Love in Jail Doesn't Pan Out

Love laughed at locksmiths, but Dan Cupid wept over the broken romance of Lula Belle Kimel, daughter of the Lexington, N. C., jail keeper, shown here as she sat dejectedly in court where she was sentenced to 60 days in jail. Lula handed over the keys to her father's jail to a convict who said he loved her. The escaped prisoner, James Godwin, was captured.

POLICE SEEK MURDERER OF MARY COYLE

Eight - State Alarm Is Sent Out For Blood-Stained Automobile

LARCHMONT, New York, Oct. 12 (AP)—An eight - state alarm for a blood-stained automobile was being broadcast by police today in their quest for the slayer of 17-year-old Mary Coyle, Parochial school graduate, whose bludgeoned, ravished body was found yesterday behind a theater. Police organized the most intensive search since the kidnap-slaying of Peter Levine last spring. Mary, pledged to become a nun, was believed by police to have met her death at the hands of someone she knew and trusted. She was quiet and studious and never went out with boys.

Midgets Tackle Powerful Baird Eleven Thursday

The Cisco grammar school midgets encounter the strong Baird grammar eleven Thursday afternoon at 3 in Baird, it was announced today by Principal C. J. Turner. The Baird aggregation has made a very impressive showing thus far this year with top-heavy victories over Travis ward school of Abilene and Clyde ward school. The midgets have also made a good record in their only two games, tying Moran 7-7 in the first and defeating the strong Brownwood grammar team 12-6 in the second. Indications point to one of the hardest fought encounters in some time and Cisco citizens are urged to go along and support the midgets who during the past several years have made an enviable record deserving of the support of the townspeople.

ACC Sends Invites to West Texas Schools

With these slips signed by a local school official, any high school student or teacher may obtain a free pass to the football game at Morris stadium. In addition to the game, there will be a special chapel program at 10 a. m. Saturday and tours of the campus will be conducted throughout the day. The last "high school day" was attended by 1,100 from 81 high schools of this section.

Director Wishes All Film Players as Smart and Obliging as the Dionne Quintuplets

How five famous little girls reacted when you saw their first real, live puppies, is recorded above by the camera. Jean Hersholt, veteran screen star who plays Dr. Luke in the Quint's forthcoming picture, "Five of a Kind," brought the little red cocker spaniels to the nursery in a big basket.

The quints, who had seen the fluffy little fellows only as pictures in their nursery books were taken aback for a moment, but soon made a rush for the floppy-red pups and gave them quite a mauling. In the picture the quints are, left to right: Yvonne, Emilie, Cecile, Annette, and Marie.

FORT WORTH MAN CRUSHED AND BURNED

Plunges Into Bank Of Ditch Near Harrell Overpass

The body of Clyde Snell, 26, Merchants Fast Motor Lines truck driver who was crushed and burned to death in an accident on Highway 80 three miles west of Cisco early today, was taken to Floydada this morning by Green Funeral home. The body was removed from the charred truck cab shortly after the big six-wheel trailer truck left the highway and plunged straight into the bank of a deep ditch just west of the Harrell crossing overpass and burst into flames. Condition of the body led to the belief that Snell was killed by the impact which literally crushed the cab flat. One of the gasoline tanks of the truck exploded after the impact giving rise to reports that the body had been blown to pieces, which was not true. Funeral services will be held at Floydada. The driver is survived by a wife and an infant. He had been employed by the company for eight months, making his home at Fort Worth.

Cause of the accident was undetermined. The flaming truck was discovered by the driver of a companion truck a few moments after it happened. This truck, preceding the ill-fated carrier, and driven by Slim Harris, also of Fort Worth, had crossed the viaduct and climbed Harrell hill, where, obeying company rules that trucks travelling in pairs must keep in sight of each other, it had stopped to let Snell catch up. Harris glanced back to see the flaming vehicle. Snell, who drove the Fort Worth-Midland route and was on his return trip, had met a west-bound truck of another firm, on the slight curve two hundred yards back. It was believed that the wheels of his heavy trailer left the pavement then and caused an unbalance which forced it from the highway and into the ditch. Company men, however, were not prepared to make any statement.

Pep Rally For Crucial Game Is Tomorrow Night

A pep rally will be held tomorrow night, the night before the Brownwood-Cisco game, with the band and the students officially in charge of generating enthusiasm although the townspeople are strongly urged to attend in support of the team. Students will meet at the high school at 6:45 and march downtown to a place, undetermined as yet, where various business men of the town, who have been issued a special invitation to attend, will be called upon for brief talks. The event will be the most colorful in many seasons and officials issued an urgent appeal to everyone to attend.

Lobo Seconds to Play Mineral Wells "B" 's

The Cisco Lobo "B" team, which showed considerable improvement last week in a game with the Graham "B" squad, will play the Mineral Wells "B" eleven tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock at Chesley field. It will be the third game for the seconds. They lost by a sizeable score to the Olden team in their first game but played the strong Graham team a good game last week, losing in the final period after having led the visitors for three quarters.

