Having Trouble, John?

That stream of incoming members assembling for the 76th congress seems to have momentarily baffled Vice President John Nance Garner whose role in national politics looms larger than ever. "Cactus Jack" wrinkles his face in perplexity which the camera registers faithfully.

2nd Andrews Well Has Good Showing

The Rich-McNabb No. 2 Andrews 16 miles northwest of Cisco in the southwestern edge of Stephens county, was standing 1,500 feet of oil in hole yesterday afternoon after drilling four feet of saturated Lake sand. The well shut down to cement pipe. It probably will be drilled in Monday.

Preaching of Pastor Abounds in Alliteration

By The AP Feature Service
CHARDON, O., Jan. 5.—Flat Foot Floogie is a floundering failure as alliteration compared to that used by Cromwell Cook Cleveland of Chardon's Christian church.

He sprinkles sermons with an abundance of alliteration. "Purpose precedes progress" is a simple sentence from one of the 26-year-old preacher's salty sermons.

Mr. Cleveland is a former Yale student and his talent has done much to increase church attendance. He does not consider himself a "show-off," explaining his father was a debater who always used such phrases without effort.

"Man's cravings carve upon his character and control his conduct. Procrastinating, putting off, is a parasite that prevents any progress."

"Many persons are... baffled, bothered, bewildered and made bitter by their blunderings because they are blind to the way that is best."

Mr. Cleveland's longest sentence to date: "This loose, lavish, lustful lady—a lazy libertine, had lost his love for the Lord and all things lovely and was living in luxury, but now at the length of his litling lark, being listless and lank, he longed for at least a little lunch, for he at last had languidly limped to the loathsome level that was lamentably lousy and low."

Sermonette on the church bulletin board— "Purpose without Pep is Piffle."

WORK ON LAKE CISCO CABINS TO BEGIN SOON

$400,000 Street Paving Program Sent to San Antonio

Approval of the city of Cisco's application for a street paving project involving maximum WPA and city expenditures of $400,000 at the Fort Worth field office of the WPA was indicated today as city officials received notice the application had been forwarded to the regional office at San Antonio.

Approval there will mean the project will go directly to Washington for a final o. k.

Meanwhile work was expected to get under way on the approved $30,000 Lake Cisco cabin project by next Monday. The work order

HALF MILLION FOR ROADS
WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 5 (AP).—Representative Clyde L. Garrett announced today that President Roosevelt had approved a WPA grant of $453,897 for construction of lateral roads in Eastland county, Texas.

PROGRAM FOR A YEAR
County Judge Adamson told the Cisco Daily Press this afternoon that the $453,000 lateral road WPA project just approved at Washington covers a program of road construction estimated to keep the county busy for a year. During the year as local projects are worked up they will be approved at the regional office of the WPA at San Antonio under this "blanket" program.

already has been issued but the district office is waiting for the arrival of a supervisor, who is expected from Fort Worth. No new supervisors of projects may be named, it was explained, and the work must be held up until one is available from another job.

The cabin project is one of the most necessary improvements for completing the facilities at Lake Cisco. Cabins of native stone—25 of them—will be built on designs which represent improvement over the advanced construction employed in recently built state parks. These will be available to tourists, hunters, fishermen and parties who wish to spend several days at the lake on picnics and outings.

New Japanese Cabinet Is Formed
TOKYO, Jan. 5 (AP).—Baron Kiichiro Hiranuma, fascist-inclined president of the privy council and premier-designate succeeding the comparative liberal Prince Fumimaro Konoye, today completed his cabinet with five new ministers.

Ishi Watari, minister of finance; Chuji Machida, minister of agriculture, and Yonezo Maeda, minister of railways, were the only new members of the government in the list prepared by the 73-year-old Japanese nationalist whose powerful, behind-the-scenes backers yesterday thrust aside the retiring premier for a more authoritarian form of government.

