Sculptor Sentenced to 134 Years in Gedeon Slaying

Doctor and Three Others Convicted in Torture Case

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—(AP)—Robert Irwin, eccentric young sculptor, who pleaded guilty to the 1937 Easter morning triple slaying of Veronica Gedeon, attractive model, her mother and Frank Byrnes, a boarder, was sentenced to 134 years in prison today by Judge James Wallace. Irwin's lawyer in offering the plea told the court that the sculptor was "as crazy as a bed bug."

Bowie High school of El Paso will represent the El Paso Class A district of the Interscholastic league in the bi-district game with the Breckenridge Buckaroos, it was decided by the El Paso district committee in a meeting at El Paso this morning.

Place and time for the game were to be decided this afternoon. Breckenridge offered the school a considerable bonus but the demands of the El Paso school were such that it was considered probable the two schools would toss a coin to determine the location. Saturday was expected to be the day.

Bowie High and Odessa High were in a tie for the district championship as a result of Odessa's defeat of the Bowie team two weeks ago. However, the El Paso school was awarded decision on the basis of its season's record as compared with that of the Odessa eleven.

Bob Stubblefield of Gorman was the guest of friends here this week-end.

"In theory it's probably all right to charge a millionaire more for a farm product than the poor devil on the street. The difficulty is in where to draw the line."

Under the Wallace proposal, surplus farm products would be sold to relief and low-income families at less than market prices. The government would subsidize this undertaking.

Senator Wheeler of Montana declared recently the two-price proposal was "cockeyed."

Clark said it would encounter some of the same difficulties which confront the present federal relief program.

"The fellow who struggles to make his own way and stay off relief rolls frequently is discriminated against because he is not on these lists," he said.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—(AP)—Senator Clark of Missouri Sunday joined the opposition to a domestic "two-price system," which has been proposed by Secretary Wallace as a possible solution of the farm products surplus problem.

"It would be the greatest provocation of class hatred," the Missouri senator said. "It seems very impractical to me."

"In theory it's probably all right to charge a millionaire more for a farm product than the poor devil on the street. The difficulty is in where to draw the line."

Clark predicted the new congress would subject existing farm legislation and its administration to an inspection and overhauling.

"Movie Queen" to Be Selected at Conference This Evening

Who will be the Movie Queen? That question is agitating the minds of sundry members of the Cisco Lions club and the director of the musical comedy of what name which will be presented under the auspices of the club on Dec. 14. The director, Miss Emiline Bogue and the Lions club committee will go into a huddle this evening to determine the question. After the selection it will be a week before the public knows, for the heroine of the production must come all the way from Hollywood, where, in the role of a famous star, she is presumed to have become so nostalgic for home that she is returning to devote her talent to Cisco.

She is due to arrive on Saturday, accompanied by her press agent, also to be selected tonight—but not kept a secret—and the event of her arrival will be recorded on film to be shown as part of the production. The picture will include the crowds who greet her. Scenes will be shot at Eastland, Ranger and Rising Star as the Movie Queen visits these communities with her press agent and members of the cast.

Headquarters for the production have been established in the Laguna hotel block.

The production will be presented in four parts, the first three of which will be played on stage by the cast and the last in the form of a motion picture which will take up the story and complete it.

Sees Taxation Incentive to Profit-Sharing

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—(AP)—Gerard Swape, president of the General Electric company, told the senate committee today that he believed the government must adopt some form of incentive by taxation if it hoped to induce industry to stabilize employment through annual wage.

He testified that he "hoped" profit-sharing with employees was "good business," but added, "I don't know it."

He said his company had paid out approximately $100,000,000 in share profits to 600,000 employees in the last twenty years.

Plane Drops Food to Marooned in Maine

AURORA, Me., Nov. 28.—(AP)—A police chartered airplane dropped food today on snow-marooned hunters and CCC youths in this northeastern Maine forest while national guardsmen battled to open travel lanes.

Thirty sacks of food was dropped to twenty parties who have been marooned since Thanksgiving day.

Dick West Assistant Editor of Almanac

Dick West, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. R. West and a member of the editorial staff of the Dallas News, has been appointed assistant editor of the Texas Almanac, comprehensive encyclopedia of Texas published by A. H. Belo and Company, publisher of the News. Dick will continue regular duties with the News staff, where he is assistant agricultural editor, while assisting in the compilation and editing of the Almanac. Part of his duties in the latter work will be writing histories of the 254 Texas counties.

