Barbara Drops Charge Against Husband Today

Hughes and Crew at Paris on Round-World Flight

Ready now for still greater achievements is this giant "Flying Laboratory" which Howard Hughes, the four-millionaire sportsman, and four companions made a successful New York-to-Paris stop flight. It was expected Hughes would leave immediately to seek a new round-the-world speed

DIVORCE AND SEPARATION NEXT MOVE

Count Makes Promise to Stay Away From Heiress

LONDON, July 13 (AP)—The former Barbara Hutton dropped the criminal charge against her titled husband today, giving indications of separation and divorce are the next step in the couple's turbulent married life.

The surprise ending came as Count Haugwitz - Reventlow reappeared at Bow street police court and prepared to defend himself against a charge that he threatened the heiress.

Solicitors announced an agreement in which the court promised to stay away and not to communicate with Barbara. They indicated no reconciliation was in prospect.

The unknown "London gentleman" was not revealed.

Mr. Leach said the lots extend through to the Commercial Printing Co. property, and he bought them because he thought they were good investments.

Injuries of Girl Are Not Serious

Mary McCrea, three-year-old daughter of Postmaster and Mrs. L. H. McCrea, Jr., was reported not seriously injured in an automobile collision at 16th street and F avenue this morning. The child suffered a painful facial cut when the automobile in which she, Mrs. McCrea, Luther, Jr., small son of Mr. and Mrs. McCrea, and Buster Chandler were riding collided with a Cisco Gas Corp. pick-up on the intersection. Neither car was travelling fast at the time.

He was joined here by his daughter and son-in-law, Anna and John Boettlinger of Seattle. He made no appearance. He made no comment upon the petition.

2 Fast Games in Prospect Tonight

The two games of the tournament to be offered tonight promise to give real battles. Hanlon's thrilling 2 to 1 victory last night gave the fans plenty of talk about and tonight they meet Rising Star, a team that swamped Cisco all stars 8 to 3 here recently. In the other game Red Front, who showed power in swamping Seymour 12 to 2 last night, meets Graham. This also gives promise of a good contest.

Jas. V. Allred, Gov. of Texas, who was appointed federal judge of the south Texas district by the president earlier in the day.

Reed Pitches Three-Hitter For Local 10

With Reed pitching three-hit ball, Red Front smashed Seymour 12 to 2 in the opening game and gave indications that they will be fighting hard to reach the finals.

Cisco soft ball officials have asked that fans who plan to sit in the grandstand at the tournament games this week please park their cars outside the ball park grounds that there will be more room for those who wish to watch the games from their cars.

The Cisco team smashed Denman and Thurman for 12 hits, St. John, Rylee, and Sublett getting two a piece. Seymour made seven errors while Red Front made none.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Love the truth and peace.—Zech. viii. 19.
 If children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ. For he is our peace.—Rom. viii.
 17; Eph. ii. 14.

Oh, we should roll our burden on the Lord,
 Though faith be trembling and our eyesight dim.
 For did we realize His gracious word,
 Whose love is strong to bear His children's load,
 We should go forth from communing with God
 His peace our own, our care consigned to Him.

It is ever my thought that the most God-fearing man should be the most blythe man.—C. Fox.

More In His Element

THE appointment of Gov. James V. Allred to the federal bench of a new south Texas district was so generally expected that President Roosevelt's announcement of the appointment at Wichita Falls the other day created little stir. The youthful Texas governor is considered by most commentators as a good selection in line with the Roosevelt policy of appointing younger men to the judiciary. The president's ideals with regard to the judiciary are most unfortunate when the standards of the federal bench are considered, but at least in Allred's appointment he has improved upon the effect of that policy. For we are impelled to believe that Jimmy will make a good judge. A better judge than governor, where the peculiarities of his temperament, in the face of political considerations, interfered to a great extent with the prosecution of his platform. As federal judge Allred will be more in his element.

Man Is Ingenious
 Without Being Wise

THE hope that closer intercommunication among countries and peoples would bring better understanding and more peaceable relations among them doesn't seem to be working out very well.

We invent the airplane, bring cities closer together in point of time, and what does it mean? Better bombing.