'Five of a Kind' Was Just Fun for the Babies

By PAUL HARRISON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent
HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 12—In their third motion picture, "Five of a Kind," the Dionne quintuplets will make their first bows as real actresses. It's not quite the sort of acting other child stars consciously do, explained Director Leeds, because the quints portray themselves and thus behave naturally. "But they behaved according to orders," he said, "and handled their roles exactly as we hoped they could. "Never having seen a movie, except some animated cartoons, they didn't understand the real reason they were acting. I'd work out little pieces of business and tell them what I wanted done and sometimes rehearse them in action. They took direction for two reasons: because they're such obliging kids, without a bit of contrariness in them, and because they thought it was a game." Jean Hersholt and other veterans of 20th-Fox's two previous expeditions to Callander, Ont., give credit to the 28-year-old director for the fact that about four times as much usable film was obtained from this picture, and in record time despite bad weather.

SING IN ENGLISH. THINK IN FRENCH

"Leeds speaks French," said Hersholt, who is "Doctor Luke," "and he found the little girls had a French vocabulary of about 300 words. They know some English, and they even sing a song in English in 'Five of a Kind' but they think in French. "Leeds made everything a game for the quints. When they balked at something he would say, 'If you don't play the game with us, we will have to go home.' And then they'd do whatever he asked them. "Leeds would not do anything to hurt their confidence in us. I remember what a time there was about the puppies. Five little cocker spaniels were sent up from Toronto for the babies to play with (CONTINUED ON PAGE FIVE)

Funeral Services For K. F. Page Held Today

Funeral services for K. F. Page, 41, Eastland oil operator and partner in the Hoffman and Page firm who died early Tuesday night at Eastland following several weeks' illness, were held at 3 o'clock at the first Methodist church in Eastland with the Rev. P. W. Walker, pastor, officiating. Burial was to be in Eastland cemetery. The death of Mr. Page came as a surprise to many since only a few close friends and members of the family knew the serious nature of his illness. He was numbered among the most prominent citizens of Eastland.

Japs Urge Powers Avoid South China

TOKYO, Oct. 12 (AP)—Japan today urged the United States and other powers to "refrain as far as possible from moving troops and warships into south China," in view of the landing of the Japanese expedition, presumably for the drive on Canton. The Japanese asked cooperation in preventing incidents in connection with the south China campaign.

Self-Styled Czar Dies at Paris

PARIS, Oct. 12 (AP)—Grand Duke Cyril, Vladimirovitch, head of the house of Romanoff and a self-proclaimed "czar of all the Russias," died here today. He was 62. He had been seriously ill for two weeks, suffering from gangrene in one leg.

Brownwood-Lobo Game Scheduled to Start at 3:30

Reports that the game with Brownwood here Friday will be played at 3 o'clock instead of 3:30 are wrong, Coach J. T. Petty said today. The error arises from the fact that the time of the Mineral Wells game was changed at the request of the Mineral Wells school officials. Coach Petty pointed out. But the Brownwood game time of 3:30 was not changed and the contest will start at that hour as scheduled. Loss of Chesley Tipton from the team for Friday and possibly for the rest of the season occurred when he suffered an injury in practise this week. Whether or not the Lobo back, who was especially valuable because of his punting, will see further service with the team depends upon how the injury heals, Coach Petty said.

Oil Belt Scoring Headed By Warren

Cisco's chief scoring threat thus far this season seems to be little Coy Warren, 140 pound quarterback, who is leading the Oil Belt in the scoring department with 60 points to his credit, 11 points ahead of Breckenridge's Bill Ramsey and 12 ahead of Billy Houghton of Ranger with whom he was tied last week. Warren broke into the lead by scoring two touchdowns in the game against Mineral Wells Friday. Other leading scorers are Rice and Murphy of Brownwood with 30 apiece; Kimble of Breckenridge and Welch of Stephenville with 24 apiece; and Jake Webster of Sweetwater with 23. Mrs. O. J. Russell is visiting relatives in Baird today.

Both Teams Pointing Crucial Conference Battle

The Cisco Loboes have been put through some of the longest practice sessions of their high school careers this week in their preparation for the strong Brownwood Lions whom they will meet Friday at 3:30. After the disappointing showing against Mineral Wells Coach Petty has decreed that practice sessions be held in secret and it has been well into the night before the boys have left the football field during the past few evenings. Both teams seem to be pointing for the game in a big way and excepting there were no serious injuries to members of either team. The Brownwood eleven seems to have a fairly strong passing attack coupled with a powerful running game and should make the contest plenty exciting with their open type of football. The Loboes on the other hand know they must win this one to stay in the race, and this together with the "grudge" would seem to indicate both teams will fight to the last ditch. No matter what dope the game is figured on it can't be rated anything else than an absolute toss-up with perhaps an extra point, a fumble or a long pass spelling the difference between defeat or victory.

Benes Report Blamed on Funster's Wire

GLASGOW, Oct. 12 (AP)—The Scottish nationalist association believes that a funster faked a telegram saying that former President Benes of Czechoslovakia would be the association's candidate for rectorship of the Glasgow university. After the association announced Benes had accepted the invitation to be its candidate, the Czechoslovak delegation in London issued a denial.

The Loan Shark

ELIMINATION of the loan shark whose parasitical activities are robbing small salaried person in Texas of many hundreds of thousands of dollars is the object of editorial campaigns being conducted by various periodicals and newspapers in Texas where laws governing the practices of such lenders are inadequate. The Texas Weekly recently carried an illuminating series of articles on the activities of these scoundrels, while the Dallas Bar association is reported to have taken steps to assist loan shark victims in securing their legal rights. There have been recurring reports of the usurious practices of loan sharks in Texas but so far nothing has been done to regulate this subterranean breed of business man. The reason seems to lodge in the fact that there is a legitimate and pressing need for sources of credit for small borrowers. Small loans cannot be profitably made at the legal interest rates charged by the banks and except in a few instances do these institutions cater to such loans.

