Democratic Candidates in 6 States Launch Final Drives

WASHINGTON, July 26 (AP)—Senator Sheppard (D-Tex) threatened today to make public names of senatorial candidates failing to report expenses to the campaign expenditures committee.

"If the candidate refuses, the people should know," he said. "Less than one-third of the candidates have filed accounting."

The committee meets tomorrow to consider complaints of improper political practices in seven states: Kentucky, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Illinois, Missouri, Georgia and North Dakota.

Democratic candidates in six states launched their final campaigns this week before primaries testing the president's party leadership and their own vote-drawing power.

On August 2, Kansas, Missouri, Virginia and West Virginia will vote and Tennessee will follow on the Fourth. Kentucky's election will be August 6.

The issues are principally new deal issues particularly in Kentucky (Barkley) and Missouri, while in Tennessee the highlight will be state party control.

O'Daniel Not to Take Sides in Local Campaigns

FORT WORTH, July 26 (AP)—Run-off candidates in state and county offices expecting a friendly gesture from W. Lee O'Daniel are doomed to disappointment.

He announced today his policy was not taking sides. He explained he was going on a vacation and had no desire to inject himself in local campaigns.

He sidetracked the request of the Arkansas gubernatorial nominee W. S. McNutt to bring his Hill Billy boys and come to his aid in the primary race.

He received congratulations from Thompson, Hunter and hundreds of others.

JCC WINS 1ST PLAYOFF TILT

Ninth-Inning Single Is Deciding Factor

Jaycees, with Carter pitching six hit ball, eked out a 5 to 4 victory over Red Front in the first game of their three-game playoff series last night when Aycock got his only hit of the game to drive home Jones, who had reached first on his third hit in the last of the ninth with the winning run.

Darrell Tully for the losers pitched good ball, allowing nine scattered hits, but errors at bad times hurt him.

The game was a thriller all the way, with the crowd showing as much enthusiasm as has been seen at a league game this season. Red Front opened the game with two runs, held the lead until the third, and Jaycees bunched three hits to go into the lead 3-2. The winners added another to their total in the seventh and Red Front entered the first of the ninth trailing two runs. A hit and an error placed runners on second and third and Tully came up with his second hit to drive both in, tying the score. JCC then took the bat and Aycock's hit, with two men down, broke up the contest.

The same two teams will meet again Wednesday night in the second game of the playoff. If Jaycees lose, the third and deciding game will be played Friday night.

Annual T&P Outing at Lake Saturday

Between 500 and 600 officials, employees, their families and guests are expected to jam Lake Cisco Saturday for the annual celebration of the Texas and Pacific Coal and Oil company, central Texas area division.

Officials have conferred with Manager P. G. Berry and festivities will begin Saturday morning and will be climaxed late Saturday afternoon with a barbecue.

During the day the group will golf, boat, fish, swim, skate and enjoy the fellowship of gathering with old friends over the district and making new ones.

Last year the company held its first outing at Lake Cisco. Several hundred were present and the crowd had an enjoyable day, with the company furnishing plenty of free soda pop, cats, and free tickets to the swimming pool and skating rink.

The event is planned by the officials and is given as a treat to the employees.

Pitcairn Island Is Believed in Panic

NEW YORK, July 26 (AP)—Pitcairn Island today was isolated from the rest of the world.

The operator cabled British authorities to rush immediate aid.

25 ATTENDING ENCAMPMENT

75 Expected to Attend Retreat Wednesday

The Methodist young people's encampment at Lake Cisco opened Monday night with approximately 25 registered. Attendance was cut considerably because of heavy rains the past week and threats of rain during the day yesterday.

The young people represent practically every church in the Cisco district.

Although the registration is short of what was expected it was believed that several others would register today.

Wednesday will be the highlight of the camp. On that day an expected attendance of 75 young people and other visitors are due at the camp for a retreat. A full day's program has been planned.

The camp is scheduled to end Friday.

The Rev. G. Alford Brown, pastor of the First Methodist church of Ranger, spoke at the opening vesper service last night. The Rev. Hugh S. Porter of the Rising Star Methodist church is general supervisor, assisted by the Rev. Joe I. Patterson and the Rev. M. H. Applewhite. Others who are assisting with the young people are Mrs. Walter Vanderpool of Breckenridge and Misses Laura Faye Wilson and Marian Chambliss of Cisco.

