

CZECHS CONSIDER SUGGESTIONS IN CRISIS

86 to Graduate From Grammar School Monday

Through the Editor's Spectacles By GEORGE

The love and affection which men sometimes feel for each other is often very touching.

We all admire sincerity in people and Pit was undoubtedly sincere in the form of his expression.

Underneath even such a tough hide as Pit's beats a generous sympathy.

But, unfortunately, Pit was not in a condition to be philosophical today.

One of the principal thorns found in Pit's life has been Skipper.

Pit, therefore, in the good state of his health, is practical enough to realize the peculiarities of the methods by which Skipper has always expressed his interest in him.

It was the loveliest potted cactus you ever saw.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Rejoice not against me, O mine enemy. When I fall I shall arise. Ye shall go out with joy. Micah vii. 8. Isa. lv. 12

On bravely through the sunshine and the showers! Time hath his work to do, and we have ours.

The voice of the Almighty saith, "Up and onward forevermore! Trust thyself: every heart vibrates to that iron string."

If we live truly, we shall see truly. It is as easy for the strong man to be strong, as it is for the weak to be weak.—Emerson.

Arkansas Case Is New Light on Gangsters

ALTHOUGH no American city has yet turned wholly sinless and sat down piously to await the wholesale distribution of harps and haloes, it is nevertheless true that we don't hear nearly as much about gangsters and the underworld as we used to hear.

This is partly because the G-men and other law enforcement agencies have done some pretty effective work. Even more, however, it is simply because the gangsters and the underworld have ceased to be news. Gangs and underworlds still exist; less defiant, less cocky, perhaps, but still in business.

So any new light we can get on the way commercialized crime operates is worth getting and worth thinking about. We shan't really win the long war with gangsterism until we understand fully how and why gangsterism exists; and some valuable light on the subject is provided by a recent happening in Arkansas.

THERE the G-men arrested five men and two women on charges of harboring Alvin Karpis, who once was rated one of the nation's most energetic public enemies, back in 1935. Among those arrested were an ex-chief of police, an ex-detective chief, an ex-detective lieutenant and the former manager of the Hot Springs municipal airport.

All of which is interesting for two reasons.

First, because it shows clearly that the big shot criminals do not operate on their own. Their "gangs" are not made up solely of low-browed thugs and coke-sniffing killers; they depend for their existence on the active co-operation of respected people.

Gangsters have to move from place to place. They have to hide out from the law. And they don't slink furtively about like trembling fugitives in a moving picture. They have their friends, their "connections," who take care of them. They are able to live outside the law because supposedly decent folk help them to live that way.

SECOND, they can't operate without an understanding with the forces of law and order. Pat Roche, the famous Chicago detective, once remarked caustically that a one-armed prohibition agent on a bicycle could have dried up Chicago in a week if he had really tried; and the implications of that remark are true of all gangs at all times and places. Crime flourishes when the police let it flourish—not otherwise.

So these arrests in Arkansas are worth thinking about. Rounding up the people who enabled a public enemy to operate is less spectacular work than nabbing the public enemy himself; in the long run, however, it is the most important part of the job of gang-busting.

Depression Cure Might Be Worse Than Ailment

IT may be that the road away from heavy spending and into the fair land of industrial recovery is just naturally a road that we lack the nerve to take.

John T. Flynn, who recently wrote some extraordinarily stimulating articles on the recovery problem, hinted at that rather broadly in his discussion of debts, price levels and industrial revival.

As Mr. Flynn sees it, a depression implies a failure in purchasing power, which in turn implies a failure of the long term credit mechanism. This, he adds, is generally due to rising prices in capital goods and consumer goods industries, rising debt burdens, and exhaustion of credit or investment opportunities.

If this is true, says Mr. Flynn, the road to recovery is clear. Let the government withdraw completely from all plans to bolster up debts—in other words, from all plans which are designed to maintain the prices of bonds, stocks and mortgages. Let it also withdraw from all schemes to bolster commodity prices, whether on the farm, in industry, or wherever.

ALL of this, in its essence, is simply the familiar "hands-off" program so often advocated in recent years. But it is unique in this: it is a real, thorough, uncompromising hands-off program and it makes no exceptions. It would let all prices find their own level, with no cushions provided to break the shock.

