PILOT MAKES SAFE LANDING OF SHIP AFIRE

"He Saved Us," Is Echo of Grateful Passengers

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Oct. 19 (AP)—Pilot Dave Hissong was proclaimed here today after bringing eleven passengers and three crewmen of a burning Eastern Airlines plane to a safe landing near Montgomery last midnight. "He saved us," echoed those aboard the plane. With hands seared Hissong landed the Houston to New York plane in a strange field after one of its motors dropped out. Flames destroyed the plane shortly after the occupants alighted. Hissong said the fire was probably caused by motor vibration.

AUSTIN, Oct. 19 (AP)—The law fixing $150 per month as the minimum pay for firemen and policemen in cities of more than 75,000 was upheld in effect today by the state supreme court. The court refused to review the decision of the Galveston civil court of appeals sustaining the statute in the test case brought by Ernest Dry, a Houston fireman.

No Trace of Escaped Convicts Is Found

SWEETWATER, Oct. 19 (AP)—No trace was found today of Merle Hill and Curtis Couch who escaped the Nolan county jail last night by locking Jailer Horace Cook and his wife in their cell. The men apparently escaped this section in a stolen automobile.

Steel Company Must Reinstate Employees

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19 (AP)—The national labor board ordered the Republic Steel corporation today to offer reinstatement to about 5,000 employees who went on a strike in May, 1937. The board ordered the company to stop interfering with the formation of any labor organization. Mrs. Iona Mitchell of Eastland spent Tuesday in Cisco.

Drag Dunes for 'Alligator' Man's Victims

The hunt for victims of "bluebeard" Joe Ball goes on as Texas Rangers use highway department equipment, as pictured above, to search the sand dunes near Ingleside, Tex.

Parts of the bodies of two of the roadhouse proprietor's victims already have been found in these dunes. Ball killed himself after he was questioned by police concerning disappearance of several women employees over a six-year period. Police were told by a man who said he helped Ball slay one woman that Ball fed parts of his victims to pet alligators.

Salvation Army Delegation Will Sponsor Program Here Saturday

Airline Officials Are Guests At Lion Luncheon

Representatives of the American Airlines brought an educational program to the Lions under the sponsorship of Lion Ed Brown today, while Principal O. L. Stamey and Coach Garrett, of the High school, made announcements regarding prospects of the Lobos' tilt with Graham Friday night. Mr. Stamey also announced the "B" squad game with Brownwood on Thursday night and the Midget game with Moran on the same night.

Lion Brown, who was program chairman for the day, introduced Salesmanager H. P. Oliver, of Fort Worth, who talked interestingly of details of flying, and of flying schedules over the United States. He then introduced Miss Ruby Shaw, whose home is in Abilene, and who is a stewardess for the lines between Abilene and Fort Worth.

Miss Shaw makes three trips per week flying over Cisco. She gave requisites for her position, some of which were, being a graduate nurse, passing a rigid physical examination, knowing about foods and knowing how to care for the comfort of passengers. The food served is good she said, serving fried chicken and other choice meats.

Pilot Captain Bob Rentz was then introduced, and he spoke of the things that must be attended to in take off. The plane must undergo rigid examination as to mechanical readiness, etc. Weather charts are furnished, the pilot together with detailed orders as to winds, distances, towns on the route, heights to fly and speeds to maintain on each section of the trip.

Mr. Oliver ended the program by answering questions that Lions might ask. He then stated that passengers were given information concerning towns over which plane flew, and as the information was very meager about Cisco, his company would be pleased to have Ciscoans write in, giving the information they would like disseminated over the American Airlines, Inc., with headquarters in Fort Worth.

Tailtwister Streater furnished spice to the earlier part of the program by his promiscuous fining of members for various transgressions of law and order. Lion cub J. H. Reynolds, of the Cisco Transfer and Storage Co., was introduced.