The camp, titled "Christian Adventure Camp," offers worship in the morning and various handicrafts for both boys and girls in the afternoon, along with a complete recreational program.

COLORADO IS REPORTED TO BE FALLING

Damage Expected to Total Millions of Dollars in Section

(By Associated Press) Sunshine, the first in a week, today warmed the flood section. The streams had receded and dissipated the six-day flood situation.

At Austin the situation was ominous last night with the Colorado river reported falling. It was not expected to be materially affected by upstream floodwaters.

In the Bend community the stream was at a standstill. The residents were safe.

The Red Cross is caring for 200 refugees at San Saba. City residences are flooded and about half of them are washed away.

Total damage in the ravaged section was expected to reach several million dollars. Much of it is livestock and crops.

Farmers in the lower reaches of the Colorado, near Houston, were apprehensive as the river rose steadily. They feared heavy loss to their crops.

Policeman Foils Attempt to Break into Gas Office

Two unidentified men last night were foiled in an attempt to break into the back of the Cisco Gas corporation, local police disclosed today.

According to police, Night Chief F. D. Pierce, in making his rounds about 10:30 last night, discovered the two men attempting the burglary and started to arrest them. They escaped and ran down the alley to the front of the Eppler house and across the front porch there. Pierce fired at them as they fled, but they escaped.

His Job Is Going to be Governor of Texas Lee O'Daniel Says

FORT WORTH, July 26 (AP)—W. Lee O'Daniel and his "Hill Billy" orchestra have been deluged with offers of theater and hotel dance engagements.

The offers have come by telephone, telegraph, mail and personal representation, but they haven't gotten anywhere. O'Daniel has turned them all down.

"My job is going to be governor of Texas," he said. The "Hill Billy Boys," a seven-member orchestra which includes his two sons, Pat and Mike, traveled with O'Daniel on his sensational campaign for the governorship.

of the candidates who had faded into the run-off in a race, sank into a chair in a editorial office this morning with a sigh: "It's a hard but you get a lot of experience even if you are beaten."

candidate faces an even race and he probably will have considerable more experience, as he said, it ought to be a bit.

game of politics is an exciting game. Fortunately, for those who are defeated, the outpouring of the voting is not taken as a personal matter. Candidates are liked personally than their opponents, often are the losers, and are curious of public opinion.

of personal consideration is often responsible for the results.

there is one valuable thing in the course of a political campaign and that is a teaching in the art of getting along with people. The candidate has to follow a lot of his pride, view his stock of himself and view himself exactly as he is. He has to afford to kid himself or let his emotions, particularly in that respect a political campaign puts a sober government on a person and trains him in self control.

you take notice of men and women who have completed long years in politics you will discover the benefits of the training they have received in this direction. Most of them conform to the habits of personal conduct which were in office and their personality.

VOTE RESULT IS UNCHANGED

Eddleman and Honea in Run-off

Complete unofficial returns to the county democratic executive committee from the first primary voting in Eastland county Saturday did not substantially change the standings in returns tabulated Saturday night with the exception that a run-off in the contest for constable of the Cisco precinct was indicated.

In that race W. W. (Sheeny) Eddleman, incumbent, received 785 votes while his nearest rival, J. J. Honea, received 655. Roy Ballard received 158 votes, so that Eddleman lacked 28 votes of receiving a majority on the basis of unofficial returns and will oppose Honea in the second primary for the nomination.

Burkett, Sellers Survive

Omar Burkett, Cisco entrant in the race for representative from the 107th district, comprising Eastland and Callahan counties, received 2,658 votes, the unofficial tabulation shows, as compared to 2,338 for Wayne Sellers of Rising Star, and 1,145 for Tip Ross, incumbent. In Callahan county voting Burkett and Sellers practically tied, while Ross trailed them, placing the former two in a run-off.

The only other race which will go into the run-off is that for the district clerk, in which John Wood and Claude (Curly) Maynard will be opposed. White received 3,210 votes to lead the ticket and Maynard 2,163. Euell Bond received 1,700 votes for third place.