IS COMMUNIST GROUP LEADER PROBERS TOLD

Marcantonio Named by Ex-Socialist Witness Today

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—(AP)—The house investigators received testimony today that Representative-elect Vito Marcantonio, of New York, "is the presiding head of the International Labor Defense," which was described as a "communist front organization."

The testimony came from Sam Baron, of New York, appearing before the Dies committee investigating un-american activities.

Baron said he resigned from the socialist party in order to appear before the committee as an individual.

DIES DEMANDS INVESTIGATION

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—(AP)—Representative Dies of Texas, asked Secretary of State Hull Sunday to instruct the justice department to prosecute of communist party, the German-American burd and other organizations for failure to register as agents of foreign principles.

The Texan, chairman of the house committee investigating un-american activities, made public a letter to the state department chief, who is on the high seas en route to the Pan-American conference at Lima, Peru.

Citing the law which requires agents of foreign interests to register and file detailed information with the state department, Dies said he wished to call attention to the failure of a number of organizations to comply with that statute.

"The evidence before our committee clearly shows," he said, "that the communist party of the United States is an agent of the Communist Third International, which has its headquarters in Moscow. Evidence also indicates that certain 'front' organizations of the communist party, such as the League for Peace and Democracy, the International Labor Defense, the Civil Liberties union, and many others whose names will be found in our hearings, are likewise agents of the communist party. The evidence further indicates that the German-American bund is an agent of the nazi party in Germany."

A parade, with the Lobo band leading, will march from the north end of D avenue to the rodeo grounds at 1 p. m. Every saddle horse, donkey and riding pet in the Cisco section is wanted for this parade, said Carlton Holter, president of the junior chamber of commerce. Children and their mounts are especially wanted, he said.

The rodeo will be followed with other Saturday programs culminating in a big Santa Claus parade on December 24.

New Ass't Agent to Arrive December 1

Sam E. Rosenberg will become assistant county agent of Eastland county December 1 and will arrive on that date to assume his duties, it was announced this week. He comes from Coleman county where he has served as AAA administrative assistant since February 1, 1937.

Rosenberg graduated from Texas A. and M. college in 1936 in dairy husbandry. His home is in La Grange. He and Mrs. Rosenberg will live in Eastland.

Mrs. Sally Boshear of San Angelo has been a guest in the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Hittson.

Indignation and Sorrow Should Mean -- Action

The United States has blown off a good deal of steam lately, telling the world how indignant it is over Hitler's most recent outrages against the Jews.

This has been all to the good. The sentiment does the country credit, and it has undoubtedly helped to solidify sentiment against the nazi philosophy of life. But it is about time for the people of the United States to ask themselves just how indignant and outraged they really are.

Are they, in other words, indignant and outraged enough to do something concrete and substantial for the victims of the Hitler terror?

GERMANY contains something in the neighborhood of half a million Jews. Every consideration of humanity and plain decency demands that as many as possible of these luckless people be moved from the country. But to do that will take a great deal of money, some careful planning—and, last but not least, the provision of a new place for them to live.

By recalling its ambassador and voicing its indignation in less official but equally eloquent ways, the United States has shown that the fate of these people is—to a certain extent, at least—a matter in which it is directly concerned. Therefore it can hardly do less than take an active part in the formulation and execution of plans for their relief.

Which suggests the possibility that the people of the United States might give some serious thought to the question of relaxing their immigration restrictions in one way or another to permit the entry of some of the Hitler refugees.

It may be that it would be unwise to relax those restrictions. The present immigration policy resulted from nation-wide dissatisfaction with the way the old system of free immigration was working; the country's first duty is to itself, and it can hardly change this policy without carefully weighing all of the factors.

YET the subject at least needs to be examined thoughtfully. And if in the end it is decided that the United States cannot offer a haven to the German refugees, then it is pretty clearly the country's duty to give active support to the best practical plan for settling them elsewhere. It could support such a plan by contributing organizers and administrators, by providing funds, by furnishing transport, supplies and the odds and ends of equipment that the refugees would need to establish themselves in their new land.