MIDGET CLASH IS TOMORROW

Play Moran Eleven In Night Game

The Cisco grammar school Midgets were looking forward with determination today to their battle tomorrow with the highly-touted Moran grammar eleven in the first night football game played in Cisco in almost two years. The game is scheduled at 7:45 at the softball park which is being temporarily converted into a football field, and it has been announced that admission will be ten cents.

Both the Midgets and the Moran eleven have stamped themselves as outstanding grammar elevens of this section and since they played to a 7-7 tie in a previous game, which was the first of the season for the Midgets, tomorrow's game is expected to develop into the best Midget contest of the year.

The Midgets sport a versatile attack and play a much more open type of football than is usual for grammar school elevens. Thus far they have made an excellent record defeating the strong Brownwood grammar eleven 12-7 and then romping on the Baird team, victor over a strong Abilene grammar eleven, 32-0.

A number of these Midgets will graduate into high school in the next year and since future Lobo elevens are developed in grammar school teams Cisco citizens are urged to support the deserving Midgets Thursday night.

Conservation Meeting To Be at Shady Grove

EASTLAND, Oct. 19 (Sp.)—A game conservation meeting is scheduled for 7:30 Wednesday night at Shady Grove, according to County Agent Cook. The meeting will be in the Shady Grove school.

CALLED TO HOBBS

Mrs. Tom Fields left Tuesday evening for Hobbs, N. M., in response to a message announcing the serious illness of her daughter, Marie, a nurse in a Hobbs hospital. Several months ago the daughter was brought here following an operation, and had only recently sufficiently recovered to resume her work in that infirmary. The message said she was stricken with pneumonia.

Contingent to Be Entertained By Cisco C. of C.

Arrangements are being made to entertain a Salvation Army delegation here next Saturday. The delegation is headed by State Commander W. G. Gilks who is also state chaplain for the American Legion organization. Major H. G. James will be in the party, which is to stage a street program at 10:30 and be the guests of the chamber of commerce at a luncheon at the Laguna at noon. Members of the highway patrol from Abilene will escort the group to that city after lunch.

The Cisco chamber of commerce also heard reports from committees at last night's meeting and considered other matters brought to their attention, said President S. H. Nance. A notable feature of the meeting was the delegation from the junior chamber which entered into discussions of various matters at the invitation of the senior body.

Committees reported on entertaining the Fort Worth delegation, and on Cisco's participation in the Eastland County Fair at Eastland, at which time Cisco staged the program for opening night.

The directors of the chamber of commerce discussed plans for a peanut warehouse for storage in Cisco, and agreed to act in conjunction with plans promulgated by W. B. Starr. Details are to be considered at a meeting with Mr. Starr today.

Directors also agreed to work with Radford Grocery company in a monthly bulletin to advertise Cisco.

Junior chamber of commerce representatives present at last night's meeting included President Carlton Holder, Edward Lee, James Harvey, C. M. Nevill, Ed Brown and Garner Altom.

Congressman Says Law Needed For Insect Control

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19 (AP)—Representative West of Texas was en route to McAllen today to meet with the Rio Grande Valley cotton growers in seeking ways to cope with the pink boll worm.

He said that many planters, after picking the crop, had failed to plow under the stalks to check infestation. He said that revision of state laws might be necessary to enforce insect control practices.

SPY TELLS OF PLAN TO GET INFORMATION

Says Germany Sought Information of Air Craft Carriers

NEW YORK, Oct. 19 (AP)—Guenther Gustav Rumrich, self-confessed nazi spy, described today a scheme to forge President Roosevelt's signature on white house stationery to an order to procure information about the United States navy.

Rumrich, testifying at the trial of three persons charged with espionage, said he expected to get a lot of money if the plan was carried through.

The witness told of a night visit to his home in the Bronx by Karl Schlueter, alleged messenger of a spying ring, and Johanna Hoffman, one of the defendants.