Lotief Defeated

Lewis Crossley defeated Cecil Lotief for representative from the 106th district, comprised of Eastland county alone, with 4,217 votes to 2,795. Sheriff Loss Woods was victor.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and He shall sustain thee. . . . Be of peace.—Ps. IV, 22, 23.

Speak, Lord, for Thy servant heareth; Speak peace to my anxious soul, And help me to feel that all my ways Are under Thy control; That He who cares for the lily And feeds the sparrow's fall, Shall tenderly lead His loving child, For He made and loveth all.

Looking to Jesus, and fellowship with Him, will make hard things easy, bitter things sweet, and painful things pleasant.

He Gave Children the Opportunity to Live

THE public playground is so common a feature of the modern city that it is hard to realize that it is still a fairly youthful institution. It is actually only a little more than one generation since the first playgrounds were established.

This is called to mind by the fact that July 25 has been designated "National Joseph Lee Day" by the National Recreation association, with the indorsement of President Roosevelt. And if you don't know who Joseph Lee was, it might be worth your while to find out.

JOSEPH LEE was a wealthy Bostonian, the son of an aristocratic banker. Graduating from Harvard in the 1860's, he decided that he had all the money he would ever need and that he would devote his life and his fortune to the promotion of play and recreation.

He came to this decision in an odd way. He read in his paper, one day, about a group of Bostonian boys being arrested for playing in the streets. It was an every-day occurrence, of course; but, as he said, "To me it was as if those boys had been arrested for living." So he decided to do something about it.

Do something he did; and that "something" was a driving, unceasing campaign to persuade people to provide play space for children. He made an elaborate study of the causes of juvenile delinquency, helped develop a model playground in Boston, helped to organize the Playground Association of America, devoted years of his life to its service—and, all in all, gave some $360,000 of his own money to further the cause.

It would be a great exaggeration, of course, to say that Joseph Lee was solely responsible for the development of the public playground. But it is indisputable that he was responsible in a very large part, and that a great many thousands of children have had decent room to play in which they would not have had if Joseph Lee had not lived.

WE don't build monuments to men like that, or devote whole chapters of our history books to them. It might be a good thing if we did. For Joseph Lee's capacity for getting indignant over wrongs which were done—not to himself, but to other people—is one of the finest and most valuable traits the human race develops.

The industrial city of the late nineteenth century, with few parks and no playgrounds, with mile on mile of congested housing, inflicted a very great wrong on millions of people. It wasn't, directly, any of Joseph Lee's business; but because he had that priceless capacity for getting mad over somebody else's troubles, he made it his business—and did a great deal to right the wrong.

There are still, heaven knows, plenty of similar wrongs to be righted. They will get righted only as we develop and exercise that same capacity for selfless indignation.

America, it is disclosed, sends 41 million false teeth abroad every year — to enable European politicians to send back 41 million false political doctrines.

A device has been invented which rolls the dice automatically when you whistle. A thing like that's no good these dog days unless it does the whistling, too.

Man About Manhattan

By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK —Although I admire Walt Disney more than any man in Hollywood I decided not to attend his party at Music Hall the other day. It was quite an affair and I knew beforehand that it probably would be the most important press reception of the year.

But attending parties for Disney nowadays is like going to Gettysburg to hear Roosevelt make a July 4th address. I mean if you are lucky you may glimpse the great man at a distance, but with everybody else having the same idea you'd never get closer than 100 yards.

And that's how the Disney reception turned out. Some 300 writers, celebrities, and friends of Mr. W. G. Van Schmus, who as Disney's host, crowded into the luxurious reception rooms above Music Hall. Herbert Bayard Swope was there, J. P. McAvoy, the writer, was there, License Commissioner Moss, the man who killed burlesque on Broadway, was there. One could fill a column with names of the great and the fear-great who crowded in to see Disney.

Later, that is to say about 9 p. m., a colleague of mine came bounding into the office with the cry: "Well, I saw Disney. I almost got within 20 feet of him." He then proceeded to narrate an interesting eye-witness account of all that had transpired. Disney himself wore a double-breasted suit with a flower in his lapel, tie, handkerchief, and socks to match. It is his opinion that the creator of Snow White, while definitely friendly, is a little on the retiring side, a little shy, a little confused by the hubbub his presence always seems to create.