It would mean, for instance, no more RFC loans to railroads, and no more subsidy payments to farmers. It would permit bankruptcies to occur in wholesale lots, whenever the iron rule of economics ordered them. It would permit the deflation which was arrested in the early 30s to pursue its course to the bitter end.

In the long run, it probably would work. Ultimately, when the wreckage was cleared away, we would be able to go forward unhampered.

BUT would we ever have the courage to try it?

The chances are that we would not. Each of us would be willing to see it tried for the other fellow—but we would insist stridently when our own oxen were to be goaded that some sort of protection be provided. We would like to see the government keep its hands off, if it would just stand by to keep our own precious concern from coming down on the rocks.

In the end, with everybody talking that way, we would not be likely to get much closer to Mr. Flynn's program than we are now.

Getting out of this depression may take all the courage we can muster—even more courage than it has taken to live through it. Shall we be able to muster all the courage we need, when the time comes?

A 61-year-old Missourian has confessed that he deserted from the army during the Spanish-American war. Which would be fine—if he wasn't trying to clear the record so he could get a pension.

Human and Other Nature

By W. F. BRUCE

A problem that is a little hard to figure is whether a hen laying a penny a day can pay for her keeps (by "penny" I mean its equivalent in albumen and yolk at current quotations.) But when, with no changes in the capacity or productive ability of the hen, her daily output rises to a penny and a quarter of a penny and a half, then I can begin to see daylight (in my poultry yard). There may be many commodities that fluctuate in consumption according to price. I have tried that a little with eggs, but find that the line I might draw to represent my daily consumption varies horizontally within very narrow limits. One resort is water glass (the first part of the name because it is liquid, I suppose; the last part because it is a silicate and hence contains one of the essentials of glass). Then one faces the problem of just at what market price it becomes unprofitable to preserve eggs for use next winter. Another perplexity is that of getting hens to know when and when not to set or lay. I have waited weeks for a sign of crossness that would show me I had a setting hen. At other times I have spent weeks trying to get one into a good humor. Perhaps after two or three days in confinement she would be found a confirmed setter rather than a reformed one. She had simply laid an egg in her detention coop and enjoyed the imprisonment. When I opened the coop to invite her out to freedom and usefulness there she was sitting and ready to go on to the bitter end. So I might ramble on; but you know how it is.

Eastland Court Case Figures In Gas Tax Debate

AUSTIN, May 26 (P)—Because of the "importance of the question," the supreme court agreed today to review the decision which the attorneys for the state contended would seriously interfere with the collection of the gasoline tax. Loveman versus Walton Refining. Both the trial court and court of civil appeals at Eastland held in the case of Mrs. Elizabeth A. Company of Cisco that the state's tax lien was inferior to liens and claims of certain creditors.

"This decision," the state's attorneys said, "strikes down as unconstitutional the superior lien given to effectively secure the state in the collection of motor fuel taxes, thereby seriously injuring the major revenues meas-

About Our Friends

By STEPHEN A. LONG

Yes, the world and all it contains is progressing... even the staid old game of golf which was primarily made for old men who were not physically able to take any kind of violent exercise, so they might walk slowly around and knock a ball about in order to get sunshine and fresh air, has undergone a change... and a great change too... Fact is it has been changing ever since the younger people began taking an interest in the game...

But it remained for this year in Cisco for it to become a real young people's co-ed game... It's going to be an appealing game... we can see that... fact is we think we are going to go in for the sport, ourself... And another thing it will no longer be a game where men and women don any kind of old clothes when they go to the links... They are going to be wearing the very latest and most sporting of rig... we can see that coming... And why?... Hadn't you heard the latest? Why those young people who have taken over the game and who have made it from an old man's game to a young man and young woman's game, have matched the men and women in twosomes and are putting some real spizzintum into the sport...

Yes sir, we think we need outdoor exercise and expect to get us a new rig in order to be right in the forefront of things... fact is a very attractive young woman has already invited us to be her partner... and of course it would be very impolite to refuse... she might think we didn't like her and of course we do... that is... we mean... well she might take it as a slight or something... At any rate we better play the game a little...

Now we failed to get much kick out of the game when we had to play with Frank Walker, W. E. Brown, Floyd Shepard and Rev. Prince and such chaps as that... but now with all the flaming youth and others, still of attracting personalities, we think we should learn more about the game and acquire some skill... well, for business reasons, at least... It might afford an opportunity to make closer business contacts with some of our clients... Yes, we expect golf to become very popular in Cisco this summer and it is probable that its financial troubles will be at an end... Wise merchants will stock some new golf togs for both sexes, that have personal appeal about them so they can supply the demand as it gradually evolves... Good old golf!