He said Schlueter sought information about an aircraft carrier's enterprise in Yorktown. He said, "Germany was going to build some aircraft carriers, and it would be useful for his superiors to obtain plans of these carriers," Rumrich testified.

Lindbergh Receives German Decoration

BERLIN, Oct. 19 (AP)—Colonel Charles Lindbergh received one of Germany's highest decorations, the order of the German eagle, from Field Marshal Goering last night.

The decoration was a token of Germany's esteem for what Lindbergh has done for aviation.

Sit-Down Strikes Definitely Laid To Communists

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19 (AP)—The house committee investigating un-American activities received testimony today that communists engineered the first sit-down strike at the Midland Steel company in Michigan in 1936.

Clyde Morrow, an employee of the Ford Motor company, said the strike was led by John Aderson, the communist candidate for governor in 1934, and Nat Ganley, described by Morrow as a communist and member of several unions at one time under different names.

Morrow, who said he joined the communist party for the purpose of getting information, asserted that he was present when the strike began.

Conscience Stricken? Grave Vases Return

Several weeks ago the Daily Press carried a story of the theft of a pair of vases from the Aycock lot in Oakwood cemetery. Naturally the family gave up hope that the vases would ever be recovered, but what puzzled them was why should anyone steal these grave ornaments, as their value was insignificant.

Just as unexpectedly as their disappearance, the vases were in their old place Wednesday morning when members of the family visited the cemetery. It was supposed that the person who removed the receptacles from the cemetery became conscience stricken, and concluded that robbing the dead gave no comfort, and surprisingly returned them to the family.

He said that many planters, after picking the crop, had failed to plow under the stalks to check infestation. He said that revision of state laws might be necessary to enforce insect control practices.

Armistice Day Service To In Eastland

EASTLAND, Oct. 18.—Plans for city-wide Armistice Day observance Friday morning, Nov. 11, were arranged Monday at an American Legion meeting in the chamber of commerce at Eastland.

L. Langston, commander of the American Legion post, had cooperation of his organization for the observance, including marching of the Eastland and high school bands and Legionnaires from the city hall to the site at the courthouse, which is to be the Civil League of America in memory of Eastland soldiers who died in the war, the placing of a wreath on the fountain and firing of a volley of shots by Eastland Legionnaires.

Responsibility of a 45-minute service at the Methodist church in Eastland was taken by the Cisco post through Langston, who had wholehearted cooperation. The Legion post also is being asked to cooperate, as well as the First Foreign Wars post of Cisco. Moran Legion members may be asked.

The observance may be made part of a series of annual observances. V. O. Hatcher, Francis, Rev. P. W. Walker, Tammey and Mrs. E. E. Layton, the latter representing the Legion, and Commander Moran of Cisco.

Hollywood Discovered a Vanishing Trait

THAT Hollywood movie company that went to a small town in Missouri to make a picture seems to have learned something. Fresh from the land of make-believe, where everybody acts a part off-stage as well as on and where the sorry old rule that it's every man for himself is followed right up to the hilt, these movie people spent a couple of weeks or so in a place of complete, unworldly innocence.

The population of this little Missouri town was increased by about one-third when the movie people landed. Hotel facilities, of course, were completely inadequate; the Hollywood visitors had to take rooms in private homes. The few restaurants did a business such as their owners had never dreamed of.

But somehow these back-country Missourians didn't see all of this as a grand opportunity to gouge the rich folks.

THEY insisted on looking on the great mass of newcomers as their guests. The movie people actually had to argue, and argue hard, to get their hosts to take money for their rooms. The restaurant-keepers never thought of boosting their prices, but went right on selling chicken dinners for 50 cents.

When home-town talent was wanted for use in mob scenes, the townsfolk weren't especially eager to take money for that either. They were glad to help out, of course—but they didn't see any particular reason why they ought to be paid for it. And although people came from miles around to watch the different scenes being shot, they stayed put when the directors asked them to and kept quiet when the sound cameras were turning—and proved infinitely easier to handle than half a dozen casual visitors on a studio set back in Hollywood.

