Bette Davis and Tracy Win Awards

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 24 (AP).—Bette Davis and Spencer Tracy last night were declared winners of the annual awards of the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences for the best performances during the past year of a film actress and actor.

Miss Davis' award was on the basis of her performance in "Jezebel" and Tracy's for his work in "Boys Town."

"You Can't Take It With You," produced by Columbia studios, was given the award for the most outstanding film of the year.

Wallace Suggests "Competitive" Basis for Cotton

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24 (AP).—Secretary of Agriculture Wallace suggested that American cotton be placed on a "competitive basis" in world markets.

He offered this suggestion to the senate agriculture committee which opened hearings on legislative proposals for dealing with the cotton surplus.

Wallace did not detail how American cotton could meet competition of low-priced staple in the world market, but referred to the administration's program of subsidizing wheat exports.

He urged that whatever congress does in the way of cotton legislation be done in a hurry.

"Any measures to increase exports, increase domestic sales and to reduce the surplus should be put into operation as soon as possible," he said.

Must Know at Once

Then, reminding the senators that planting time was near at hand, the secretary said "it is absolutely essential that we know one way or the other in the next two weeks."

Southern senators have been busy seeking some way to reduce the surplus of American cotton, of which more than 11,000,000 bales are under government loans totaling about $500,000,000.

Wallace declared the present administration farm program was "fundamentally sound" and that cotton loans should be continued this season because cotton growers expected them when they voted to continue the control program this year.

The secretary also said cotton prices would be much lower now and the surplus much larger, if the present act had not been in operation.

Wallace admitted it was unwise to go on increasing the stocks of cotton under government loans while exports of American cotton were declining.

Will Preach at Presbyterian Church

Clifford Williams, pastor-elect of the First Presbyterian church at Haskell, a student in the Austin Presbyterian seminary, will preach here at the Sunday morning service of the Presbyterian church. He will also teach the adult Bible class of the Sunday school. Rev. Williams is an outstanding speaker and the membership and others are cordially invited to hear his message.

Rev. M. H. Applewhite will be in Haskell Sunday morning to conduct communion services there. The evening worship hour will be held according to schedule.

RECORD CROWD IS EXPECTED ON SATURDAY

Rodeo Performances Tonight and Saturday P. M.

The Eastland County Livestock show was under way on schedule today, with more individual exhibits than any previous show has drawn. Cloudy skies this morning may have cut into the expected attendance, although the crowd was large, but clearing weather this afternoon promised a good night for the initial performance of the rodeo at the Lions club park. The chamber of commerce is sponsoring the livestock show and the junior chamber the rodeo.

The livestock show this year has confined its awards to the entries of Future Farmer members and 4-H club boys. The entries of these boys were large, but the number of commercial stockmen who placed exhibits in the show was not as large as had been expected. Nevertheless the show already has established itself as the most successful ever conducted, and officials were looking forward tomorrow to the largest crowd in history. The second performance of the rodeo, for which the Double Heart ranch at Sweetwater is furnishing stock, will take place at 2:30.

Judging of dairy cattle and hogs was under way this afternoon. J. H. Taylor of Dublin is the judge. Tomorrow at 10 o'clock beef cattle and sheep and goats will be judged.

The Future Farmers classes of Cisco are the largest exhibitors in the show, because of their nearness to the site, and the quality of the animals shown by these boys is the best in history.

T. G. Caudle, teacher of vocational agriculture here and agricultural secretary of the chamber of commerce, is general superintendent of the show. The Nance Motor company used car lot at Tenth and D avenue is the site of the show.

Names of the winning exhibitors will be published in Sunday's issue of the Cisco Daily Press.

Poultry and Egg Profits Scrambled

AUSTIN, Feb. 24—Poultry and egg men of Texas experienced scrambled profits last month, according to University of Texas compilations issued today.

Shipments of poultry from Texas to interstate points during January dropped drastically, as only nine cars of turkeys moved against 13 in January last year and only 50 cars of chickens as compared with 88 cars last year. In percentages, turkeys fell 30.8 per cent and chickens 43.3 per cent.