We invent the cable and telegraph and telephone lines so that any country may know instantaneously what is going on in any other country. And what do we get? In half the world we get iron-clad control of communications by governments, and the news poisoned at the source.

We invent radio, by which the human voice can instantaneously enter any home in the world from far countries. And what do we get? We get poisonous propaganda from abroad and floogie-floogie-floy-floy at home.

NOW Miss Lidia Zamenhof, daughter of the inventor of Esperanto, an artificially-created language, comes through with still another disillusionment.

Esperanto was devised in the hope that by creating a language universally understood, the barriers of different tongues would be banished, and universal understanding would be promoted.

But what happens? Both Mussolini and Stalin, Miss Zamenhof says, have seized on Esperanto as a medium for flooding neighboring countries with military and social propaganda.

MAYBE "trickling" would be a better word than "flooding," in view of the small number of people who know Esperanto. But it is a small straw added to the long list of evidence that ingenuity is not enough.

The world's desperate need today is not more tools, but more knowledge of how to use wisely the tools it has.

Some bright young man has just invented a splashless eggbeater. Now that the kitchen has been made livable why doesn't somebody come through with a splashless automobile tire?

 as a burning, revolving disk. Apparently that music of the spheres you hear about comes off a hot platter.

"Characters in Order of Appearance," by Romilly Cavan (Macmillan: $2.50).

In England there is a young woman who writes novels and calls herself Romilly Cavan. She admits she has been writing since she was seven, and it sounds as if the name she uses might have been invented by her at the same age. Although she may have come by it in orthodox style.

In any case, Miss Cavan's mother is also a writer. She is Gail Patrick, to be specific, and she does not write as well as her daughter, to be as frank as specific. But as we remember, Mrs. Patrick's romantic outpourings are not quite so talky as her daughter's new novel, "Characters in Order of Appearance." This is called a "living conversation piece" by the publisher. The publisher is perfectly correct, for once.

Holds China's Destiny In His Hands

SLIGHT, of surpassing intelligence, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek emerges ever as a stronger character these days in the face of the encroaching Japanese. To hold off Japan and to unify the nation are the great tasks confronting China, and to Chiang is entrusted both.

Actually Chiang and his brilliant wife, Mme. Chiang, are the "hinese government. No official could dare to raise his voice against them. They have aroused China to a new consciousness of the necessity of scrapping the old ways for the new and of forging new place in the world. Tireless, living very simply, Chiang is up at dawn, works until late hour every night. In appearance he is not a commanding figure. His face is emaciated, but it carries himself erect, is in-stant, sincere in his actions. Leader of the Kuomintang party, the government and the army, frequently acting drastically without explanation, Chiang has been called China's dictator. He does not, however, consider himself such. He does consider himself pledged to guide China's destiny. He is shown above on a 1929 Chinese stamp.

Look in the Classified First.

for some hours to learn why, after admitting the many virtues of the book, it still seems a little spurious. The answer finally came—it is because Miss Cavan has written almost wholly about those English who make a point of being unexpected. If you approach them on a friendly basis, they will be rude. If you are matter of fact, they will disappear in a cloud of whimsy. If you want a dry Martini, they will look down their noses at you over a nasty glass of sherry. If you feel splendidly, their arms will drop hopelessly over the arms of their chairs, and they will make you feel like something in a butcher's shop.

The essence of Miss Cavan's novel is one Mark T. Brown, son of a greengrocer, educated "above his station," determined to write plays. We have here the favorite hero of the British writer, another British writer. Mark loves one of those ducky little brats who has reserves and makes enigmatic remarks and has eyelashes long enough to lose a dog in. Before marriage, Mark writes successful plays. Afterward, he loses the knack, and Moira of the long

Behind The Scenes in Washington

—BY RODNEY DUTCHER—
 NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, July 13—Many outstanding economists in Washington are now beginning to believe that business has left the bottom of the 1937-38 depression and is proceeding upward toward another period of recovery.

Even some conservative experts who still recently feared that any marked early upturn would be followed by a sharp drop in business activity during autumn have now lost their skepticism. And many expect the wheels of industry to be whirling merrily by January.

Chief difference in confidential forecasts available is a diversity of opinion as to the probable rate of acceleration of the upswing. The stock market is something else again, in the opinion of some of the canner government experts, who believe its recent spurt was not justified by the relatively small business pickup and that stock prices previously had held up well as compared with the precipitous decline of industrial production. A sharp market drop would cause no surprise in Washington.