ALL of which was something of an eye-opener to the movie people, who aren't used to that kind of a world. And the rest of us—who aren't any too used to it, either—may mediate on the incident and use it as a measuring rod to gauge the short-comings of our modern society.

For the innocent, unsophisticated friendliness of that small town is the sort of thing which once was all but universal in this country. The books written by foreign visitors in the last century prove that; so, too, do the individual memories of a great many living Americans.

But the way of life which was natural to rural, small-town, horse-and-buggy America is not at all natural to the complex, civilized society we have today. The pace has grown too swift, the competitive struggle has grown too keen; we rub elbows with too many people, and are too constantly obliged to remember that it's every man for himself nowadays.

We have lost something, in developing this modern civilization that we're so proud of—lost something precious and irreplaceable. We may yet conclude that what we have gained in its place does not quite make it up to us for the loss.

Now that the fighting in China has moved down to the south, that rumbling you hear is the British telling them furriners to go back where they came from.

Czechs May Not Be So Badly Off After Partition

By MILO M. THOMPSON
Chief of the Washington Bureau, Associated Press
WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—A shrunken Czechoslovakia could live.

Shorn of its natural defenses, deprived of many of its resources, reduced in size, stangely shaped, it is not necessarily foredoomed to strangulation and absorption by its neighbors.

That's the consensus of the international diagnosticians of Washington. They think the baby of Munich may, in fact, have a better chance of survival than had its predecessor, the baby of the treaty of Versailles.

They made four points:
1. It will be a more consistent nation.
2. It will have well-balanced and sufficient industries.
3. Its political integrity will be generally guaranteed.
4. Small nations are often the more prosperous nations.

There are two schools of thought about the theory of nationality. One group, to which Reichsfuehrer Hitler seems to belong, insists that a common language, a reasonably pure race and a similarity of traditions are fundamental prerequisites of consistent nationality.

Another group believes similar social standards and needs, agreement concerning what is right and what is wrong and equal love of independence and liberty can bind dissimilar peoples into an enduring nation. This group cites the United States and Canada.

More Logical Grouping

In the new Czechoslovakia, both groups see distinct improvement: the one because the predominant Czech and Slovak citizenry will have common language, similar racial background and similar traditional background; the other because it seems obviously true that Czechoslovaks and Sudeten Germans could never get together on social standards and needs or their conception of liberty.

Both groups, therefore, conceive the new national grouping to be more logical.

Industrially, there is no blinking the fact that the new Czechoslovakia will have been given a major operation.

At first glance it appears that the peripheral upland districts in which most of the industries are located, because their power and materials derive from the hills, have been wrested away, leaving only the flat agricultural lands of inner Bohemia and Moravia.

An Industrial Tangle

What is more, it is almost certain that industrial confusion must follow drawing the red line of new boundaries between hop fields and breweries, coal supplies and factories, clay beds and potteries.

But the question is not now how great is the loss nor what immediate economic collapse may develop; it is whether a nation can survive on what remains.

The prospective boundaries of the new Czechoslovakia will not take away all the brown coal of the nation, nor all its iron ore, nor all its forests. Czechoslovakia will not have the great mills and factories of the upland, but it will have around Pilsen and Prague and elsewhere less important mills and factories which can be the nucleus of a new industrial growth.