Egg shipments, on the other hand, gained one car over last January, to 16 carloads. No eggs were imported from other states last month.

W. O. W. PARTY TONIGHT

There will be a party for members of the W. O. W. circle tonight at 8 o'clock at the Woodmen hall. It was announced today. An entertaining musical program has been arranged and all members and friends are invited to attend.

INDIA'S FLOOD CONTROL

LUCKNOW, India, Feb. 24 (AP).—An inter-provincial river commission has been formed to control rivers of united provinces, Bihar and Bengal after several villages were swept away in recurrent floods.

Nice Rover!

JOE LAFLAMME, colorful north woodsman, actually flew one of these snarling full-breed timber wolves . . . uncaged and untied . . . from Gogama, Ont., to the Sportsmen's show in New York. LaFlamme is the only one ever to hitch a full team of timber wolves to a sled.

Boys Entertained With Banquet

More than sixty boys, fathers and Lions attended the banquet given the boys sports club, sponsored by the Lions at the First Methodist church last night, when all enjoyed a joint program by the Lions and boys. Talks, music and tricks of magic made the program live and moving. At the close boys chose a Lion as a buddy upon whom they would lean for advice and friendship at all times.

A set program of key talks by Lions on boys activities by the club and responses by the boys kindled the spirit of the group and impromptu talks were made by Anderson Meglason, Ivie, Cecil Elliott, Bob Taylor, McDonald, principal of West Ward school; Pop Garrett, Sandler, Tuttle and a number of the boys and their fathers. Rafts were given for the ladies who served the bountiful meal and for the Lions, by the whole group. Joe Whitesides, captain of the older boys presided with Rev. Joe L. Patterson, master of ceremonies.

UNDERGOES OPERATION

ACTION TAKEN IN INTEREST OF HARMONY

Bible Announces Reasons on Letter to Cisco Press

Announcement of his withdrawal of H. A. Bible, city commissioner for six years, from the race for re-election was made today in a letter from Mr. Bible to the editor of the Cisco Daily Press. Mr. Bible withdrew in favor of W. J. Leach, prominent Cisco business man, whose name was advanced as a candidate by a large number of Cisco business men and who agreed to announce for election when Mr. Bible withdrew.

The action was taken, Mr. Bible said in his letter, in the interest of harmony and to promote the greatest degree of community cooperation in the solution of grave problems which confront the city. Mr. Bible's letter follows:

Mr. E. A. Butler, editor, Cisco Daily Press, Cisco, Texas.

Dear Sir:

I wish to announce for publication in the Cisco Daily Press this afternoon, that I have withdrawn, from the race for re-election as commissioner of the city of Cisco in favor of Mr. W. J. Leach, who has agreed to have his name placed on the ticket and who will, I sincerely believe, make Cisco a conscientious and able official.

The citizens of the community are due an explanation of the reasons why I am withdrawing and it is only fair for me to state these reasons.

I have made this decision because there are so many things facing Cisco that absolute harmony among the citizens and cooperation of all elements of the community are essential for their successful promotion and conclusion.

I am for the interest of Cisco, first, last and all the time. When confronted with a proposition of this kind I have not only my own wishes to consider, but I have the interests and wishes of those who have supported me and of the people of the community as a whole. I have studied this, and I believe that I have arrived at the right decision in the interest of harmony and cooperation. I am familiar with the extreme difficulties of the problems that confront the city, and I know how important to Cisco as a whole it is that these problems be solved. I know that to do anything at this time which would occasion friction, or prevent the best efforts and thought being brought to bear on these problems would be rendering Cisco the right kind of service. We need the help of everybody. I have earnestly considered whether or not remaining in the race

Skeleton no Clue in Tourist Murders

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., Feb. 24 (AP).—Anthropological examination, a department of justice agent said, apparently had exploded the theory a skeleton found along the Rio Grande near Los Lunas was connected with the disappearance four years ago of four Illinois tourists.

