FDR Appeals to Hitler and Head of Polish Nation

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25 (AP)—President Roosevelt addressed Thursday night appeals for peace to Adolf Hitler and President Moscicki of Poland, suggesting three methods for avoiding war.

These were:

1. By direct negotiation.
2. By submission of their controversy to impartial arbitration.
3. Agreement to adopt the procedure of conciliation, selecting a conciliator or mediator.

This was President Roosevelt's first appeal of the day, his first appeal to King Victor Emmanuel of Italy. The king replied with thanks and said he was turning the message over to his government.

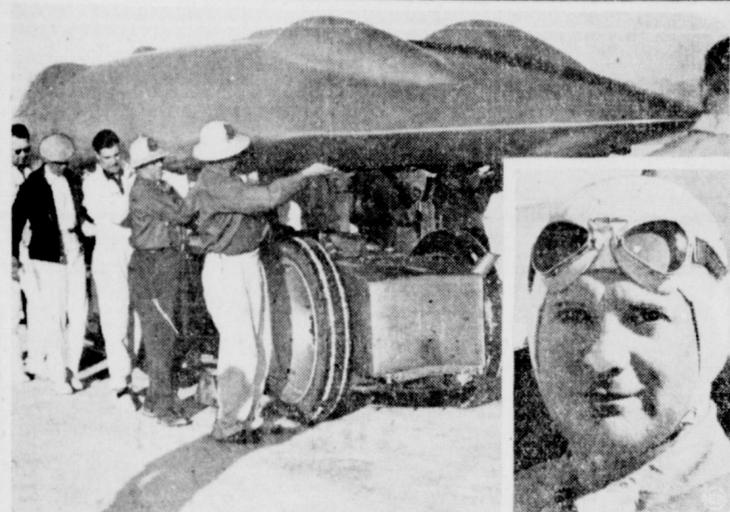

President Roosevelt's secretary, Stephen T. Early, pointed out that the president did not have in mind another "Munich," since his message to the president of Poland and Adolf Hitler is for peace.

"Both Poland and Germany, being sovereign governments, it is understood, of course, that the resort to any one of the nation will suggest, each nation respect agree to accord complete respect to the independence and territorial integrity of the other."

Peanut Envoys See Earlier Start of Fall Program

RISING STAR, Aug. 25 (Spe.)—Messrs. Conrad Schafer, president, and Dick Weekes, manager, of the Southwestern Peanut Grower's association, who returned along with several other directors of the association from a conference with AAA officials in Washington Saturday were in Rising Star this week and said their visit and the conference was a gratifying success and that they expect to have the marketing program going at least 30 days earlier than last year.

Mr. Weekes stated that he believed that all necessary arrangements in Washington could be worked out within three or four weeks and that the warehouses could be running by Sept. 10, or 15. Among other things, new forms are to be used this year and several other changes in the system will necessitate a little time to work out.

Thank Garrett
Both Messrs. Weekes and Schafer stated that the association was greatly aided by Congressman Clyde Garrett, of this district, who sat in with them at the meeting and assisted them in every way he could. Senators Connally and Sheppard also supported the association; it was stated.

Mr. Weekes was of the opinion that the marketing bill was saved by the efficient work of 14 senators who worked to get the bill reinstated and helped to push it through to final passage.

According to the crop report, received while they were in Washington, production this year is to be about ten per cent less than last year, Mr. Weekes said, which will tend to make a stronger market, it is believed.

COFC DINNER WILL BE HELD AT 7 TONIGHT

D. A. Bandeen to Be Speaker for First of Monthly Series

With D. A. Bandeen, manager of the West Texas chamber of commerce, as the guest speaker, the first of the community dinners sponsored by the Cisco chamber of commerce will be held this evening at 7 o'clock at the First Methodist church. Attendance of more than 100 men and women who are interested in Cisco's development is expected. Sale of tickets at 35 cents each has been brisk.

Mr. Bandeen called from the Brownwood state park where he is vacationing with his family to assure committeemen that he would be on hand at the appointed time. He will speak on factors and conditions affecting a successful community development program and also present some statistics on Cisco and Eastland county resources.

Bob Taylor, secretary of the Cisco chamber of commerce, said that a program, featuring a discussion by local business and professional men and women has been arranged for the remainder of the program. There will be music.