There are chemical, wood and paper manufacturing plants, shoe factories, some textile mills, alcohol and sugar refineries and matting industries left to it and in BROWNWOOD, Oct. 19 (Sp.) The G. P. Mitcham No. 1 J. W. Newton, Honeycutt survey, in the Thrifty area has been drilled in and is swabbing three barrels an hour. It will be put on the pump soon. It appears to be one of the best wells that has been drilled in that field.

ing company, which had been a good source of revenue. Feely was frankly stymied, and was leaning heavily on the existence of the musician who had written "The Cat's Meow." But he hadn't yet been able to find him, though the city had been combed and Feely had wired his description to every conceivable musician's union in the country. Leonard Macy, the dilettante and criminologist, had been suspiciously silent — and this worried Feely more than anything. He knew, for instance, that Macy had several times been in touch with Barkley, the prosecuting attorney. The newspaper, weary of an administration as a political football, were pressing Barkley hard. There was more lawbreaking, more crime than ever, and while Feely was guiltless he was found to be painted with the same brush as the rest of the department. Barkley wanted a conviction, Feely knew, and Barkley didn't care much who got convicted. What the detective officer feared was that Macy would spring something suddenly, and make the police detectives a laughing stock. And Barkley would probably encourage him, since he couldn't very well get a conviction until somebody was brought to book with sufficient evidence to justify a trial for the murder of Ludden Dombey.

Tait, too, was painfully aware of the situation, but he had never felt so utterly helpless. There was one bright spot in the outlook—The Swingateers were doing well. Under "Torchy" Stephens they were as popular as ever, and nothing was hinted that the Pacific Plaza would try to break the contract. As the new manager, Tait had contacted the majority of more important creditors and convinced a share of them that they could talk them out of doing it. Stephens was a scandal clause in that they might try to get through—but once I for Hoskins, the manager Izzy Pico's band got plastered on a night he had advertised big." Tait exclaimed. "Then follow to talk to Hoskins if he brings up the think the best lunch keep showing up and stuff, as if nothing had said Stephens. "That's do."

Two weeks were hectic for Tait. He and Feely going over the Dombey there was considerable stuff and in the end the more than established Harris Rogers had told the first place. still had a chance to get their money. A few nights of pencil scratching told him that if Montgomery would give The Swingateers a chance to make some more records, even without Lud Dombey, he could get the corporation on an even keel again. Then Myrna could do as she liked. She could stay with the ship, or she could leave it free of Dombey's debts.

Time and again Tait found himself hating Dombey for the mess he'd made for Myrna. But then, he told himself, Ludden Dombey hadn't figured on being murdered. Gradually Tait discovered that it wasn't the debts so much which angered him, where Myrna was concerned, as it was the immediate past in Dombey's private life. Tait kept feeling that Lud Dombey had been a rotter to sweep Myrna off her feet without a chance to look at that past. A fellow like Dombey didn't reform over night, not even for a pretty wife like Myrna.

Often, as Bob Tait sat figuring over the Dombey books, he'd be disturbed by the face of Myrna—Myrna's eyes or her moving lips, setting between him and the sheet of paper. Perhaps Leonard Macy was right, and he had fallen in love with her without knowing it. Feely had wondered about it, too. Dannie Feely was a lot sharper than anyone had given him public credit for.

In the days following his talk with "Torchy" and the band, Tait consciously stayed away from Myrna except when he had to discuss business with her. And he began to resent it a little when she would mention Ludden Dombey in a queer, reserved tone as though she and Lud had held a secret she would share with no one else.

Heavy on Tait's mind had been the fact that Leonard Macy owned a piece of the band. The records showed that he had paid a $1000 for it, probably took it at a time when Lud Dombey needed money badly and had appealed to Macy whom he knew. And on the third week of The Swingateers programs under "Torchy" Stephens he called the band together and asked them to take a temporary cut so that he could make an offer to buy back Macy's interest for what he paid for it. He told them why — and every one of them agreed that under the circumstances Macy should be out.

Tait took the certified check to Macy's apartment that night.

"Bands aren't in your line, Mr. Macy, and I thought you'd be glad to get your money back. I suppose it was merely in the nature of a loan to Dombey."

Tait didn't care for Macy's smile. "On the contrary, Tait, I'm interested in a number of things. Why not a band? I'm perfectly content to retain my share of The Swingateers, Incorporated."

"What would make you change your mind?"