University of New Mexico anthropologists and several physicians estimated the skeleton's age at between 25 and 30 years old.

ENTRANCE TO THE YOUNGER GROUP

Jim Whitesides, leader of the younger boys group, took charge of the meeting for a few moments and initiated Jim Patterson into their group, demonstrating their method of work and giving the oath of obligation.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

My soul shall be satisfied, even as it were with marrow and fatness, when my mouth praiseth Thee with joyful lips.—Ps. lxxii, 5

No more in fear or grief I bow,
God and the angels love me now;
The joys prepared for me today
Drive fear and mourning far away.

Why not speak as though mankind were always on the eve of great vertigo of great joy. If you have learned to let your glance rest on sincerely simple truth, you will ever discover, deep down in all things, the silent ever-powering victory of that which you love.—Maeterlinck.

Lessons From New York Fascist Rally

SEVERAL things can be learned from the recent fascist rally in New York's Madison Square Garden.

They are things which the United States needs to learn, and to learn quickly.

1. The mask is off. The German-American bund definitely seeks to do America what Hitler's nazi movement has done to Germany. Of all the sneaky, sleazy little fascist movements in the country today, the bund, flaunting its hyphenism, is easily first. Very well, now we know.
2. New York set a precedent in handling these things. For years, much-hated communist and other radical movements have been given, generally speaking, their right to freedom of speech in the American tradition. Now the nazis get it, too.

Mayor La Guardia, whose contempt for the amateur Hitlers is exceeded by nobody's, nevertheless guaranteed them their right to meet and speak. That was the American way.

But La Guardia made this perfectly clear: the police department of the city would keep order, and nobody else. Self-appointed "storm troopers" would be given no right to do any policing. And the mayor turned out enough police to make certain that the preservation of public order was solely in the hands of public authority.

That is another lesson: nowhere, at no time, under no circumstances, must the American republic allow the function of keeping public order to be usurped by private organizations.

That is what happened in Germany four short years ago. Communists and nazis were allowed to go brawling up and down the public streets, with every brawl adding to the hatred each felt for the other, and causing supporters of the republic to split off and join one of the other until it was a fight between the two factions. Republican police were overawed and submerged between the "storm troops" of the nazis and the "workers' militia" of the communists.

This must not happen here. One republic, one public force charged with keeping public order. To this line we must grimly hew.

Those who oppose fascism do better to stay away from its meetings. What made the New York rally a world-wide story? Not the meeting itself, but the efforts of private citizens to break it up.

However odious such meetings may be, it is playing into their organizers' hands to break them up violently. It is of such brawling that fascist movements are spawned.

America is not yet governed in the streets, but in the capitol. It is there that nazism must be fought, not in public Donnybrooks.

Governors of Minnesota, Michigan, and Wisconsin will participate in the American Bowling Congress—and you have to give them credit. They're trying to learn how to handle strikes.

A group of political science students want to borrow the senate chamber for their annual conference. Probably want to see what the place looks like when all the seats are occupied.

Cleveland's mayor refuses to give city employes a five-day week. He wants them to go to nothing another half-day.

Selling Job

BRUCE CATTON IN WASHINGTON

BY BRUCE CATTON
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—Having been given a green light and a pat on the back by Congress, Martin Dies is all set to make his famous investigation bigger and better than ever before.

His committee is more experienced, it will have more time—and it will have $100,000 to spend. "We've got the outline," says Congressman Dies, "now we'll fill it in with hard facts." And he plans to begin with a quiet, systematic survey of the whole field before holding any public hearings.

Leaning back in his chair and chewing hard on a cigar, the stocky Texan recalls that just two years ago he was roundly booed when he moved for a congressional investigation of the sit-down strikes. He mustered only 118 votes and lost.

A few days ago only 35 congressmen voted against extending the life of his committee. Mr. Dies looks on the change as indicative of one of the greatest shifts of sentiment in American political history.