A good friend of ours here in Cisco tells this story on himself... ure of this state to the great prejudice and diminution of its revenues."

Ford V-8s Sweep Argentine Grand Prix

ENTHUSIASTIC spectators lined the streets of La Plata to witness the victory of Hector Seldes, famous Uruguayan race driver, in the recent 4000-mile Grand Prix of Southern Argentina. Driving a Ford V-8 coupe, Seldes covered the tortuous course in less than 69 hours, averaging 56 miles an hour. The contest lasted ten days, three of which were allotted for rest for the drivers. Although 54 stock automobiles started the long grind from Buenos Aires, only 18 were able to finish the difficult course which extended over several almost impassable areas to the southern tip of Argentina. Of those finishing, twelve were Ford V-8s. Top photo shows the winning Ford V-8 at the finish. Inset, Seldes seated with his mechanic in the winning car. The race was sponsored by the Argentine Automobile Club to demonstrate the feasibility of motor travel among various South American states.

Eastland Boy Is Drowned in Tank

EASTLAND, May 26 (Spe.) — James Franklin, 12, of Eastland, drowned in a stock tank on the Jake Lyleria farm southwest of Eastland Wednesday afternoon, about 2 o'clock, while he, another brother and a cousin, whose names were not ascertained, were playing with a box boat.

Rescuers worked over the boy's body for 30 minutes in an effort to revive him before he was pronounced dead.

According to first reports the three boys were playing with a boat made out of a box when it got away and drifted into the middle of the stock tank.

James attempted to secure the boat, ignoring protests from his brother and cousin, who attempted to rescue him when he got into deep water. Their efforts were in vain.

Survivors of the boy include his parents, four sisters and two brothers.

Letter In Ranger Post Office May Have Long Wait

RANGER, May 26—The letters that waited in the Marlin post office for nine years before they were placed on a mail plane, may have a parallel in Ranger some of these days.

Mrs. Martha Davenport, postmaster of Ranger, stated Saturday that she had been holding a letter for nearly two years, marked "to be mailed on the day the Ranger airport is dedicated."

Ranger has an airport, which was installed nearly 10 years ago, and which was dedicated at that time, and airmail pickups have been made from the airport, but the letter was not mailed back to the stamp collector who forwarded it to the postmaster.

It is possible that at some future date Ranger may secure another airport, or the present airport, which has been neglected for some time, may be improved and re-dedicated. But until some dedication ceremony of some kind is held the letter will be held in the post office, according to instructions, "to be mailed on the day the Ranger airport is dedicated."

A Comprehensive Story Written by the Country Doctor Who Brought the Dionne Quintuplets Into the World

The Quints Are Four

And This Is How They Appear in Their Smiling and Serious Moods

An Authentic Account of How the World's Most Famous Babies Stack Up as They Start Their Fifth Year

(Copyright, 1928, NEA Service, Inc.)

EMILIE

Most religious of the five is Emilie. When flowers bloom around the nursery she gathers some every day and places them on the little altar in the quints' bedroom. But Emilie is also rather mischievous and something of a collector. She picks up pieces of wood, string, pebbles and leaves and carries them around in her pockets—just like a little boy.

(Copyright, 1928, NEA Service, Inc.)

MARIE

Still the smallest one of the quints, Marie generally tries to do the biggest things—such as pulling the other four in a wagon or building the tallest structure of blocks. And although she is also the liveliest, Marie still likes to play by herself much of the time. Marie gained almost as much in height and weight last year as her sisters.

(Copyright, 1928, NEA Service, Inc.)

CECILE

Frankster of the family is Cecile, and right now she is also something of the family flirt—although she has no monopoly on either of these traits. Nearly always perfectly behaved, Cecile is nevertheless of a rather independent spirit and will speak her mind on occasion. Many people think that she is a bit the prettiest of the five. What do you think?

ANNETTE

If any of the Misses Dionne wins fame as a dancer it will probably be Annette. She is particularly graceful in her bearing and is better than her sisters at the terpsichorean art, especially the minuet. Annette also has a very good ear for music and usually can sing a song all the way through after hearing it played only once or twice on the nursery piano.

(Copyright, 1928, NEA Service, Inc.)