THEREFORE the urgent demand for small loans creates for the loan shark who victimizes his borrowers cruelly and charges interest often amounting to several hundred per cent a reason for existence that even the most earnest efforts at regulation cannot overcome. Until some method of affording small borrowers the loans they require at legitimate rates and in accordance with the legal rights of the borrower, no amount of legislation will stamp out the practice. The methods pursued by the sharks and their tactics effectually conceal them from the public view and discourage revelations by their victims.

Discovery of America as International Villain

THE recent Czech crisis would not have been complete until British newspapers found some way to blame the whole business on Uncle Sam. That moment has finally arrived, and so the whole thing is now official.

According to the magazine Newsweek, an astonishing amount of anti-American sentiment is finding expression in England these days, and it is being argued in London that the Czechs would not have been sold down the river if America had only done its part.

That amazing argument, it seems, goes like this: The British were slow in backing up France because the British were reluctant to commit themselves without assurance of American support. Such assurance not being forthcoming, the British government hedged until Czechoslovakia was signed, sealed, and delivered to the mercies of Hitler. Further, it is added, "Czechoslovakia was Woodrow Wilson's invention anyway," and hence the United States should have borne the chief responsibility.

NOW it may well be that America should have been more active in European affairs in recent years. But it hardly becomes Britons to say so.

If your memory runs back to the early 1930's, you may recall that the first serious blow at the Kellogg treaty, the league covenant, and the rest of the world's peace machinery was struck by Japan, in Manchuria. At that time it was an American secretary of state, Henry L. Stimson, who took the lead in trying to rally the democracies to stop the steal. Mr. Stimson boldly took his country out on a limb in his effort to stop the Japanese, trusting that the British—whose interests in the Orient were far greater than America's—would back him up as they had promised.

If Stimson's effort had succeeded, the history of the last half-dozen years would probably have been profoundly different. But the effort failed—because, when the pinch came, the British were looking the other way with great steadfastness.

It is important to remember this. For it was the Manchurian invasion that put the world's peace machinery to its first great test. If that machinery had worked then, Mussolini and Hitler would have behaved differently. That it did not work was due solely to the fact that in the pinch the British refused to let it work.