He was, naturally, monopolized by the celebrities, who claimed him for their own so that one had literally to thrust one's presence upon him if one wished to avoid being left to flounder in the welter of party-goers who descended upon Music Hall for the fête. For at no time was Mr. Disney permitted to mingle freely with his guests. Most of the time he was hemmed against a wall like a white whale on exhibition for the edification of the mob. And I fancy his paw is still bruised and his larynx still strained from clapping anonymous hands and murmuring over and over, though always politely, "I'm so glad to know you."

From what my friend tells me of the entertainment I think Mr. Van Schmus deserves more than an accolade. All during the party a continuous succession of Disney films was projected upon a screen in an adjacent room. And if one grew weary of sandwiches and cocktails, of which there was an extravagant selection, you could always lose yourself in the enchantment of Mickey Mouse.

And so it is probable that I outsmarted myself by remaining away from Mr. Disney's party. I wouldn't have stood a Chinaman's chance of really talking with him, I know. But at least I could have caught up on some of my Disney movies. And that would have made it unanimous. For I am probably the only man in New York who never saw "Three Little Pigs."

Long Flight Claimed For Model Airplane

WINNIPEG, July 26 (AP)—Don McLeod of Winnipeg claimed the world's record for continuous flight by a model airplane after his little craft was found 35 miles from here. A year ago the 22-year-old fan watched it disappear while flying strongly at a height of 4,000 feet.

The model weighed seven pounds and was driven by a one-fifth horsepower gasoline engine.

Half-Way-Around-the-World Flight

About Our Friends

By STEPHEN A. LONG

Many marvel at the landslide that seems to have placed W. Lee O'Daniel in the governor's chair to guide the political destinies of the state for a season—perhaps more . . .

But it shows how people feel regarding political matters but yet more significant it shows that people love and admire a man who brings God into his talks as this man has done during the past years of his radio activity . . . Many times he has brought religious advice into his chats on flour and those who sell it over the country . . . And he didn't forget to take his family to church in the downtown Sunday . . .

Sometimes we think the world is becoming wayward and is forgetting God, but it is only outward . . . deep down in their innermost souls they admire the man who takes his Creator into his business dealings and seeks guidance in his contacts with men . . .

And then we are reminded that sin and crime never pay . . . one always loses if one follows that path for long . . .

Crime is the poorest paid profession in the world. Measured by all those tests which the world applies to success the criminal never gets his share.

Search the records of a nation and you will scarcely find a professional criminal who has died rich—considerable sums of money may pass through his hands but he seldom gets much benefit out of it . . . Lawyers, police fees, court costs, protection, political pull, witnesses, betrayals and get-aways cost too much . . . The overhead is excessive considering the profits of the gain . . .

The criminal walks through life a lonely man . . . he seldom if ever has more than one or two pals he can trust. He looks with apprehension into the face of every man he meets, lest he be an officer in some new guise . . .

He lives in daily company of fear . . . fear of detection, fear of apprehension, fear of frame-ups, faked charges, double crosses, stool pigeons and other gunmen.

His money buys less than that of an honest man . . . he is the prey of every culture who wants a share of his filthy spoils . . . He cannot go into court and get redress for his wrongs—no one to assure him of a square deal . . . in the land of the free he is a chained man . . . he gets only such justice as he is able to command by fear or the reputation of his trigger finger. He rarely has a home and family. He knows little or nothing of the thrill that comes from having little children running to meet him at the close of the day's work and swinging around his neck with love and caresses . . . If he has a wife he scarcely dares appear in a public place in her company . . .

The James boys, the Daltons, the Dillinger's seemed to have lead spectacular lives and they have been imitated and will still be imitated by boys caught by the glamor of such adventures of glory . . . But they forget the nights that these men slept in garages or under sidewalks like a hunted rat . . . They do not understand that these men were unable to even visit their sweethearts or families if they had any, because of the watchful eye of the law . . . It is true that they sometimes drove fast cars, stolen from someone, but they could not sleep two successive nights in the same place and dared not present themselves at a reputable hotel and ask for accommodations even though they might have a small fortune in their pockets . . .

