neighborhood of enduring value as a residential community. Even a small home—a $2,500 or $3,000 dwelling—can attain a sufficiently high valuation to warrant the insurance of an 80 per cent mortgage.

Civil Service Information — Absolutely free to anyone, is information on civil service. All that is necessary, is that inquiries be addressed to the secretary of the U. S. Civil Service board at any first-class or second-class post office in the U. S.; to the U. S. Civil Service commission at Washington, D. C.; The commission, on request, will place the inquirer's name on a mailing list and he will receive prompt information of projected examinations. A warning has been issued by the commission to everyone not to be misled by promises or claims of so-called "civil service schools." No such schools have any advance information of examinations, influence in procuring federal employment or any authorization to give civil service examinations.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Verily, verily, I say unto you that ye shall weep and lament, but the world shall rejoice, and ye shall be sorrowful, but your sorrow shall be turned into joy.—John xvii. 16.

I placed thee in a land of light Where the Gospel round thee shone; Where is the heavenly-mindedness I find in all mine own? And last I sent the chastisement That thou might'st be my son; Where is the trusting faith which says "Father! Thy will be done?"

After a season of tears, a sober and softened joy may return to us.—Amiel's Journal.

A New Direction

ADMONTORY, indeed, was the address of Chairman Hatton W. Sumners, Dem.-Tex., of the house judiciary committee yesterday when he demanded "drastic alterations in the government reorganization bill to curb powers it would confer upon the chief executive and, failing in this, outright death of the measure. The people, said Sumners, are willing to grant emergency powers in emergency periods, but that they are now moving instinctively in the opposite direction. It ought to be apparent to more than a few members of congress that this is very true. The reason is obvious. Emergency powers have not solved the depression. Rather they seemed to have aggravated it. The people are not concerned with theories and ideals; they are concerned with results. The idea of reform may have its lure, the bright prospect of a Utopia community in which all work and share alike and poverty is a thing unknown has its appeal. But the appeal lasts no longer than the hope of it. In the early days of the Hoover administration the country was told that poverty had been conquered. But the sudden depression blasted this beautiful fancy and the public turned in resentment to the hypothesis of the new deal with its doctrine of reform and its promise of chopping off the heads of the scoundrels and making the virtues of the system supreme. Unfortunately, virtue cannot be created by law. Faith in our system must be founded not upon the ability of a congress to define and enforce what is right, but upon the eternal fact that evil creates its own destruction and that right, though violated and often crushed, will rise inevitably of its own essential virtue.

HUMAN nature is a peculiar alloy, made up of what is both bad and good. Every political philosophy of reform has erred in some premise upon this point. A fact of practice may be corrected and to the extent that certain definite practices are condemned or regulated, political control can be effective. But when legal reform is carried to the extreme of dealing with principles and tendencies in the abstract, concrete definitions are impossible and uncertainty and confusion are the result. For every son and daughter of us instinctively realizes the evils inherent in our own selfishness and whether or not we condemn them of our own volition we dread the influences which may operate against the realization of the aims of this selfishness.

Human and Other Nature

By W. F. BRUCE "When a task is set for you don't idly sit and view it; nor be content to wish it done. Begin at once and do it." Those are the lines from an old moral-maxim poem in one of my school readers that hang around in the margin of memory today. Do you ever come back

And in that degree does legal reform—which is after all nothing more nor less than some man's or some groups idea of what is right—impinge upon the operation of those instincts which make for progress. Virtues, curiously trapped in the complexities of human nature, are bound by instinctive fears of what might happen. For, although it may sound like heresy of a type, it is positively true that in giving play to the good, tolerance must also be given to the evil, with trust in the ultimate emergency of right, because man has not yet arrived at a sound moral definition of all that is evil and all that is good, and he cannot, therefore, separate all the evil from the good in his own nature and create his own heaven. Experience is his only means of advancement on this course. After all, if what is right has no quality for triumph, it has no value at all.

THIS may seem a circuitous way of getting around to the point that our dominant national political philosophy has erred on the side of reform. In condemning the evil in business it has condemned the abstract and has cast asperation not on the evil, but on the body in which the evil is inherent. It is the same thing as if we had condemned an apple tree because a few worms are hidden in some of the apples. Until this burden of aspersions is lifted from the business community, which is the foundation of our national economic and political life, we cannot hope for the reactivity of those forces which make for recovery. The public, which once turned in resentment against business as the source of its woes, is discovering that it had turned against itself. The tendency is now in the other direction. We believe the experience has been healthful, if costly. But we also know that the evil now to be met is not misuse of economic powers, but fear and uncertainty. These depressing influences must be removed, the bogey-man must be taken from the door. This is more important for the little man than the large, for prosperity begins and ends with the little man.