All things considered, the country can hardly dodge this duty. By the vigor of its protests it has committed itself. It has demonstrated that it is not indifferent to the fate of the Jews in Germany.

But it has talked and protested enough. Definite action to relieve those victims of barbarism is now in order. We shall soon see whether the people of America are sorry and indignant enough to do something—or only sorry and indignant enough to pass resolutions.

It is hoped that Hitler's astrologist will point out that the eclipse of the moon was not caused by Adolf's shadow.

It develops now that Hitler has no argument with the U. S. He simply wants to right the wrongs done to the Mormons and Indians.

What the country is waiting for now is to find that the recent war-like broadcasts from Europe were simply old works of a British novelist.

Carrying Out the Racial and Nationalistic Idea

JOHN T. FLYNN

By JOHN T. FLYNN
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—There probably never has been a country which had more problems than this one. That is understandable. But what is not understandable is that there should be so many problems, pressing problems, about which the country has no policy.

Take the railroads. A modern American railroad might itself be defined as a collection of problems. But the government hasn't a semblance of a policy respecting them.

Here is one consequence of that. The Delaware, Lackawanna & Hudson railroad, like many another, cannot make enough money to pay its taxes to the state of New Jersey or the city of Buffalo. So it asks the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to lend it the money.

This sort of thing has gone on since the R. F. C. was formed by Hoover. Railroads have borrowed millions to pay taxes to states and cities. They have borrowed millions to pay rents on real estate. They have borrowed money to pay the rentals of roads they were operating. And the R. F. C. has accommodated them apparently whenever they have needed this help.

They have borrowed millions to pay interest on bonds and notes, oftentimes to bankers.

I recall protesting against this when the R. F. C. was first organized. The Van Swearingens borrowed $10,000,000 to pay a loan to the Morgans.

I was informed that the reason for that was a profound economic one. It seems that then—in 1932—we were in a depression because the banks would not lend money. This was the explanation given me by the wizards in Washington.

While it seemed rather terrible to have the government supply money to the Vans to pay off loans to the Morgans, the problem found idea behind it was that this would put money in the bankers' purse; indeed all the R. F. C. loans were achieving that end, and then presently the bankers would have so much money it would be burning a hole in their pockets. And they would start lending it.

The folly of that must be apparent by now. The banks have had billions poured into their pockets, but they haven't started lending yet—the pockets remain unburned.

When the R. F. C. paid taxes and rentals for other roads, I was told this was helping cities and states in trouble. The folly of that must also be apparent now.

The whole truth is that the government not only has no policy about the roads, but it refuses to even think seriously about it. Since, 1931 the desperate character of this problem has been apparent.

But as far as the government has gotten is to dole out a few dollars every time one of these ragged vagabonds comes around looking for a handout, thus prolonging the agony, while the roads sink to new levels of distress.

Had there been a courageous facing of the problem in 1933 when that was possible the roads would be on their way to health now.

Salt and dates are the chief products of the Sahara desert.

Washington Daybook

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Dec. 9 means nothing north of the Rio Grande, south of the Rio Grande it is Latin America's Fourth of July, for on that date in 1824 the last of the Spanish viceroys was beaten on the plains of Ayacucho two miles above sea level in a battle that drove Spain finally out of South America.

For that reason the Pan American conference chose Dec. 9 as the opening day of the upcoming meeting at Lima, Peru, only a few miles from Ayacucho.

To South Americans that victory was as important as the surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown to Yankee patriots. And as a battle, it was ten times more colorful. It won't hurt to know something about it, because South America is going to be in your conversation more and more as the months roll on.

The combined forces of both sides could find office space in any one of several federal buildings here. The Spanish army numbered 9,500 men and 24 cannon. The Republican army had 6,000 men and one tiny cannon.

For several days the two armies marched, one on either side of a precipitous gorge, almost within hailing distance of each other but neither able to bring the other to launch the attack across the gorge. It was torturous marching in rugged rocky country, with the 11,000-foot elevation distressing even seasoned fighters.

Surprise Move Advantageous
On the afternoon of Dec. 8, General La Serna, the Spanish viceroy, led his army in a surprise march well ahead of the poorly equipped Republican army. He crossed the canyon, went entirely around the Republican army and occupied Condor Heights. The Republicans faced the enemy in this new position, with backs to the deep gorge and each side cut off by deep gulleys.