S. H. Nance, president of the Cisco chamber, will preside. It is the purpose of the Cisco chamber, which is municipally supported, to hold these dinners each month in order to bring about a closer contact between the chamber's directorate and the citizenship and to secure a more effective cooperation on community projects.

Those who have not secured tickets were asked to get them at the door of the dining hall this evening.

The dinner is for every citizen of Cisco, and not for any particular group.

"The Cisco chamber of commerce belongs to Cisco and every tax payer is a member," President Nance pointed out. "We would like to have every citizen who is interested in his community's welfare and who has something constructive to contribute to Cisco's development to attend this meeting."

CONVERSATION BETWEEN TWO NOT REPORTED

Soviets Urge Poland to Yield; Nazi Delay Military Move

BULLETIN
BERLIN, Aug. 25 (AP) — All normal communications with New York, London, Danzig, Paris, Brussels, Copenhagen and Zurich and presumably other foreign countries were cut early tonight, indicating that events of the first magnitude were under way.

It was announced that all German commercial vessels must remain in German harbors or return to Germany at once.

The decision seemed to have been arrived at after Secretary of State for Interior Wilhelm Stuckart reported he was shot at by Polish anti-aircraft guns as he was returning from Danzig.

FRENCH CUT
PONTON BRIDGES
BAZIL, Switzerland, Aug. 25 (AP) — The French tonight cut pontoon bridges across the Rhine between France and Germany north of this Swiss border city.

BERLIN, Aug. 25 (AP)—British Ambassador Henderson was summoned suddenly to see Reichfuhrer Hitler today as authoritative nazis forecast a German refusal to follow President Roosevelt's suggestion for a settlement of German-Polish differences.

No one would intimate the nature of the conversation between Hitler and Henderson.

Earlier German sources said that the soviet ambassador at Warsaw was endeavoring to prevail upon Poland peacefully to give in to German demands.

Competent sources expressed the belief that Germany had decided to postpone military action, at least for one more day.

Deliberate
Earlier today Hitler and his most trusted advisors deliberated on his asserted right to a free hand in eastern Europe in the light of Germany's new pact with Soviet Russia and Neville Chamberlain's speech to the British house of commons.

In authoritative quarters, Chamberlain's speech was pronounced "purely negative."

Only the ministers most directly involved surrounded Hitler at the conference, which went into the early hours of the morning. They included, among others, Field Marshal Herman Goering, Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop, Propaganda Minister WARSAW, Aug. 25 (AP)—A sharp definition of Poland's "limit of forbearance" was believed in some quarters to be under consideration as this war-born and war-threatened nation of 35-million people made itself completely ready for any fate.

Some of the reports envisaged a possible sharp warning from Poland to the excited Free City of Danzig—a warning which would state clearly and concisely what would be considered "unacceptable violation" of Polish rights.

There was a conviction in Polish circles generally that the climax of the European drama was being reached, and that the time had come, with all Europe alive and ready, to make Poland's position more clear beyond doubt.

There was no confirmation here of reports that Foreign Minister Jozef Beck had been invited to Berchtesgaden by Adolf Hitler, and it was generally held that the Polish minister would not consider such an invitation.

Polish opinion, it was pointed out, would regard such a move as tantamount to yielding, and too reminiscent of the German procedure toward Austria and Czecho-Slovakia.

SERIAL STORY

Murder on the Boardwalk

BY ELINORE COWAN STONE
COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
CHRISTINE THORENSEN—came to visit her cousin, found a mystery.
BILL YARDLEY—had a reason for watching Christine.
GEORGE WILMET—employed Christine as a Boardwalk artist.
CHANDRA—looked into the future—and into the past.

Yesterday, Newspapers brand Christine "Mystery Girl" of the Talbert murder. At her room she finds a sheet of $1000 bonds hidden in her suitcase. She tries to tell Bill. He cuts her off with, "Bill Yardley's shoes fit the prints found by the police."
 CHAPTER XI
 "Oh, Bill—no!" Christine cried miserably.

"And then some." His voice was a little grim. "But at any rate, I'm still in circulation. And I've got a little sleuthing of my own to do while I am. I'll be sewed up tight till noon; but how about meeting me for lunch about 12:30 at the same place where we ate last night?"
 Christine said, "I'll be there, Bill," and hung up, trembling a good deal.

But Inspector Parsons, she remembered, after a moment, did not arrest people for murder until he was sure they would stay arrested. . . . And she had business with Inspector Parsons himself, as soon as she could find him.