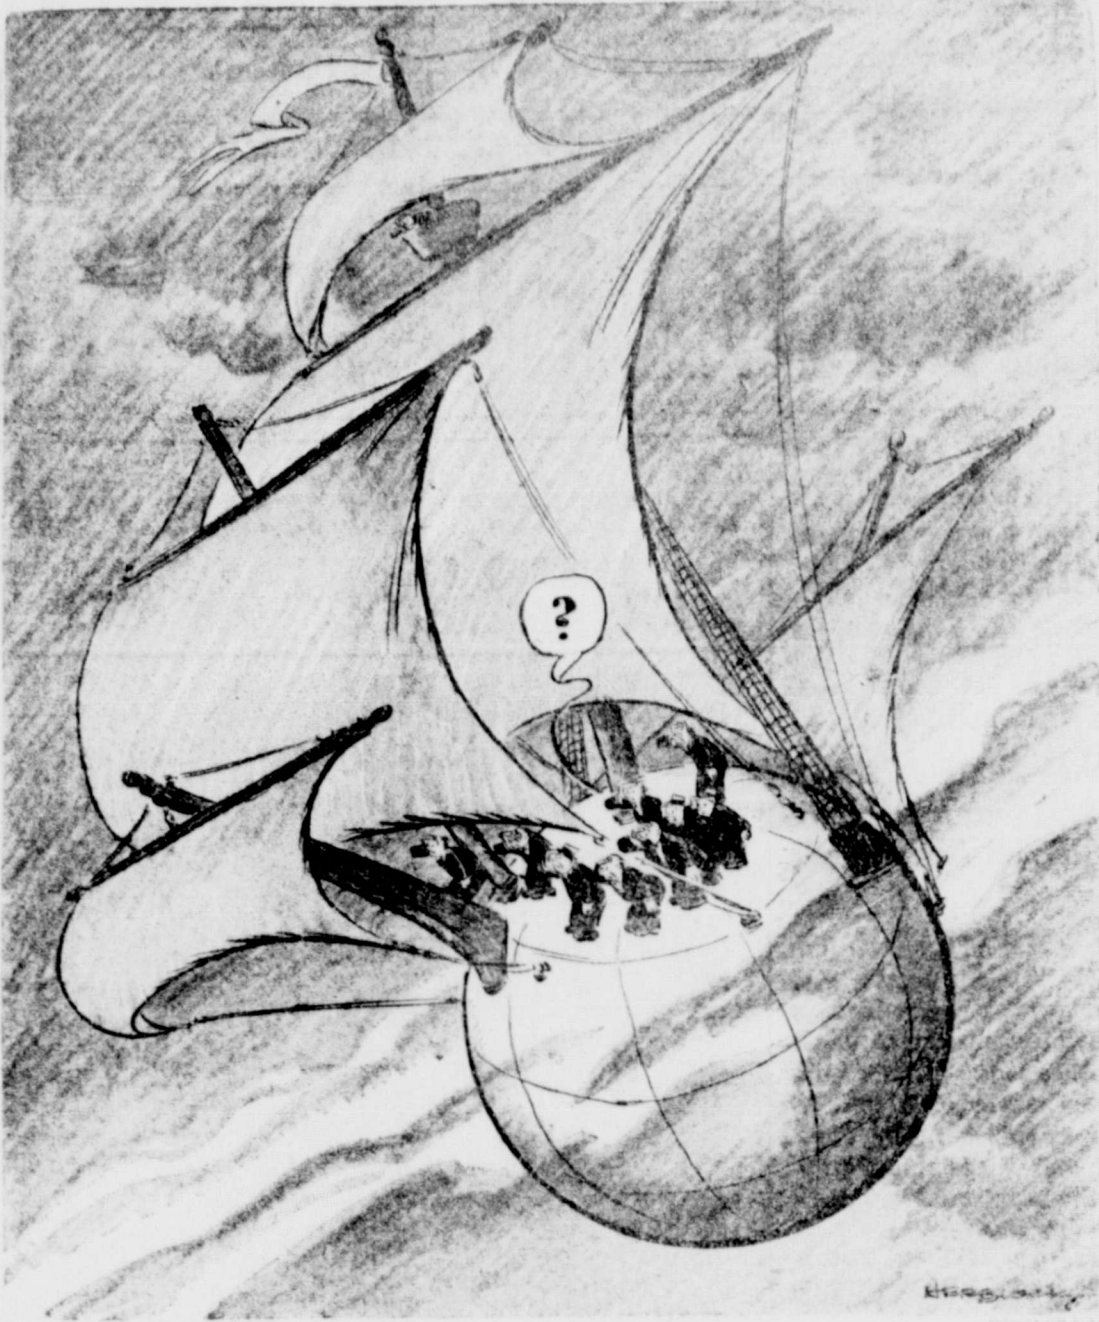

IN the face of that indisputable fact, any Briton who complains that America failed to back up the British government in the Czech crisis is displaying a gall that ought to win medals.

And so to Czechoslovakia being Woodrow Wilson's baby; let it be remembered that Wilson, alone of the allied statesmen, went to Paris without an ax to grind, anxious solely to fabricate a more decent and happier world. It was the British government that campaigned on a "hang the kaiser" platform just before the Versailles conference, thereby making certain that an atmosphere in which a just peace could be created would not exist.

America has a good many things on her conscience, but when it comes to the failure of the world's peace machinery, the bulk of the load must be carried in London.

On the heels of the news that a California farmer grew three lemons as big as pumpkins comes the remark from the direction of Florida that those California pumpkins were never much on size.

Columbus Day --- 1938

Behind The Scenes in Washington

—BY RODNEY DUTCHER—
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12 — The Roosevelt appeal for C. I. O.-A. F. of L. peace hasn't brought it a bit nearer.

There just isn't any peace in sight or even in the wind. The chief reason is that no one can devise a formula by which the two groups can reunite without giving one or the other an upper hand. A. F. of L. leaders would have every reason to expect an end to their control if they took C. I. O.'s millions in on an equal voting footing. C. I. O. leaders are sure many of their unions would be raided and carved up if they joined A. F. of L. on any other basis.

John L. Lewis stands on the assertion that C. I. O. would move into the A. F. of L. "tomorrow" if each C. I. O. unit were promised a charter similar to those of other A. F. of L. unions, with the further provision that jurisdictional disputes be settled by the unions involved.

Unlikelihood of an early merger doesn't mean there's no chance of a cessation of name-calling and warfare between the two groups, as suggested by Mr. Roosevelt. But events at the A. F. of L. convention indicate there's no immediate prospect of that.

Labor's chief victory in recent months has been the success of Sidney Hillman, widely known as "labor's statesman" long before C. I. O. days and Phillip Murray in reconciling the battling factions of the United Automobile Workers. That struggle threatened to damage C. I. O. even more than it has been hurt by the depression and might easily have gummed up the C. I. O. convention scheduled for Pittsburgh Nov. 14.

One important expected result is elimination of both Lovestone Communists behind President Homer Martin and Stalin Communists, who worked with the group of suspended officials now reinstated, from the union's policy-making councils.

When C. I. O. Vice Chairman Hillman and Murray went to Detroit few believed the break between Lewis and Martin over U. A. W. peace terms could be healed. They were threatened with physical violence and gunplay. Arguing with individuals one at a time and supported by rank and file union members interested in union preservation rather than leaders' squabbles, they finally convinced a majority of Martin's board. Martin, isolated, gave over control of the dispute to Murray and Hillman. Lately a united board has been referring all problems and disputes, willingly and gratefully, to the two arbitrators.

Lewis and William Green apparently can't work out a peaceful agreement like that because there's no higher authority to whom they would be willing to

One wouldn't expect the United Mine Workers to have much trouble getting coal to heat their big, handsomely renovated offices here. But there are some problems involved.

First they had to be careful where the coal came from. It must be union mined. Then the question of a fair price came up. Now the difficulty is in getting the coal delivered by union teamsters. Teamsters aren't organized in Washington.

About Our Friends

By STEF A. LONG

Well, folks, we are off to see the new 1939 model Chevrolet today at Fort Worth. Don't know why we are to be herded away at Lake Worth instead of going as usual to Dallas. Had our minds made up to steal away a little while and see the gay sights of the Dallas fair if we went as usual to Dallas headquarters. Perhaps that is the reason they are to entertain us in Fort Worth.