Misses Ruth El Duff and Louise Stephenson have gone to Lubbock where they will enter nurses' training at the Lubbock sanitarium.

Two Killed in Tennessee Twister
LURAY, Tenn., Jan. 5 (AP).—Destructive tornado winds drove over a portion of west Tennessee Wednesday leaving at least two persons dead, many injured and homeless, and property damage of several thousands of dollars.

The estimated number of injured ranged upwards of 25 while two were known dead in the violent wind that swept through Luray, 15 miles from Jackson, late today.

NEARLY NINE BILLIONS FOR BUDGET ASKED

"Violent Contraction" in Spending Advised Against

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 5 (AP).—President Roosevelt asked vast sums for national defense today in a multi-billion dollar budget that projected another deficit and unprecedented public debt of $11,458,000,000 in 1940.

The annual report to congress on the nation's finances advised against "violent contraction" in spending or "drastic new taxes." He opened the way, however, to moderate tax increases to meet the increased expenditures of $422,000,000 for armament and farm relief costs.

He called for $8,995,663,200 for federal spending during the fiscal year beginning next July 1, and estimated deficit for that year at $3,226,348,200.

He asked for $1,609,000,000 for national defense, including an extra $500,000,000 to speed up the armaments program.

He requested $968,158,851 for agriculture department expenses, including $153,000,000 in subsidies to the farmers.

The president asked for $1,500,000,000 for WPA and $110,000,000 for flood control.

He also urged that the civilian conservation corps be made permanent.

Indictment of Rene Allred and Powers Quashed

HOUSTON, Jan. 5 (AP).—Special Asst. U. S. Attorneys General Henry A. Schweinhaut and Walter E. Gallagher said Wednesday night they would appeal to the U. S. supreme court Federal Judge T. M. Kennerley's decision today to quash an indictment against Rene Allred Jr. and Neal Powers.

Schweinhaut and Gallagher were here to prosecute the indictment charging Allred, brother of James V. Allred, Texas' governor, and Powers, former Texas assistant attorney general, with conspiracy to violate the Connally hot oil act. The prosecutors said they would take their appeal of Judge Kennerley's ruling to the high court on a special act which allows the government to appeal decisions that involve the validity of an act of congress.

Constitutionality of the federal law, originally passed in 1935 and extended and amended by congress in 1937, was upheld by Kennerley in an order sustaining a general demurrer filed by the defendants' attorneys. Originally, a violation of the law was a misdemeanor but by the 1937 act made a felony. The law, unless extended by congress, will expire in June, 1939.

Attack Validity
Lawyers for Allred and Powers attacked validity of the indictment and constitutionality of the law in the general demurrer argued last October before Judge Kennerley.

H. E. Hines, Texas oil man and the third person named in the joint indictment, was not mentioned in the court's order today.

Hines, the federal marshal said, is a fugitive and faces another federal indictment here.

The ten counts charged in the indictment were alleged to have occurred when the first Connally act was in effect. Specifically, the three men were accused in

10 Per Cent Semi-Annual Dividend

The board of directors of the First National bank in Cisco, meeting Saturday morning, declared a semi-annual dividend of 10 per cent payable Saturday. The annual stockholders' meeting will be held on Tuesday, January 10, the required date for meetings of stockholders of national banks, president Alex Spears said.

The bank also placed a large amount to surplus account. The First National bank has enjoyed one of the most prosperous years in its history, officials said. With more than $1,100,000 on deposit, it has showed constant gains in deposits and volume of business done during the depression years, and the bank looks forward to 1934 confident of continued growth under conditions which are expected to improve materially.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
SALLY BLAIR—heroine. She had everything that popularity could win, her, except

DAN REYNOLDS—hero. He might have had Sally but while he was king on skis

COREY PORTER was king of the social whirl. So . . . But go on with the story.

Yesterday: At Lake Placid Sally sees Dan again, talks with him in the belief she may be able thus to forget him forever.