YVONNE

The "big sister" of the quints, Yvonne is the motherly type and takes great joy in doing little things for her sisters. When they fall, she is there to help them up; when they can't comb their hair correctly, she will do it for them. She is probably the most considerate of adults, too. When older visitors come, she opens the door and takes care of the hats and coats.

By DR. ALLAN ROY DAFOE
Physician to the Dionne Quintuplets

(Copyright, 1928, NEA Service, Inc.)
CALLANDER, Ont., May 26.—The Dionne Quintuplets are 4 years old and it is time that I who brought them into the world and have watched over their welfare since, give to their millions of friends a picture of the girls as they are today, and at the same time an accounting of my stewardship in guarding the lives and health of the famous babies.

As a preface to any account of the development of the Quintuplets, it must be realized that they began life under tremendous disadvantages imposed by multiple birth which came two months too soon.

It was in all truth a modern miracle—first, that the five little girls were born (for the odds are 57,000,000 to 1 against such births) and second, that they survived (for in no other of the 60 quintuplet births recorded in medical history has the set remained unbroken for more than 50 minutes).

And now, as they begin the fifth year of their lives, a third modern miracle is taking place—and to a medical man it is perhaps more miraculous than those of their birth and early survival.

For the Quints not only are making tremendous strides toward overcoming their disadvantages and achieving the norm for their age, but in some phases of development they have even surpassed the norm.

Thriving as 4-Year-Olds

Consider first the matter of size. The average weight at birth for female babies in Sick Children's Hospital, Toronto, is a little under eight pounds each. On the second day of life for the Quints, the combined weight of all five was only 13 pounds and 8 ounces. A few days later their combined weight had decreased in less than 10 pounds. Marie weighed only one and one-half pounds on that day.

Only an inherent vitality and a kindly Providence—aided by medical science and skilled nursing—kept the little girls alive through those first dark days.

And yet we find that on their third birthday, just a year ago, the Quintuplets had overcome their terrible handicap of underweight and had even surpassed the norm for their age. Normal weight at 3 years is 30 pounds 5 ounces. Our babies' average weight at that time was 30 pounds 8 ounces. The same thing held true for other measurements, with the single exception of height which was a trifle under the norm.

Have Held the Pace

And during the past year as the Quints approached the age of 4, the girls have continued their normal gains in every respect. Latest measurements showed the following weights, heights, and the amount of gain for the last 11 months:

	Wt.	Gain	Ht.	Gain
Yvonne	37-4	6-1-4	38	3-4
Annette	36-2	5	38	3-4
Cecile	35-2	4-2	38	3-2
Emilie	33-4	5-1-4	38	3-2
Marie	32-4	4-4	37-4	3-4

During the coming year, until they are 5, all the girls except Marie should continue at about the same rate of weight and height increase. It is interesting to note that Marie, who has always been behind the others, is now growing at approximately the same rate as Annette and gaining weight at a faster rate than Cecile.

Learning Faster Than Average

Beginning at the eleventh month, the babies were given mental tests. Because of the handicap caused by circumstances of their birth, they showed a lag behind the norm for their ages.

But from that point on it was a different story. Scientific tests showed that their mental development paralleled the usual line in other children, but at a faster rate. In other words, they have not only developed along usual lines, but are making up lost ground.

From now on, particularly during the coming year, the Quints' rate of development will be greater than ever, and they should overcome in the next 12 months whatever is left of the retardation resulting from their premature and multiple birth.

Their vocabularies have increased amazingly. They now know between 400 and 500 words and are learning new ones every day. The girls no longer converse in single words, but in sentences. Once, when they saw a horse outside the nursery, they called out merely: "cheval." Now it's "Le cheval cours" (the horse is running), and off they go around the playground imitating his gallop.

Chimneys Go on Houses Now

They are developing swiftly, too, in such things as the pasting "projects." Previously, when their nurses cut out small pieces of colored paper in the shape of houses, roofs, chimneys, windows, trees and animals, and asked the Quints to paste them together, the results were amusing, to say the least. But now windows are on houses instead of off in space and cows lie under trees instead of in the branches.

The Quints, in other words, are developing a fine sense of the fitness of things.

As to deportment, the best way to describe the Quints is to say that they are good—but not goodly—girls. Zestful, full of life, mischievous, the sisters are at the same time tractable, eager to please and quick to co-operate as go through their routine of play, study, religious activities and health care.