"People are sick and tired of European ideologies," he says. "They don't want Communism, or Nazism, or war, or any kind of notions from abroad. They want the traditional, fundamental Americanism—and any public men who don't recognize this trend are going to be on the outside looking in after 1940."

Out of this trend, he believes, will come a balanced program that will lead the country to its greatest period of prosperity.

"The present administration has done some wonderful things," he says. "But there is such a thing as an overdose. It's like medicine; you've got to let nature do nine-tenths of the healing. The field in which government can operate is limited. If government goes outside of that field it becomes an oppressor of the people."

"I believe in sane, practical progressivism. We have to stay between the reactionary on one side and the radical on the other."

Congressman Dies readily admits that the actual number of Communist party members in this country is small; but he declares that at least ten million people belong to organizations which are to a greater or lesser extent dominated and directed by the Communists.

"Those people don't want a big party membership," he explains. "The Communist looks instead for people who have no program, who are wandering in a daze. He has a program, and he sells it to the dissatisfied bourgeois—he uses them and then tosses them overboard."

Complaints that his committee has spent too much time investigating Communism and too little investigating Nazism leave Mr. Dies cold. He sees theseisms as simply two facets of the same thing.

One, he says, is national socialism; the other, international socialism. Both, he feels, stem from the notion that government ought to cure all evils, that the individual can't solve any problems for himself; and this, he adds, is a notion commonly shared by many modern liberals.

"I don't call those liberals liberals at all," he remarks.

The past year has been a tough one on Mr. Dies. He lost 25 pounds in weight, and has got so that he doesn't sleep well. His daily routine for months has been home-office, office-home; only twice in six months has he even gone to a movie, he says.

He has a wife and three sons, and in the old days he was a good bit of a family man; now, he says, his family hardly sees anything of him.

But he feels that the worst of it is over. He won the formal approval of Congress by an overwhelming vote.

His committee now will have enough money so that he can spare himself some of the spade-work. From now on, he says, it will be going places.

About Our Friends

By STEP A. LONG

We are all familiar with the saying that if the dog bites the man it is not news, but that if the man bites the dog it is news. So when one gets a 25-cent meal for 75 cents it is also not news—as anyone who has traveled about the world very much can testify.

But when one gets a 75-cent meal for 25 cents—as was that served by those ladies at the First Methodist church last night... A wonderful meal for boys and men with boyish appetites... it is news.

A dandy meat loaf... beans baked just right... many kinds of potato salad... vegetable and fruit salads, deviled eggs... cakes, pies, coffee, chocolate... and the big thing that got over with the boys was the repeat refills... additional helpings were pushed on the boys... and they were happy... and men are always happy when they are full of food.

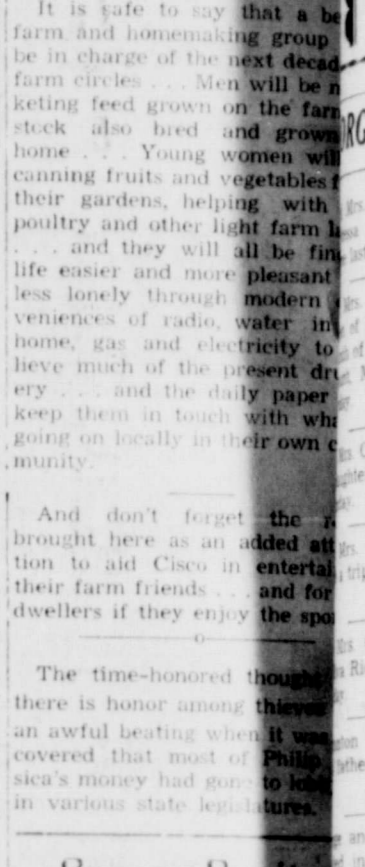

Joe Whitehead, leader of the older boys... and Jim Whitehead, captain of the younger boys, who showed us how they took in new members by initiating Jim Patterson into their organization with the oath of allegiance... and their enthusiasm in the whole program... was well worth the time of going.