CHAPTER XXIII

There had been nothing for Corey to do but to follow Sally. Corey never refused a dare, which was practically what Sally's remark, "You're not afraid to go are you?" had meant.

If Dan was surprised when they approached him, he did not betray it. His color, underneath the smooth deep tan, might have deepened a bit, but his gray eyes were grave and steady.

"We came to congratulate you on winning," Sally said, holding out her hand. "How are you, Dan?" There was no need to ask, this was the old Dan, sturdy and strong as the mountains he set out to conquer.

"I'm very well, thank you," he returned, taking her hand, but only for a brief moment. "And now are you, Sally?" he added, though there seemed no need to ask that, either. Sally's dark eyes had never been brighter, she had never looked more lovely.

Was that all he had to say to her? Sally wondered. Didn't he know what just seeing him did to her? Wasn't his heart hammering painfully, too?

"I'm fine," Sally said. "Never better, thank you." She tossed her dark curls. He must see how gay she was how right her world.

"Well, you've got what you wanted—at last," she said. You've made the Olympics this time, Dan."

"I guess that's right," Dan said. His glance went to her left hand. She had taken off her heavy mittens, on her third finger Corey's diamond sparkled in the bright sun. "I see you've got what you wanted, too," Dan added.

"Yes," Corey spoke up, he could not keep the smug satisfaction out of his tone, "congratulations are in order again. Since Sally's what I want."

"I wish you both all the happiness in the world," Dan returned.

Which world do you mean? Sally wanted to ask. Mine or yours Dan? But she knew the answer to that question. She knew now that Dan would never come back. He had not belonged in her world. He had been right in going away.

She knew the answer to a lot of other questions too. This meeting, instead of convincing her that she could put Dan out of her heart, had shown her that she still believed in him, whether he ever believed in her again or not, that she could never forget him.

How could she go on pretending now? How could she be the glamour girl, always laughing and gay? How could she live through these next days knowing Dan was so near, yet lost to her forever, knowing she must go on being the Sally Blair who wore Corey's ring on her engagement finger?

The next day Corey and Sally had planned to climb to the top of one of the highest trails. The sky was as serene, as azure as the day before. But far to the north was one slate-colored patch. The air hung too heavy and charged.

"Do you think there's any chance of a storm?" Corey asked, a bit dubiously. "Maybe we'd better not try it today, Sally."

"Why not?" Sally's dark eyes challenged the sky. She wasn't afraid of danger. She wanted, if anything, to force it, to lose herself in a new fight.

"Check," Corey said, using their old phrase for agreement. He wouldn't refuse to go just because of one gray cloud.

On their way they met Dan. He saw their skis and poles, walked over to them. He said, "Hello. You're not really going up today, are you? Don't you know the air's not right? There's going to be a blizzard." Dan could tell without looking at the slate sky what the weather promised. He was a mountain-bred, mountain-trained.

"Blizzard!" Sally laughed. "Why the sky's as clear as a bell. We don't mind a little snow, Dan! Even though we don't belong in this world." There was bitterness as well as irony in her tone.

"You don't know what you're talking about!" Dan returned roughly. He turned on Corey. "You're not going to let her go, are you?" he asked.

"Why not?" Corey said, as Sally had to him. "We're going up into the divide, above timber . . ."

"You're crazy, if you do that!" Dan spoke earnestly now. "Don't try that trail today," he warned.

Sally shrugged her shoulders beneath her plaid jacket. Why should Dan ask her not to go? It did not matter to him what she did. She would show him that she would not run away from his world. "We'll be all right," she said briefly. "I can't really see what concern it is of yours, Dan."

She knew that was a cruel thing to say. But she wanted to hurt him. If only she could make him suffer, as he had made her, make his heart ache.

"Perhaps you're right," Dan said. He finched, a tiny white line drawn around the stern set of his nice mouth. He knew Sally again thought him a coward. He knew she meant he had forfeited the right to make what she did any concern of his.