The criminal gets his picture in the paper only that honest men may identify him and shun him, or perhaps deliver him over to the law . . . And in the long run he runs afoul of the law . . . few criminals are able to elude the law for long at a time . . . and then death in the chair or a long term behind steel bars at hard labor . . . Surely there is little glamor in such a life and verily the way of the criminal is poorly paid . . .

Let us hope that no Cisco boys choose that kind of profession, but rather look to the example as set by good, honest men who do not forget to take their Creator into their life's profession with them.

Employment in Texas During June Increases

AUSTIN, July 26—Employment in Texas industry and trade during June was moderately above that of the preceding month but substantially below that of June, 1937, according to the University of Texas bureau of business research. Pay rolls were down considerably both in comparison with May and June a year ago.

Reports from 2,791 Texas establishments show total employment up 0.2 per cent from May but down 5 per cent from June last year; while pay rolls were down 2.2 per cent from May and 5.8 per cent from June a year ago, the bureau's statement said.

Employment in 679 manufacturing establishments was up 0.6 per cent from May but down 11.5 per cent from June last year; while pay rolls in these establishments were down 2.9 per cent from May and 8.4 per cent from June a year ago.

Industries making better than average showing were: Baking goods, beverages, ice manufacturing, meat packing, paper products, public utilities, crude petroleum production, dyeing and cleaning and laundries.

Game wardens in south Texas report the 1933 season was one of the best breeding seasons for birds in six years.

It Takes Money to Fight Crickets

ELKO, Nev., July 26 (AP)—More money will be necessary if Nevada crops are to be protected from the 1938 cricket plague, Lee Burge, state supervisor, reports.

By use of chemical dusting and galvanized iron fences several threatened areas have been effectively protected, he says, but funds have not permitted adequate control in less important agricultural sections. Boston occupies about square miles.

THANKS

I wish to take this means of expressing my appreciation to the voters of Eastland County for the nice plurality given me in the first primary.

Since no candidate in the District Clerk's race received a majority of all votes cast, there must be a run-off, and I wish to take this method of soliciting your continued support in the second primary.

I feel that the plurality you gave me in the first primary was a vote of confidence for the way I have conducted the County Treasurer's office during my administration of the affairs of that office, and I appreciate this very much and promise you that if you promote me to the District Clerk's office that you will never have cause to regret it.

Please bear in mind that I am asking for a promotion based on my record as your county official.

Again expressing my appreciation to you, I beg to remain,

JOHN WHITE

SERIAL STORY MYSTERY AT THE LAZY R BY CLARKE NEWLON

COPYRIGHT, 1938
NEA SERVICE, INC.

over the obvious lack of everyday common sense of the tenderfoot. Nikki thought, as she slid a blue-jeaned right leg over the deep, comfortable western saddle, that she knew every foot of the ranch within ten miles of the house but after leaving that lenient circle she wouldn't much blame anyone for getting lost. The country lay in great rolling, timber-frosted slopes that climbed on one side to the heights of the Big Horn mountains and leveled off irregularly on the other to the Big Horn canyon, so deep and steeply sided that once in it men had to stay there, following its course into Montana.

In the mountains were elk and antelope and deer, and an occasional sniffling, clumsy-footed bear. Nikki could see the towering Cloud Peak and knew that below it lay Ten Sleep canyon, while in the other direction were the ancient dinosaur beds of another age.

She was surrounded, though at some distance, by the sites of famous pioneer battles, where men had fought the red race in the advance westward—the Dull Knife battleground of 1876, and the Captain Bates battleground of 1874, the Wagon Box Fight of 1867 and the Fetterman Massacre of 1866.

Nikki followed the creek for two miles along its willow-fringed course and then turned off, circled a rock-dotted hill and started back through a wide valley which led straight to the ranch.

She had been on the back trail only a few minutes when she saw a cantering horseman approach and long before the horses

whinnied a greeting, she knew the rider was Bancroft. She was amazed at the way this obviously city-bred man handled his horse and remarked on his riding skill when he pulled up at her side, turned and started back with her.

"I wanted to be a jockey once," he said briefly, "but that didn't last long." He looked at Nikki in appreciation. She was wearing a soft white shirt, open at the throat, and a blue neckerchief that heightened the color of her eyes. Her boots were in high-heeled cowboy style, slightly slouching ease that comes from miles spent on the back of a swaying horse.