At any rate, we'll find out. We hear that this new car is going to be a knockout. We have to be shown. We venture we wouldn't trade our good '36 for it without a lot of boot. Just a few gadgets, we venture. Of course, until we see it and then it will be too late to cancel the big feed that they are supposed to give the newspaper men for all the publicity they get. So get ready to trade in your old car, folks, Chevrolet tells us that our old cars will be obsolete after this showing. We'll tell you more about it after we get back.

Having executive session at the football field this week, we understand. Those chaps mean business, we believe. And we are glad. We still believe we are going to win that Brownwood game. Don't think there is any better material in the oil belt than we have right here. And we believe there will be plenty of fight in the boys. And that's all we lack to get the place in this year's round robin.

Glad we had this little scare about Brownwood and Ranger. But then we'll get to Ranger at the proper time. Brownwood is the team to defeat next. And it is our candid opinion that any fan who gives points against his home team will come to grief this Friday.

Here are the names of the Lobos and their numbers, according to the roster in our possession. Watch these boys next Friday and if you are not still prouder of them after the game is over, we miss our guess. And Coaches Petty and Garrett are to receive the glory for the training you will see in evidence on that field. Don't stay away from that game thinking you will be humiliated by the outcome. Be sure to be there. Aid the team by your presence and support and we think you will be rewarded by thrills enough for one day. And another game won.

Get acquainted with your team.

How Hitler's Triumph Smashes Little Entente

CARVED out of the face of a generous central Europe, the World War, Central Europe, Yugoslavia, and Rumania are truly their respective liberties the spirit of a score of years ago. Mostly they feared a return to the old regime, the autocratic rule of a Hungarian empire. So they joined together to protect their lives under an alliance known as Little Entente.

They realized at the end of the war that mere military might would not maintain their individual states unless they pursued a general peaceful co-operation with all of Europe. To that end they launched a program to desist their neighbors to the spirit of universal peace and consolidation.

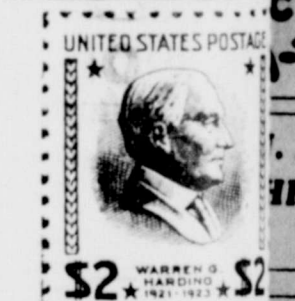

But they had not counted on the rise of an Austria who would one day wipe out the Austro-Hungarian empire, with an even more powerful machine, an entire German march. So today the Little Entente is an idle dream in the face of Hitler's daring "annexation" of Sudetenland and the consequent dismemberment of Czechoslovakia.

But only a year ago the rise of an Austria who would one day wipe out the Austro-Hungarian empire, with an even more powerful machine, an entire German march. How an Ohio Rain Hardening President

THE caprice of nature has whisked many a lasting fame and high-brow witness the career of Warren Harding. Had it not been for Ohio rainstorm he might have become President.

Harding was running Ohio State Senate back in 1912. He was campaigning near Wood when suddenly he was caught in a terrific down-pour. Afterward he was walking mud from the rain-soaked from his shoes at a country house pump when Harding Daugherty stepped up. He gan a friendship that was a quarter of a century later send Harding to the White and Daugherty to the Ohio publisher.

For Daugherty became Harding's Damon and Pythias. They developed an acquaintance and it was Daugherty's keen political strategy of the Chicago convention of 1920 that led to the nomination for the Ohio rain boy and publisher.

Campaigning on an anti-Nations platform, he even dented the "Solid" During his term he called a conference on disarmament. He led the soldier bonus strike. He was elected to the stricken ill on return from Alaska in 1923 and died thereafter. He is shown a stamp of the new U.S. series, enlarged.

Landscape in to Discussed Garden Club

Editor's Note: The following was prepared and read by A. Brown before the Cisco Garden Club at its meeting this afternoon. The subject and its treatment is of great importance and it is printed by the club because of this pertinence.

MRS. N. A. BROWN
very seldom it is that the builder gives the same thought and consideration to his home surroundings that he gives to the interior of his home. Not enter a man's home that we set foot on the property, as generally accepted, we cross the threshold?

There are many important reasons for the careful planning of the grounds and I would lay particular stress on these: The enjoyment of our surroundings, the expression of taste and ability; The enjoyment of the uplift of the community; The economy of execution; The exterior surroundings; and the true beauty of the space. It is possible to score a score of five in the art of landscaping. Among all the arts, none is so varied in its application as that pertaining to gardening. Nothing is more conducive to general carelessness and neglect as ill kept, unutilized and untidy exterior. Nothing more elevating and uplifting than a well arranged and well maintained property with well planned lawns and gardens. The effective co-operation of the architect and the landscaper, and creates an atmosphere of desire in others for the possession of that which is so beautiful and beautiful.

There are several ways to land-our own home grounds. First, we can employ a professional landscaper and architect. Second, we may employ a rough draft or outline of a nurseryman who is familiar with plant materials. So today the landscaper can render splendid service in expending a great deal of money on individual problems. Or, we can landscape our own grounds after having made a careful study of all the problems involved.

are to do our own landscaping, let us first procure a sheet or cross section paper, so that each square may represent a number of feet; for instance, one square may represent 1 or 5 feet of the yard.

Place the cross section paper on a board and draw the outline of the house, locate the house and garage measuring with a yardstick or tape. Next, locate all walks, drives, fences, lily pool, rock garden, flower beds, or other features. It is well to draw in ink all the permanent features to be retained, and to indicate in pencil all objects that need to be removed from the present plan. Mark the direction, north, on the plan so that it will be known which areas are shady and should be planted with perennials and shrubs which tolerate these conditions. Mark the window spaces on the plan, to indicate that low shrubs and evergreens are to be planted here.