Corey never had known Sally to be gayer than she was that day, full of fun and laughter, the way he liked her to be. The skiing was perfect with what the sharp wind against their faces, the blood racing through their bodies, the music of swift flight, the poetry of pure motion.

When they had had their fill, gloriously tired with the good weariness of clean physical effort, they stopped for time to rest. Corey built a fire beneath an icy waterfall; they had brought along steaks to broil, buns, a thermos of hot coffee.

"I guess our friend Reynolds is the one who is slightly crazy," Corey chuckled. "It's been a perfect day. I wouldn't have missed it for anything, would you, my sweet?"

"No," Sally returned. But somewhat absently. She had been watching the leaden patch in the north. While they picknicked it had spread to alarming proportions, like thick gray felt. She called Corey's attention to it now, adding that perhaps they had better pack up and start down trail.

"They're just night clouds beginning to gather," Corey refused to be alarmed. But even as he spoke a snowflake drifted down. Another followed, and then another. They scrambled to their feet. "I guess we had better get going," Corey agreed. Now the snow fell with smothering, soft persistency. The world was being blotted out before their eyes. They could not even see the waterfall that had looked like frozen rain.

"We'd better not use our skis,"

Sally said. They would carry them over a cliff too swiftly! It would be safer to walk. She thought of the divide, if they missed the trail, that sheer drop of more than 5000 feet. No one could manage that jump and stop himself with a Christie, not even Dan.

They plowed ahead, heads bent, shoulders touching, not wasting breath in speech. The wind had come up. It flung itself against them, lashing their eyes, tearing the breath from their nostrils. The snow struck in sharp pellets with terrific force.

It seemed to Sally they had endured this torture for hours. The sky was almost black, the tangled underbrush weighted with deep snow, the tall pines bent in the wind's fury. Suddenly Corey stopped complaining they were on to a cocktail party at a conference. American agents in Germany probably have their beer ration cut.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Wiping away a tear for a night, but joy comes in the morning.—Ps. XXX, 5.

Angels sing and your faithful watches keep;
Sing us sweet fragments of the songs above;
Till morning's joy shall end the night of weeping,
And life's long shadows break in cloudless love.
—FABER

There is a new horizon for onward-looking men. We are so constituted that our hopes are immeasurable, like stars, and the time of joy is prolonged until the time of life.—R. L. Stevenson.

One Man's Work

THE headlines these days go to the men who are out to make trouble. And there are so many trouble-makers, making so many different kinds of trouble, that it sometimes seems as if nobody was left to carry on the old job of making the world a better place. But you can get a distorted view of things by using the headlines as your sole guide. Of necessity, the black type is reserved for things that are exciting; and there is not, unfortunately, anything very exciting about a man who is patiently wearing out his life trying to take a load off of mankind's back.

ALL of which was somehow brought to mind recently when the papers announced the death of T. Wingate Todd, the physician who guided Cleveland's famous British Foundation.

Dr. Todd had made extensive studies of the growth and development of children. He had trained many doctors, and had charted a far-reaching attack on some of the infirmities and disabilities of old age. All in all, the work he did meant more health and happiness for — literally — thousands upon thousands of people; and the work remains, and will continue to benefit people for many years to come.

Now Dr. Todd was in the prime of life when he died. We may not know as much as we should know about what fatigue does to the body, but it seems safe to say that he simply worked himself to death. He had been spending from 12 to 20 hours in his laboratory each day, ignoring warnings that he ought to take an extended rest. In the end it was too much for him.

Unless you are more widely informed than the average person, it is probable that his name was quite unfamiliar to you. He had had his share of scientific acclaim, of course, but the general public had hardly so much as heard of him. The work he did was not headline-producing work. It was unexciting, unsensational.

BUT — it is quite possible that the child next door to you (or, for that matter, your own child) is alive today because of this man's work. Somewhere in the United States, and in other countries as well, children are happily playing who would be less active, less robust, if he never lived. And perhaps you yourself, when you reach old age, will be spared some of old age's infirmities because of his work.