Annoyance at the Hitler government's nonchalant policy toward payment of German—and Austrian—debts continues to spread. Even the New York stock exchange has made a unique application to the Securities and Exchange commission for removal of a German bond issue from its list. The securities involved are the German Central Bank for Agriculture secured 6 per cent farm loan

The telegraph office of one of the larger New Deal agencies is always on the watch for instances of possible lese majeste.

An editor of one of the agency's publications, needing a photograph of President Roosevelt but desiring something a bit more serious than his famous smile in full bloom, wired to a New York picture concern for a photo of Roosevelt "grinning." Considering the word somewhat disrespectful, telegraph office consens refused to clear it. So the message went through for a picture of F. D. R. "smiling, not too broadly."

gold sinking fund bonds of 1928, which matured April 15. Because of German foreign exchange restrictions, the bank was unable to provide dollar sin New York for payment. So it offered other bonds or blocked reichsmarks, which can't get outside Germany. The New York exchange's committee on stock and bond listing gave an opinion to SEC that it would be in the public interest to drop the listing of the bonds. SEC had a hearing at which no opposition was registered, although it subsequently received a letter from the bank expressing concern—in German, which required three days for translation. SEC is now considering. It nearly always follows the exchange's recommendation in such cases.

Two Important Business Trends Occupy Meet

DALLAS, July 13 (Sp.)—Two important trends which may change the entire business outlook of the southwest will occupy a number of commerce and trade association executives at the annual southwestern chamber of commerce school here July 18-22. The 100-odd organization executives who gather for the "school," beginning next Monday, will attend sessions in "Tourism," publicity and other subjects of general interest. Their attention, however, will be used primarily on the decentralization movement in industry distribution, and on wages and labor legislation.

An outstanding feature of the school will be the first state-wide conference on the new federal wages and hours law. The conference will begin with the meeting of the Dallas Rotary club Tuesday noon, July 20, and will continue all afternoon. An analysis and detailed explanation of the new wages and hours law as it affects southwestern business will be made by several outstanding authorities on the subject. All members of commerce and trade association executives and business interested in the subject have been invited to attend the conference.

H. Powell of Austin, president of the Texas Bar association, will discuss the wage and hour law at the Rotary club luncheon. Other attorneys will also be present to discuss the law. The school will be open forums at which business men will be invited to ask questions about the law.

Postmaster of Dallas C. J. "Dean" of the southwestern chamber of commerce and a student of Federal Industrial Relations will represent the Dallas Chamber of Commerce in the afternoon. Various bar associations have been invited to cooperate in the meeting.

Authorities will discuss the law for industrial development southwest Victor Schoffeleers, agricultural editor of the Morning News, will conduct a session in "Utilization of Texas Products—the New Industrial Revolution." John W. Carpenter, chief of the Texas Power and

Wm. McCraw Asks O'Daniel's Stand on Moral Issues

GEORGETOWN, July 13—William McCraw, candidate for governor, called upon W. Lee O'Daniel to make public his stand upon race track gambling, sale of liquor by the drink and other moral issues, in a campaign talk Wednesday morning in this citadel of Texas Methodism.

"The banjo men from Fort Worth talks a great deal about home and religion and the Ten Commandments and the fine women of our state," McCraw said. "But he doesn't say a word in his talks about gambling on the horses or selling liquor by the drink or any of the other things our church people want to know about."

"As a matter of fact, a reporter for a Houston newspaper asked the radio religionist about his stand on the sale of liquor by the drink. 'I've never given any thought to that,' O'Daniel answered. 'As a matter of fact, my campaign is coming along so nicely that I can't see the need of talking about something else.' And that is the moral stand of the man who comes into your homes over the radio and tries to make himself your governor by trading upon your respect for religion and morality."

"I have come out clearly against both gambling and illegal drinking in my program. Are we to infer that this 1938 chamber of commerce Moses is going to give the bootleggers and the moonshiners free rein in this state? Why this silence upon these vital issues? The members of the party whose banner he carries have a right to know."