The landscape development of the front yard contributes more to the beauty of Cisco than any other factor. But our good old American habit of getting things done quickly often leads us into trouble. We plant too much; we plant too hastily; and we select too many plants that are "loud."

We depend largely on the proper selection and arrangement of the ornamental plantings for the picturesque beauty and grace of the lawn. A first consideration is a good background for the house and, where one does not already exist, plantations of trees should be located that will give this effect as quickly as possible. In such plantings it is advisable to set more trees than will be needed eventually, the principle being that trees planted close together encourage a greater top growth and thus attain height more quickly than trees given ample space for development.

In addition to a suitable background for the house it is essential that the house be properly framed by plantations at both ends. The size and character of this framework will depend largely on the architectural style and dimensions of the house. For small houses, often one tree placed at each end with plantings of low shrubs and evergreens, is quite sufficient. Houses which set close to the ground should have no planting at the base. The grass should extend up to the lines of the porch with group plantings at the corners. When the floor line is just enough above grade to admit of base plantings use plants dwarf in character, with larger growing varieties at the corners. Avoid the planting of anything in front of window openings that will attain a height great enough to interfere with the light. The use of a miscellaneous assortment of evergreens in beds close to the house is very attractive and pleasing. Be sure in getting these dwarf evergreens that they are truly dwarf types, otherwise they will soon outgrow their positions. The spreading Juniper is an excellent example of this type of shrub, and lends itself well to both large and small lawns. The broad-leaved evergreens are splendid for base plantings and will grow easily here. The attractiveness of the foliage in winter recommends them for liberal use in plantings near the house. The spruce and the fir are two lovely specimens for base planting. The lilac, snowball, crepe myrtle, and the mock orange thrive well here. There is not a place where these old-fashioned and greatly loved shrubs may not be used to advantage as a means of ornamentation.

The highest personal note in the art of landscape design is the flower garden, and no scheme of landscape development is complete which does not provide space for a garden. It is in the garden that our individual fancies as to the choice and arrangement of flowers may be indulged. There we may have a profusion of flowers, harmony of color, charm of effect and above all seclusion and restful quiet; for the growing of flowers is indeed the simplest yet the most satisfying of pleasures. Whether we have a formal garden or an informal garden, a rock garden, a wild flower garden—let it express your individuality. The garden should radiate an atmosphere of hospitality, creating a desire to stroll within and enjoy all the wealth of form and fragrance. Here in Cisco, we have as one of our wild flowers, the blue bonnet, Texas state flower. It would be fitting that each individual devote some space to this flower. They are lovely in beds as a border around trees, or as a border along walks. It is a flower which is easily cultivated, and one which presents a picture never to be forgotten. Plant them in a bed by themselves, or combine them with other flowers of brilliant hue—they adopt themselves well to any position. The Yucca is another native plant, ideal for planting beside pools, in rock gardens, at the corners of the house— wherever there is a need of a background, or foundation, upon which to display in season, the various colorful flowering shrubs, the perennials, and the annuals. A perennial border is generous, responsive and colorful from April to December, if properly planned. Cosmos is one of the valuable garden annuals, because it blossoms late and gives tall-growing plants with numerous flowers in September and October. Larkspurs of the annual type are invaluable in the garden for midsummer color. Marigolds are one of the finest edging plants, as is also the verberna, which comes in a world of colors. Small zinnias are delightful border subjects. Stocks are useful plants for color masses and come in all shades of pink, lavender and white. Of all the flowers which make gay our gardens in the summertime, the Iris is one which has the greatest number of interesting species, the one which displays the greatest variety of form and color, and the one which blooms for the longest period. It is called the rainbow flower. Just when the name was given to the flower is lost in the mystery of tradition. The word "Iris" is Greek for rainbow, and in Greek mythology iris is the goddess of the rainbow and one of the messengers of the gods. The iris is refined of substance and growth; yet with enough character in its pointed foliage to give it a place in any garden or border.

Let's consider flower color. Blue lengthens distance and adds depth to shadow. Therefore, if your garden is small and you wish to create a feeling of space have blue flowers predominate. This need not be a monotonous one-color garden—use blue flowers in all their tints and hues, bringing it to life here and there with a contrast-touch of white, pink, or red. To shorten the garden let yellow predominate, especially at the far end—which makes a large space seem more intimate. Use red in the garden as an exclamation point to a sentence. Red flowers planted in the foreground or in front of a mass of dwarf evergreens are a glorious picture. Flowers are as varied and interesting in character as people. Analyze every flower, shrub or tree you plant—then you will be sure of selecting plants in harmony.

In summer, when the whole earth is virtually in flower, the drab dull landscapes of winter are rather difficult to contemplate—but, do you remember last year when you wandered around the lawn, so utterly weary of the endless gray of winter—wishing for just one tiny bloom of color? Turn your thoughts that way now and plan to intersperse your evergreens with shrubs that will enliven your garden, even though the thermometer is hovering around zero. The winter honeysuckle, the japonica, the forsythia, the redbud, and any number of shrubs with bright colored limbs and berries, will make your lawn lovely. The mandina is a shrub that should be included in every winter garden, for it is both useful as well as ornamental. On the lawn it is a very attractive shrub with its bright green leaves and red berries—in the home its leaves and berries may be used in many forms of decoration.