Just outside her own front door she had to snub three reporters. She was not sufficiently experienced to dodge the news cameras. She was admitted to Inspector Parsons' office at once. He looked, Christine thought, as if he had hardly slept; but he was as cool and alert as ever.

"I've come to tell you," she began, "that I've been a good deal of a fool."
 "You—and several others," he agreed pleasantly.

"Last evening," Christine carried on, "I went to a public reading by a clairvoyant called Chandra."
 "And he told you," the inspector put in with a tired smile, "among a lot of other things you didn't believe any one but yourself could possibly know, that you were going under an assumed name?"

"Why—yes," Christine admitted; "but he also told me something that may surprise even you, Inspector—that someone had disturbed my things at the Crestview."
 "So you have called to tell me that it was Chandra's dagger you found so opportunely last night. . . . A little late, isn't it?"
 After a startled breath, Christine asked, "How do you know that it is his?"
 "Practically every one in Surf City has seen that dagger. You drew his picture yesterday. Artists don't miss picturesque details like that. . . . I wonder if you would be interested if I told you that two hours after the merger between Amalgamated and National went through yesterday, this Chandra sold a piece of land he's been paying ruinous taxes on for years to the reorganized company, for a new plant they're planning."

 "Then you've arrested him?"
 "Not yet. . . . That dagger was a little too obviously a planted clew."

Christine thought in sudden panic. Can he imagine that I put it there?
 "It didn't occur to you, I suppose," she said, "that as shrewd a man as he might have planted it himself—guessing that the police would reason that way?"
 "It did," the inspector told her wearily, "even after our medical officer told us that Mrs. Talbert was not stabbed in that booth at all, but was brought there after the murder."

"Oh!" Christine said blankly. Then she rushed on in her eagerness to get on with her own errand. "But what I really came to tell you is that, when I did examine my things, I found these hidden away among them."
 She pushed the envelope across the desk.

He opened it, rifled through the contents; then he looked up, a frown between his brows.
 "And," Christine finished hastily, "I haven't any idea who put them there or whose they are, if that's what you're going to ask."
 He glanced from her to the papers and back again with such cool, mirthless amusement that Christine thought in sudden panic. He's found something I missed. I should have looked more carefully.

"You mean," the inspector demanded, "that you don't know that these bonds were the property of your cousin?"
 After a moment's blank consternation, Christine shook her head wordlessly.
 "Well, now that I have told you, does it suggest anything to you that you had not thought of before?"

 "But," Christine hazarded, "if someone killed her for those, why wouldn't he keep them?"
 "There are other reasons for murder besides robbery," Miss Thoreson. Suppose Mrs. Talbert was not killed for the bonds after all, but from any one of a number of other motives. . . . In such a case, mightn't the guilty person reason that the smart thing to do was to make it seem as if she had been robbed by someone else—especially someone who might be thought to have a motive for the murder. . . . You, for instance, Miss Thoreson—with a fortune at stake if that will be authentic."

When she only stared at him without speaking, he went on, "Or suppose the bonds do explain Mrs. Talbert's death, perhaps the first shouting was over, he could get them from you as easily as he left them with you. . . . Perhaps," he added softly, "it was even someone who counted on your keeping them safely for him."
 "You—you can't believe that, Inspector Parsons."

"Frankly, I don't know what I believe, except that finding those has completely changed the complexion of this whole business. I have been supposing that your cousin's death was tied up with her opposition to the Amalgamated-Nation merger. Now it begins to look as if it had only been very neatly timed to look that way—or planned to suggest anything except what's really back of it. . . . Have you read the papers, Miss Thoreson?"
 "Yes," Christine told him.

dreading she hardly knew what "That is—the extra, after I left here early this morning."
 "Then perhaps you saw that your cousin's shoes had been found to fit one of those footprints leading from that stranded rowboat toward the booth where she was found?"
 "Yes."

And Bill's shoes, Christine was remembering, fitted the other pair. That story happened to be true, except, Inspector Parsons was going on, "that they weren't made by the shoes she was wearing; but another pair, identical in measurements with one slightly broken heel. We haven't found those shoes yet; but we are reasonably sure that they were taken from your cousin's house by someone who entered it after it was closed the other evening—taken for the express purpose of making that false trail."

"You mean that my cousin's house was broken into?"
 "I didn't say that. It was entered by someone who had a key."