Playing at Work

The Quints love games, and some of their duties which otherwise might be considered chores become happy tasks when made to seem like play. Nowhere is this fact more evident than in connection with care of their teeth.

The Quintuplets are not afraid of their dentist. Dr. Arnold D. Mason, Dean of the Toronto University Dental faculty, got a rousing reception when he came to the hospital recently to take the Quints' annual dental impressions. He made a game of the task of looking into their mouths with his little mirror and the girls loved the nice, warm piece of wax which he popped into their mouths, and on which they could bite down hard and make themselves look puffy and horrible in the mirror.

The Quints' teeth are now perfectly sound, with not a single trace of decay in any of them. Cecile and Emilie have a slight narrowness in the dental arch, but this is being corrected by oral exercises.

Finances Well Guarded

All of this emphasis on the care of the Quints' health does not mean that their financial affairs are being neglected. The girls' estates now amount to about $600,000, all of which is being guarded with utmost care to insure future financial security.

The Quints' income, coming mainly in revenue from movies, news pictures and advertising endorsements, is all invested in Canadian government bonds. The income from the investments is used to perate the extensive establishment in which the girls live with their nurses, housekeepers and attendants.

There is another side, too, to the aura of happiness surrounding the Quintuplets. Not only have they thrived, and gained a goodly proportion of the world's goods, but they have brought prosperity to this region of the Canadian backwoods in which they were born.

In many ways, they might be considered Callander's "basic industry," for most of the town is dependent in one way or another upon their existence. Lumber used to be Callander's main business, but the timber is cut over and the sawmills have moved away.

Now the population drives taxis, works in restaurants or operates tourist cabins for the thousands of visitors who come to see the Quints. Some estimate that as much as $50,000,000 is left in Canada every year by visitors.

Red Cross In Another Appeal for China Funds

EASTLAND, May 26 (Sp.)—Another appeal for funds for relief in China was issued Wednesday by R. C. Kinnaird, county Red Cross chapter chairman.

"We have been asked to raise $100. We should make it two or three times that much. The Red Cross has never failed anyone in any place. Shall we be forced to now?" asked Kinnaird.

Following is a copy of "The Situation in China" as sent by headquarters of the American Red Cross society furnished by Kinnaird, which he said illustrates the situation:

"Definite danger exists that 60,000,000 will starve in devastated China before September, 1933, unless help reaches them. It is impossible to plant crops. Untold millions of homes have been destroyed. Enough camps to care for refugees, even in larger cities, cannot be constructed and maintained because of lack of funds.

The committee which acts for the Red Cross in Shanghai estimates that 1,000,000 children, orphaned and homeless, are wandering through the few provinces where surveys have been possible. In American currency $100 will feed and clothe and shelter a Chinese child for one month; $13.00 will care for an adult refugee for one year.

Medical authorities in China say that, with hot weather approaching, devastating epidemics will be inevitable. Many refugees are now dying of typhoid, beriberi, starvation, pneumonia. It is impossible to give medical attention to all wounded because of lack of personnel and supplies.

Civilian refugees exceed sufferers from warfare wounds eight to one. Estimates of observers on the scene say refugees are increasing at an average rate of 5,000 per day.

While reports of warfare fill the newspapers, the fact that 6,000,000 are homeless in the Yellow river valley in north China from recent floods has gone unnoticed in the foreign press. Practically nothing can be done for them.

Foreigners in China are impressed by the great desire of the Chinese people to help themselves. Overseas Chinese have sent $7,000,000 to Chinese for relief work during recent months. Many wealthy Chinese have given large percentages of their personal fortunes for relief on their countrymen.

Money received by the Red Cross is being allocated to existing relief agencies in China by a committee of American business men appointed by United States Ambassador Nelson T. Johnson and called the American Advisory committee. The Ambassador has cabled his approval of work being done by Chinese relief agencies and says they are working as efficiently as possible.

Yesterday: The farewell
 James and Jackie runs down
 the hall, fearful that should she stop she might turn back to Roger and tell him that this is the end of everything for her!

CHAPTER XXI
 Well, that was that, Jackie thought grimly, as she waited impatiently in the little station for the noon train. That was the end of that ridiculous trial engagement. An end in which the laugh was bitter-sweet, indeed, for Jackie supposed that the last laugh was on her. She had thought she could laugh at love, refuse to have any part of it—and now it was laughing at her.