Each home grounds has its own particular problems and solution, but a study of the manner in which the picturesque is attained will give the principles for the naturalistic development of any place. The owner who plans, builds and cultivates beautiful things is a benefactor, and in no channel of thought or activity is there greater or more satisfying response than in the creation of the beautiful in landscape design. The enjoyment of others of our grounds is an opportunity that we should not overlook, for of all pleasures none is to be compared with that which brings joy to the heart of others. Every home in Cisco should contribute toward the enjoyment of others, in some little artistic excellence, and by working together we can and will have, a more beautiful Cisco.

Service check cards for the voluntary comments of Humble customers are available at all Humble Service Stations. Literally thousands of them are received by the Humble Company each year. They tell their own story of Humble service and Humble products. . . . The names of the writers of the cards quoted in this advertisement will be furnished any interested inquirer on request.

Great care is taken to the end that Humble Service Stations will fit the neighborhoods in which they are located. The architecture, while practical and convenient, is not blatantly commercial; lawns are planted and tended; flowers bloom; shrubbery is trimmed; the paint is new and fresh; the bright work shines; driveways are scrubbed.

We go to this great care because we have learned that the Texas motorist appreciates it. He tells us so—voluntarily—on the service check cards with which each station is supplied. The comment above is typical; here are others: Best looking station in Texas . . . Driveway, pumps and restroom clean and sanitary . . . Premises remarkably neat and clean . . . The flowers are wonderful . . . The flowers are lovely . . . Beautiful place . . . We used the lawn for a picnic ground. Thank you . . . An unusual attention to neatness of surroundings.

You, too, will find Humble Service Stations—in your neighborhood or on the highways you travel—the sort of places in which you prefer to do business. Next time—stop for service where you see the Humble sign.

SERIAL STORY
MURDER TO MUSIC

BY NARD JONES

CAST OF CHARACTERS
MYRNA DOMBEY—heroine.
Wife of the sensational swing band leader.

ROBERT TAIT—hero. Newspaper photographer—detective.

ANNE LESTER—Myrna's closest friend.

DANNIE FEELEY—officer assigned to investigate Ludden Dombey's murder.

Yesterday: After hearing Rogers' warning, Tait asks the janitor henceforth to keep everyone out of his apartment and he is surprised to learn that the janitor had let no one in there.

CHAPTER IX

Vaguely troubled, Bob Tait went out into the alley and climbed into the rented coupe. He was certain that the janitor wasn't lying—which meant that Harris Rogers was either Rogers had managed to have a key made which would fit the lock of Tait's apartment, or he had a ring of skeleton keys.

Tait shrugged. There was nothing to be gained in worrying about Harris Rogers now. The manager's reasons for wanting the corpse of Ludden Dombey to stay quiet were good reasons. Good, that is, for Harris Rogers. The thing to worry about now, Tait told himself, was the eventual fate of Myrna.

He turned the car into the street, headed for an arterial which would take him straight to headquarters. Inside the dingy, gray stone building he went at once to Feeley's office. That individual lolled in a deep chair, his feet on his battered desk, a black cigar stuck at an angle in his mouth, and his eyes wandering over the skyline beyond the window.

"Well, well," said Tait jovially. "Is this the way a dynamo of crime detection works?"

Dannie Feeley swung his feet down and turned to regard the newspaper photographer with a fishy eye. "You," he said, and that was all.

"No other, Robert Tait?"

"Sit down," invited the detective. "I want to talk to you."

Bob Tait sat down and smiled at Feeley in what he hoped was a very charming fashion. "Dannie," he said, "I've got Mrs. Ludden Dombey."

Not a flicker of expression went over Feeley's features. "I'm not surprised. And I ought to throw you in the hoosegow. I may yet. Where is she?"

"She'll be here. I'll send her down. But I'd kind of like to know what the set-up is. Will you give her a break?"

For a moment Feeley was silent. He looked out of the window, studied a thin trail of smoke from a streaked brick chimney. Then he returned his attention to Bob Tait. "Listen," he said, "I like you. You've played square with me before, and until somebody proves otherwise, I'll do it again. But you knew we wanted to talk to that girl. What was the idea of making her scarce?"

"I didn't. The fact is, I've been trying to find her all night. The kid is all upset. I had to convince her that she was making a mistake in running away."

Feeley grinned ironically. "That's putting it mildly. I gather, of course, that you don't think she's guilty."

"I'm not an idiot yet, Dannie, although I've been accused of coming close. She may be—but I don't think so. But you can't tell me that you've got enough to convince you that she's guilty?"

"That's why I want to talk to her." He fixed Dannie with a piercing gaze. "This isn't child's play, Bob. And I'm going to put all my cards on the table. I'm on the spot with the chief. The chief is on the spot with the mayor—"

"And the mayor," put in Tait pleasantly, "is on the spot with the public. There's been a wave of crime, and the newspapers are asking why."

"That's it exactly. So I'm not pulling any punches in this Ludden Dombey business. I've got to find out who bumped him off. And there's another thing eating me too. Leonard Macy has showed up again."

"The devil you say!" Tait knew Leonard Macy. He was a wealthy dilettante who interested himself in criminology. Macy was clever, too. He had a good mind and a lot of fancy, expensive crime-detecting equipment. He delighted in nothing more than showing up the police as a lot of blunders.