McCraw also pointed out O'Daniel's record on old age assistance. "O'Daniel knew that the old age assistance plan was coming up for a vote in 1935, McCraw declared. "If the banjo man is so sincere in his interest in the old folks of Texas, let him explain why he did not qualify himself to vote for it. His failure to vote was in effect method of figuring brings to a vote against the old folks."

According to a report received from Hugh F. Barnhart, ass't county agent, Eastland county 4-H club boys placed in five state contests held for 4-H club boys during the boys and girls short course held at College Station July 6-7 and 8th.

The places won are as follows: dairy cattle, judging, second place, with James Dean of Alameda high point man of the entire contest; plant propagation, third place, with Jack Walker of Alameda high point man of the contest; dairy demonstration, third place; poultry judging, third place; and field crops, tenth.

The poultry judging, dairy judging, and dairy demonstration contests were preliminary contests, and the boys on these teams will return to College Station Sept. 2 for the finals in the contests. The teams winning these contests in September will win trips to Chicago, Illinois and Columbus, Ohio later in the fall to compete in national contests, according to Barnhart.

All of the Eastland county teams were coached by Barnhart except the field crops team which was coached by Elmo V. Cook, county agent.

AUSTIN, July 13 (Sp.)—Walter Woodul would use the full power of the attorney general's office to end the growing tendency to prey upon the Texas public school lands, he told a group of women supporters here today in an address at the Driskill hotel. He said that upon the attorney general falls the duty of preventing exploiters from using the school fund as a short-cut to riches.

Because he attended the Texas University as a self-supporting student, Mr. Woodul said, he had an unusual interest in the welfare of such state institutions. "Naturally," he added, "I am anxious about their continued growth. I am particularly interested in the continued growth and welfare of our public school system, from the smallest school to the largest of the state colleges and universities."

"It is only by strengthening our public school facilities that we can insure the perpetuation of the great democratic ideals which have made the United States the greatest nation in the world. Much of the revenue of the school system comes from mineral leases and royalties."

Mr. Woodul warned that there has been a haphazard policy of handling these mineral rights which he called "immensely valuable." "We doubtless need revision of statutes governing the awarding of lease and royalty contracts," he continued. "We need also a stricter enforcement of existing statutes designed to protect

SERIAL STORY INTERNE TROUBLE

BY ELINORE COWAN STONE

CAST OF CHARACTERS
TRAN DEARBORN—heroine, student nurse. She ran into love and trouble when she met DR. BOB BENCHLEY—hero, handsome young interne. He had trouble, too, keeping up with brilliant DR. STEPHEN SARGENT—head surgeon, Dr. Sargent's problem was something else again.

CHAPTER V
All the rest of that day, after the terrible Top Sarge had surprised her and Bob Benchley in the instrument room, Tran waited dreadingly for the summons to an interview with Miss Armstrong—that fateful interview during which the director of nursing would tell her, regretfully but firmly, that she was a misfit.

Late that afternoon, hurrying along a corridor on an errand to Central Supplies, Tran almost collided with a white-coated figure. Dr. Bob Benchley halted her by the simple expedient of hooking his little finger through hers, and murmured swiftly, "Heard anything from Armstrong?"

"Not yet," he encouraged her, but his voice lacked conviction. "Top Sarge dressed me down for both of us—unprofessional conduct—interference with nursing discipline—were some of his rhetorical high spots. I'm still licking my wounds. Haven't time to tell you all about it now, but—he glanced warily over his shoulder—"when are you off duty?"

"This evening at eight—but only till ten, of course."
At ten, without special permission, all first-year students must be behind their own closed doors. "Meet me at Borden's at eight," he directed swiftly. "We can slip over to the park."

time living up to that "No" when he called softly after her, "You're the sweetest thing God ever made, Agility."
She hurried all the more after that, because the errand was for Miss Miller; and "the icicle's" sense of timing was uncanny. She knew to a split second how long it should take to get from any given spot to any other given spot in the hospital, and back again.

When Tran got back with the tray of sterilized dressings from the Autoclave—the great cylindrical steam sterilizer—Miss Miller, with the assistance of Miss Smart, a third-year student, was working in the service room off the corridor from which the private rooms opened.