Nor is that all. The research he did and the knowledge he gained are at the disposal of medical science everywhere. A century from now, the art of healing will be just a little broader and surer than it would be if Dr. Todd had not done his work.

All of which simply means that there is no need for anyone to be too discouraged because the trouble-makers are grabbing all the headlines. Quietly and without benefit of publicity, the Dr. Todds of this world are still at work. Half the time we don't even know they exist!—yet in the long run what they are doing is infinitely more important.

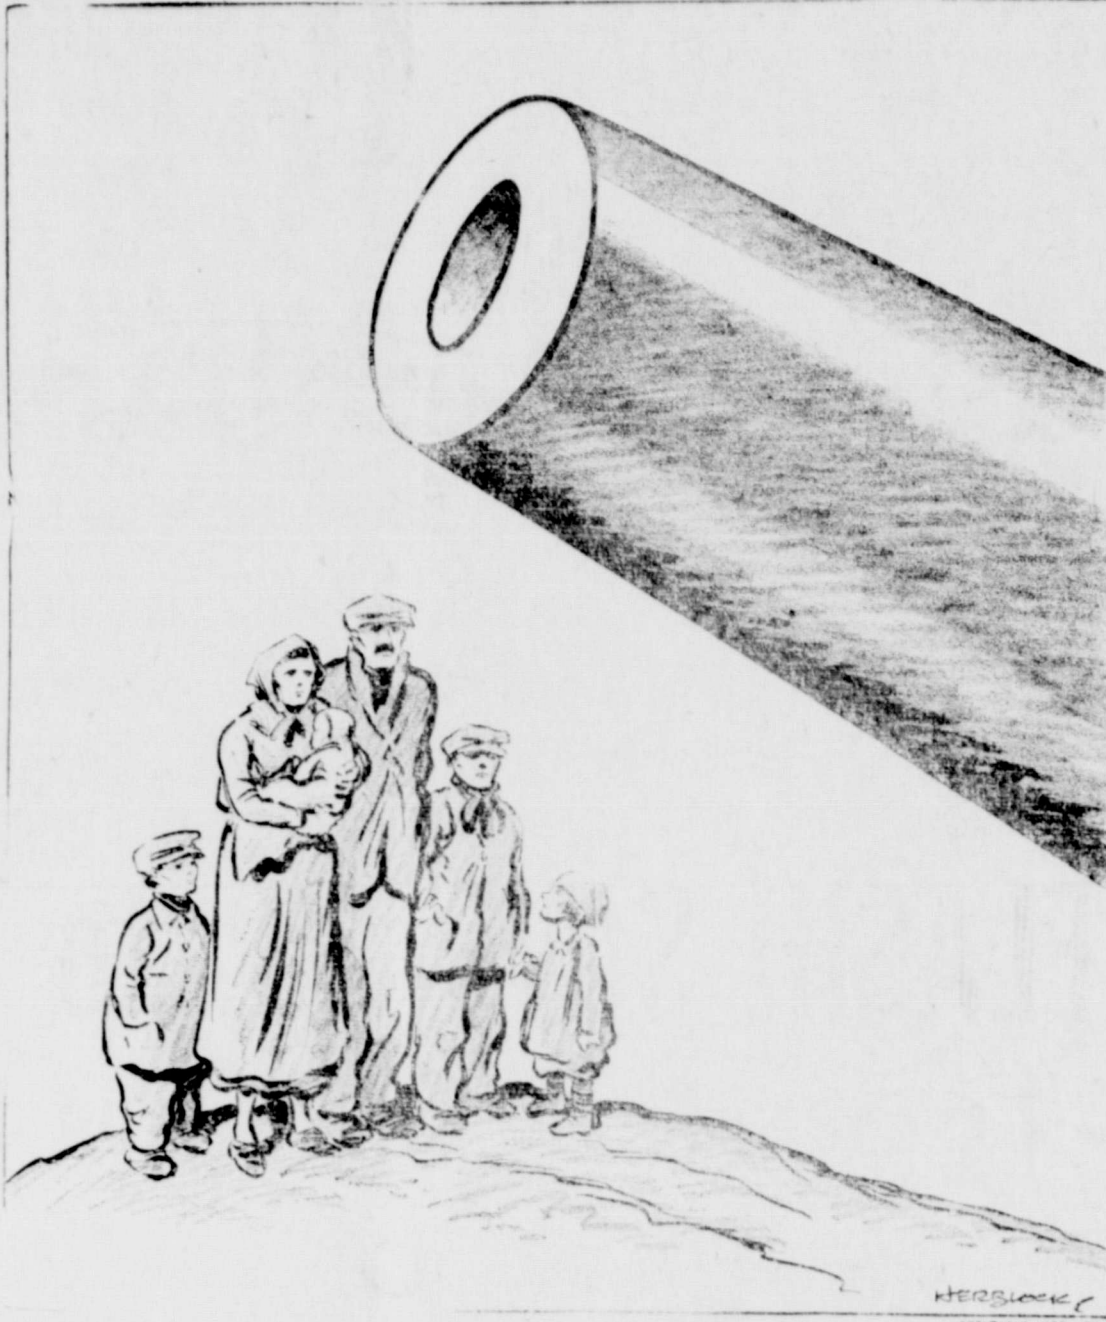

From news story of Cleveland, O., murder trial: "... she told Stanley Sulkowski she had killed her husband only to frighten him." Scared to death, eh?

Christmas gives new meaning to so many things—like elbow room—in the ribs of the guy next to you.

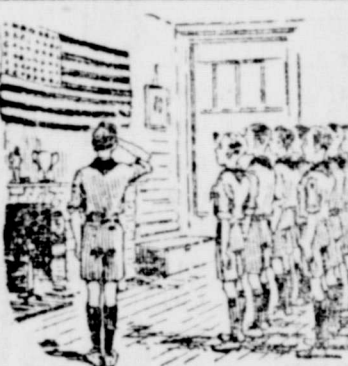

A British scientist sees a return to rigid world economy in 1950. Apparently he never heard of the week after Christmas.

Television probably means a lot of the radio stars should be heard but not seen.

Keeping Up With The Boy Scouts

Annual Meeting
The annual meeting of the Comanche Trail council, to be held in Hotel Brownwood, Friday, January 20, is for all scouts of the council and Eagle scouts will be guests. This question has been asked by a number of new scouts.

Human and Other Nature

By W. F. BRUCE