He Also Serves

ONCE in a lifetime a town selects for the highest honor it can bestow a man holding a nonspectacular position in the community's affairs, and lacking the background of large business or professional interests to attract attention to his activities. It was so over in Palestine recently, when the most popular citizen was selected and publicly honored. The Denton Record-Chronicle tells about it: "Palestine honored its best-liked citizen the other day. He wasn't the town's leading merchant, the wealthiest banker or a preacher. He was Frank Sawyer, an express company deliveryman who wears the conventional striped overalls of his calling. While he has been offered promotions with his company because of his friendliness and ability, he preferred to continue as a deliveryman because he's rather stay in overalls and serve his friends than to wear a white collar and remain in an office.

"But while his job requires most of his efforts, he still has all kinds of civic jobs. At local functions he is the No. 1 ticket taker, is a member of the volunteer fire department and always is around when the time comes to wash the dishes after a church or lodge dinner.

"Every town has men like Frank Sawyer, but seldom is their real worth to the community recognized by all the citizens. They may have menial jobs when ranked by salary and class of work, but when they put as much into their jobs as does Frank Sawyer, they are measured by what they are and what they do, rather than for whom they work and what they earn."

A man's worth in his community is not measured by his wealth, or his authority in the direction of great business or industrial enterprises. The Frank Sawyers often contribute more to the sum total of human happiness and contentment than do the great business barons whose pictures are often in the newspapers and whose incomes are matters for congressional investigations. It is refreshing to find one town that recognizes this fact.—Brownwood Bulletin.

from a little while spent away somewhere with a kind of reluctant attitude toward the irksome part of the daily round that you left off when you went away? You have an interest, an eagerness even, to look over your premises and any improved appearance the season may have brought to them; to see what has happened among your friends or to your enemies; to enjoy the welcome that usually overshadows any disfavor the community may have toward your return; to resume all satisfactory experiences that were cut off by your going away. But there have to be some drudgery and inconvenience and forced effort among your activities to spoil it all. And these are what get attention when you first take up your task again. But the same habit that helped to smooth over when you were at it before soon comes back and you are able to get into the swing with a reasonable degree of enjoyment. Life would be a tedious affair that always came to a glad end if we had to stare at the disagreeable

CHAPTER I

JOYCE moved one of the suitcases aside and sat down on the narrow berth to read the letter from Aunt Martha. She glanced at the envelope a second time, just to assure herself that it belonged to her. There was no doubt that it could never mistake that fine, precise handwriting, even were there no Fall River postmark. The surprising fact was that it should be addressed to her, in such a way. The words danced before her eyes: Miss Joyce Milner S. S. EMPRESS Pier 82 North River New York City

And then, down in the lower left-hand corner: "Sailing Saturday, April 9." It was altogether true. She was here on the Empress, in her own cabin; the steward had already picked up her ticket, and in about 15 minutes she would be on her way. To the magical islands of the south on her Easter cruise! She turned the envelope over and tore it open. A blue slip fell to the floor. It was a money order for $25. She put the money order and the letter back into the envelope and slipped it into her pocketbook. For just one fleeting instant, she was sorry that she was going. She might have spent a few weeks up in Fall River with her aunt and uncle, the only two relatives she had in the world, instead of embarking on this wild adventure. But it was more than that. If the blood of two centuries of seafaring ancestors runs in your veins, if you're a stenographer in a tiny little office overlooking the river, where you can see gallant

ing mass of white handkerchiefs and faint voices, and the river moved the two little worlds farther and farther apart. Midstream the ship hesitated, turned her bow slowly toward the lower bay, and headed out into the open, endless Atlantic.

The late afternoon air was cool, and as they left the shelter of the harbor a stiff wind came up, whistling around the decks and sweeping before it all evidence of the gay moments before sailing. Confetti streamers and corsage wrappings were whipped into tangled snarls and lifted high over the railings; doors were slammed swiftly shut and deck chairs were slid about before the busy stewards could fold and tie them down for the night. As soon as the skyline of Manhattan began to fade on the horizon, passengers took quick refuge in their staterooms.