And then at the close of the program, each boy adopted a Lion as a buddy for himself... to follow his counsel and guidance... and upon whom the boy was to bestow his friendship.

This last idea was that of O. L. Stamey, prince of boy workers... and the ending was a grand climax for the meeting.

And the credit of the event goes largely to Committeemen Joe Patterson and T. C. Williams... and to President Jack Anderson, who refused to have his ears whipped down when at one time the move seemed to be stalemated... He refused to quit... There is no limit, it seems, to the accomplishments of this group of Lions when they start going.

FROM CONGRESSMAN
CLYDE L. GARRETT

Do You Want a Job?—The coast guard will give an examination in June for admission to their academy. It is a strict civil service examination and the appointments are made from those who pass in the order of their grades. They have a fine school and the boys who attend are in line for appointment to the coast guard or are almost certain to secure a place with some of the merchant marine companies. If you are interested and will write me, I will send you their bulletin. The school is thorough in its work and has strict requirements.

Shocking Physical Conditions—Last year I named 11 boys to a single place at the naval academy before one of them passed the physical requirements. This year out of eight boys sent so far only one of them has passed the preliminary physical examination. Our people should look into the physical condition of the coming young men of this country. Most of the defects noted would have been remedied if taken in hand soon enough.

Recent Legislation Introduced—Some of the latest measures introduced in both houses of congress were: Rep. May's bill containing the president's national defense program; reduction of the FCC from seven to three members as advocated by Senator Wheeler of Montana; Senator King of Utah wants the president to have authorization to call an arms limitation conference.

Favorable Outlook—Within the United States, business prospects remain favorable. Industrial production for the first quarter is

Majority of 2.8 Per Cent Approve Plane Sales

AUSTIN, Feb. 24—A bare 2.8 per cent majority of American collegians this week joined President in his blessings for the recent military plane sale as a thwart to objectives of the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo axis, the Student Opinion Surveys of America reported today from their University of Texas campus headquarters.

The surveys polled a carefully-selected cross-section of American colleges on the question: "Do you approve of the United States selling planes to the so-called democratic countries and not to the so-called dictator countries?"

"We approve," said 52.8 per cent.

"We disapprove," said 47.2 per cent.

STORIES IN STAMPS

Poor Health Started Webster to Fame

THERE was no hint of a robust future in the puny babyhood of Daniel Webster. So frail was the infant Webster neighbors predicted freely he would not live. Tearfully, Mrs. Webster clasped her baby to her and cried when she heard these things.
But Daniel hung on, grew stronger, but never quite strong enough for hard work about the Webster farm. He was allowed to read instead. Young Daniel had a passion for reading in any event, thus was sown the seed of his subsequent magnificent career and his ill health was to nurture it.
For shortly Webster displayed a remarkable memory. The teacher at his district school offered prizes one day for the student who could recite the greatest number of verses from the Bible. Came Daniel's turn and he spun off so many that the teacher was compelled at length to stop him.
Almost at the same time young Daniel began to show force of delivery. What he remembered so scrupulously he expressed equally well. Teamsters who watered their horses at the village trough liked to have Daniel come out and read the Bible, so effective was his voice and speaking manner. At 18, Daniel delivered his first major oration. There was ample hint now of the great Webster to come.

SERIAL STORY WOMEN WANT BEAUTY!

BY LOUISE HOLMES
COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
SUSIE LAMBERT—She served waffles and dreamed of being beautiful.
DICK TREMAINE—He liked Susie's waffles but he couldn't see Susie.
JEFF BOWMAN—His chief concern was to make Susie as beautiful as she wanted to be.

Yesterday, Susie has nearly finished her beauty program. Already Jeff is interested in her. And Susie is finding an increasing interest in Jeff.

CHAPTER XVII
Jeff went back to the lay-out and Susie, in a series of graceful twirls, made for the piano. Her hands ran across the keys in a growing crescendo of chords and trills. She had played before in the gymnasium, she had sung quiet little ballads, but it had been nothing like this. Susie and Emma had scarcely noticed her singing before. Now they stood gaping in the shower room door as she burst into song.