Right now, Tran knew, Miss Miller was on private duty. The patient, one of the doctors from Saint Vincent's board of directors, had specially asked for Miss Miller.

For Tran, that alone invested Miss Miller with a halo. But on top of that, the case was one of Dr. Sargent's. . . . That lent Miss Miller wings of glory. Tran forgot her worry in an agony of eagerness to please Miss Miller.

When she hurried, a little breathless, into the service room, Miss Miller was saying, "Of all the patients in the world, doctors are the biggest babies. They're always sure they're going to die. He's diagnosed his own case a dozen times in the last six hours."
"I know," Miss Smart said. "Miss French had one last week. Believe it or not, he insisted on taking his own temperature. How do you manage yours?"

For once, out of complete ineptness, she had said the right thing. Miss Miller's smile was almost friendly.

"Well, I must get back to my patient," she said. "Now I wonder, Dearborn—Miss Smart is assembling the sterile articles for me—I wonder if I can depend on you to get together the unsterile? You'll want—"

"I know," Tran cut in breathlessly. "Collodion. Two tourniquets. Tissue forceps in two per cent Lysol. Flask of normal saline. I heard it was to be a transfusion. I hoped you'd let me help."

Miss Miller looked faintly annoyed. When Miss Miller was graciously pleased to notice a probationer, she did not like to have her words snatched from her lips. Finally she smiled with ironically raised eyebrows.

"Well, well! Our little Utility seems to be running on all six today. . . . When you finish, you're to go directly to the dormitory," she added, and moved with her erect, lithe walk out of the room. Tran drooped. She had dreamed of being allowed to watch the transfusion—from a respectful distance, of course. But who was she to hope for favors with a death sentence hanging over her head? She would have been sure she read pity in Miss Miller's eyes, if she hadn't known that "the icicle" wasted no pity on misfits.

"Don't let her get you down, kid," the other student nurse advised kindly. "You're one-up that she even let you touch her equipment. For a probe, that's rating with Miller. And isn't she the leading lady of this hospital?"
But Tranquility turned away with ice at her heart. In the stimulating contacts of the past hour she had almost forgotten that she was a misfit. When she got back to the dormitory, of course, she would find the summons from Miss Armstrong; and that would be the beginning of the end.

Once back in the dormitory, she noticed a light in the demonstration classroom. She had almost forgotten that tomorrow she had been scheduled to demonstrate before the class in nursing procedure: The Making of Bed with Patient in It. . . . The Bath of a Patient in Bed. . . . The Preparation of Patient for General Medical Examination.

It was to have been a sort of final test before the granting of her cap. . . . Getting your cap meant that you were a full-fledged student nurse, entitled to wear a gray striped uniform, white cap, and white bibbed apron—ready for regular duty in the wards.

The demonstration was to have taken the full class period. Instead of "Griselda," the dummy, Anita Seibert, another probationer, was to have served as patient. You always had to demonstrate with a living patient before you got your cap.

Tran and Anita had planned a full-dress rehearsal here this evening. But Anita had been sick in bed all day. Tran had taken it for granted that the rehearsal was off.

Nevertheless, seeing the light under the door, Tran paused outside. She couldn't quite face the thought of going to her room yet anyhow—with that summons from Miss Armstrong waiting for her.

Perhaps Miss Philbin, the instructor in nursing procedure, was in the demonstration room. A talk with kind, humorous Miss Philbin would buck her up a lot. And perhaps Miss Philbin would know what was going to happen to her.

If it was to be the worst, Tran knew what she was going to do. She was going to dress herself up in her best and meet Bob Benchley outside Borden's as he had asked her to do that evening. If she was going out of the hospital on her ear anyhow, she might as well have a little fun on the way.

Tran opened the door and went in. If she had only known it, her decision was one of the most fortunate.

Austrians Like the Germans--- Like to Joke About Them, Too

VIENNA, July 13 (AP)—The casual visitor will find street life in Austria much the same as before the Nazis took control. Only there are different uniforms, fewer people in the streets and coffee houses. The reichsmark currency replaced the Austrian schilling. Swastikas and small "Aryan" signs in show-windows of numerous stores are noticeable.

Police officers maintain their "wiener schnitzel" waist. One officer explained that police officers were not considered as "Aryans" in Prussia. So the officers were told to dress in the same manner as in Austria. In addition they "march with a heavy step."