But Joyce remained on deck, fascinated. Not one moment of this would she miss. Alone, she stood at the rail, staring toward the sea, challenging the wind. There would be plenty of time to enjoy her cabin.

A steward, fastening the last deck chair securely, looked over at Joyce. "Better get below, Miss," he advised. "It's blowing up pretty hard."

She pushed herself back from the rail. "I'm going right in," she promised. "Just one walk around the deck." She pulled her hat down, buttoned her coat closer.

UP she went with the bow of the ship, hesitating with it for an instant as they rode the crest of a wave, then she stepped forward to turn a corner.

She stepped forward, but she did not turn the corner. In that split second, another lone passenger, speeded by the force of the wind, came toward her, and as the next wave struck, they collided. Joyce, being the less heavy of the two, slipped backward, and the young man put out a quick hand to catch her.

Aid For Those Over 45 — The labor department is supervising a program to solve the problem of aiding men and women over 45 to get jobs. Massachusetts, at present, is the only state that has taken steps to prevent discrimination against older workers.

Housing — Since the amended national housing act was signed by the president on February 3, more than one hundred million dollars of new business has been recorded by the FHA. New peaks have been reached by business for three successive weeks with sevenths of the mortgages submitted for approval, estimated as representing proposed new construction.

Whatever happened, it was instantaneous. Perhaps the young man was over-eager in his helpfulness; perhaps another lurch of the ship pushed his arm. At any rate, in his attempt to steady her, he caught her elbow instead, and shoved it, violently.

Too late Joyce cried out. She stood there, wide-eyed and dumfounded, and watched her pocketbook, forced out of her arm by the sudden contact, fly over the rail of the ship and down into the sea. . . . When she could get her breath, she turned on the equally dumfounded young man.

"You clumsy clown!" she accused through tight lips. But she did not look at him; she was at the rail, staring at the spot where the bag was disappearing.

"I'm sorry, I'm terribly sorry, truly I am." His words rang with sincerity. "I had no idea anybody'd be coming round this corner. . . ."

"But my pocketbook! It's gone!" Her voice rose tragically. The young man looked at the black, surging waters. "It's gone, all right," he conceded. "I hope there was nothing in it. . . ."

"Nothing in it?" she cried wildly. "Everything was in it! My lipstick, my compact. . . . Woman-like, she enumerated the least important things first. . . . and all my money!"

"All your money? I hope it wasn't much." "It was more than a hundred dollars!" A hundred and twenty, she reminded herself. And Aunt Martha's money order. And all her shore excursion tickets. Her eyes were glued on the spot where all her worldly wealth had sunk.

"Oh!" The young man seemed to breathe more easily. "Just a hundred dollars." Joyce spun around to face him. Her eyes darkened.

FROM CONGRESSMAN CLYDE L. GARRETT

Trade Agreements — Both old line and new deal economists seem agreed on one thing. In order for this country and other countries to enjoy normal recovery and keep a period of prosperity, it is necessary that surplus capital and surplus goods must be permitted to flow from the surplus nations to industrially backward nations and to those nations that have raw material shortages. In an effort to revive this flow of capital and trade, the trade agreement program and the unsatisfactory and the repugnant features of the daily picture. But as it is we have learned to motivate ourselves by the happy moments and the enticing effects and the curious experiments that are sprinkled through and throw a little glamor over the affairs of everyday. So we may if we will help ourselves to a little of the joy of living.

Washington Daybook

WASHINGTON, April 7 — Days before the TVA investigation could take shape, nimble-witted congressional investigators began to digest the possibilities for making it into headlines.

Back of every congressional investigation that amounts in proportion to the crew of investigators. They are keener than hawks and like no other type of investigator. They are a breed unto themselves.

They blow in from some unexpected quarter, operate for the most part without more than casual publicity, then filter off into some other work.

An investigator with three years' experience is a veteran. Five years' experience makes an old master. And all this happens usually while the man is in his late twenties or in his thirties.

Noted in the recent crop are Ferdinand Pecora, whose flashing investigation of big financial names put across the securities and exchange legislation. Now he is on the New York state supreme court. Stephen Rausenbush headed the senate munitions committee investigation. Out of it grew the public ownership of munitions factories, and war-profits legislation. Now he is a motive cog in the National Peace conference machinery.