When Christine did not speak, he demanded, "Do you happen to have a key to Mrs. Talbert's house, Miss Thoreson?"
 Christine moistened her dry lips and said, "No," hating the woodenness of her own voice as she spoke.

 When she began to think he would never go on, he asked, "Do you know anyone else who has one?"
 "No," Christine said woodenly again.
 Then she thought, But of course—Jasper.
 The inspector shrugged and demanded with one of his disconcerting shifts of subject, "Was your cousin's vision particularly poor?"
 "I don't know. . . . Of course, she wore glasses."
 "Do you know who her optician was?"
 "I don't, but Jasper would, of course. He knows more about her affairs than anyone else."
 "Jasper?" He glanced at some notes on his desk. "Oh, yes. That's the name of Mrs. Talbert's butler. We haven't been able to get in touch with him yet."
 "Oh, yes you have," Christine drew a deep breath.
 Now she was in for it.

British Birdmen Fly South in Winter

LONDON, Aug. 25 (P)—Imperial Airways will probably try its hand at a South American service this year when it suspends its north Atlantic line for the winter.
 Aviation circles said the route would probably be England-Lisbon-Bathurst-Buenos Aires. Flying boats now used on the Flynes-Botwood route and three 32-ton four-engine seaplanes built at Rochester will be available. The first of the latter class—the Golden Hind—has already completed test flights, the Gernardier will be launched shortly, and the Grenville will follow a month later.

Citrus Growers-- (Continued from Page Two)

Within a few weeks more than 6 million cans of Won-Up have brought healthful refreshment to the parched throats of Texans. The grapefruit juice under the Won-Up brand has no sweetener or carbonation, and McDaniel further explains that each sale of a small can of grapefruit juice is a complete cycle of business, as the cans or cartons are never used Joseph Goebbels and Rudolf Hess, Hitler's deputy party leader. High military officials also were present.

The Picture It was considered most unlikely that an official communique would be issued. Men, however, who were in constant touch with the chancellor, presented the following picture:

1. Albert Forster, now the chief executive of the baby state of Danzig, can do two things—First, declare that Danzig considers itself part of the reich; second, ask that this latest acquisition to the reich be properly protected in again. The cans and cartons for Won-Up are purchased mostly in the State of Texas, which makes the drink a 100% Texas product.

It appears that the perplexing problem of the large Texas citrus industry—that of over production—is being solved right here at home as our Texas people quench their thirst with the juice of Texas fruit, fruit which otherwise might be lying unwanted beneath the trees," Mr. McDaniel stated. He announced that his company, in view of this new outlet, is making preparations to more than triple the size of its packing facilities. This new outlet will provide a market for the entire fruit crop of the association and make it unnecessary to participate in the various relief programs subscribed for agricultural pursuits.

Engelman Gardens' association has an investment of approximately 10 million dollars in its canning plant and orchards which are located 12 miles northeast of Edinburg, in the Rio Grande Valley. Mr. McDaniel is sales manager and has charge of the marketing of fruit for the company, while A. L. Cramer of Elisa, Texas, president of the association, directs the growing operations.

view of the asserted "encirclement" of Danzig by Polish troops. 2. Germany will not declare war upon Poland. It will merely organize a punitive expedition to Poland to "establish law and order." One of the places that must be guarded from lawlessness, above all others, is Upper Silesia, with its rich zinc, iron, copper and coal deposits. To safeguard these deposits, the "police action" in Silesia must be so fast that the Poles won't have time to blow up or dynamite the mines.

3. After Chamberlain's speech, the Fuehrer and his advisors are more convinced than ever that the British and French will not fight.

4. Preparations are going on as usual for the Tannenberg celebration next Sunday in Prussia.

This is done in the firm conviction that the "police action" will have been completed for the celebration, to be a perfect peace.

5. In order that Danzig, awaiting deliverance from "opposition," may not be detected, the armored "Schleswig-Holstein" was rive in Danzig Friday at 11 o'clock.

This cruiser carries 1,000 centimeter and ten 15 centimeter guns. It is thus more than 10 times as powerful as the Polish fortress at Danzig. Also, with its 13,000 tons, bigger tonnage—according to German belief—than the Polish fleet put together.

In other words, as Danzig had time to build her forts, she will have a fortress equal to anything the Poles may pose against it. Such was the picture of night. What nobody could answer was: Just when will Hitler press the button of "police action" in Poland?

And yet another question nobody, not even Hitler, could answer was: What will the do? And finally? What will the and France do?