It is off to an early start. I mean the 1938 run of wind. If I were back there at Prairie Home on the Kansas plains sitting in the northwest corner of the country schoolhouse the wind would be playing a tune with some loose silver or over some creek in the weatherboarding, rising toward a shriek at the fiercest gusts and dying to a low moan on the lulls, but keeping up a mournful sound continuously all day. Then at the signal of dismissal I would take down the wind on a mile run toward home, along the public road and across the fields or pasture. Or it might be the accompaniment of a blizzard with snow whirling through the penetrating air, mixed with enough top soil to make brown or black drifts that one would expect to be pure white, behind every bunch of prairie grass or clump or roadside weeds. It might be that that very day I had read in my old third reader, "How the Winds Blow".

High and low, the winter winds blow: They fill the hollows with drifts of snow, And sweep on the hill a pathway clear. They hurry the children along to school, And whistle a song for the happy New Year.

But today I am not in Kansas, but in Texas. And the hard brown wind is more like a spring wind. Perhaps it is starting early to avoid the rush along about March when fluffy spring chicks are its playthings and young gar-

Letters From Our Readers

The Christmas feast and New Years are over and I am writing this letter with my Christmas pen, a beautiful present from a friend that I have never seen. My mail box was loaded with Christmas greetings and glad wishes for the new year, some of the most sentimental from the hearts of friends I didn't know I had. There are so many friends it gives me courage and will to go forth and battle against the hard times in this life and war against unrighteousness. Each day may I be or say something that will be pleasing in the sight of the Supreme Heavenly Father.