Alger Hiss, one of Harvard's graduates by the Federal Housing administration on any home small or large depends on the degree of excellence of the property in question. To warrant the insurance of a full 80 per cent mortgage, the property must be a sound mortgage risk, constructed of good materials, of good functional planning and in a neighborhood of enduring value as a residential community. Even a small home—a $2,500 or $3,000 dwelling—can attain a sufficiently high valuation to warrant the insurance of an 80 per cent mortgage.

Civil Service Information — Absolutely free to anyone, is information on civil service. All that is necessary, is that inquiries be addressed to the secretary of the U. S. Civil Service board at any first-class or second-class post office in the U. S.; to the U. S. Civil Service commission at Washington, D. C. The commission, on request, will place the inquirer's name on a mailing list and he will receive prompt information of projected examinations. A warning has been issued by the commission to everyone not to be misled by promises of claims of so-called "civil service schools." No such schools have any advance information of examinations; influence in procuring federal employment or any authorization to give civil service examinations.

ATWELL

Three things combined to make us happier this morning: a beautiful day, work, moving off in that well oiled way that suggests accomplishment, and the welcome hum of the road grader over the hill, smoothing out a few wrinkles in the road before us. Just one of those days when everything seems to be working together for the common good.

Across the road over there I see one farmer harrowing his maize while another farmer in an adjoining field is breaking the crust on his young corn. Down the way a tractor purrs along, with a rhythmic putt-a-putt, as it turns over rich new earth. Here another farmer with one horse and a Georgia stock plowing among his fruit trees, while his neighbor rides along on his planter, chewing his "Brown Mule" as each turn of the planter plate kicks out seeds, in rapid succession.

I wondered what those two ladies could be doing out walking along the creek, so early in the morning, until I saw one reach down and snip off several green sprouts of something and put them into a sack she was carrying. Then I knew she was out "polk hunting." Somebody was going to have dinner. Garnished with sliced hard boiled eggs with the added flavor of tender radishes and with piping hot corn bread to complete the picture. What could be more appetizing?

The first place winners at county track meet are putting on the final touches for the district meet to be held at Breckenridge Friday and Saturday. Those entering are: Destiene Pillans, in senior girls' declamation; Leonard Pillans, junior boys' declamation; Benja Pillans, Senate Pillans; Charnel Hutchins and Keelon in various track events and Sybil Sessions in essay writing.

The play "Two Days to Marry" will be presented Thursday night instead of Friday night, as scheduled. Conflict in other Friday night activities was responsible for the change of date. As a good three act comedy, starring two blackface characters, this play promises plenty of laughs. Welcome all Thursday night at 8.

PLEASANT HILL

Local officers Tuesday had thrown out a shag-net in an effort to snare a daring young bandit who Tuesday morning, between 5 and 5:20 entered two Eighth street service stations and robbed the attendants at pistol point.

The bandit, alone, afoot, and armed, entered the Moad Brothers' Sinclair station, 211 West Eighth street, unobserved, and covered "Cotton" Weathers, attendant, with the command "Don't move!" He wore a black hat pulled over his forehead, his face was covered with a "dirty, red handkerchief," and he had on a "trench coat with leather buttons." Weathers said, He was of medium height.

The man kept Weathers covered with a gun held in his left coat pocket with the barrel of the gun protruding through a hole in the pocket. He rushed to the cash register and finding it locked, demanded the key from Weathers. Upon Weathers' refusal to surrender the key, the bandit scratched Weathers' face with his fingers, leaving five bleeding gashes.

Failing in his attempt to obtain the key, the bandit forced Weathers into a tool case, in the back equipment room, and barred the door with a screw driver. He then hurried to the register and forced it open.

Having emptied the drawer of $8.36, he made his way to Harvey Thurman's Gulf station, 201 West Eighth street, and ordered Pryor, night shift man, to "Get 'em up!" Reaching the cash register, the thief rang up "Gas—$10.00," and raked out about $7.00, leaving the pennies. After forcing Pryor into the storeroom, he shut the door and fled.

Weathers, having crashed the top of the case, notified the police immediately, and then rushed down to the Gulf station. The bandit must have barely escaped as Pryor was just then entering the front room of the station. He had not been locked in the storeroom.

In the Sinclair station, while locking Weathers in the tool case, the thief unknowingly touched a box which contained more cash than his two raids netted. The box contained about $30 dollars which Charlie Moad had hidden earlier in the evening.