Bolívar, the liberator, was not with his army. He had gone to Lima for recruits, leaving General Sucre in command.

The real fighting began next morning, Dec. 9. The viceroy sent out a division to attack the Republicans on the flank across the shallowest of the gulleys. He then began marching his men down from Condor Heights. His position in that respect was bad. He could not charge pell-mell down the hill, but had to weave in and out among rocks and brush.

The Republican general Sucre quieted his men by marching back and forth in front of them, promising them a "day of glory." He held up the attack until about half the Spanish force was down the hill. Then he ordered his infantry to advance with bayonets.

STORIES IN STAMPS

Bach, the Musician Ahead of His Time

TWO centuries after the profound, hard-working Johann Sebastian Bach produced music in which he seems to have put the art of the ages, he stands as perhaps the greatest of all musicians. Yet his compositions were seldom performed during his lifetime and even for almost a century after his death, in 1750, they lay ignored, almost unknown. Indeed, the place of Bach's burial was unknown for more than 150 years.

One salient reason explains the neglect of the great artist; he was ahead of his time. Bach was a musician and his music was not understood by the tastes of the time, and his work lives to mirror the entire universe.

Yet opportunity was not generous to Bach. He was born a poor youth at Eisenach, Germany, on March 21, 1685. Bach had both father and mother by his 10th year. He was cast upon the world to earn his own living at 14. But almost at once his great musical genius began to flower. He battled adversity much of his life, but religion held him steady. He was married twice, and the father of 20 children. Beyond that the world knows little about him except as he is revealed through his music, the great cantatas, the Passions, the B Minor Mass.

Bach is shown here at left on a 1935 German stamp, one of three issued to commemorate the 150th anniversary of the Bach family's emigration to Germany.

Beware The Cough From a common cold That Hangs On

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your common cough, chest cold, or bronchial irritation, you may get relief now with Creomulsion. Creomulsion not only contains the soothing elements found in many cough remedies, such as Syrup of White Pine Compound with Tar, and fluid extract of Licorice Root, but it also has fluid extract of Ipecac for its powerful phlegm loosening effect, fluid extract of Cascara for its mild laxative effect, and most important of all, Beechwood Creosote nicely blended with all of these so that it will reach the source of the trouble from the inside.

Thousands of people, who really know their drugs, use Creomulsion in their own families, realizing that this excellent preparation aids nature to soothe the inflamed mucous membranes, to heal the irritated tissues, and to loosen and expel germ-laden phlegm. Druggists also know the effectiveness of Beechwood Creosote and they rub Creomulsion "tops" for coughs because in it you get a good dose of Creosote emulsified so that it is palatable, and may be taken frequently by both adults and children with remarkable results.

Creomulsion is generally found satisfactory in the treatment of coughs, chest colds and bronchial irritation, especially those stubborn ones due to common colds that hang on for dreadful days and nights thereafter. Don't worry through another sleepless night—use Creomulsion. Even if other remedies have failed, your druggist is authorized to refund your money if you are not satisfied with the relief obtained.

Creomulsion is one word, ask for it plainly, see that the name on the bottle is Creomulsion, and you'll get the genuine product, and the relief you want. (Adv.)

House of commons today that Great Britain had not committed herself to send an expeditionary force to France in case of war.

Sir Percy Harris asked "whether this country is under certain circumstances committed to send an expeditionary force to France, and whether as a result of Chamberlain's visit to Paris there has been any increase in such commitments?"

Chamberlain replied brusquely. "The answer is in the negative."

23 TVA Fertilizer Demonstrations Held

Farmers and ranchers of Eastland county who will demonstrate the use of triple superphosphate fertilizer on soil building crops and permanent pastures in 1935 will make application during the next few weeks for their allotments of fertilizer. County Agent Cook has announced.

Those whose applications are approved by the county agent and the county agricultural council will be allotted high analysis phosphate fertilizer to be applied to land devoted to legumes to be turned under or permanent pastures. Their only expense will be freight from the Tennessee Valley fertilizer plant but they will sign a contract to apply the fertilizer to soil building crops or permanent pastures and to keep accurate records on the results obtained.