Garrett Praises Choice of Rainey As Texas U. Head

The choice of Dr. Homer Price Rainey of Washington as president of the University of Texas was praised by Cong. Clyde Garrett when last week as a happy one. Cong. Garrett and Dr. Rainey became well acquainted at Washington. Both attend the same church and Sunday school class and their families are frequently together in the national capital.

Native Texan
The selection of Dr. Rainey, 42 years old and a native Texan, ended a year and a half search for a successor to Dr. H. Y. Benedict, who died in May, 1937.

Dr. Rainey is expected to assume the position after the close of the present term next June and in the meantime J. W. Calhoun, comptroller, will continue to serve as acting head of the institution.

In a statement, Dr. Rainey predicted a splendid future for the university, said he was accepting the presidency with a "deep sense of obligation" and solicited support of Texas citizens that "together we may realize their highest aspirations for their university."

Dr. Edward Randall, chairman of the regents, praised Rainey as one of the outstanding men in higher education in the United States and expressed confidence he

INSTRUMENTS FILED
Following is a list of instruments filed the past week in the office of County Clerk R. V. Gallowsy.

W. T. Andrus, et al, to E. Wyatt, et ux, warranty deed; Arthur E. Ernst, et ux, to Land Title bank and Trust company, trustee, extension of agreement; Mrs. R. L. Faircloth to Nat. Faircloth, warranty deed; Myrtle Gilbert to D. D. Sandlin, quit claim deed; W. V. Gardenhire to W. J. Gardenhire, one warranty deed and two bills of sale.

would "give our university vigorous and intelligent leadership."

He declined to name the exact salary Dr. Rainey would receive but said it would be "more" than that of the head football coach, which reputedly is $15,000 a year. The legislature had authorized a salary up to $17,500 in an effort to obtain an able educator. The last president received $10,000.

Bucknell President
Before becoming director of the youth commission, a non-governmental agency to plan for the care and education of youth, Dr. Rainey was president for four years of Bucknell university, at Lewisburg, Pa., and also was president of Franklin college, in Indiana, for four years. At Bucknell his plan for a modern type liberal education program giving greater prominence to the arts attracted national attention among educators.

He was a professor of education at the University of Oregon, a professor at Austin college, Sherman, Texas, his alma mater, and a special lecturer on summer school faculties of the Universities of Texas, Chicago and Minnesota.

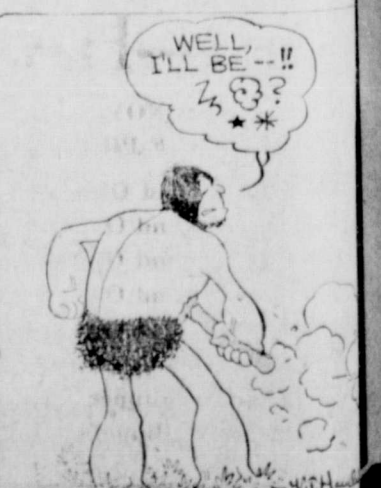

His bachelor of arts degree was received from Austin college and the degree of master of arts and doctor of philosophy from the University of Chicago. Three colleges have awarded him honorary degrees.

Born in Clarksville, Texas, Dr. Rainey married Mildred Collins of Lovelady, Texas, in 1920, and they have two children, Helen, 14, and Lenore, 11. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Rainey of Ellenville, Texas. Mrs. Rainey is a graduate of the University of Texas. At Austin college, Dr. Rainey was a sensational baseball pitcher, a brilliant football halfback and a fine tennis player. On graduation he played professional baseball with the Galveston club of the Texas league but gave up baseball later to take up education studies.