M. H. French carefully lifted all available fingerprints. Several suspects are at the present being held in the city hall for questioning in connection with the robbery. Cisco officers said that the robbers were conducted in an amateurish fashion. The two holdups netted the bandit about $16.

DAN HORN

The Dan Horn women's demonstration club met with Mrs. A. J. Maxwell Friday, April 7.

There were 12 old members, one new member and three visitors, and three members absent. That is a record. We are going to have a real club yet.

Plans were made for the entertainment that is to be Friday night April 8 at the school house. We are expecting to have a good time and hope there will be quite a few visitors. The Dixie Play Boys may be with us to give a few tunes. They are cordially invited.

Miss Ruth Ramey, county home demonstrator, was with us and gave an interesting talk on "Money in the Home," and there was a lively discussion on how to budget a farm family's income and should children have money. It was agreed by all that children should have some money and be taught how to spend it and how to save some. They should earn part of their money in order to appreciate it. The next meeting will be with Mrs. Etta Parks, April 15. Visitors are welcome and invited to come.—Club Reporter.

Long Resident of City Buried In Oakwood Cemetery

Services were held for Mrs. R. H. Love Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock at the home of her daughter, Miss Ruby Love. Mrs. Love died Sunday night, following a long illness. She was buried in the Oakwood cemetery, Cisco. Services were conducted by the Rev. Judson Price, pastor of the First Baptist church. Green Funeral home was in charge.

Mrs. Love was born in McMinn county, Tennessee, January 13, 1854. Her maiden name was Alice Leah Vaughn. She came to Texas in 1874, and was married to R. H. Love in December, 1882, at Valley View, Texas. Mr. Love died July 28, 1909.

Mrs. Love is survived by: Two daughters, Miss Ruby Love, Cisco, and Mrs. J. C. Sullivan, Norman, Oklahoma; Two brothers, R. T. Vaughn and Henry Vaughn, Blum, Texas; Five grandsons, Earl Sullivan, Hobbs, New Mexico; C. R. Sullivan, Wichita, Kansas; Harry Sullivan, Robert Sullivan, and Jack Blanton, all of Norman, Oklahoma; Two sisters, Mrs. J. H. Head, Hereford, Texas, and Mrs. J. C. Cobb, Hindsville, Arkansas; One granddaughter, Miss Ruby Lee Blanton, Cisco; One great-granddaughter, Christie Sullivan, Wichita, Kansas; One daughter, Mrs. R. T. Blanton, died November 15, 1919.

Among those from out of town who attended the funeral were: Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Sullivan and sons, Harry and Robert, of Norman, Oklahoma; Jack Blanton, Norman; Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Vaughn, Blum, Texas; Mrs. D. W. Mercer, Hereford, Texas; Mr. and Mrs. Turner Garner, Brownwood; Misses Maynel Edmondson and Sybil Holder, Eastland.

Jean Lafitte, the buccaneer who preyed on shipping in the Gulf of Mexico, commanded a detachment of his men at the Battle of New Orleans and was pardoned for his acts of piracy by President Madison.

Rabbit Drive Planned for April 15

One of the largest rabbit drives ever to have been organized in this section was being arranged to take place near Pioneer on Friday, April 15. The drive will take place in the corner of three counties. Mrs. Molly Bryson, Cecil Freeman and C. E. Fox are sponsoring it and plans are being made to furnish ammunition for those taking part. The hunters will meet at 8:30 on the Pioneer-Cross Plains road at the railroad crossing and lunch, consisting of a fish dinner and coffee, will be served at the Gurner Baptist church.

The manufacture of artificial ice became general about 1900.

City Commissioners Are Re-elected

Out of a total of 200 votes cast in the municipal general election for three commissioners Tuesday, retiring Commissioners J. R. Burnett, H. C. Henderson and Smith Huestis received 197, 199 and 199 respectively, returning them to further terms by almost unanimous votes.

The vote was the lightest which has been cast in a municipal election in many years.

News From County 4-H Clubs

FLATWOOD 4-H CLUB BOYS MEET MONDAY

The Flatwood Boys' 4-H club met on April 4, at the Flatwood school house. Hugh F. Barnhart, assistant county agent, met with the club and gave a discussion and demonstration on T-budding, patch budding, chip budding, and grafting of pecan and fruit trees. As well as a demonstration on how to make paraffin patches to be placed over the bud when the tree is budded. Several of the boys in the community are planning on doing some budding and grafting this spring.