"You mean what would I consider a fair return on my investment? Well—you seem to be doing very well with the outfit, Tait. Suppose we said $5000?"

"But that's absurd! Dombey owes at least—"

"It was only a suggestion in answer to your question," Macy interrupted. "We can let matters stand. I'm not in the least worried about my $1000."

But Tait was. As he left Macy's apartment he was plenty worried. Plainly, the man wanted a share in the band—and he must have a reason for wanting it. Could it be so that he could maneuver Myrna into a hole?

existing lien. In the motion for contempt plaintiff's counsel alleged that the injunction was violated by defendants in disposing of practically all of the cattle, and at an inadequately low price. Defendants' counsel, Attorney Frank Sparks, made answer in a special and general denial of the allegations of plaintiff, in which any contempt of court was attempted or intended in the disposition of the cattle.

Defendant Barton, testifying admitted he had not served with the writ of injunction, but stated that he was in Kilgore at the time the cattle were delivered to the commission men, and that Mashburn made the delivery and delivered the checks to him at Kilgore. He said he deposited the checks in a Kilgore bank and returned the proceeds funds to a Wichita Falls firm for money borrowed. (Objections by defense were overruled by the court.) The court asked the witness several questions to clarify his testimony.

SERIAL STORY MURDER TO MUSIC

BY NARD JONES

CAST OF CHARACTERS
MYRNA DONGREY—heroine. Wife of the sensational swing band leader.
ROBERT TAIT—hero. Newspaper photographer—detective.
ANNE LESTER—Myrna's closest friend.
DANNIE FEELY—officer assigned to investigate Laddie Dumber's murder.

Yesterday, Dumber is found badly in debt. Tait offers to buy out Mary's $1000 share in the band, but Mary refuses. Could it be that he wanted a date over Myrna?

CHAPTER XXV

Had not the investigators been in such a generous mood, Tait would willingly have paid Leonard Mack $5000 for his concert. But at the moment it was an impossibility, and he had the added feeling that even if Mary were offered that amount, he would refuse.

Tait wished that he knew more about the circumstances under which the store had been purchased. But the only man who had that information was Harry Rogers and Tait had no desire to encounter him again.

It was a desecrated and weathered Ben Tait who returned to his own room from Leonard Mack's luxurious apartment, the certified check still in his pocket. As he opened the door he heard his telephone ringing furiously. Tait hurried to take it up.

"Robert Tait," he said, not recognizing the voice.

"Yes, this is Tait."

"I have some interesting information about the Laddie Dumber murder."

Tait hesitated. "Why don't you notify Feely down at police headquarters?"

"I can't do that for reasons I don't wish to explain over the telephone."

"Then come up here. I'll be glad to see you."

"I can't do that either. If you want to hear what I have to say, you'll have to come to my address."

"I sounded like a trick, and Tait was instantly aware of it. Yet he couldn't afford to pass up any lead. "All right," he said, "I'll come to your address. I'll come right over. The next day at address, which Tait recognized as on the very edge of town, in a district once a factory area. "Are you sure of that address?" he asked. "I don't know there were any residences there."

An unpleasant truth occurred to him. "I can't be sure about that."

where I live. I've got a room on the top floor of what used to be a paint factory. Don't come unless you want to. It's all up to you."

"It'll be there."

He replaced the receiver, and stared at the wall. He kept thinking of Harry Rogers and his concert. Then he brushed the notion aside. Perhaps this was the very moment that Dannie Feely had been hunting for days. It was certainly logical that George K. Weeks had retrogressed from that gray lodging house to the top floor of an abandoned paint factory.

Tait went to his bureau, took out a small envelope and slipped it into his pocket. Then he telephoned for a taxi, and went down to the curb to wait for it.

The address puzzled even the taxi driver. "Say, that's a new one on me, brother. Sure you got the right address?"

"I think so. Remember the old Millway addition, where all those old factory buildings are?"

"Oh, yeah, I remember that. There ain't anything doing in that part of town now."