Twenty-three TVA superphosphate demonstrations were conducted by Eastland county farmers and ranchers in 1934 with very effective results in most cases. As most of the soils of Eastland county

Wilcox Chosen Head of Texas Teachers Ass'n

DALLAS, Nov. 28.—(AP)—A salt water fisherman, whose hobbies are growing flowers and making fine fishing rods, became president of the Texas State Teachers association Saturday.

George B. Wilcox, member of the Texas A. & M. faculty, was elected president at the closing session of the association's sixtieth annual convention here. Approximately 12,000 teachers and other educational leaders, who attended the various meetings held in 25 different places in Dallas, returned home Saturday night as the three-day convention closed.

Wilcox attended Sam Houston State Teachers college, Huntsville, and served as principal of high schools at Groesbeck and Wharton. He spent two years in the army during the war, attending A. & M. college for four years after the war. He began teaching there. Attending summer courses, he obtained an M. A. degree from Columbia university.

Re-elect Cobb

He succeeds R. H. Brister of Waco, retiring president.

Bruce B. Cobb, Fort Worth, was re-elected secretary.

The results of the election, by the convention's house of delegates, were announced by W. D. Wilkerson, Bryan, chairman of the election committee.

Wilcox said that a meeting of the association's executive committee would be held in Fort Worth, probably between Dec. 10 and 15, to begin work on next year's program.

In the near future adult education will be made a regular part of the public school system, it was predicted by George L. Maxwell, Washington, D. C., assistant director of the WPA educational division.

He declared the world is changing too rapidly for the schools to prepare all students for the eventualities of life.

Financial difficulties in adult education will be overcome partly by the communities developing the movement through discussion and

SOCIETY and CLUBS

MRS. C. W. TRAMMELL, Editor Phone Numbers 535 and 608

Mrs. Moore Named Story Telling Club Director

N. C. Douglas, representative of a New York publishing company, was in Cisco Saturday for the purpose of appointing a director for the Children's Shakespeare Story-Telling club which is to be formed here soon.

The plans include 24 hours of dramatization of the famous bard's plays, to be concluded with a play or pageant in which the children will portray the characters. The purpose of the club is to acquaint the grade school children with William Shakespeare's works in simplified form and at the same time give them a complete course in constructive dramatics, expression and story-telling, which will give them a better understanding of the classics in their high school studies.

The clubs will be formed for the different grades and will meet periodically. From time to time games will be played and the children made acquainted with Shakespearean music and dancing.

SERIAL STORY LOVERS AWEIGH

COPYRIGHT, 1938 NEA SERVICE, INC. BY BETTY WALLACE

CAST OF CHARACTERS JUDY ALCOTT—admiral's daughter. She faced a choice between two navy suitors. DWIGHT CAMPBELL—ambitious lieutenant. He faced a choice between his wife and duty. JACK HANLEY—flying sailor. He faced a test of a patient love. MARVEL HASTINGS—navy wife. She faced the test of being a good sailor.

Yesterday, Marvel's unpopularity increases, but for Dwight's sake Judy vows to attend her housewarming, to see that her father, the Admiral, attends also.

CHAPTER XVI

It was not easy to tell her mother that she had openly championed Marvel, openly asserted that Admiral Alcott would appear at the housewarming. But she stumbled through it, and her mother said pityingly, 'I see, Judy. That's what Dwight asked when he came the other night.' She ruffled the girl's silky hair. 'I know you want to do your best for him. Very well then. I—I'll speak to your father.'

So the thing was settled, and the night of the housewarming a long line of cars crawled to a stop in front of Marvel's house. Judy wondered if Marvel even knew how close her party had come to failure.

But when she and Jack Hanley were inside, greeting their hostess, she realized that Marvel didn't have the faintest inkling. Such a thing had never occurred to her. She was really magnificent in her self-assurance. And there were other people present. Outside friends. A tall, thin girl with scarlet fingernails and a queer, short hairdo. 'Kay Roseter, the cinema star,' said Marvel. 'You'll love her. She's so unique.'

'This is Cary Tennant,' Marvel said, a moment later, and Judy looked up into the narrow, sardonic eyes of the man she had seen twice before. In the Paradise, and at the wedding.

'How do you do?' Judy murmured. 'Charmed,' said Mr. Tennant, and his thin face smiled. But his eyes didn't smile.

'All the naval regalia makes me feel just a bit effete,' he said to Jack. 'You Navy boys are such virile blokes.'