While director of the youth commission Dr. Rainey supervised extensive surveys and inquiries concerning problems of youth, including more than 50,000 personal interviews with young persons.

Body of Attorney Sent to Illinois

MIDLAND, Jan. 5 (AP)—The body of Donald D. Traynor, 28, former Illinois university athlete and University of Texas law graduate, who was shot to death here Friday, was sent to Centralia, Ill., his birthplace, for burial. Funeral services were held Monday.

Traynor, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Traynor, who now reside in Dallas, was killed on the rear doorstep of the residence of his father-in-law, Col. John Perkins, widely known west Texas lawyer.

His wife and year-old daughter had been residing at the Perkins home.

Perkins, an army reserve officer, was charged with Traynor's slaying and was released on bond. He made no comment.

Traynor, who married Perkins' daughter in 1930, resigned from his father-in-law's law firm Dec. 1 and had been visiting his parents in Dallas. He had returned at the time of the shooting. Traynor went to Midland from Cisco.

More Emphasis on Soil Conservation

EASTLAND, Jan. 5 (Sp.)—County Agent Elmo V. Cook has announced that more emphasis than ever will be given soil and water conservation work in the county during 1934.

January 8 and 14 has been designated by the legislature as soil conservation week in Texas.

The official stated that cooperation of many agencies is to be secured in the work this year. In the near future a one-day terracing school will be held. C. Hohn, extension service soil and water conservation specialist, will be in charge.

On Tuesday Cook assisted in terrace work on the Howard Gilbert, A. A. Craighead and S. L. Craighead farms near Carbon.

Special Attention Being Given to Starch Plants

Business men or farmers interested in financing factories which will provide a market for farm products are invited to communicate with George I. Lane, county supervisor of the Farm Security administration, with headquarters at Eastland.

Mr. Lane said that special attention is being given in some parts of the state to possibility of developing factories for making starch from sweet potatoes, but that FSA aid is available for similar enterprises for other farm products. Loans will be made to low-income farmers to buy stock in these enterprises, which must be co-operative. It is not necessary, however, that the plants be operated by the co-operative. They may be leased to a private concern on a profit-sharing basis.

"Some parts of this state have enjoyed a remarkable increase in prosperity in recent years, because they have been chosen as the location of milk plants," the supervisor said. "These milk plants, manufacturing butter, cheese, and powdered or condensed milk, have provided a market for all the milk that can be produced the year around in those communities. The price paid has not been high, as compared with the price that the farmer might obtain by selling grade A milk. However, these plants provide a market for all the milk, every gallon that the farmer can produce."

The state is now upon the verge of development in the sweet potato industry which may bring the same sort of prosperity as the milk plants brought to the dairy areas, he said. Certain sections of northern and eastern Texas and of southern Oklahoma grow bigger and better sweet potatoes than anywhere else, but production and marketing has been carried on without organization or advertising.

A plan has been sought to stimulate cultivation of yams in this favored area, and at the same time provide outlet for the surplus in case the table market became glutted. The Farm Security administration, from its regional headquarters at Dallas, Texas, recently sent a committee to Laurel, Miss., where the nation's one and only plant has been set up for the turning of sweet potatoes into starch.

500,000 Pounds Imports
America imports 500,000 pounds of starch annually, a large part of it made from cassava in Java. There is only one starch plant west of the Mississippi river, and it uses corn as its raw product. Investigators have estimated that a market could be found for the product of 100 such plants in the southern states, using sweet potatoes. The cassava starch from Java is imported at a price of slightly less than three cents a pound, without import duties.

The Mississippi plant is now producing starch from yams at about three cents a pound, but requires another one cent a pound for selling costs, it was reported by FSA investigating committee. This enables the plant to pay the farmer 20 cents a bushel for any sort of imperfect or culled yams, leaving the better yams to be sold for the table market for livestock feed, the 20 cents a bushel producers get from them get also 10 cents from the federal government by diverting the product to usual market.