Boys present for the meeting were Burl and Tommie Nicholas, Billy Ray and Jack Lylerla, Edward and Jasper Henley, Richard Arnold, James Luther Pittman, Anson Little, Don Bennett, Truett Norris, Ford Byrd, and Mr. T. E. Robertson, our local club leader, in addition to Hugh Barnhart, assistant county agent.

Gotch Would Be Horrified

Bob Gregory, lightweight wrestling champion of Europe, may not set the mat world on fire during his American tour, but he sure does know how to bring the photographers flocking. He is shown above "in training" at his New York hotel, assisted by his pretty wife, the Princess Baba, daughter of the white Rajah of Sarawak. (Editor's note—Maybe it's the princess who brings the cameramen flocking.) At any rate, some of the old-timers hardly would recognize the rigors of such a training grind.

Psychiatrist Wins Catholics' Eulogy

Night Watchman Says He's King by Right

FRANCE may be a republic to others, but to one man France is still a kingdom—his own. He's a night watchman in New Orleans, but claims the title of Louis XIX by direct descent, although history says the line ended with Louis XVII.

HOOPER SAYS NEW DEAL IS MENACE

SAN FRANCISCO, April 8 (AP)—Former President Herbert Hoover said that the direction of the New Deal is the "same as every state in Europe that has lost its democracy."

"The danger in the New Deal is in the direction of it," he said. "Europe's democracies were lost as the result of economic misery. And the actions antecedent to that are a mixture of government interferences, socialism, fascism and various tendencies that demoralize a free economic system."

Hoover made his statement at a press conference at the Palace hotel shortly after he arrived in San Francisco en route to his home, Palo Alto, from his recent trip to Europe.

Beauty—in Reflected Glory

When young ladies of the Girls' Preparatory School at Chattanooga, Tenn., don their sun-glasses and go for a stroll, they pick up reflections of all sorts of interesting things. Mirrored in the dark lens worn by Dorothy Crabtree, at left, is a perfect image of Chattanooga's airport, Lovell Field. And when the photographer snapped a picture of Betty Billups, at right, he caught not only her happy smile but a reflection of her friend, Elizabeth Nixon, in the spectacles.

ETIQUETTE If You Have to Apologize Better Do It With a Smile

By JOAN DURHAM
AP Feature Service Writer

Apologizing pays—if you know how to go about it. "When you've made a mistake," says John C. Burg, who's in charge of complaints for a large chain of hotels, "rectify it at once. Otherwise, the slight bruise may grow into a very sore spot."

Effective apologies have four essentials, according to Mr. Burg. Promptness and brevity, some action to demonstrate your willingness to make up for the damage done. Those are three. The fourth, and perhaps the most important, says Mr. Burg, is a pleasant, but positive approach throughout the procedure.

Flabbiness in the apologeter, he says, reflects insincerity of an inferiority complex that is embarrassing to both parties.

Settings make a difference in the handling of apologies. In a formal dining-room, for instance, it's out of place to do anything besides make a prompt, formal apology. In an informal gathering joking may be an effective means of passing it off—providing the recipient of the apology understands the sincerity behind it.

Apologies, of course, play their part in business as well as in social life. The business man's jinx, says Mr. Burg, is the perennial grouch. There are two kinds of these.

The first is the grouch who "sharpens his statement to thrust it home." Often he is trying, in his blundering way, to help you. If you treat him with good humor you'll make a permanent customer—or friend—of him.

The second is the one who naturally likes to be offensive. No amount of arguing can change him. If you treat him good humoredly—without being flippant—he will get less satisfaction out of his complaining—and he might even stop it.

since spudding early the past week Hayner, Reeves & Hose on their P. C. Larkin No. 1, 3 1/2 miles northwest of Rising Star, were shut down at 1200 feet on account of shortage of water. A water well is being drilled near the rig and it is thought drilling will be resumed again probably Friday. Water had been taken from a spring branch nearby which proved inadequate.

Marion Harvey and others have spudded in on their Ranger line test on the A. O. Angel tract 4 miles west of May and are reported as drilling.

R. C. McCarter is reported as drilling at 160 feet on his Smith No. 1, 6 1/2 miles southeast of Rising Star, having spudded the past week.