It was a song of triumph, of exultant youth. Why she sang like that she could not have told. Her voice was rich and deep, it had a faint huskiness that reached the hearts of the two listeners. "And I'd give all the world for just one caress," she sang. "I'm lonesome, I guess, that's all." The song stopped and she sat there, rapt, tear-filled eyes on her hands. "I'm going to be beautiful tomorrow," she thought. "When Dick comes he'll find me beautiful." On the joy of it, the almost unendurable joy.

Susie came to the piano with typewritten pages. His work was done. Diet lists, rules for exercise and weekly massage.
Thanking him, Susie put a hand on his arm. "You've been so kind, Swen—and Emma—," looking past him to smile at his wife. "You've both been so patient and good to me."

They said incoherent and embarrassed things. It had been a pleasure—they wanted to see her again—they backed away in confusion.

Left alone in the gymnasium Susie played for an hour, lovely melodies, popular numbers which she had picked up by ear. It was almost Christmas, the happiest Christmas a girl ever had. Would Dick come home for the holidays? If he came would she see him? In her heart she knew the answer. The kind fates could not go so far and then withdraw their gifts.

On the following morning Harker's beauty salon was a bee-hive of activity, of consultation, of assent and disagreement. Miss Fleming studied Susie, front view and side, she made suggestions as to hair-do and makeup. White linen-clad girls and a young man with expert beauty ideas hovered near, waiting for orders, excited over their part of the program. Only a few appointments had been made. Susie was to hold the floor for most of the day.

She had arrived at nine wearing a plain little dress loaned by the Misses section, fresh, glowing, eyes dancing with expectancy. By 9:30 the shop had settled down to a routine. The young man with ideas put a permanent wave in Susie's hair. It was done carefully, lovingly. Susie's wave was to outshine anything ever done by young Pierre. At noon she emerged from his booth, a net over her hair, small squares of cotton under the elastic.

Followed an exacting process. Susie, stretched on a table, eyes tightly close, gallantly suffered a forest of eyebrow to be removed. The operator was clever, with each pull of the tweezers her fingers pressed the stinging spot. In spite of the care tears squeezed between Susie's lids. At intervals the brows were smoothed with soothing lotion, Susie was given a moment to relax. At last she arose from the table, soaked cotton strapped above her eyes.

At each step the commercial artist was nearby, making idealized sketches. It was the most widely publicized program ever sponsored by Harker's, it was soon to come to a smashing climax.

Susie's lunch was served in a dimly lighted room specially set aside for her. Like a mummy, swathed in white, she lay back on a chaise longue and allowed herself to be waited upon. It was like a story from Arabian Nights, it was like a fantastic dream, swiftly coming true. Susie Lambert, who had stolidly served waffles to indifferent patrons, smiled graciously on minions as they hurried about in her behalf, wings of rapture beating in her heart, joy surging upward like the pound of waves.

Jeff came in while she ate chicken breast and thick slices of tomato and thinly buttered toast. "Is our rose unfolding her petals?" he asked, sitting beside Susie, somehow making the place cozy and pleasant by his mere presence.

"Oh, Jeff, they are practically killing me and I love it." Her voice had a thrilled undertone, her eyes shone from under the cotton pads.

He looked down, twisting his hat. "Kane's the boss. He put this campaign over."

"He did not," she countered emphatically. "All the worthwhile ideas came from you. I've hardly seen Mr. Kane. Why, Jeff, there wouldn't have been any today if it hadn't been for you. What's the matter with everybody?"

His laugh was light, a shield against his discouragement. "After all I'm just the errand boy," he said.

"That's not true," she went on loyally. "Can't Mr. Harker see what you've done? I'll tell him—that's what I'll do."

He took her hand and lifted each finger, letting it fall on his knee, touching the softness of her skin as if he loved it. "The Chief's okay," he said. "He pays me a good salary and I have no complaint. It—it's only that I want you to be my product. I'm just a little jealous of Kane." He looked up with one of his quick smiles. "Jeff's smiles always had the same effect on Susie, as if he had caressed her.