Tait nodded. "There may be tonight, let's go."

The driver stopped down the street, Tait and started the taxi. "It's long with me," he said.

"I was a fairly long drive to the Millway addition, but then I caught the more tedious job of finding the street and number which Tait had received over the telephone. Finally they found the street, a small dead-end affair. "Well," murmured the driver. "We can't go wrong on a dark street like this."

"I hope you're right," said Tait, but he had a light on the top floor of that building down there. The light, in fact, was on the top floor of one of those old factory buildings.

"It's either a light or a reflection from the moon. The driver pointed toward the light. "I'll take a look at the number on the door."

"If there is one. Twenty-seven. Thirty, you said it was."

Before Tait could think to remark on this, the driver had jumped out of the car and into the night. He saw him cross the sidewalk, make a dash on the side of the doorway. The match flared for a moment, then went out. Suddenly Tait heard a yell and the sound of a body falling hard to the pavement.

He reached his revolver from his pocket and started across the sidewalk. As he passed the building he caught the scent of a faint perfume, hauntingly familiar.

"Where are you?" he called to the driver.

"There was a great cloud at his feet. Before kneeling down, Tait tried to peer into the darkness of the street. "What's wrong? What happened?"

"Somebody—somebody took a stick at me with a knife," the driver gasped. "It came out of that doorway. I—I saw the flash of it just as I struck the match."

Squatted down beside the wounded man, Tait turned quickly on his feet. Gradually his eyes became accustomed to the darkness. He was literally afraid to move, but now he began to see the outlines of the doorway. It was empty. He had seen no one do it or down the street and they must certainly have gone through that door.

He got up, approached it gingerly. "Surely he kicked it open with one foot and sprang back, his weapon ready. Nothing loomed to his gaze but a dimly lit hallway.

"Listen," Tait turned to the taxi driver. "Are you badly hurt? If I get you to the car can you stand it a while?"

"I think it's my shoulder and arm—but you can't go in there, are you?"

"I want to take a look up that stairway. It'll just be a minute—and then I'll drive you to a hospital pronto."

"You go up that stairway and I'll be right behind you."

Against the taxi driver's feeble protests, Tait managed to get him into the cab. A hurried examination showed that there were two knife wounds, neither very deep. But there was no mistaking that the assailant had meant business. The sudden striking of the match, practically in his face, had probably spoiled his lungs.

"Stay back against the cushions. I won't be a minute," Tait went to the doorway again. The stairway was all down. He could see to the first landing, and a little beyond, but he could not determine the position of the dim light.

Suddenly, his gun ready, he started up the stairs.

"I want it," he said, and then he saw a shadow and a flash of light.

"I want to take a look up that stairway. It'll just be a minute—and then I'll drive you to a hospital pronto."

"You go up that stairway and I'll be right behind you."

started at the door. "No, and I'll be right behind you."

WHY try to open stuffy nostrils by blowing into your handkerchiefs until your nose is red? Simply insert a little Mentholatum into each nostril. Note how effectively, yet gently, it relieves the stuffiness and soothes irritated membranes. Instead of being a "blowhard" use Mentholatum. Cisco Youth Sings In Male Quartet

In a mass try-out of a large number of students in the office of R. Berton Coffin, director of voice, at the John Tarleton Agricultural college, Stephenville, Billy Kilborn, a well known local boy was chosen to sing the second tenor part in the Tarleton male quartet.

Kilborn is a boy of many accomplishments in Tarleton. A second year member of the Tarleton Military band, playing in the Little Symphony orchestra, a second year member of the Tarleton mixed chorus, and appearing in the production staged by the chorus last year, H. M. S. Pinafore, he is well-known about the Tarleton campus.

The quartet plans to go on some extensive tours of the state this year, as is customary for it to do each year. Practicing for an hour twice weekly, in the opinion of Mr. Coffin, the director, the quartet has a full year of great expectations in view.