Feeley nodded. "Sure. He's interested. This kind of thing is his dish. Lots of publicity and all that. I'm telling you, if Macy turns up something important, before we do, it means curtains for me on this job."

Tait took out a cigaret, lighted it carefully. "Then you'd let me help you?"

"I'd be glad for it—if it helps you'd be giving. What makes you think you can?"

"I'm pretty sure I can. But I want to square deal for Mrs. Dombey. I don't want her made a goat because the department hasn't got anything tangible."

Feeley nodded. "I'll do what I can. But don't forget we've a prosecuting attorney who's yelling for blood. If I know Barkley, he's already got a case against Myrna Dombey that would have a jury straining to convict her."

"It's going to be tough, all right."

"Tough is the word for it." Feeley leaned forward a little. "And listen, Tait, I'm trusting you. You're not to hold anything back. Not a thing." Tait reached into his pocket, brought out Myrna's silk handbag and tossed it on the table. "That belongs to Myrna Dombey." Then he brought out the revolver, laid it carefully on Feeley's desk. "This was inside the bag when I picked it up right after the shooting."

Feeley turned slightly purple. "And you took it out of the bag, and have been carrying it around until the fingerprints are all smeared?"

"My theory is that the gun was fired from the bag, Dannie. Through an opening in the zipper. I don't think there'd be any fingerprints."

Feeley's thick fingers took up the bag. "How'd you get it?"

Tait told him, Feeley listened attentively, and when the newspaper photographer was through, he said, "And so you think she didn't do it? You pick up her bag from beside her, and the gun is still warm, and you figure she's innocent?"

"Yes, Dannie. I think somebody got hold of that bag, slipped the gun into it, and then tossed it onto the table again after Dombey was killed."

"It sounds fine. How you going to prove it?"

Tait was silent. Then, slowly: "I don't know—yet."

"If you don't have Myrna Dombey down here by noon, I'm going to get out a warrant for you, and it won't be a comic sheet, either."

"She'll be here, Dannie. But you've made your agreement. I'm going to help you, and in return you're not going to use Myrna as copy for the newspaper boys."

Feeley nodded. "I made the deal, and I'll stick to it—until I'm convinced you're rooking me."

Tait got up. "Okay, then. You'll see her here at 12?"

"At 12. She'd better be here. If she's not, I'll have you brought in. And you'll be up on the third floor where the old cells are."

Women and Children Clamor for Gas Masks

Some macabre humorist sought enlistment in the army because, he said, "the safest place in modern war is in the trenches." And these British mothers feared the truth of the grim jest. They feared the terror of air raids and poison gas bombs. They flocked in scores to the gas mask distributing depots such as this one in a London school, and brought their sons and daughters to be fitted with these symbols of modern horror—"child-sized" gas masks. That's why, when the die was cast for peace, their dread gave way to hysterical joy.

rector recalled, "and when I was hoping we'd get it right, the kids stopped and went into a huddle.
Whenever they were puzzled about something they'd settle it in a huddle, and a funny thing was that they seemed to be almost telepathic in the way they'd drop everything at the same time, and get together and start whispering.
"Well, I found out they were worrying about why we were playing that game five times.

Pretty soon they decided simply that 'Dotta Luke' must be a very hungry man that morning to want so many breakfasts. So they came back and whipped through the scene again and we got it just right.
"They have a swell sense of humor, and love to make other people laugh too. There's a sequence where the kids are around a microphone and are supposed to be on the air. I thought it would be amusing if they took the mike to pieces and carried it away. That didn't take much coaxing, because they'll take anything apart if you give them a chance. Emilie is the most mechanical-minded and she did most of the work, and then the other four grabbed the base and ran away with it. It was really so funny that we all laughed out loud, even with the camera turning. The kids were so delighted to hear us laugh that on the second take they really wrecked the microphone and galloped off with the pieces. I guess it's the most enthusiastic scene in the whole picture."

In 1787 it took 19 persons living on farms to produce enough for themselves and one person in town, but now the same number on farms can provide for themselves and 66 persons in town.

Bears Expect Gents
To Be Troublesome

WACO, Oct. 12 (Spe).—Baylor Bears are expected to have trouble this week-end when they bump into the Centenary eleven in Waco Saturday. Although the Bruins eked out a 9 to 6 win over Arkansas last week in the last thirty seconds of play, they were none too impressive in their win.

Takes Shock Out of Blocking

Tackle Dan Rhule of the University of Kansas wears something that looks like a cross between a housewife's apron and a mattress, but actually it is a shock absorber. It is designed to reduce the risk of injury in practice and allow the men to drill more vigorously. Officially known as blocking armor, the equipment is made of heavily-padded white duck. A strap that goes over the wearer's head fastens to the waist in back.

The Razorbacks simply outplayed the Bears. They held a wide margin in statistics in every department of play and rolled up eleven first downs to six for the Bears.

The play of the forward wall in their opening conference game, was the thing that hurt the Bears as the Arkansas bucks time and again picked up considerable yardage around the ends. Jennings is expected to spend much time this week in bringing the Bruin line play up to the form set in the two opening games.

Centenary, always a threat to Southwest conference teams, will bring a powerful team to Waco for their encounter with the Bears and will be attempting to average a 20 to 0 setback handed them last year. In the first game of the season, Centenary held T. C. U. to a 14 to 7 margin.

With the exception of Odell Griffin, soph guard who re-hurt his knee, the Bears came out of the Parker contest in top shape and will probably have all players available for the tilt.