Only this laughter was terribly close to tears. It was aching misery, filling her whole being, an ache that would turn to dull emptness, no doubt, in time. For this farewell was the end of everything for her. It would be as Evelyn had said: Jackie knew she never again would love anyone as she loved Roger. First love was the sweetest; the saddest, too.

She knew now, of course, that Roger did not love her. She had been a little fool to think that he had ever. He had been only staggered, an act, even when he had played up to her act, at the end, even when he had kissed her that night in the garden, when he had asked her to wear his pin.

She opened the palm of her hand and there, cradled in its grasp, was Roger's pin. In her flight from the hospital she forgot that she had still clutched it in her hand. She had tried to give it back to Roger. But he had refused to accept it. He had said he would like her to keep it. As though she would need anything for remembrance! She started to pin it to her lapel again, over her heart, as Roger had. But no, she could not bear to do that. She opened her purse and put the pin
 out of sight.

The little station took on an air
 of importance, a flurry of excitement. Within a few minutes now the noon train would come thundering in. The platform would quiver, the building shake; people would press forward, porters

 would scurry by, the stationmas-ter would sing out his rhythmic chant, "All aboard, all aboard.
 Eastbound train, stopping at Bellefonte, Lewisburg, Harrisburg
 . . . All aboard . . ."

It could not come too soon for Jackie. She still felt impelled to flee; she still wanted to run away,
 and keep on running, if only it were possible, as far as she could.
 She wanted to hide her head, her injury from the world; she wanted to give in to this aching misery,
 to let it sweep over her, carry her away. She wanted to cry in her mother's arms.

Yes, she could tell Evelyn everything now, knowing that she would understand, knowing that she would give comfort and forgiveness as well. Her mother, who was wise and kind and dear . . .

The rumbling of the approaching train, first a distant, faint murmur, grew louder and louder, swelling in volume. The platform quivered; the building shook.
 Jackie picked up her bag and pressed forward with the others, as the train came to a stop. She was about to put her foot on the first step when suddenly someone caught her arm, swung her around swiftly.

"Jackie . . . wait! Oh, I did catch you . . . stop you in time . . ."
 It was Beryl Melrose, clutching Jackie's arm, holding her back. A strange Beryl indeed, flushed, hatless, hair wind-blown, dark eyes bright.

"Why did you want to stop me?"
 Jackie asked. Had something happened to Roger? Had he taken a turn for the worse? But no, she had left him only a short while ago. "You can't stop me, Beryl.
 Please!" Jackie tried to pull away.
 People were pushing past, getting on the train; in a minute or two
 it would pull out again.

"I had to stop you," Beryl said.
 She still spoke with difficulty, her breath coming in short gasps.
 "You can't go, Jackie. Not until you listen to me. . . . She still held firmly to Jackie's arm, as though,
 if necessary, she would detain her
 by force.

"I've got to go!" Jackie said.
 Why must Beryl try to stop her now? Beryl had known she had said last night she would leave on

Three Blondes, Three Brunettes -- All Beauties

Showing a safe impartiality, Bandleader Art Jarrett chose three blondes and three brunettes from the sixteen Texas State College for Women beauties who paraded before him on the stage of the Pan-American Casino last fall. The chosen six are Misses Alice Bryan, Shanghai, China; Lucy Nelle, Dallas; Jeanne Hansen, Plainview; Joan Ladd, Sherman; Ruth Martin, Denton; and Leta Ruth Edson, Station. Four nominees from each class were introduced at the Revue, from which Jarrett selected one of each classification and two at large. His decision has been kept secret all winter in order to enhance the traditional presentation of beauties at the Spring Senior Formal. Each of the girls has a full page picture in the Daedalian yearbook, which was released the day of the senior prom.

this noon train. Beryl had even agreed that would be best . . .
 "All aboard! All aboard!"

That was the last call. All of the passengers had boarded the train. If Jackie were to get on it she could not wait another second.
 She tried once more to pull away.
 Beryl only clung to her more firmly. "No, no, Jackie . . . you must listen to me . . . to what I've got to say. Then if you still want to go . . ."