"We know, Jeff," she said softly. "We know about the night you saved me from a malted milk, all the times you've kept me on the right track. I won't forget—ever." Lifting her hand from his she touched his cheek and he turned his head until his lips were against the soft, pink palm. He did not kiss the palm. Instead he rose hastily to his feet.

"You're a great kid, Susie," he said huskily. "Got to be up and at it. No debutante on the day of her coming out ever got more attention."

"Jeff," she hesitated. "I want you to see me first—before Mr. Harker or anybody." She laughed, a little shred of sound. "I want you to put your stamp of approval on me."

He looked down at her. "I'll be hanging around," he promised. Susie's tray was whisked away. She was taken to a light, corner room to be immediately surrounded by heads of departments with soft, delicate underthings, cobwebby hose at four dollars a pair, shoes of fine leather and dull suede, gowns, furs, strange hats like feather trimmed skull caps and tailored pancakes, gloves and costume jewelry.

She was fitted and talked over, pins were placed in foundation garments to guard against even a wrinkle, the length of her skirt was debated. She stood quietly, turning this way and that, thrilling to the seductive materials, loving their feel on her skin. At last the heads of departments hurried away to shops and alteration rooms, each convinced that her part in the evolution of Susie was the most important.

Again Susie was laid on the table and the thrilling task of final makeup began. A girl sat on a stool beside the table putting the last finishing touches to her nails, while Emily, a plain, tense person with magic in her fingertips, did things to Susie's face. Creams, astringents, warm towels, shock of ice, gently applied der base, each step in the procedure a different, delicate touch. Susie lay under the nattering hands, drowsily, blissfully stirred.

At last Emily's tanned, relaxed and she stepped back at her," she said to the artist. "I never would have believed it."
"Beautiful," the girl agreed.
"Let me see," Susie said. "After all it's my face."
Emily looked surprised. Her speech had come from a mate object.
"Not yet," she said.

Morgenthau Calls for Tax Laws Review

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 24 (AP)—Declaring the Roosevelt administration wants business men to "make money," Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau has called for a re-examination of tax laws to see if there are any "deterrents" to business.

By stating at a press conference that the business world need fear no new tax burdens, Morgenthau reaffirmed a similar promise given recently by President Roosevelt.

The secretary's remarks were apparently an effort to encourage the economic upturn which most government economists predict will be resumed in April.

He said flatly he had under consideration no new tax legislation, except reenactment of expiring excise levies, and expected none except possibly a measure to raise about $200,000,000 for farm benefits such as President Roosevelt asked congress for, and failed to get last year.

In view of efforts of Morgenthau and other officials to conciliate business, the capital was looking forward to a major speech to be made by Secretary of Commerce Harry I. Hopkins tomorrow night. Hopkins will speak from Des Moines, Iowa, over the radio at 9:30 p. m., central standard time, and it is widely believed he will outline his program for government-business cooperation.

Meanwhile, Speaker Bankhead stressed at a press conference today that President Roosevelt had made known "rather definitely" that he did not intend to propose any new legislation this session, other than issues which already are before congress.

While these developments bearing on business were taking place, government economists were analyzing the economic situation and declaring that business was "pausing for breath" following the upturn that lasted from last summer to Christmas.

Morgenthau explained that the treasury has no hope of balancing the budget by levying new taxes, saying that the way to get more revenue was to stimulate business so that present taxes would bring in more money.

Peter in Samaria

Text: Acts 8:14-25

BY WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D. Editor of Advance

THE general title of this lesson, "Peter in Samaria," is much less apt than the title as given in the Intermediate and Senior Topic, "Some Things Money Cannot Buy," or the topic for young people and adults, "Keeping Religion Free From Commercialism."

We have in the lesson two Simons—Simon Peter, the sincere and earnest apostle; and Simon, a false prophet, magician, or faker of the sort who appears repeatedly among men and who is ready to use even the sacred offices of religion for his own selfish and ignoble ends.