They rode in silence for a moment as the trail narrowed and forced Bancroft into a position back of Nikki. She was thinking: I wonder if Sarto shot at Fiske last night or if Fiske shot at Sarto. But who is Fiske and what is his part in this strange game? Maybe, she thought, he's after the $100,000. Then Bancroft spoke.

"Will you be at the ranch long?" Nikki answered carefully. "We haven't set any definite time. Two weeks, three or maybe a month. New York isn't much fun at this time of year."

"You'll return to New York, I suppose, when you leave here?" Nikki wondered what he was getting at.

"Yes, we'll return to New York," she replied. "My father is there, you know." Bancroft said nothing and Nikki continued, casually.

"I wonder if you don't know my father, Peter Jerome?"

"Peter Jerome," repeated Bancroft. "That's certainly a familiar name. Jerome Inc. Fifth Avenue?"

"Yes," said Nikki. "I suppose everyone knows of Peter Jerome by name at least," said Bancroft and his face and voice were as expressionless as ever. "But if you don't mind, I'm much more interested in his daughter right now."

Nikki did mind but there was nothing much she could do about it.

"Are you?"

"I know," continued Bancroft. "that you're engaged to young Mallory. But I wonder if I couldn't see you in New York when we both get back?"

"I'm afraid I shall be pretty busy," said Nikki, "and Steve . . ."

"I think Mallory could spare you some of the time," said Bancroft.

and that undefinable chill crept into his tone. "Mallory might be made to understand that it would be . . ." he caught himself up abruptly and Nikki's hands tightened. Bancroft laughed unpleasantly.

"I'll call you when we get back," he said, and at that moment Steve rode up, nodded and would have ridden on by but for Nikki's call.

"Oh, Steve," she said. She hunted desperately for a moment for an excuse. "Come on and ride back with us. Woody told me about a deep hole above the lake where there's a whale of a trout. He's the great-grandfather of the river. Let's go up and see if we can get a rise out of him. He's been hooked twice in the last three years, but no one has ever been able to hold him."

Steve looked at her a little oddly, but pulled about and joined the easy, jogging pace back to the ranch house. Bancroft spoke sarcastically.

"I haven't seen you much since we met on the train Mallory. You find ranch life good for your nerves?"

"My nerves are all right," said Steve shortly, "and my conscience doesn't bother me either."

"And what do you mean by that?" Bancroft's voice was purring softly, now.

"Make what you want out of it," said Steve. "It was your question. I just answered it." Here I am in the middle again, thought Nikki. She raised her quirt.

"Come on, let's race back to the ranch." Uncle Jim, she knew, would raise the dickens with her for racing, but she let the quirt drop smartly on Steve's horse and kicked her own into a run. Before Steve regained his balance they were at the corrals and Bancroft was far in the rear.

They reined in their horses and got off as Aunt Amy came to the back door and called:

"There's a letter here from your father, Nikki!"

She hurried up to the house, took the letter and went upstairs to her room. Thank heavens for that letter. It would explain her father's note on the train, explain the Dillon-Bancroft mystery and explain the stacks of currency in the dressing case. Now she could tell Steve and things would be right between them again.

She walked over to the window and tore open the letter.

A study made of the labor done by a farm housewife over a period of 30 years showed that she prepared approximately 235,425 meals. The labor cost at $.15 a meal would be over $35,000.

FORGETS EQUIPMENT
ESTES PARK, Colo., July 26 (AP)—A psychology instructor from Pittsburgh camped for several days in Estes Park, then moved to Wyoming. When he arrived there he discovered he had forgotten his entire camping equipment, leaving it set up in Estes park.

CHAPTER V
Nikki followed the creek for two miles along its willow-fringed course and then turned off, circled a rock-dotted hill and started back through a wide valley which led straight to the ranch.

She had been on the back trail only a few minutes when she saw a cantering horseman approach and long before the horses

whinnied a greeting, she knew the rider was Bancroft. She was amazed at the way this obviously city-bred man handled his horse and remarked on his riding skill when he pulled up at her side, turned and started back with her.