But it would be too late then.
 It was too late now. The train was beginning to puff and steam,
 the big wheels to turn, slowly, laboriously. The platform quiv-ered beneath their feet; a roaring filled their ears. The train was gone.
 "You shouldn't have stopped me," Jackie said. Why hadn't Beryl let her run away? Why must she make it this much harder . . .
 "We must go somewhere so that we can talk," Beryl said. Her old poise had come back to her. She linked an arm through Jackie's, picked up her bag in the other hand, led the way back inside the station. The waiting room was deserted now. Beryl sat down on a bench, nodded for Jackie to sit down, too.

"I can't see what there is to talk about," Jackie said. She sat down reluctantly. She did not think that talking could change anything.
 She resented the fact that Beryl had prevented her from taking the train. "I told you last night I was leaving today," Jackie reminded. "You even said, Beryl,
 that you thought it would be best.
 And Roger, when I told him this morning—when I said goodbye—
 Roger said the same thing."

That should prove to Beryl that talking was in vain; that Jackie should have taken that train.
 Roger had wanted her to go. Roger had not tried to stop her.
 "Yes, I know," Beryl inclined her dark head. "He told me.
 Roger told me everything you said to him, Jackie. That's why I had to come after you, stop you."
 "But you shouldn't have! You should have let me go!"
 "No, I think not. I did say—
 last night—that it might be best.
 I didn't want you to have to know the truth, Jackie. Not until you had to."

The truth . . . what was Beryl talking about? Why didn't she say what she meant, what it was —right out? The truth was that Roger loved Beryl, and that Beryl loved him. Talking could not change that—or make it any different.

Perhaps Jackie still would have to put on an act—make believe.
 "I'm afraid you don't understand,
 Beryl," Jackie said. "I suppose Roger told you I broke our engagement. But what you don't know is that it never was a real engagement. It was only a sort of trial flight."

Beryl said, almost impatiently.
 "Yes, I know. Roger told me about that, too."

"He seems to have told you everything," Jackie said. "I still don't see what you mean by 'the truth.' I still don't see why you stopped me, what there is to talk about."

"I think that you should know everything," Beryl said. "Before you break your engagement. The truth, that I spoke of—from which I hoped to spare you, Jackie—is that Roger may never walk again."

Chips Fall Where They May at Fords

DEARBORN, Mich., May 26 —
 An ingenious oil salvage device makes machine chips fall where they pay, at the rate of several thousand dollars a year, in the Ford Motor company plant here.

Machinists call the steel turnings made in producing automobile parts "chips." When the chips fall out of the machines into special chip conveyors they are coated with oil which cools the cutting tools. Salvaging the chips themselves is a simple process which merely involves crushing them and sending them back for remelting.
 Salvaging the oil is a more difficult task.

A special Ford device solves the problem. The chip conveyor moves through a washer and the chips are washed in hot water as they move along. The oil floats off them and into a reservoir. Here it rises to the top of the water, and as the reservoir fills the oil overflows into a smaller reservoir. The process is repeated here to make certain the oil and water are thoroughly separated, and the oil is sent to a still much smaller tank.

The salvaged oil is returned to the system which circulates it to the machines, but not before it is heated to a germ-killing temperature. Company doctors take no chances with the possibility of contamination in oil or other fluids used in machining Ford V-8 parts.
 Approximately 17 gallons of oil are salvaged from every ton of turnings.

Bacon-Brown
Nuptials Are Solemnized

Miss Frances Bacon became the bride of Mr. Ruel Brown in a beautiful and impressive ceremony at the first Christian church Saturday evening with Dr. Lee Clark reading the rites. The ceremony was performed before an improvised altar of greenery, sweetpeas, larkspur and roses. Tall cathedral tapers burned in black candelabra and were lighted by little Katie Lou Atkins, cousin of the bride, wearing a white dotted swiss frock. Large baskets of sweetpeas, larkspur and roses were placed on either side of the altar.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Bacon, was graduated from Cisco high school and Randolph college. She wore a white Chantilly lace wedding gown, made on princess lines and a short coat made with long sleeves extremely puffed at the shoulders and a large white felt hat. She carried a shower bouquet of shasta daisies and gardenias. The maid of honor wore a frock of dusty rose sheer and carried a bouquet of sweetpeas and cornflowers.

What'll He Do for Cinders?

For 25 years George L. Weiss of Long Beach, Calif., rode the Pullmans as a traveling salesman. Then he retired—only to find that he couldn't sleep in an ordinary bed. So what did he do but build the complete sleeping car section shown above, right in his own home. Weiss is pictured making up the upper berth preparatory to catching some sleep in the manner to which he has become accustomed.