Perhaps I should not use the word "magician" in this connection, and I should like to point out that its use does not apply to honorable men who have been magicians by profession and who have mystified people by their sleight-of-hand and amazing performances, but who have always represented themselves honestly as what they were and who have not used their skill and profession for any misrepresentation or fraud.

WHEN this Simon, the faker saw the marvelous things that happened under the influence of the Holy Ghost as the apostles laid their hands on Christians in Samaria, he thought of what gain there might be to himself if he could exercise similar power. It was characteristic of the man that he should put other men on as low a plane as himself, and should come and offer Peter and John money that he might secure from them the wonder-working power. But Peter was stirred to righteous wrath—"Thy silver perish with thee, because thou hast thought to obtain the gift of God with money."

But Peter's admonition was not all expressed in righteous wrath. He appealed to Simon to repent of his wickedness, and Simon either did repent or was moved by fear because of what he had done, for he asked Peter to pray for him that no punishment should come upon him.

WE miss almost entirely the point and teaching of this lesson if we read it simply as the story of something that happened in the past, or if we have in mind as we read only a deep-dyed rasal like Simon, or at least an ignorant and deluded man. The danger is not that any of us shall degrade the offices of religion in so flagrant a way, but we may nevertheless in some degree tend toward the same sin in assuming that the great things of truth and religion can stand upon anything but their own power and merit. There are many ways in which men may use, and do use, religion as a cloak for their own gain or their own advantage, and anyone who does that shares in some degree the sin of Simon—no matter whether he be a minister in a pulpit, an official in a church, or a layman in a pew. Religion must be pure in motive and spirit, or it is not worthy to be called Christian.

Glass Eye of McDonald Observatory Had 'Rough Sledding' in Early Stages

AUSTIN, Feb. 24—Things haven't always been so smooth with the new glass eye for the University of Texas' McDonald observatory at Mt. Locke as they are today. Nothing was shiny in its early days.

Four years ago, in the Corning Glass works furnace, Corning, N. Y., the huge mirror was a rather crude wheel of pyrex with a hole through it. But beneath its unpolished exterior was a heart of near-pure glass. Out of the same fiery womb that produced the enormous 200-inch reflector for the Palomar observatory came this crude Texas window to the firmament's mysteries.

The undisciplined "eye" was then shipped to the Warner and Swasey company plant, Cleveland, Ohio. There the old grind began. For days and days, skilled workers attacked the disc's surface with carborundum, starting with grains one-sixteenth inch in diameter. For 40 weeks grain size was progressively reduced to a fine grit of 220 grains to the square inch which gnawed at the "rough" glassware. Then came two and a half weeks of emery work. At last the finishing school stage was reached.

Polishing began. The two faces of the mirror-to-be underwent a slow evolution to refinement under the combined gentle friction of beeswax on an aluminum tool and a delicate "rouging." The rouge, as the chemically pure oxide of iron, or rust, is known, was applied slowly and at intervals less than those set by the co-ed for the same purpose. Too much of the iron rust facial at a time and the glass got dangerously hot.

At regular periods, the mirror was put in the spot of polarized light to make sure its slight saucer-like curvature was being ground correctly. It was preened before a play-like star, a small lamp, to see what sort of reflections it would make. If the spotlight tests had failed to reveal a desirable pattern, the glass would have had no use other than to provide some hapless grinder with an expensive transparent millstone for his neck.

After the glass obtained a dish-faced countenance varying from curvature less than one-millionth of an inch, the workers could see reduction in the food supplies of wildlife. The chestnut blight, a root rot of chestnuts, a new per-simmon wilt, a serious bark disease affecting beeches, and diseases of willows are particularly serious in reducing the food for wildlife. The Dutch elm disease and the recently identified virus disease of elms are of less influence on the food supply. For birds and animals, the attacks of the chestnut blight on the closely related chinquapins also has proved serious. These shrubby dwarf chestnuts produce a good deal of food.