"I wanted to be a jockey once," he said briefly, "but that didn't last long." He looked at Nikki in appreciation. She was wearing a soft white shirt, open at the throat, and a blue neckerchief that heightened the color of her eyes. Her boots were in high-heeled cowboy style, slightly slouching ease that comes from miles spent on the back of a swaying horse.

They rode in silence for a moment as the trail narrowed and forced Bancroft into a position back of Nikki. She was thinking: I wonder if Sarto shot at Fiske last night or if Fiske shot at Sarto. But who is Fiske and what is his part in this strange game? Maybe, she thought, he's after the $100,000. Then Bancroft spoke.

Old Faithful, Other Geysers Going Haywire

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo., July 26 (P)—It must be the weather, say the rangers, for there's no other way of explaining why Yellowstone's geysers should go haywire.

Old Faithful which has been erupting on train-like schedule for so long that the rangers set their watches by it, is almost a minute behind time. It spouts every 1.57 minutes now, instead of every 1.7 minutes.

Rainbow and Congress pools, normally quiet and colorful little bodies of water, suddenly have turned into spouting whirlpools. Their vicious torrents have washed away the walks which were constructed so that tourists might get a glimpse of the placid waters.

Rainbow is spouting 60 feet into the air; Congress is tossing out a water spout of almost pure mud. It has drifted over the highways and fences and has covered them with gray powder.

Ledge Geyser is erupting every hour. Heretofore its spoutings couldn't be predicted at all. Its neighbor, The Valentine, was as dependable as a 10-year-old work horse. Now it shoots any time.

The famed Old Whirligig has given birth to a new Little Whirligig which erupts to a height of from 10 to 12 feet every 20 seconds.

Beet Developed to Beat Disease

BRAWLEY, Calif., July 26 (P)—Imperial Valley farmers, thwarted by plant disease in their first attempt to raise sugar beets, will dig up a 120,000 ton crop this year.

Six thousand acres of Imperial Valley, the largest irrigated area in the nation, are now under sugar beet cultivation.

The Valley's farmers attempted to raise sugar beets ten years ago, but lost the crop through disease. Through experimentation, a beet was obtained that is resistant to the disease which wiped out the earlier crop.

FDR III PHILADELPHIA, July 26 (P)—The president's newest grandson will be named Franklin Delano Roosevelt III.

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 1) sonalities are, on the whole, pleasing. Such training is valuable in everyday life. It enables them to meet and influence people and to inspire liking in others.

So those candidates who went down to defeat in the first primary campaigns may gain some consolation from an experience that, although probably costly in money and time, will be worth much to them in other pursuits provided they take advantage of it.

"Skipper" and Mrs. J. W. Thomas are having a lovely time in a cool and beautiful country, according to a card just received and mailed at Colorado Springs, Colo., where they have gone to spend several weeks. "Come up and spend a few days in this beautiful cool country and you won't be so grouchy. It's mighty nice," writes Skipper.

I didn't know I was grouchy. Maybe I am. None of us knows very well what is wrong with ourselves and it is a good thing for some frank and outspoken friend to take us down a notch or so. "Skipper" must have read about this W. Lee O'Daniel business just before he wrote that card.

Vote Result---

T. C. Williams of Cisco defeated Claiborne Eldridge, incumbent, in the race for county school superintendent, 3,766 to 3,281.

Garland Branton of Rising Star gained a clear majority over two opponents in the race for county treasurer with 3,879 votes to 2,033 for Mrs. Frances Cooper and 1,193 for W. O. (Dick) Weekes.

Earl Conner, Jr., was unopposed for re-election as district attorney. He received 7,057 votes. Likewise in the county judge's race W. S. Adamson was unopposed for re-election, in the county clerk's race R. V. (Rip) Galloway was re-elected without opposition and C. H. (Har) O'Brien was without opposition for re-election as county assessor-collector.

Adamson received 7,070 votes; Galloway, 7,093 and O'Brien, 7,176. In commissioner's precinct No. 4 Arch Bint was re-elected over J. W. (Jess) Nobles with 1,064 votes to Mr. Nobles' 544.

Mrs. J. W. Worsham and son of Kennedy, Texas, are the guests of Mrs. Worsham's parents, Dr. and Mrs. Lee Clark.