German traffic discipline is being difficult to get used to. Special police instructors have been placed on busy crossings to "teach Viennese how and when to cross."

It is difficult to get used to all the "Aryans" for the Viennese to see will be a time-honored habit. Austrian government employees, businessmen and most other white collar workers were accustomed for ages to take a half hour off during the morning to have their "second breakfast." Then they took off two hours at noon, usually including a short nap at home. At 4 p. m. the Austrian employe had the right to drink beer or coffee for half an hour.

All this will end soon, it is feared, and Prussian routine will allow only one hour for lunch at noon.

When General Goering suggested the Viennese give up their easy-going sociability and "sit on their fists and work hard," they didn't like it.

"Why doesn't Goering spit on his fist and live on a few marks every month, as we do?" was a frequent remark in saloons and coffee houses.

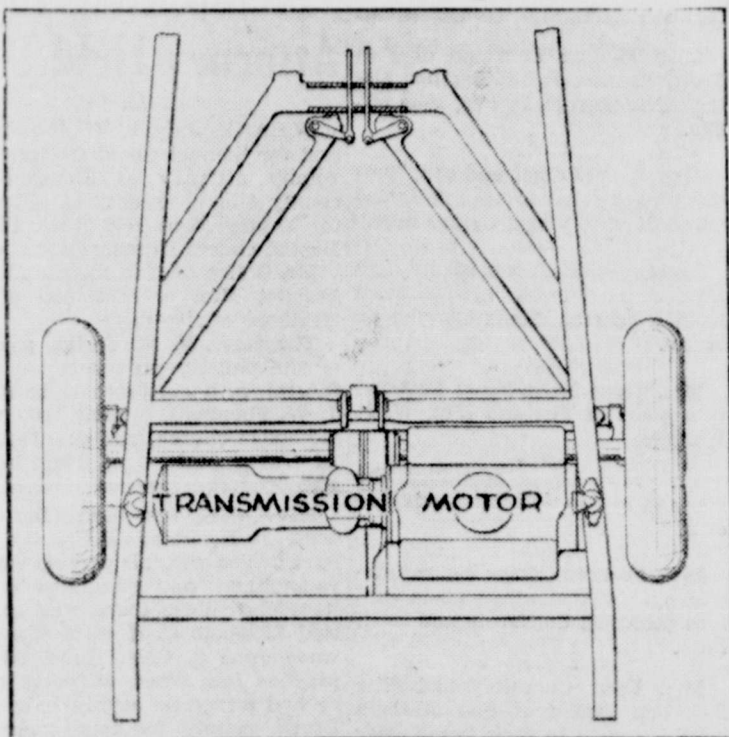

The general opinion of neutral observers seems to be that Austrians if called to the polls today, would by a great majority vote again for Hitler, despite numerous unpopular measures which Nazi rule has introduced.

Despite the innovations, the Viennese have not lost their good-natured spirit. They do not hesitate to hit back with jokes which sometimes should not be told too loudly.

Example: By a new city law, dogs in Vienna will be permitted on the street without muzzles. Why? Because the muzzles are needed for the people now.

Another one: There are no gas masks in Germany which would fit Austrians because, since Anschluss, Austrian faces are getting longer every day.

Ford Patents Rear-Engined Auto

Henry Ford's latest idea for moving forward in the auto industry is to move the engine backward. This drawing, submitted with Ford's application for a patent, shows the compact arrangement of a V-type, eight-cylinder motor with transmission, differential and other mechanical parts assembled over the rear axle. The arrangement is designed to provide a more direct drive from engine to wheels and permit a more unobstructed view of the road.

ROCKY FORD, Colo., July 13 (AP)—The early Spanish map-makers had this name for the stream that flows into the Arkansas river just east of Las Animas: El Rio de las Animas Perdidas en Purgatorio, which means "The River of the Souls Lost in Purgatory." Apparently there wasn't enough room on later maps for that many words so now it is called the Picketwire.

OKLAHOMA CITY, July 13 (AP)—When the rear tire of a city truck blew out on a downtown street it hurled the two retaining rims 20 feet across the sidewalk, through a show window and against the back wall of a store, 60 feet from the door.