Jack said, 'Horn-handed, hairy-chested,' and grinned. But Judy sensed that he didn't like Cary Tennant any better than she did.

The house that Marvel's decorator had evolved was a thing of black floors, angled sofas, extremely low chairs, and whole walls of mirror glass. There were white gazelles on glass-topped tables; white rugs in little spots on the dark floor; gleaming chromium.

'It looks like a machine shop,' said Jack. 'Hush!'

It was really imposing, if you cared for modernity. But Judy didn't. She had always liked old mahogany and Virginia sofas.

Kay Roseter, on being presented to Admiral Alcott, informed him that her last picture had been a Navy picture. 'We had the most distinguished Englishman playing the role of Admiral.'

'I don't doubt,' said Judy's father solemnly, 'but that he looked the part much more than I do.'

Kay Roseter's stiff-lashed, hazel eyes opened wide. 'I didn't mean that at all! Dear me, Admiral, I am really too much in awe of you to indulge in—'

'Don't be my dear. I'm merely human.'

'But Marvel says the whole setup is too, too overpowering. She had me actually believing I'd have to curtsy.'

Dwight hastily put in a respectful word or two, and Kay Roseter drifted off. Captain and Mrs. Lane, who were politely trying not to stare at the booting, shouting group across the room, came up. Judy said 'I don't believe I've met all the people.'

Dwight said, 'That's Cary Tennant's group, making all the noise. They're nice when you know them. Shall I take you over there?'

Judy found that the center of the merrymaking was a young debutante called 'Slim' Jarrett. She was ugly in an animated way, and Judy guessed that her personality was famous among her friends. She was that sort, 'Slim' pounced on Judy. 'You're the typical Navy girl Dwight was telling us about. "You'd be at home in a trunk, or in Guam, or in the jungle, isn't that right?'

'You've got me mixed with the Englishman who dresses for dinner,' said Judy.

Dwight grinned. Judy met Diane's eyes. Diane and Bill and Magda Hamilton and her husband were standing near a bookcase. They had been reading the titles of the books.

A Chinese servant carrying a tray of cocktail glasses circled among the guests. Marvel said, 'If anybody wants to drink, I've had the back porch changed into a sort of patio.'

People trooped through the dining room, out the French doors to view the patio. Judy thought, 'She might as well have bought a new name. She's practically made this one over.'

Jack Hanley, who had been sticking pretty close to Judy all evening, said in a low voice, 'I feel sick. Let's stay out here and watch the stars.'

'What's wrong with you?' she asked.

'I've had a stiff dose of snobbery,' he replied. 'Those friends of hers are poisonous.'

'You simply don't know them. They're not your kind.'

'That's it. The rarified air is killing me. And say, I don't think the skipper liked the sound of a remark Cary Tennant passed.'

Judy said crisply, 'It's silly to attach too much importance to these things. They're Marvel's friends.'

'So what?'

He had not yet mentioned the fact that Judy was responsible for her father and mother's presence. But she knew he understood the state of affairs, and while she seated herself in a white metal chair, she waited for him to speak.

But he didn't. He said, 'You're a gallant kid, Judy. Did I ever tell you I like you?'

'You told me.'

'So what again, eh?'

She didn't answer. The rest had gone back into the house, now. There was only the sound of their voices, muffled a little, and the warmth of the night, and a smell of flowers from the garden that reminded her curiously of the wedding in the church.

Then they heard footsteps coming out toward them. A woman's voice said, 'But they're impossible! They're positively provincial. If that's the Navy, I'll take New York's East Side.'

Judy stiffened. Jack was sitting very still.

A man replied, Cary Tennant, Judy was certain. 'Marvel's just having a little fling,' he said. 'It won't last long. The man was handsome and she wanted some fun. She'll get over it. She's not the girl to stick in the mud.'

'I—I think we'd better get up and make a noise,' Judy said quickly. 'I don't want to hear any more of that!'

Jack looked at her. 'You didn't need to hear it to know, did you? These people are all false. Thrill chasers. Moneyed bums. Who was it said—life in E flat?'

Then Cary's suave voice was closer. 'Hello, there. I thought we had Marvel's little rustic twoby-four by ourselves.'

'Apparently,' said Jack. 'Come, Judy.'
